Model Installation Program extremely successful

By Col. Donald J. McCullough
Deputy Commander for Resources

We are now in the 16th month of participation in the Model Installation Program and our efforts to increase efficiency have been extremely successful. We recently

Over 250 of these proposals were submitted during the first five months of 1985; and we are projecting a dollar savings of over $675,000 through the end of the program in December 1986, as well as savings of several thousand manhours.

The combined efforts of personnel here have resulted in OSD recognizing Reese as leading the way in this test program. A prime example of an individual seeking efficiency was a proposal which resulted in Reese replacing two portable aircraft control radios with a commercial version, instead of procuring the designated Air Force replacement radios—saving $13,000.

The success we have enjoyed in the MIP has been mirrored by the other Air Force test bases. During 1984, the five Air Force MIP bases implemented over 1,000 ideas, with 60 percent being approved at local or major command levels.

One innovative idea allows civilians to try Do-it-yourself or DITY moves. The Air Force saves 20 percent every time a military member makes a DITY move, so we can save 20 percent on every civilian move too, or about $1,000 per move.

Another test base found that private contractors could purchase and install appliances in family housing cheaper than the government. This proposal saved them over $38,000 by using a contractor to purchase and install new dishwashers. As expected, the MIP has proven commanders can and will operate their bases more efficiently when given more authority to run their daily business. The success of the MIP has led to a new philosophy from General Andrew P. Iosue, commander of Air Training Command. He is extending the "excellent installation" philosophy throughout the command, encouraging all bases to seek innovative measures to increase productivity and remove those unnecessary constraints imposed at base or ATC level. In a recent letter to all ATC commanders and staff, he had three key points in his guidance for decision makers—don't accept the status quo—look to improve productivity; Continue to listen to your people; and try new ideas.

While other ATC bases will not be actual test installations, they can still benefit from our initiatives that have been or can be approved locally or by ATC. Let's spread the word to functional areas at other bases.

The concept of "excellent installations" is becoming an integral part of the way we do business. We must continue to "Show the Way" by keeping Reese the base in the Air Force and at the top in the MIP. We need your ideas for improvements. If you have a good idea on how to do your job more efficiently, we can help implement it—so submit it now!

I'm in the Air Force

By Col. Eugene L. Corbett
Charleston AFB, S.C.

When someone downtown asks what you do for a living, what do you reply? Probably, "I'm in the Air Force." Note the "in."

Asked the same question, most civilians would answer, "I work for Eastern Airlines," or "I work at McDonalds." Their answers—"I work for..." or "I work at..." as opposed to your "I'm in..."—pinpoint a profound philosophical difference between civilian and military callings. Unconsciously, you have stated that you are a member, an integral part of a closely knit organization.

Many people today perceive our services as populated by pampered young people whose Army wants to join them and whose Navy is an adventure, not a job. And they perceive the Air Force as a gaggle of technocrats where the stress is almost entirely on occupational orientation—its officers and airmen virtually electronic automatons. We know that's nonsense.

Civilian and military employers are similar in some respects. Both expect employees to work certain hours each day—both offer regular pay checks, vacation and benefits. Good folks get promoted. But—no news to you—the similarity ends there. You most often work far beyond those regular hours with no overtime pay; the mission separates you from your family for long stretches; you wear the uniform; and bottom line, if our nation calls, you're her first line of defense.

So, why do Air Force people keep coming back for more (much as we grumble) as we do? Because an Air Force career isn't just another job. It's one that calls for special people with a special kind of motivation. Really good folks in any profession thrive on challenges and opportunities. And today, thankfully, it's not that old fashioned to be patriotic.

We can't afford to let that force of patriotism fade, because, if we do, with it will go the intangibles that follow it so readily; motivation, dedication and commitment.

Without these "people" qualities, it would be impossible for all the technocrats in the world to maintain an effective fighting force.

A salute to the real heroes

By Col. Kerry G. Herron
57th Fighter Weapons Wing
deputy commander for adversary tactics
Nellis AFB, Nev.

During my 21 years as an Air Force officer and pilot, I've known some people whose accomplishments in combat earned distinguished awards for bravery and whose uniforms are decorated with rows of ribbons attesting to their courage.

Some of them qualify as genuine heroes who took enormous personal risks to accomplish their assigned missions.

Yet, somehow, I'm more impressed with another kind of heroism that rarely receives due recognition. I'm referring to the kind of courage required to work 12 or more hours every day in all kinds of weather, for little pay, even less recognition and precious few thanks.

I'm referring to those who maintain airplanes and provide the fuel, ordinance and all other support needed to keep the planes ready for combat.

Yours is not an emotional, spur-of-the-moment courage, but a quiet, steady courage. You can expect neither the thrill of flying nor the chance for glory in aerial combat, yet you work longer, under worse circumstances and for less pay than I do, and with more dedication.

I didn't always understand. When I was a new pilot I expected a perfect jet—on time, every time. Later, as I matured, I began to understand that which I had enjoyed for so many years.

