3 Bombing Suspects Sought

STATELINE, Nev. (AP) Police today hunted three suspects in a bombing that blew the side out of a Lake Tahoe hotel-casino during a botched attempt to extort $3 million in $100 bills from the gambling house.

The FBI, meanwhile, said the sophisticated design of the complex bomb, which sent plumes of smoke skyward and showered debris over several blocks when it was accidentally detonated by a robot, may offer clues to who built it.

Anderson Cancels Train Tour

WASHINGTON (AP)-John B. Anderson's presidential campaign today canceled plans for a five-day whistlestop railroad tour across Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania next week.

Anderson spokesman Michael Rosenbaum attributed the cancellation to "a large number of complicated problems," including cost, the logistics of arranging network television coverage and problems with assembling enough cars for the train.

It also was disclosed that campaign strategist David Garth will move from New York to Washington and would take the title of Anderson's campaign director.

How does it feel to get hit by a bolt of lightning? Sounds like a silly question. Like the television news interviewer who asked the man," how did it feel when you broke your leg?"

But it is no joke to researchers at the National Severe Storms Laboratory in Oklahoma. A team of people from the National Aeronatics and Space Administration's Langely Research Center in Hampton, Va., went to the Oklahoma center to conduct tests to determine how lightning affects aircraft in flight.

The best way to accomplish the objectives, of course, is to get lightning to hit an aircraft with people in it. So, that is exactly what they did.

After two fruitless weeks, the pilot was startled by the team's first lightning strike.

NASA reports his comments as follows:

was no radio noise to warn of its coming.

NASA reports his comments as follows:
"We were inside a cloud, with visibility about 152 meters (500 feet). There was heavy rain and moderate turbulance. It didn't look that bad. I probably didn't see the whole thing, but I did see a lightning bolt come out of the fog, horizontally, from right to left. It curved toward me and I instinctively jerked the stick back in an avoidance maneuver. The bolt looked like a headless and tailless snake. It was incredibly fast. Even before I began to react, the 15-to-20-centimeter diameter 'snake' had struck the noseboom and spiraled down the left side of the airplane and was gone. I had my sunvisor down, just in case, and it was still fairly bright. There was a 'zap, crackle,' but there

They continued until the plane had been hit three times, after which researchers began the evaluation process. They were surprised to find that one of the hits was down the top middle of the left wing, but the thickness of the wing skin "prevented a burn-through to the underlying fuel tanks."

Lightning continues as one of the most mysterious, unpredictable sources of energy. If man ever learns to harness and store its power, a lot of our problems may be solved.

We recall a story in a book for youngsters many years ago in which a scientist made diamonds that could not be distinguished from nature's best. This fictional genius developed a process that involved loading his equipment with secret ingredients and then waiting for a lightning bolt to hit a huge metal pole on a mountainside. The bolt's power was transmitted by a cable to the diamond formula and it was the force that compressed the mass into a diamond.

We suspect that someone will accomplish this, or other awesome developments in the years ahead.

Speedy Hostage Decision-Asked

By The Associated Press A member of the Iranian parliament called of his fellow deputies today to make "a speedy investigation and decision" on the 52 American hostages, Tehran radio said.

The state-run radio quoted Abdoliosleyn Jalali, a representative from Neyshabur province in northeastern Iran, as telling the Parliament that continuation of the existing situation regarding the U.S. "spy hostages" was not in Iran's interest.

Further detail on his appeal, such as whether he favors releasing the Americans, was not available able. Parliament has been given responsibility by revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini to decide what to do with the hostages, in their 299th day of captivity today. Parliament has set no date for beginning consideration of the Cabinet and organizational matters in Parliament.

Many members of the Islamic Republican Party, the clergy dominated group that controls the Parliament, favor putting the hostages on trial as "spies"

On Wednesday, West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt appealed to Mohammad Ali Rajai, Iran's new prime minister, to work for the release of the American hostages.

Carter Proposes Tax Cuts In '81 WASHINGTON (AP) - COST $1.35 billion over two proposed federal of

WASHINGTON (AP)—
President Carter today proposed $27.5 billion in 1981 tax cuts for individuals and businesses as part of an election-year economic program that also aims to create 1 million new jobs in the next two years.

The president also requested congressional authority to spend an additinal $3.6 billion in 1981 to retrain workers, weatherize homes, maintain highways, build ports, boost research and development and help economically distressed counties and cities.

