Sheriff Locates Loot Taken Here Scattered From Texas to Carolina

Culprits who burglarized the Buck Bland farm home southwest of Haskell last July were wide-ranging in disposing of their loot, an investigation by Sheriff Bill Pennington disclosed.

Then, a gun and clock radio, had been disposed of in Cross Plains. A television set and another gun taken in the burglary wound up in Chattanooga, Tenn., while a record player and a heavy knife had been carried to North Carolina by one of the culprits.

Three suspects who were apprehended not too long after the burglary, and who subsequently gave signed statements to Sheriff Pennington, also told the Haskell officer where most of the loot had been disposed of, a trail which led from Texas to Tennessee and North Carolina.

In listing some of the major items taken in the burglary, culprits told Sheriff Pennington that the silverware taken had been sold in Dallas.

Now-To Work

The American people have been exposed to an extremity of distractions this year. There was the tumultuous and unprecedented meeting of chiefs of state at the United Nations, which dominated the headlines for weeks. During it and after it was the long drawn out presidential campaign.

New Congressional District Due

Added to the list of lively topics for the next legislature is the carving out of a new Congressional district. Final figures in the national census show Texas entitled to a 23rd congressman. State's population rose 24.2 per cent to 9,579,677—making it the sixth most populous state in the nation.

When they learned the school children of Galveston had lost nearly all their school books in the storm and flood of Sept. 8, the company donated a sufficient number of books published by them and used in Texas schools to take the place of those destroyed.

Note to motorists: Although stop signs on city streets are not enforceable by any existing law, Sgt. Frank Jirick of the State Highway Patrol reminds motorists that State law requires compliance with these signs at all points where city streets intersect highways. This includes both US 277 and State Highway 24 through town, as well as where city streets intersect FM Roads along the north and east sides of town.

A number of Haskell sportsmen reported good luck on their annual deer hunting forays in the Hill Country, and report that both deer and turkey are plentiful. Some local hunters have found it unnecessary to journey to distant leases, and have had just as good luck hunting in local territory.

Deer are reported fairly plentiful this year in the northern part of neighboring Stonewall County, and in the rough country along the river west of Rule and Rochester. But, before you grab a rifle and start out, deer hunting—or hunting of any kind for that matter—is very restricted and you must have permission of the landowner.

On the subject of hunting, top award in our book goes to Johnny Kimbrough, HHS Senior, for his accomplishment Saturday in killing one of the largest wild boars we've seen in several years. The tusked brute, weighing well over 300 pounds, will provide Johnny a prized trophy which any hunter would be proud to claim. Although wild hogs are frequently seen in the rough country in the southeast part of the county, the beasts are extremely wary and rarely can a hunter get within good range of the animals.

The high school senior and his father, John Kimbrough, All-American football great and lifelong hunting enthusiast, were totally surprised when they ran across the wild boar. The two had gone in their jeep early that morning to hunt deer and turkey on a friend's place southeast of town. Young Johnny, first to spot the big tusker, got off a shot as the boar whirled and reared for the brush. The bullet crippled and slowed the animal, and a second finished him off.

Why there were not more explosions of this type, and how youngsters escaped injury, is a mystery, but we don't recall anyone being seriously hurt. As a youngster, we recall a spectacular "fireworks battle" a few nights before Christmas, or maybe Christmas Eve, back in 1912-13 that will remain in our memory as the most vivid pyrotechnic display ever staged.

It took place on the northeast corner of the square and started when a Roman candle was accidentally discharged at a fireworks stand and the charge hit another stand across the street. One of the stands was located in front of the Montgomery & Grisham Confectionery, located where the Army Store now is. The other stand was in front of Oates Drug Store, diagonally across the square.

Annual Thanksgiving Gathering of Killingsworths at Lake Brownwood

Doesn't "Home for Thanksgiving" have a special significance for the ones participating? It is always a theme that people everywhere like to hear this time of year.

So, as November hills are again bringing their copper, red and purple magic across the land, the Killingsworth family, who are pioneers in "Get-together families" by this time, have assembled once more. The place was a just-right spot in Lake Brownwood Lodge.

As always, it was a happy invasion of "Come-one-Come-all" that added their presence to the cheerful scene. For it did spark the same gaiety and good fellowship in its old accustomed way.

For the "girls" the battle of pets and pans was forgotten for a time, and mostly relaxation and rest reigned. Most of the preparations had been taken care of long before by a caterer. And when the long, festive-looking table showed up on Thanksgiving, one could but wonder from whence it came. The Autumn hues spread their gleam and the goodies spread their deliciousness.