Now I know beyond a shadow of a doubt where the heart and soul of the Air Force lies—in its enlisted force. You make the Air Force work; your dedication and loyalty are the most precious gifts a commander can have.

I salute the real heroes with great pride. (AFNS—courtesy TAC News Service)

Flag Day 1985

Old Glory, old acquaintances, and old aircraft will be the theme for today's Flag Day ceremony as part of Reese Reunion '85.

A 1 p.m. ceremony on Reese's Main Boulevard will dedicate the flags of Texas and Lubbock. The Texas flag will fly from the state capital position on the Texas-shaped platform, and the Lubbock flag will fly from a pole mounted at the city's location.

Special guests for the ceremony will be Gen. Andrew P. Iosue, commander, Air Training Command; Governor Preston Smith, former governor of Texas; and Lubbock Mayor Alan Henry.

Seven former 64th Flying Training Wing commanders will join Col. Bob Hullender, wing commander, in reviewing eight marching squadrons. The former wing commanders are Maj. Gen. Dudley E. Faver, Maj. Gen. Walter H. Baxter, Brig. Gen. Charles E. Bishop, Brig. Gen. Monte D. Montgomery, Brig. Gen. Richard E. Hearne, Col. James A. Gunn III, and Col. Clyde Morganti.

A historical aerial pass-in-review will feature every type aircraft used for training at Reese. The fly-by will consist of the following: AT-6 Texan, T-28 Trojan, TB-25 Mitchell, T-33A Shooting Star, T-37 Screaming Mimi, T-38 Talon, and T-41 Mescalero. Many of the aircraft belong to members of the Confederate Air Force.

Throughout the day, historical items will be on display at the Officers' Open Mess Jack Davis Room for viewing by the public.