In addition, he urged Congress to rapidly extend unemployment benefits by 13 weeks to help workers laid off by the recesson. Benefits currently expire after 39 weeks. This would cost $1.35 billion over two years.

The president officially announced the program in a White House address to an invited audience of representatives of business, labor, consumer and environmental groups and members of Congress.

Treasury Secretary G.

William Miller told a news briefing earlier that all of the tax initiatives and virtually all of the spending proposals would not be proposed as legislation until January. The tax reductions would go into effect Jan. 1, retroactively if necessary.

"All of these things will contribute to reinforcing the recovery, but it's not a stimulus package," Miller. said.

The wide-ranging package would increase the proposed federal deficit by from $8 billion to $10 billion in the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, bringings the projected budget shortage to nearly $40 billion. Only five months ago, Carter was championing a balanced budget as the key to his economic policy.

Despite the enlarged deficit, Miller insisted the package is not inflationary because its initiatives will spur investment, boost productivity and put people back to work over the next five years.

"If the administration had indicated to people that come hell or high water we'll have a balanced budget, then we sent bad signals," Miller said. "Our signal was to fight inflation."

In a crusade to make money for Muscular Dystrophy, the Snyder Jaycees have rounded up five well known local "desperados" and had them jailed for the shooting of J.R. Ewing, the bad man of television's 'Dallas'.

In the scheme to raise money to fight the disease that cripples thousands, mostly children, District Judge Wayland Holt has set bond for the "suspects" at $1,000 each. The Jaycees are seeking contributions to free the "Snyder Five."

GDANSK, Poland (AP)Polish strike leader Lech Walesa appealed today for a temporary halt to the spread of the strikes to give the communist government time to settle the labor crisis.

"It is not good to have Poland terrorized," Walesa said. "The people must have food. If we don't get results in three to four days, then let the strikes spread."

He said he would go on state radio and television to make his appeal: Walesa, chairman of the

Gdansk area Joint Strike Committee, made the announcement at the request of government negotiators in an emotional speech while perched atop a gate at Gdansk's Lenin Shipyards, the unofficial strike headquarters.
Dissident sources earlier

Dissident sources earlier reported that the work stoppages were continuing to spread beyond the Baltic seaport cities where they began Aug. 14.

Accordinging to the communist regime's top negotiator, the government has strikers' demands, but progress has yet to be made on the key question of free trade unions. A recorded message by Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Jagielski, who has been trying to end the walkout, did not elaborate on the government concessions. It was broadcast by Gdansk radio after Andrzej Gwiazda, one of the strikers' negotiators, told reporters, "There is general agreement between strikers and the government on forming free and independent trade unions."

Gwiazda made the statement Wednesday after he and other strike leaders held their second bargaining session with government negotiators at the shipyards, where the mass walkout began and now counts at least 300,000 workers in all four corners

Jagielski replied on Gdansk radio and TV Wednesday night that "these demands have to be discussed within the present trade union" setup, which is controlled by the state. He resumed talks at the shipyard today with Walesa and striking workers greeted the premier with a polite "good morning" in contrast to their previous stony silences.

Meanwhile, informed sources said at least two factions had emerged with the 19-member leadership of the strike committee. They said one faction wanted to reach a compromise on the demand for free trade unions, while the other wanted to hold out for further concessions. It was not known how many members favored compromise or whether that faction included the most influential strike leaders.

The GSA, the government's purchasing agency, must accept the lowest bids on goods it purchases. The compact Japanese trucks cost less than the smallest American-made pickups, even with a price break accorded to the U.S. products.

Although the entire U.S. auto industry is in a slump, truck sales have suffered the most. In the nine-month period, auto and truck sales combined were down 31 percent from the same time a year earlier, while truck sales alone were down 36 percent.

loss of marriage

Angela and Peter Boyter had a great thing going there for a while, but now they've been presented with a bill: $3,135.34.

The Boyters are a Maryland couple with an off-and-on marriage who have been in and out of the news of late. Their problem is not the usual irreconcilable differences but federal tax law that nicks two-income married taxpayers more painfully than singles with the indentical incomes but filing separately.

The law also considers taxpayers unmarried for the entire year if that is their status at the close of the tax year. Their reading of the fine print gave the Boyters the idea that divorce in December and remarriage in January would satisfy the letter of the law and entitle them to file separate returns.

To nobody's surprise, including the Boyters, it was an idea that did not appeal to the IRS, which took them to tax court. The court, again to no surprise, has now decided in favor of the IRS, holding the Boyters' 1975 and 1976 separations invalid for tax purposes because they "never intended to and never did physically separate from each other prior to or subsequent to either of the divorces."