Those of the family, who were kept away for one reason, or another, of course, were the losers. And most certainly they realized it! They knew Love's grace was here!

Gathering for the happy occasion were 49 members of the clan. Given special attention as the youngest was Julie Beth Price, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Jack Price of Abilene.

PAINT CREEK ... COMMUNITY NEWS

BY MRS. GENE OVERTON

The community has settled down to finishing the cotton crop, sowing the last of the small grain, putting up electric fences for grazing and going back to school after the Thanksgiving holidays. It was such a nice holiday with the weather fair and the nights moonlit. In fact, it has been almost too warm for comfort. But cold weather is on the way, say the radio and TV weather forecasters.

W. A. Montgomery had his daughter, Beryl Cathy and her husband, Boyd, and daughter Elizabeth from Grand Prairie for the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Thane had their daughter's family, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne N. Cholsor and children from Seymour on Thanksgiving day.

College boys and girls home for the holidays were Barbara Grand, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Grand, from Houston University in Houston.

Cadets Dub Sims, Dan Riley Griffith, Jimmy Griffith and Wallar H. Overton from Texas A. & M. were home to visit their families.

Judy Earles and Mina Griffith, student nurses from Hendrick's School of Nursing, spent Thanksgiving Day at home with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Earles and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Griffith.

Arvie Bergstrom, who is attending Medical School in Galveston spent Thursday through Saturday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eric Bergstrom and Joy.

Sandy Earles of Midwestern University in Wichita Falls was at home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Earles and Bob. Dolin Hughes of North Texas State was at home with Mr. and Mrs. Morris Hughes, and William T. Overton, student from North Texas State. He spent Thanksgiving Day with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Overton, and his sister, then left Friday morning for Wichita Falls where he attended a three-day meeting of the Texas Methodist Student Movement's annual convention.

Glenda Walton, who is the Homemaker teacher in the Odem school down near the coast, spent the holidays with her family, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Walton, Larry and Terri. Their daughter, Nelta, just had one day off from her job at the Recreation Center at Shreveport, La., and of course, didn't have time to come home.

Mr. and Mrs. Phil Williams from Lubbock and baby daughter spent Thursday through Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jess J. Mickler.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Howard and baby were weekend guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Terrell.

The W.M.U. of the Baptist Church has been observing a week of prayer this past week. They met at the church every morning at nine for their prayer service. Wednesday evening they had a special program for the church at the weekly prayer meeting.

The community extends its sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Bill Fannell in the loss of Bill's brother, James, who died in the Veterans' Hospital in Dallas and was buried at Haskell last Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Morrison and children and Supt. and Mrs. Pat Morrison and children had Thanksgiving dinner at the home of their parents, Rev. and Mrs. V. P. Morrison of Graham. The Pat Morrison's took their children on to the Shrine Circus at Fort Worth on Friday.

The pupils in the 1st, 2nd and 3rd grades went on their annual train trip Tuesday. Mack Earles drove the bus and they caught the train at Sweetwater and rode to Abilene. This year for the first time they ate their dinner in the diner. They have always taken a basket lunch and eaten lunch in the park, but Mrs. Owens and Mrs. Ballard thought the experience of eating in the diner would be a special treat for them. They are using the money they made at the carnival for the trip. They visited Mrs. Baird's Bakery and the Coca Cola Bottling Plant in Abilene.

The junior boys and girls basketball team played Weinert Monday afternoon. The girls won and the boys won.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Isbell were in Abilene Saturday shopping.

Mrs. W. P. Trice gave T.B. patch tests at Paint Creek, Mattson and Weinert Monday and will return to these schools and pull the patches to see the reaction on Thursday. At Paint Creek she only gave patches to those who were not in school last year and had never been tested here. I presume it was the same in the other schools.

The patch tests are given to the school children and paid for by the T.B. Association, and if the test proves positive, a chest X-ray is advised. So buy your seals. The Christmas Seal sale campaign will last all through the month of December, or even later. So far, at the close of the first 11 days of the campaign we have received $25,000.00. At the end of 11 days last year we had $330. We feel sure some have just neglected to send theirs in.

"Help Me, Mother, Help Me!"

(Editor's Note: This is the final installment of an article which originally appeared in the Cosmopolitan Magazine, August, 1953, and which is reprinted here with permission of that magazine. Entitled "Help Me, Mother, Help Me," the following was written by Dorothy Virginia Smith.)