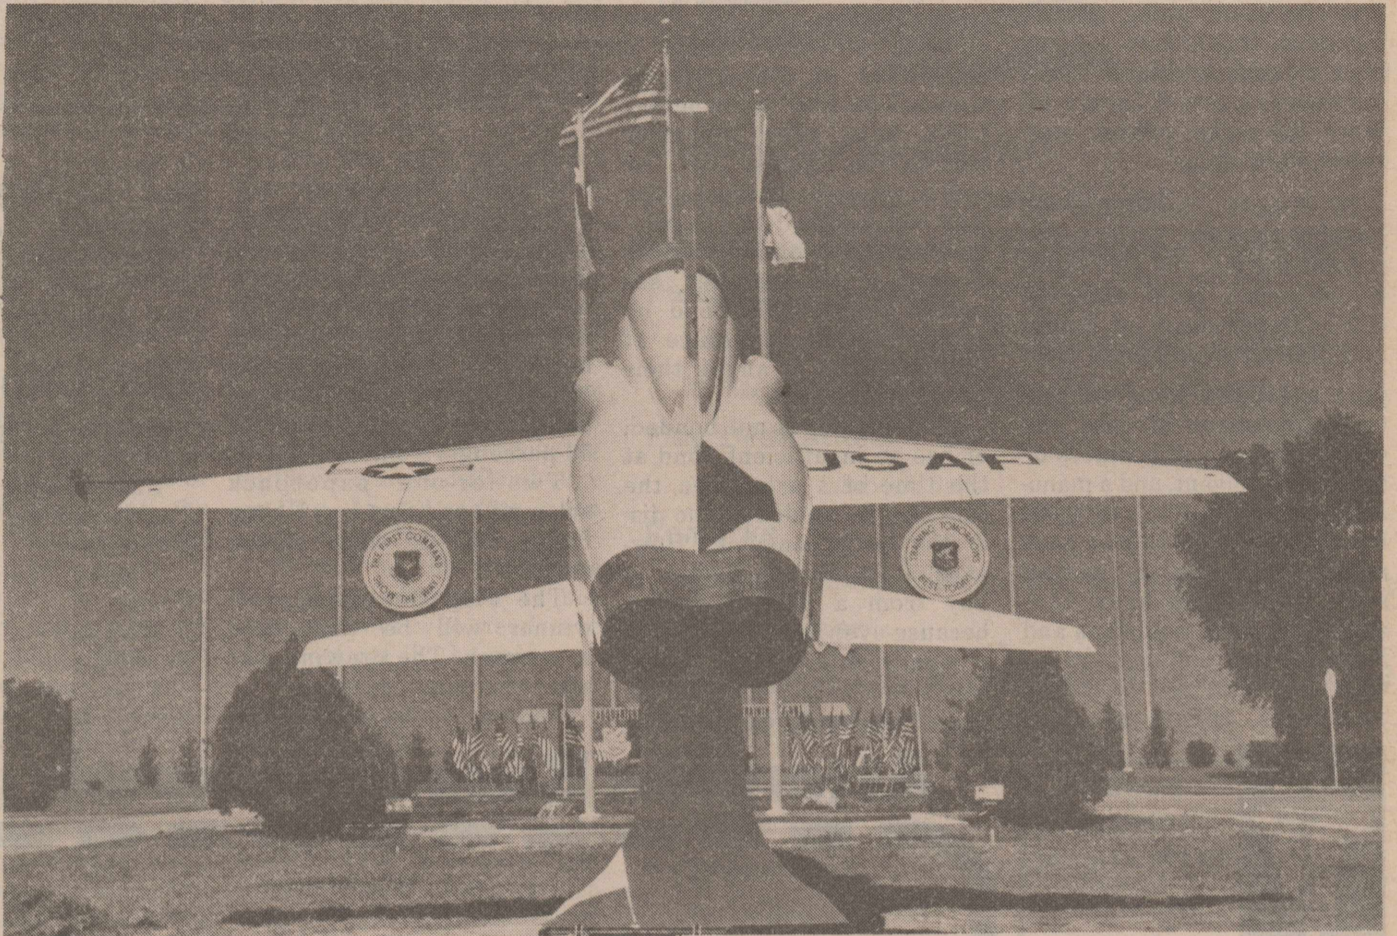

Tactical Air Command aircraft will also be on display at the flightline for viewing by Reese personnel. Aerial demonstrations by the A-10 and F-15 will begin at 3:40 p.m. and 4 p.m., respectively.

Reese will be featured in a 30-minute show, "Reese: Then and Now," scheduled to air at 2:30 p.m. Sunday on KCBT-TV Channel 11.

Many base people and facilities are highlighted in the production which chronicles the base's history. Segments for the show were taped here last month by KCBT's production manager Clyde Hance and photographer H.C. Tims.

How much does our flag cost?

By Sgt. Maj. Rudi Williams, USA
American Forces Information Service

It was only a few days before Memorial Day 1965 and Walter J. Kaiser was searching for the right words for a patriotic speech he was to deliver during ceremonies at the American Legion in Queens, New York, when he recalled a newspaper headline from some years before—"How Much Does Our Flag Cost?"

Thoughts of that headline triggered memories of the hectic months he spent as a staff sergeant in General George Patton's 3rd Army during World War II. He began to write.

The speech Kaiser wrote has since appeared in the Congressional Record three times (1970, 1981 and 1984), being praised by more than 30 governors, reprinted in several publications, and delivered by the author at school and civic organizations functions during the last 20 years.

"How Much Does Our Flag Cost?," Kaiser wrote.

"I have always answered that question in terms of dollars and cents, but that never reflects the real price...that so many Americans...too many Americans have paid for our flag..." said Kaiser, who retired in 1979 and moved to Holiday, Fla.

He believes that an answer could be found only if it were possible "to go back many years...to many wars and blood-stained battlefields...and ask the crippled, the blind, the dying and the dead, 'How Much Did Our Flag Cost You?'"

"...Ask the patriots at the Boston Tea Party, the Minutemen at Concord, frost-bitten soldiers at Valley Forge, the weary and hungry fighting at Gettysburg...ask all the great presidents, generals..."

"We could ask the heroes at Chateau Thierry and Verdun, the gallant sailors buried on the Arizona at Pearl Harbor, the Marines at Iwo Jima and Guadalcanal, the stretcher bearers at bloody Anzio beach-head. We could ask all those who landed at Normandy, and those who fought in the Battle of the Bulge. They should be able to tell us how much our flag cost.

"We could probably find the answer right here in these United States. We could visit the numerous veterans hospitals, and there we could ask thousands of disabled veterans, who lay on their sick beds...we could ask the armless, the legless, the mentally ill, the diseased and the shell shocked.

"...We could ask them, but I don't think we would have to...we would surely see the price they paid for our flag.

"We might be able to find the answer right in our own hometown, perhaps on the street where we live. We could ask the gold-star mothers who lost their only sons, the wives who lost their husbands, the children who lost their fathers, or perhaps their brothers, and we could ask all those who lost their sweethearts. I know that we wouldn't ask, but if we did, I am sure they would say they paid for our flag with loneliness and sorrow; heartache and tears; sacrifice and suffering; heartbreak and despair."

Kaiser says every American should realize what our flag symbolizes. "The white and red stripes symbolize the purity of purpose for which our comrades shed their blood. The white stars in the field of blue symbolize that the heights of pure democracy can reach to the very stars in the heavens..."

It doesn't matter what our flag is made of—a flimsy piece of printed cotton or the most beautiful silk—it "is the precious symbol we all work and live for, and for which someday, some of us may die for...it is the symbol of a free nation, of free men, true to the faiths of the past, and dedicated to the principles of justice, freedom and democracy..."

Mobile home buyers beware

Courtesy Judge Advocates Office

Consumers shopping for mobile homes should be particularly careful about selecting a dealer at this time. Many mobile home builders are currently going out of business. If you buy a home from a dealer who later closes his doors, you will have a lot more difficulty getting warranty work done.