The bottom line: Peter has been ordered to cough up $1,801.36 and Angela $1,333.98 in delinquent taxes.

This is, however, only one more development in the Boyters' challenge to the "marriage tax." Far from its conclusion. They are appealing. And since the decision dealt only with their first two divorces; that still leaves open their tax status following the last separation, in December 1977, after which they did not remarry although they have continued to cohabitate.

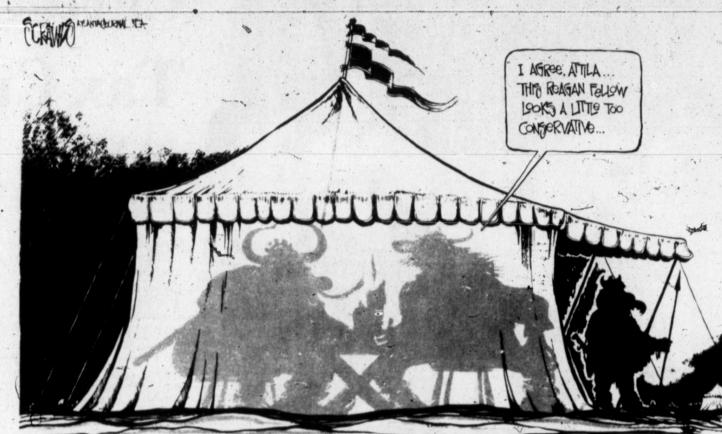

"What this is doing," says Angela Boyter, "is pointing out to Congress the current tax law gives people no option but to live together without getting married."

And that, considering the prominence that family and morality are assuming in the current campaign, is a point many congressmen may well find politically uncomfortable.

The Boyter decision, whatever the final outcome of the couple's personal legal tussle with the IRS, is likely to speed congressional action on revision of the existing provisions affecting returns of working married taxpayers. These, in turn, originated in 1969 tax reforms designed to correct then-existing inequities in the treatment of single taxpayers.

The Boyters and an estimated 19 million other two-income households - six out of every 10 marriages can take some hope that they are soon to be delivered from the marriage tax. And it may even come to pass that this is accomplished without shifting the inequity to yet another taxpaying category.

On the other hand, in the light of experience to date with tax reforms designed to reform reforms

As background, in 1978 the two agencies acted on the basis of a single study done at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology that said that nitrite had been found to cause cancer in rats when used in such foods as bacon, hot dogs and other food products.

Despite cries from the industry that the research was inconclusive, the agencies proceeded to loudly decry the use of nitrite, creating an immediate reaction by the consuming public. Since nitrites have been used for years for the control of bacteria that cause deadly botulism, secondary fears were raised as to the safety of products that did not use nitrites

An estimated $12.5 billion worth of food - 7 percent of our food supply, has nitrite added to it. In many respects, the nationwide production and distribution system for processed meats, poultry, fish and other products depended on the use of nitrite. The senior official from the Food and Drug Administration told Congressmen at a special briefing this week that he was "sorry that this has caused problems, but that is the price we pay for open government."

My response to that lukewarm apology is that sometimes "sorry" just isn't enough. Uncle Sam, in the cloak of regulatory authority, taps on the shoulders of American industry and American consumers at every turn. This latest example of the overuse of that authority and lack of judgment on the part of those making those regulatory decisions, tell us that we have reached the point where producer and public alike must demand government accountability.

Congress itself, in passage of the Delaney Clause which requires the ban of any agent suspected of causing cancer, must admit its own role in that accounting. In the wellmeaning guise of protecting the public, Congress opened the way for unlimited regulatory decisions which - hastily executed and slowly retracted have had the two-fold effect of alienating both the producer and consumer. The producer of the product in suspect must pay in the form of decreased demand for his product and for the costly defense of his product. The consumer has heard the government "cry. wolf" with its various cancerwarnings long enough to begin to ignore thoroughly substantiated, real dangers.

It is time for Congress to demand that all regulatory agencies adhere strictly to the old adage: Be sure you're right; then go ahead. Not the other way around. Of course, the real problem is simply too much regulation, by too many regulators, that cost too much money.

As probably everybody in Snyder knows by now, the fish in the park pond have all died. All, that is, except for a few hardy mudcats that are not good for eating.