A nurse took Robby from Ted's arms and walked into a room and closed the door. Another nurse and an intern followed, and then we heard Robby screaming for his Daddy. Ted gave me a pitiful look. I tore a handkerchief to shreds while I waited. When the nurse came out, she handed me his clothes and his blue snow suit and told me to go home, that the specialist would call me as soon as he made the spinal tap. Robby's screams had stopped. Before I could leave the hospital I peered through the small glass window. The sight tore me to pieces. Robby was sitting in a big crib with his legs dangling through the bars and his little pinched face pressed tightly up against them, sobbing quietly. "I want my Daddy."

Another waiting period began. Our doctor gave the baby her shot and waited with us. I don't know what we would have done without him through our ordeal. He came at a moment's notice, and he worked and worried over our children as if they were his own. The call came. Robby's spot had penetrated a blood vessel and shot germs into the blood stream, but he did not have meningitis! I could hardly believe it. "When," I asked eagerly, "can we take him home?" I was ready to go right then. The specialist said Robby was still a very sick boy and would have to stay in the hospital for a while. As he spoke, I could hear Robby screaming in the distance. I didn't tell Ted that. And I didn't sleep that night. I kept hearing these screams.

On Friday, I learned that Robby could come home, but must be kept in complete isolation. He was being sent home because the hospital could not keep him. He was a very serious TB case, and the hospital did not have the necessary facilities.

Mother stayed with the other children while Ted and I rushed out the door like mad people to get Robby. On the way down, we wondered what he would say when he saw us.

We gave the nurse Robby's clothes and sat down to wait. The door opened and a nurse came out carrying him in her arms. He looked as though he had lost ten pounds. His lips were parched and cracked from refusing even water from the nurses. But worst of all, there was no recognition on his face. No "Hi, Daddy," no kiss for Mommy, no smile. Just a little boy too sick to care. Ted carried him tenderly to the car and placed him on my lap. I wrapped my arms around him and kissed his forehead—his temperature was 104, the nurse had said. He kept his eyes open the whole trip home and spoke only once. That was when a car was driving very slowly in front of us. He turned his head toward Ted and in a weak voice said, "Beat that car, Daddy." When we had passed it, Robby relaxed a little in my arms and whispered, "You're a good Daddy." Ted and I exchanged glances, both on the verge of tears.

I tucked Robby in his own bed. Then I gave him a glass of water. He gulped it down so fast he choked. Then a glass of milk, and more milk. He was almost dehydrated. I might have known he wouldn't drink or eat in the hospital. He'd always been the most stubborn of our children. I tried to get him to eat, but he was too sick and too weak. That evening the doctor came to give Christine her shot of streptomycin, and then he went into Robby's room to give him a shot. He was to get them twice a day for six weeks.

When the doctor came out of Robby's room, I asked, "How is he?" He didn't answer, just shook his head. I sat beside my son for a long time, then, holding his hand, until the baby started to cry and I had to leave him to warm a bottle for her. Ted had tucked the two older children in bed and had gone to check his gasoline station. I was all alone, and after I had fed the baby and placed her in her bassinet, I went downstairs Sojourner Drilling Corp., et al. of Abilene staked No. 1 H. R. Glass as a regular field project six miles southwest of Rochester.

Slated for 5,200 feet with rotary, it spots 330 feet from south and west lines of Lot 3, Arthur Slaydon Survey 58.

The same operator's No. 8-K. T. G. Hendrick will be a 3,150 foot rotary project in the regular field.

Drillsite is 530 feet from south and 390 feet from west lines of J. Mathews Survey 4.

 then I would hold him close while the needle sank into his already peppered rump. Then I would have to leave him sobbing to hold the baby while she got her shot.

The doctor suggested I give the shots and showed me how. I lasted three days at that job and came closer to cracking up than at any other time.

Two weeks after the children had been put to bed, the two older ones were sent to the laboratory for a blood-sedimentation test. Don's was perfect so he was sent back to school. Sherry's test showed a slight infection but not enough to confine her to her bed, so she was allowed to stay downstairs and play quietly. Two weeks later the test was repeated and she was declared well enough to return to school.

Almost a month had passed since we had found the children had tuberculosis. Now there were four of us at the dinner table, Don, Sherry, Ted and myself. Two were still upstairs. Every Wednesday night I forced myself away from my children to go to church, and with a lump in my throat so big I could hardly swallow, I would join the rest of the congregation in calling on Mary for help.

Finally the six torturous weeks of streptomycin came to an end. The baby's temperature chart showed a normal or sub-normal status for the entire time, so she was allowed out of isolation. She was now going on five months old and was beginning to take an active interest in everything around her. Now Don and Sherry were allowed to play with her, and she was delighted.