In Texas, manufactured housing brokers, dealers, and manufacturers are all required to post a bond with the State Department of Labor and Standards. Retailers must post a $50,000 bond to protect consumers in case the dealer goes out of business or becomes insolvent, and a manufacturer must put up a $100,000 bond. If you plan to buy your mobile home in a nearby state, you should know that some dealers in Louisiana and New Mexico are bonded so that they can sell to Texas consumers. Others are not.

Remember, your protection in those states is likely to be less than here in Texas.

If you plan to buy a mobile home, it is wise to first check with your local Better Business Bureau and the Consumer Protection Division of the Office of the Attorney General to find out whether there have been consumer complaints against the retailer you are interested in. You can also call the Department of Labor and Standards to see if the retailer has posted the $50,000 bond by calling the Austin office at (512) 475-5712, or any of their 14 regional offices.

If the dealer is not bonded, or has an insufficient bond at the time of a sale, then the sale may be voided at the discretion of the consumer. However, it is always better to buy from a bonded dealer, because even a consumer who is legally entitled to a refund won't be able to get one if the dealer has insufficient funds.

Of course, you should always make sure all guarantees and promises are made in writing. Remember, anything the salesman promises to you orally will have no effect if it's not in writing.

If you are having problems with your mobile home or your dealer, you can get help from the Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division-Housing Section, P.O. Box 12548, Austin, Texas 78711, or the nearest regional office or the Base Legal Office at Ext. 3505 for any legal assistance.

Family members to get dental care

WASHINGTON (AFNS)—While family members will be eligible for dental care at base facilities beginning July 1, the Air Force's top dentist says the type and amount of care will be limited.

But the fact that Congress has approved space-available dental care for family members is, in itself, exciting, according to Maj. Gen. Arthur J. Sachsel, assistant surgeon general for Dental Services in Washington.

He said his office has been urging Congress to reinstate the benefit since it was eliminated in 1957.

"This is the first year they've (Congress) agreed to do so," he said. "We're tremendously enthusiastic. For the first time since 1957 we're going to be able to show our people that we really care about them."

General Sachsel added, however, that the change will not be dramatic since care will only be available to about 5 percent more family members, with little change at overseas facilities.

He explained that although Congress has approved dental care for family members, it has not approved additional resources.

"It must come out of our own hide," said General Saschel. "We can't build new clinics or ask for new assistants or dentists."

Because appointments will be scheduled on a space-available basis, family members will probably be called in when active duty members cannot make appointments or cancel appointments at the last minute, General Saschel noted.

"People won't be able to get complete care and we don't want to delude them into thinking they are," he said. Care will vary from base to base, but will probably be limited to routine examinations, cleanings, fillings and fluoride treatments, he said.

Normally, appointments will be made during the sponsor's birth month, but emergency care will be available anytime. General Saschel noted that there probably will be conflicts since the clinics will not be able to handle every family member.

"The law says we cannot distinguish between ranks of people, but hopefully, we'll be able to take those who are financially worse off. That's what we're going to try to do in as nice a way as possible," he said.

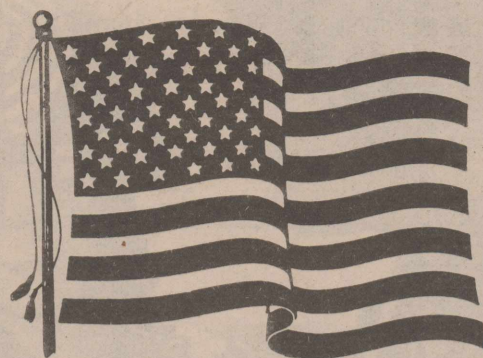

He also noted that retirees still will be cared for, although those in the South probably will have a more difficult time getting appointments than those in the North.

"It will be the job of the base dental surgeon to see that patients who need care the most get it," he said.

Base places second in turkey shoot

The 64th Flying Training Wing was recognized as the top undergraduate pilot training wing and placed second overall in this year's Air Training Command Turkey Shoot Competition May 31-June 1 at Laughlin, AFB, Texas.

The contest tested both maintenance and operations personnel in a variety of areas, from pre-flight inspections to low level flight navigations. Each wing sent two T-37 and two T-38 teams to compete, each consisting of an aircraft, crew chief, instructor pilot, and student pilot.

Reese was edged out by the 12th Flying Training Wing at Randolph AFB, for top overall honors.

The team of 1st Lt. Ron Wanhanen, 35th Flying Training Squadron, 2nd Lt. Steven Preston, 64th Student Squadron, and SSgt. Glen Alford, 64th Organizational Maintenance Squadron placed second overall out of sixteen T-37 teams, and the team of 1st Lt. Rick White, 54th Flying Training Squadron, 2nd Lt. Clayton Wisniewski, 64th STURON, and SSgt. John Schmitt OMS, placed second overall out of fourteen T-38 teams.