We at the newspaper office were first alerted to the fish epidemic Monday afternoon when Jo Ann Nunley, the society editor, came in and reported that droves of fish were floundering in the water. 'She told us, too, about a huge catfish that was beached. "It was this long," said

National Convention here. Smith challenged not city hall but the White House and forced the entire federal establishment to pay attention to his one-man crusade against the MX missile.

Smith's efforts eventually were repulsed, but only after the country's most powerful politicians and government officials mounted a counter-campaign of unparalleled scope to sway delegates who initially opposed the MX by an overwhelming margin. That campaign included:

-- A hand-written letter penned by President Carter and distributed to every delegate at the convention.

-- A hastily scheduled Washington-to-New York trip by Defense Secretary Harold Brown, personally summoned by the president to address the convention on the issue.

-- A high-level Carter administration lobbying blitz that directly involved virtually every member of the president's cabinet.

-Elaborate briefings for hundreds of delegates conducted by White House Press Secretary Jody Powell and other senior aides to the president.

All of that energy was expended to turn back Smith's determined effort to insert in the Democratic party's 1980 platform a single paragraph that read:

"Our only objective in maintaining a credible. powerful strategic nuclear arsenal is to enhance security. We recognize that at some point increasing that arsenal becomes counter-productive, by producing new risks which outweigh apparent military advantage. We therefore oppose deployment of the MX missile. That view is shared by a number of leading authorities free to speak because they have retired from government service. Included in that category are Gen. Maxwell D. Smith, a typically somber attorney, is neither an ideological zealot nor a single-issue fanatic. He has long been active in politics in his home state of Oregon, was a delegate to the 1976 Democratic National Convention, was firmly committed Carter delegate at this year's convention and has just been elected chairman of his state's Democratic party.

Earlier this year, he took his carefully researched anti-MX crusade to a subcommittee of the convention's platform Committee, but lost there by the narrowest possible margin - 10 to 10.

The full platform committee rejected the proposal by a vote of 75 to 69.5, while the entire convention turned it aside on a rare call vote of 1,873.9 to 1,276.6.

Although Smith lost those battles, he eventually may win the war because the MX remains a troubled project. More importantly, he demonstrated that a single citizen can indeed force the politically powerful to take heed of his ideas.

Food Labels Sometimes Misleading

By Gaynor Maddox

It is time to take another look at the foods we are eating. For example, turkey ham may not be what you Actually, it is the ground meat from turkey thighs. It does not contain ham and the label must carry a qualifier informing the buyer that it is 'Cured turkey thigh meat.

Surveys show that at least 75 percent of purchasers of turkey ham expected to find some ham in it. But, ham. "is meat from the hind leg of a according to Department of Agriculture standards of identity.

And, this leads us to examine other directions our foods are taking. For example, you may be surprised to learn of the role played by complex carbohydrates commonly added to foods.

Pectin, for example, is found naturally in apples, oranges and grapefruit and is also made commercially. It thickens processed foods such as jellies, jams and marmalades. Most commercial pectin is extracted from citrus peels although some is made from apple pomace.

Chemically, pectin lowers cholesterol levels in the blood, according to Sheldon Reiser, chief of the Carbohydrate Nutrition Laboratory, Human Nutrition Center, U.S. Department of Agriculture. Reiser cited several studies in which cholesterol levels were reduced in the blood of males after they ate from six to 36 grams of pectin daily for two to four weeks.

In contrast, cholesterol was not lowered when males ate equivalent amounts of cellulose or wheat fiber.

Guar gum is another additive used as a food binder, thickener or texturizer. It is made from leguminous plants grown in the United States, India and Pakistan. Guar gum is used in many breakfast foods, processed vegetables, sweet sauces, cheese, imitation dairy products, milk products, fruit ices, snack foods, processd fruits, gelatin puddings and fats and oils.

Guar gum may be even nore effective than pectin in reducing cholesterol levels in the blood, according to studies hoted by Reiser.

Two other fibers with anticholesterol effects are ghatti, also known as Indian gum, and carrageen, also called Irish moss extractive.

Gum ghatti, obtained from trees found in India and Sri Lanka (formerly Ceylon), is used primarily as a stabilizer in frozen dairy products and non-alcoholic beverages, Reiser said. Carrageen is used chiefly as a suspending agent in foods, a clarifying agent in beverages and to control crystal growth-(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

in frozen confections.

AMARILLO (AP)-An autopsy was ordered on the body of a truck driver whose tractor-trailer rig ran off a highway interchange and crashed into the back of a house, police said.

Two residents of the house narrowly escaped injury Monday when the refrigerator truck left the roadway, ran through a fence and knocked down a utility pole before ramming through the wall of a rear bedroom.