Robby's shots were stopped, too, but he was not taken out of isolation. He was still running a low-grade fever. His backside was so sore he couldn't move, and he slept on his stomach with his feet in the air, to keep the sheet off his body. His temperature never went below 99.

We were beginning to feel we were making progress, when Don came down with the measles. The measles were a disease the children were not supposed to get. They have a tendency to make an arrested case of tuberculosis active again. A week later, Sherry got them, then the baby, and then, the crowning blow, Robby. So, for four weeks we battled the measles. None had any ill effects except the one who could stand it least—Robby. He developed a terrible bronchial cough that shot his temperature to 103. Numerous drugs were tried on him but to no avail. The only alternative was to go back to streptomycin so once again he had to have two shots a day in his still sore behind. Fortunately he took the shots for only two weeks this time.

It was just about this time that Hopalong Cassidy came to town. I happened to mention to my brother, Bob, how much Robby would love to see him. I almost dropped the telephone when my brother called me the next day to tell me Hopalong Cassidy was coming out to see Robby. Bob had simply called Hoppy told him the story, and Hoppy had immediately said yes. I think Ted and I were just as excited as the children. The two older children donned their cowboy outfits and raced outside to spread the news. Within minutes, our front yard was swarming with miniature cowboys and cowgirls, and even adults.

When the police escort drove up out front and behind it a big green convertible with Hopalong Cassidy in full cowboy regalia, I held Robby up to the window and his eyes shone with a sparkle we had thought was lost forever. He raced downstairs, and there stood Hoppy.

Hoppy took my hand, "Where is this little boy of yours, Mrs. Smith?" He went right upstairs, and spurs jangling, and stopped in Robby's doorway. "Didn't think I'd come to see you, did you, pardner?" He smiled at Robby, and Robby smiled incredulously back. Robby's silence must have prompted Hoppy to say, "Do you know who I am?" Robby nodded his head and grinned. "Yes, Hopalong Cassidy." With that, With that, Hoppy pulled his two guns out of their holsters and handed them to Robby. Robby was bursting, Don and Sherry stood by the bed, their mouths open. Germs were completely disregarded for the first time in months. Hoppy stayed about 20 minutes, laughing and chatting, and then he leaned over and took Robby's thin little hand in his. "Robby," he said very seriously, "your mommy and daddy are trying to get you well. You do everything they say—eat your meals and drink lots of milk so you can get big and strong and grow up to be a cowboy just like me. Will you do that for Hoppy?" Robby promised. A few minutes after Hoppy left, Robby called me. "Mommy," he said, "I want a glass of milk."

The convalescent period went on, and Robby's low-grade fever still continued. He had been in bed four months now, and he was nothing but skin and bones. But still I felt that everything was a little better, that we were holding our own.

Then one morning Sherry said a mosquito had bitten her. One look at her "mosquito bite" and I knew we were in for it again. Now we had chicken pox. Don had had it, fortunately, but the other three children staggered their attacks as perfectly as the incubation period would allow. Two weeks after Sherry, the baby broke out, and then Robby. But somehow we got through it, and the children seemed none the worse.

Then Robby's temperature came down to normal! At first I couldn't believe it, but after the chart showed 98.6 for a whole week, Ted and I felt new hope.

Summer was now upon us, and the days were very warm, so we decided it would be no risk to take Robby out to Rockville, Maryland, to have him X-rayed. We took the baby and the two older children with us, and it was a joy to go driving with our four children again.

After the children had been X-rayed, we were ushered into the doctor's office. The doctor was a big man with kind eyes and a gentle voice. His face and voice were very grave when he looked at Robby's X-ray, but he turned to us and said, "I think everything is going to be all right. Try not to worry. These things take a long time, and you must not be impatient."

In the weeks that followed, I began to take Robby for rides in the baby carriage. The first day I took him out, the whole neighborhood converged on us, and Robby beamed as if he were in seventh heaven. We bought a chaise longue and put it out in the back yard so he could lie there and watch the children play. As the doctors had said he was no longer contagious, the children would come up and sit by him and play games. It was wonderful to hear him laughing again and showing interest in everything around him. He even started to gain back some of the eight pounds he'd lost. None of the children were allowed to have sun on their chests, for the sun could make their TB active again. The two older children wore shirts all summer, and the two younger ones were kept out of the sun entirely.