Other participants from Reese included 1st Lt. George Hooper, 35FSTS, 1st Lt. Jeff

Mullett, 54FSTS, 2nd Lt. Edward Fullmer, 2nd Lt. Gary Middlebrooks, STURON, MSgt. Richard Weibers, MSgt. Sinclair Powell, SSgt. Michael Giles, and SSgt. Christian Pelletier, OMS. SSgt. Pelletier was also given special recognition by Brig. Gen. Gillis, HQ ATC/LG, for his commendable performance, during the launch of his aircraft. Additional preparation was provided by Capt. John Patterson, Capt. Rich Vorpahl, Capt. Greg Rackley, SSgt. Francis Abuel, Sgt. Scott Cammann, SrA. Gerard Grindrod, and A1C Kal Claver.

The 12th Flying Training Wing will host next year's competition.

Mosquitoes can pose problem

By Capt. (Dr.) Charles Sinclair
Bioenvironmental Officer

If you've been on the base golf course lately, you may have noticed tripods with a device suspended from them. These are not Soviet listening devices; nor are they ANGIPS (Automated Monitors of the Golf Improvement Personnel System). They are mosquito traps.

We placed them near the two ponds and in Reese Village. The tripod suspends a cylinder which attracts and holds mosquitoes. The cylinder has a light to attract mosquitoes at night. We collect our catch to determine if there are any disease-spreading species on base. Please leave our mosquito equipment alone! Especially in the housing areas. The traps are for your protection from disease.

Mosquitoes, Spanish for 'little fly,' are related to flies. They have two wings, are obviously smaller than flies, and are equipped with piercing and sucking mouthparts. In short, a flying hypodermic needle. They insert the needle into the body and withdraw blood. Unfortunately they sometimes make a deposit too.

Mosquitoes can transmit certain diseases from person to person. Yellow fever is one of them. It was a problem when we were building the Panama Canal at the turn of the century. It is caused by a virus that is transported by a certain species of mosquito.

Other viruses that travel by way of the mosquito include dengue (DENG-ee) fever and encephalitis. Dengue is common only in tropical areas. Encephalitis virus, of which there are several kinds, occurs throughout the United States. We have the right kinds of mosquitoes here in Lubbock County to transmit encephalitis but fortunately, at this time, no virus for the mosquitoes to pass around. The state and city health department as well as the Air Force keep a close watch for encephalitis in the community so action can be taken when needed.

Malaria, a protozoan parasite, lives in the blood of affected people. It is the best-known disease spread by mosquitoes. People that live in tropical areas where there is a malaria problem usually take quinine medicine to prevent the disease. Gin and tonic was first concocted as a way to get the British troops in tropical areas to take their anti-malarian quinine. Persons travelling in malaria problem areas today usually take a once-a-week quinine-derived pill. They also use protective mosquito nets.

Fortunately, Lubbock is a semi-arid climate, so our mosquito problems are not quite so serious. A common breeding ground for mosquito larvae here is in old tires, empty flower pots, or children's swimming pools with stagnant water. In these places, mosquito larvae can grow in small amounts of water.

Wearing long-sleeved shirts and long pants at night or using a repellent is usually sufficient in preventing mosquito bites here. Bug lights and mosquito-repelling candles are probably helpful at night but their value is over rated.

When it comes to pets, the only serious disease spread by mosquitoes is heartworm, which affects dogs only. Heartworm is just what it sounds like. It is a long, white worm that lives in the chambers of a dog's heart. It spills its babies into the pet's blood. The mosquito transmits the immature heartworm from dog to dog. Since mosquitoes have limited flight range, the problem is worst where there are a lot of dogs in a small area, such as Reese Village.

The base veterinary office can assist you in protecting your dog from heartworm. All dogs should receive a blood test for heartworm at least once a year. If the pet has heartworms, it can often be treated. Left untreated, it is invariably fatal. If the animal does not have the disease, it can be given heartworm prevention medicine. After the doctor checks the dog's blood for heartworm to make sure there is no active disease going on, he will recommend that you put your dog on the heartworm prevention program. This entails giving your dog a medicated dog biscuit or wafer on a daily basis, year around.

If you think of it, allowing your dog to have heartworm does a real disservice to your neighbors since the disease is so readily transferred from dog to dog by the mosquito.

DOD takes its case to Congress

The undersecretary of defense for policy recently told Congress proposed legislation that would slash Strategic Defense Initiative research funds in half will "weaken the Soviet incentive to join us in designing a better, safer strategic relationship that can facilitate sharp reductions in offensive arms."

Fred C. Ikle said slow-downs in the program, particularly in its early phase, will deprive future U.S. leaders of the vital information they will need in the next decade to make long-term strategy and arms control policy.

Meanwhile, Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, USAF, director of the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization, pointed to limitations already placed on the program by last year's 21 percent budget reduction.

"Delays caused by reductions in given areas will ultimately delay attainment of overall program objectives," he said.

Once these objectives are reached, he said, "we will have pushed the level of technical achievement across a spectrum of technologies that are broadly applicable to the defense needs... And of course, we will give a future president, Congress, and our allies the necessary ingredients for taking the first step on the road to eliminating the destabilizing threat of ballistic missiles."