Will I have decreased hormone levels? If so, will I have hot flashes and swelling?

DEAR READER - If you have any pain, it will be strictly associated with the incision. It depends a lot on the method but some of the newer methods for tubal ligations are really quite simple. Now remember when the tube is cut or tied or blocked in any way, that doesn't necessarily affect either the uterus or the ovary. The tube is just that - the tube through which tion? Will I be more likely to the ovum that's released from have cancer of the uterus? your ovary descends to the uterus. So what you're left with is a mechanical blockage problem.

That means that there's no reason that you should have any increased chance of having cancer of the uterus just because you've had a tubal ligation. It means that your ovaries should continue to function normally for you the same way they would have, even if you had not had tubal ligation.

A tubal ligation should not cause you to have any and it certainly wouldn't removed. A hysterectomy example, if a person ate a metronome tick. Much over-

This will occur if the ovaries are removed or the blood supply to the ovaries is damaged in such a way that they don't function properly. Or it occurs normally at the menopause when the ovaries stop functioning.

Many women are confused about the differences between a tubal ligation, having their uterus removed (hysterectoincreased need for hormones, my) and having their ovaries control your weight? For vate every time he heard a

> DEAR READER - Unfortunately, hunger is one of the worst guides imaginable for weight control. Whether you're hungry is influenced by a lot of things such as the smell of fresh-baked bread, or the clock if you eat at a regular hour. One of the famous experiments in behavior related to habituating a dog to experience hunger and sali eating is related to conditioning you to be hungry in response to a lot of different stimuli. The main one here, of course, is the clock and the regular hours of eating.

If you've ever tried it, you'll know that if you pass your usual mealtime, usually about an hour later, the acute episode of hunger will disappear. It should also be added that hunger for specific items does not mean that a person flas a nutritional need for that substance. Our urges do not tell us what our body needs. Autopsy Ordered On Two Year Old

SANDERSON, Texas (AP)-An autopsy has been ordered for a 2-year-old boy, missing for two days, whose body was found early today in a sewer pit three feet from the trailer where his father was stay-

Searchers had combed the rugged, remote West Texas terrain after Jackie Ferguson wandered away two days ago from an oil drilling rig near the trailer park where he lived.

His body was found shortly after midnight in the trailer court's sewer pit. Peace Justicie W.G. Shoemaker ruled the death accidental, but ordered an autopsy in Odessa.

Reagan Rents Residence In Old Virginia

MIDDLEBURG, Va. (AP)-Ronald Reagan moves today from the adobe splendor of his California ranch to the elite hound-and-fox country of old Virginia, hoping it is only a way station en route to the White House.

He will spend his first night tonight in a newly rented country home on Rattlesnake Ridge, a house built for John F. Kennedy when he was president. Reagan's neighbor is fellow film star Elizabeth Taylor Warner.

Aides " at Reagan's national campaign headquarters, some 50 miles away in the Washington suburb of Arlington, Va., said no special welcome was planned for the Republican presidential candidate, who will make the house his East Coast base untill the election.

Sen. John Warner, Elizabeth's husband, may drop by to say howdy, an aide said, but that's just about all. The Warners own the 1,200-acre Atoka Farm estate that adjoins Wexford, as the Reagan residence is known.

Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, as first lady, designed the four bedroom house, situated on 46 acres in Virginia's horse country. She wanted it as a retreat for Kennedy and their two children.

The house was built to her specifications, but Mrs. Kennedy never visited it while it was being built. But Mrs. Reagan looked it over before leasing it from its current owner, Texas Gov. Bill Clements, a longtime Reagan supporter.

Wexford was completed in March, 1963, but Kennedy spent only a few weekends there before his assassination in Novem-face west to catch the sunset and a glimpse of the Blue Ridge Mountains in the distance. The home, atop at bluff, will give the Reagans the same sort of privacy they cherish

Draft Resisters Must Arm with Facts

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a "draft lawyer" from the Vietnam era, revving up for the new Selective Service registration. Based on telephone calls to me and statements I've read, I've become concerned about the young men born in 1960 and 1961 taking rash, ill-advised actions without being apprised of all the facts.