Another month went by, and it was time for X-rays again. This time the doctor smiled. "Very good," he said. "Healing is taking place. Barring any unforeseen setbacks, he is going to get along fine." This was the first encouragement we had had about Robby. We were delightfully happy but—barring any unforeseen setback? Oh, we were careful. A child with a runny nose wasn't allowed near our house. The neighbors co-operated wonderfully. If their children had even the slightest cold, they would not allow Don or Sherry near them. Hardly a day went by during all those months that some neighbor did not send a pie or cake or a complete dinner in to us. They ran errands for me, did my shopping and ironing, and stood guard over us as if we were their own property.

On October 15, 1951, the baby was a year old and running all over the house. The spot on her lung still had not completely healed, but the doctor explained that her spot had been too large to heal quickly. She had been fat as a butterball throughout her convalescence, and we were delighted with her progress. Robby was now allowed to play Robby outside. All the children were firmly on the road back to health, and we thanked God the most terrible year of our lives was over.

I suppose you are wondering what happened to Beulah. Well, the Health Department sent her to a tuberculosis sanatorium. She had several operations during the course of several years of treatment at a tuberculosis sanatorium. In July, 1952, she was discharged, though she is still under health-department supervision and cannot work. I have thought about her a lot and wondered if she realized what she did to us. Do I feel bitter toward her? No, nor did I from the beginning. I could have felt murder for her—but how could I and still ask God to have mercy on my children? For I had been as careless as Beulah. Had I been more alert and had her examined before hiring her, this would never have happened.

Our four children are all completely cured now. Robby was pronounced cured almost a year from the day on which he was sent home from the hospital a dying boy. The bloom of health is on his cheeks, his arms and legs have filled out. Don and Sherry have almost forgotten their siege of TB and are so full of pep that it is hard to get them into the house even to eat. But I still see that they get proper rest and the most nourishing food. This is my second chance, and I must not fail again. For there is always the danger of a recurrence. The children all must be X-rayed every year.

So, my story ends. Ted and I look to the future with a new understanding of our fellow men, a deeper love for each other, and an undying gratitude to God and to all those who helped us in the battle for our children's lives.

Bullet From Negro Officer's Gun Disarms Would - Be Knife Wielder

A straight-shooting Negro officer needed only one bullet to disarm and subdue a man armed with a pocket knife who was resisting arrest and threatening the officer.

The would-be knifer, Alvin Lee Marsh, 27-year-old Negro warehouse worker, suffered injuries to his right hand when Deputy Sheriff McKinley (Buddy) Wilson fired once with a pistol to blast an open pocket knife from Marsh's hand.

The incident happened early Sunday morning in the colored section known as "The Flat" along the railroad about six blocks northeast of the square.

Officer Wilson, told that trouble was brewing between Marsh and his (Marsh's) wife, had gone to the area looking for the Negro man.

When he met Marsh and told him he was under arrest, Officer Wilson said Marsh responded "Ain't no officer gonna arrest me." Then when he saw Marsh had a knife, Wilson said he fired once with his pistol to shoot the knife from Marsh's hand.

Sheriff Bill Pennington was notified and he picked up Marsh and took him to the Haskell Hospital for treatment of his injured hand.

Arraigned in County Court Tuesday, Marsh entered a guilty plea to aggravated assault before Judge Jas. C. Alvis and was fined $300 and costs of $27.20.

Subsequently, Marsh's application for a 90-day deferred judgment was granted, giving him until Jan. 29, 1961, to pay the fine and costs. He was required to post a surety bond in the amount of $654.40—twice the amount of the fine and court costs—as guaranty that the deferred judgment would be paid when due.

Body of Mr. Elliott was returned to Dallas, and funeral was held at 2 p. m. Tuesday in that city. Burial was in Restland Memorial Park in Dallas beside the grave of his wife, who died in 1952.

Weinert Couple Return From Deer Hunting Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Monke of Weiner have returned from a successful and enjoyable deer hunt on Mrs. Monke's old homestead near Columbus, Texas.

An 8-point buck was killed by one of the hunters in their party, and a venison supper was enjoyed by the group.

Mr. and Mrs. Monke said that deer were plentiful in that section. In driving along the country roads they saw a number of deer making their getaway to safety in the woods.

The deer hunting cabins were humming with activity, and many of the hunters had set up tents in the pastures.

Before returning home, Mr. and Mrs. Monke toured the Rio Grande Valley and visited Padre Island, which they believe is destined to be a place of beauty and an outstanding tourist attraction.

They stopped at Uvalde and had a pleasant visit in the home of former United States Vice President John Nance Garner. Although he is 92, he is very active and has a keen sense of humor.