Abrahamson estimated the program will cost about $26 billion between fiscal 1985 and fiscal 1989.

Fraud

DoD Inspector General Joseph H. Sherick recently told Congress the DoD crackdown on fraud has resulted in a record number of indictments and convictions.

DoD investigative organizations opened more than 16,000 cases in fiscal 1984, 5,000 of which were referred for prosecution or administrative action, he said. These referrals resulted in more than 160 indictments and 500 convictions and about $25 million in recoveries, fines, penalties, and restitutions.

The DoD Hotline for waste, fraud, and abuse has proven to be an excellent source of leads for the Inspector General's office, he said. During fiscal 1984, more than 7,800 complaints were received. During the first six months of fiscal 1985, calls topped 3,900. This compares with fewer than 1,000 complaints in all of fiscal 1980, Sherick said.

Post-Government Employment Rules

Rules that bar DoD employees from jumping onto a defense contractor's payroll immediately after leaving government service help maintain DoD's standards of integrity—particularly in the case of procurement.

But DoD General Counsel Chapman B. Cox says new legislation—that would require former DoD procurement officers to wait two years before accepting pay on a defense contract they worked with during their last three years of service—will create more problems than it resolves.

Cox said the proposed legislation would undercut DoD efforts to recruit skilled procurement personnel and would create an administrative nightmare for those who monitor, as well as comply with, the proposed rule.

He said tighter control on existing rules would be just as effective in preventing DoD employees from using their positions or influence "for personal gain, to the detriment of the government or in a manner which gives an unfair advantage to a private entity."

Procedures for Post-Government Employment Reporting

The system that requires former DoD employees to report income from defense contractors has no mechanism for monitoring individual compliance or verifying the information that is provided.

Alvin Tucker, DoD deputy assistant inspector general for auditing, recently told Congress the current reporting forms are being revised to include more information about a person's specific duties during and after government employment. The revised form, he said, will also require verification of the accuracy of information reported.

Tucker said DoD also plans to revise the current procedures for filing financial disclosure statements to ensure the ability of government employees to do their jobs without apparent conflicts of interest.

Drug Enforcement

DoD has contributed extensive manpower, equipment and training support to assist anti-drug efforts by civilian law enforcement agencies, Lt. Gen. R. Dean Tice, USA, director of the DoD Task Force on Drug Enforcement, recently reported to Congress.

Tice said active duty and Reserve air crews from the Army, Navy and Air Force flew about 10,000 flight hours during 1984 supporting requests for surveillance from civilian law enforcement agencies. Additionally, service members used their skills in ground radar detection, personnel intrusion detection, ship sighting and aerial photography to aid the anti-drug effort.

He said DoD will continue to support such requests, as long as they do not detract from readiness or otherwise drain DoD's ability to fulfill defense needs.

"Whether it's a sophisticated aircraft performing surveillance on drug-laden motherships for the Coast Guard, or truck drivers from the Puerto Rico National Guard transporting Customs radars in support of a Customs operation, or a Navy vessel transporting a Coast Guard tactical law enforcement team, we stand ready to assist," Tice said.

Multi-year Procurement

Multi-year contracts for recurring military equipment needs save DoD millions—even billions—of dollars over single-year contracts, the principal deputy assistant secretary of defense (comptroller) recently told Congress.

John R. Quetsch said the 10

multi-year contracts requested in the fiscal 1986 budget will save DoD $1.7 billion by encouraging more competition and making the procurement process more efficient. The up-front funding to begin these multi-year procurements will be $71 million, he said.

Items selected for multi-year procurement include helicopter and turbine engines, combat earth-movers, amphibious assault ships, torpedoes and computer electronic units.

Contractors' Costs

Deputy Secretary of Defense William H. Taft IV recently testified in support of congressional initiatives to crack down on contractors who claim reimbursements for overhead expenses they're not entitled to.

He pointed out, however, that many of the legislation's intentions could be handled more efficiently through regulation, which would give DoD more flexibility to respond to changes in business practices, tax regulations, accounting standards and conventions, and public policies.

Taft said the bill incorporates many actions already taken by DoD to control contractor abuse. For example, the bill would establish as law a recent DoD initiative requiring all contractor overhead costs submissions to include a certificate, signed by a top level company official under penalty of perjury, confirming that:

- all costs claimed apply to the contract under which they are submitted, and that
- these costs are allowable under the contract agreement.

Additionally, the legislation would impose penalties against contractors who submit claims for costs not allowed under the contract agreement.

"There is no issue as to whether these matters should become part of the way we do business in DoD," he said. "There remains, however, a question as to whether these matters should be implemented by legislation or regulation...It is my firm belief that regulatory flexibility holds the greatest potential for efficiently and effectively dealing with the 'overhead' problem."

New Benefits

Extracorporeal Shock Wave Lithotripsy and Percutaneous Lithotripsy for the treatment of Kidney stones are now covered under the basic CHAMPUS program.