First of all, refusing to register is a federal felony, punishable by a maximum of five years' imprisonment and a $10,000 fine. If any of your readers, their sons or friends are planning on refusing to register, I urge you to suggest first obtaining draft advice and counseling from any of the reputable agencies throughout the country, such as CCO, with offices in Philadelphia and San Francisco. Fleeing to Canada will not work, because Canada has closed its borders to draft resisters. Also, deferments for college students are no longer authorized. Although a young man who acts from deeply held principles in, let's say, refusing to register or accept induction is entitled to respect for taking a stand which can result in severe penalties, I think you'll agree he should first be fully aware of the ramifications of his actions and the possible alternatives available to him. RICHARD P. FOX, LOS ANGELES

DEAR MR. FOX: Amen.

DEAR ABBY: A woman who has been with the company for over 40 years announced last May that she was retiring in September. She is well over the age of retirement, but has always been in good health and is sharp as a tack. She once said she'd never retire.

Well, all her fellow-employees got together and bought her a beautiful set of matched luggage, which we presented at a

Now she tells us she's changed her mind and she doesn't want to retire after all. Nobody knows how much longer she intends to continue working. Have you ever heard of anything so nutty? And what should we do about it? HER FELLOW-WORKERS

DEAR WORKERS: What's so nutty about a woman changing her mind? When she finally retires, just say "Goodbye."

- DEAR ABBY: Our 4-year-old son has been calling my husband and me by our first names ever since he started talking. It has never bothered us, so we've never made an issue of it. The child is polite, respectful and loving.

Our problem is my mother-in-law, who thinks it "sounds' terrible. She says it shows a lack of respect, and we should teach our son to call us Mom and Dad, the way other children address their parents. I repeat, we don't see anything wrong with it, but my mother-in-law keeps harping on it.

What do you think?

DEAR SATISFIED: There is no need to change your way of doing anything you're comfortable with. If your mother-in-law isn't happy with it - that's her

DEAR ABBY: What is your opinion of relatives you never hear from unless they're drunk? D. IN DELAWARE

DEAR D.: Don't complain. You could have relatives you never hear from unless they're broke.

Tonight's scrimmage will be the first for Snyder's JV unit, which opens the football season Sept. 4 at 7 p.m. in Big Spring. Coaching the unit are Winfred Shipp and Albert Lewis.

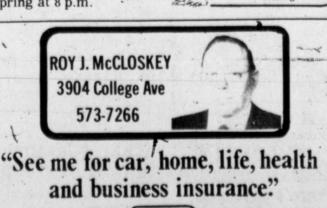

Snyder coaches were pleased with last week's scrimmage against Vernon. Defensive coordinator Wes Poarch indicated no particular goals for this evening's scrimmage other than to "improve on

Head coach Mike Jenkins, who has been out of town all week due to a death in the family, was to try to meet the team in Abilene this evening.

Poarch also reports that all-district tackle Tony Degrate will be able to see some action in tonight's workout. Degrate, along with flanker Glenn Parham, had minor knee surgery this summer. Parham is scheduled for

"very limited work." Sophomore receiver Brent Roemisch, who suffered a minor ankle injury, may not see action. The Tigers open their season Sept. 4, hosting Big Spring at 8 p.m.

A church official called the award unprecedented, but Don Kieffer said he would "give up everything" to get his daughter Jana back.

Kieffer had asked $1 million in damages, contending the church "deprived him of his natural parental right" by recruiting his daughter when she was a minor. He also contended the church 'continued to exercise its mind control techniques" over Jana after recruiting

Dial Devotional 573-880

John Marcus Young, 41, an Athens radiologist, provided a wide variety of prescription pills to Nelson, his wife and several other country and western singers.

The popular physician quietly pleaded guilty, to unlawful possession and dispensing "narcotic controlled substances" and was sentenced last Jan-Cary to three years in federal prison.

ity facility in Big Spring, Young has become embroiled in a controversy swirling around a Nelson benefit scheduled there Sunday night.

Among the recipients of Young's prescriptions were country and western singers Waylon Jennings, Johnny Rodriquez and Sammi Smith, rock singer Steve Fromholz and Playboy Playmate Kelli Mur-

Sources within the U.S. Attorney's office here confirmed the validity of the documents but refused a newsman's request to examine the federal files.

To do so, the source said, could trigger the wrath of U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice, the tough, highly respected "Law East of the Trinity."

Last January, in an emotional appeal to escape prison, Young told Jus-

"I realize I've erred. I'm sorry I did it. I just ask forgiveness. It was not done maliciously or for personal gain."

Said Justice: "Your friends believe in you. I'm not certain that some of the people who had written. me would have done so if they had known all that was in this report.'

Justice did not order the records sealed but federal, state and local officials said he preferred that they