Also, beginning with services rendered on or after Oct. 1, 1984, CHAMPUS will cover one routine eye examination per calendar year per person for dependents of Active Duty personnel only. Routine eye examinations for beneficiaries other than dependents of active duty members are not covered. However, CHAMPUS will still cover eye examinations for all eligible beneficiaries, if the exam is related to a covered condition, such as cataracts, and is for other than a refraction. For additional information, contact Robert Gregorio at Ext. 3581.

Players needed

The gym is seeking a tennis player to participate in the 35-and-over ATC Tennis Tournament that will be held at Lackland AFB, Texas June 27 to July 1. They also need a person for the Women's Open Category for the same tournament. For more information, contact the Gym.

Bible School begins soon

The chapel will open its doors to children of the community with the new "Let's Share the Good News of Jesus" vacation bible school. The children will enjoy crafts, projects, games and songs.

Classes are planned for children 3-years-old through sixth graders. There will be a closing parade July 26. Classes will be held from 9-11:30 a.m. each day. The 3-year-olds will have a shorter session from 9-10 a.m. each day.

As in the past, there will be bus transportation available for the children who live in Reese Village. In addition a bus will make stops at the Child Care Center and the Youth Center. There is no cost for the school. Healthy snacks are served to the children each day.

Last year, 145 children enrolled in Vacation Bible School. Members of the Chapel would like to see that many or more attend this year's school. Public enrollment will begin July 1.

CLOSE TO REESE

New GI Bill starts July 1

The clock is running out for service members who plan to enroll in the military educational assistance program.

Sign-ups for the Veteran Educational Assistance Program (VEAP)—the only educational assistance program for service members who enlisted after Jan. 1, 1977—will be cut off June 30.

Service members who enlist after June 30 will be enrolled automatically in a new program, the new "G.I. Bill." But the new program won't be available to service members on duty before that date.

The VEAP program will continue for those who enroll before the cut-off date. But those who miss it will lose out on their only chance to have the military help finance their education.

The new G.I. Bill differs from the VEAP in several respects:

- While the VEAP requires a sign-up procedure, all service members will be enrolled automatically under the new G.I. Bill unless they choose not to participate when entering the service.

- Under VEAP, contributions can be as little as $25 or as much as $100 a month. At the end of 12 consecutive months of contribution, the government contributes $2 for every $1 the service member saved.

- Service members' contributions are limited to $2,400

during a two-year enlistment or $2,700 during a three or more year enlistment. The contribution is taken from a service member's paycheck after taxes; the government contribution is tax-free.

To enroll in this program, service members must start an allotment or make a lump sum payment at their local finance office by June 30.

Service members can increase the amount of payroll deduction or make a lump sum payment to increase their VEAP accounts any time before separating from service. However, the $2,400 and $2,700 limits remain.

Likewise, service members can drop out of the VEAP program at any time, with all contributions refunded by the Veterans Administration. However, to receive any part of the government contribution, service members must participate in VEAP for at least 12 months and complete 24 months active duty.

On the other hand, once enrolled in the new G.I. Bill program, active duty members will have their pay reduced by $100 per month for their first 12 months of service. This reduction is non-refundable if the service member drops from the program.

The new G.I. Bill, however, will pay larger dividends than the VEAP program. The basic benefit of the new program is $300 per month for 36 months—a total of $10,800.

The new G.I. Bill provides benefits not only for active duty service members, but also for Vietnam-era G.I. Bill participants and members of the Selected Reserve serving in troop units or in individual augmentments or Active Guard and Reserve programs.

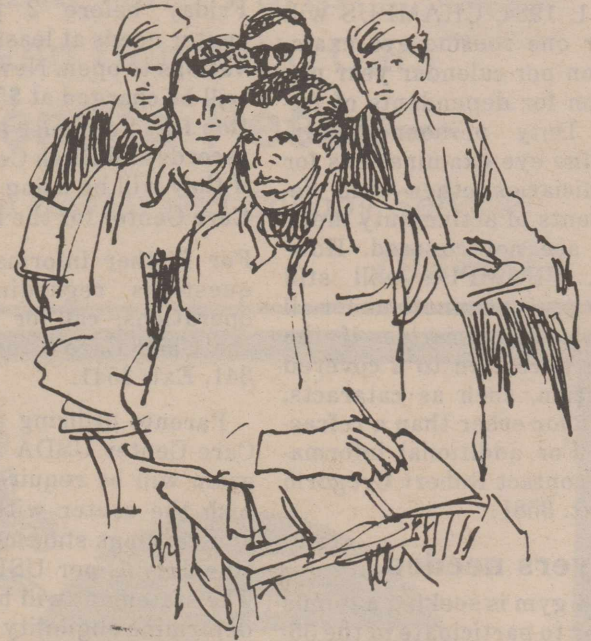

Active duty personnel must agree to serve for three years active duty, or two years on active duty and four years in the Selected Reserve to be eligible for the basic benefit of $300 per month for 36 months. Those entering active duty with a two-year obligation are eligible for a benefit of $250 for 36 months.

Vietnam-era G.I. Bill participants with unbroken service beginning before Dec. 31, 1976, can serve three years beyond July 1, 1985, for the new basic benefit and also receive half of the Vietnam-era stipend. Vietnam-era G.I. Bill benefits end Dec. 31, 1989.

Selected Reserve personnel won't have their pay reduced to participate in the program. When signing up for a six-year obligation, they become eligible for up to $140 a month for 36 months. Selected Reserve members with a bachelor's degree are not eligible.

To qualify for the new G.I. Bill, service members must have a high school diploma or high school equivalency certificate.

ROTC scholarship or service academy graduates entering active duty as of July 1, 1985 are not eligible.

Telephone crackdown begins

By Donna Bolinger
American Forces
Information Service

Most Defense members wouldn't dream of stealing military equipment or supplies. Yet each year, DoD military and civilian personnel steal as much as $14 million in telephone services from the government.

The DoD Inspector General recently joined in an audit of government telephone use in the Washington, D.C., area—the hub of military calling.

The results, expected to affect military installations and government offices worldwide, are likely to usher in tighter controls of the government's Federal Telecommunications System (FTS) phone lines, more review of telephone records, and maybe even restricted use of the system.

While all military phone systems are vulnerable to some degree of misuse, FTS is the most susceptible because it can connect with all the nation's telephones, according to a General Services Administration (GSA) industry specialist. The more familiar Automated Voice Network system (AUTOVON), a system dedicated to military use only, is less susceptible because it connects only with telephones on military installations.

Telephones abuse isn't new. The problem seems to be that no matter how many monitors are put into place, the ultimate success of a crackdown starts and concludes with the individual and the individual supervisor.

Officials say government employees often don't realize the government pays for telephone service just like every other customer. Long-distance calls aren't free. In fact, GSA—the agency that oversees official government telephones—figures FTS service costs an average of 32 cents per minute.

In addition to the widespread misconception that FTS is free, the temptation of an open line that allows direct dialing is just too much for some otherwise honest people. This is where emphasis by managers and commanders is essential.

"Control is at the level of the individual and the immediate supervisor," according to Ray Kidd, an auditor with the DoD Inspector General. "Managers play the most important role by identifying and disciplining abusers."

GSA is working to make this role a lot easier. Right now, GSA provides government agencies with a computerized record of about 20 percent of the calls made, including the date and time the call was placed, the length of the call and the number dialed.

GSA plans to revise the system to provide a computerized tape to government agencies that documents all government calls made in the Washington D.C., area. Similar data will be provided to federal activities in all U.S. cities in the future. This system will enable agencies to better monitor their telephone usage.

Targets for review will be repeated calls to one number from one particular telephone, lengthy calls, and calls made after duty hours. Previous studies of telephone use have confirmed that a large percentage of abuse occurs during evening hours and one weekends.

The new reporting method will offer another control, a GSA official said, but it will only help curb the problem if managers enforce accountability. "If people know they're being watched, they're less likely to abuse the system," he said.

Several campaigns to cut down on telephone abuse have had mixed success. John Sullivan, director of the Army Commercial Communications Office, said command emphasis has been a key.

"We put guidance out to the field that we're cracking down on abuse and we'll impose penalties if necessary," he said. "It's been our most effective effort (to curb abuse). Before this campaign, we (Army) had a spiraling FTS bill. Last quarter alone, we had 2.4 million less calling minutes."

The U.S. Army Information Systems Command at Fort Knox, Ky. began a crackdown last year that brought a dramatic reversal of long distance abuse. After studying a computer printout of a month's FTS calls, command officials estimated that FTS was being abused by 70 percent of its users and that at least 90 percent of calls made during off-duty hours were unofficial.

The command "turned off" FTS between 6 p.m. and 7 a.m., with only four lines left open on post. The results: 80,000 fewer FTS calling minutes in one month.

Based on the computer printouts they now receive, many installations require abusers to pay not only the cost of the call but also an extra administrative cost. Although this isn't widespread, officials say it's effective when used.

"We're not really interested in collecting money, and we're not really interested in prosecuting," according to a GSA official. "What we're interested in is changing behavior."

Heat Index should be noted

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces
Information Services

You've heard the saying "It's not the heat it's the humidity." The saying is only half true—it is the combination of heat and humidity that can not only be uncomfortable, but down right dangerous.

To measure the combination the National Weather

Service is using a "misery" index introduced last summer called the heat index. Known to meteorologists by its initials "HI", it is a measure of the effects high humidity and abnormally high temperatures have in reducing the body's ability to cool itself. For example, if the air temperature is 100 degrees Fahrenheit and the relative humidity is 50 percent, the effect on the human body is the same as if it were 120 degrees outside. Sunstroke and heat exhaustion are likely. Even if you are young and healthy, a day with an HI of 120 is not a day to run a marathon. The danger is greater for babies, the elderly and those with heart conditions.

In most areas, the heat index will be used in forecasts when it is expected to exceed 105 degrees for two days or more.

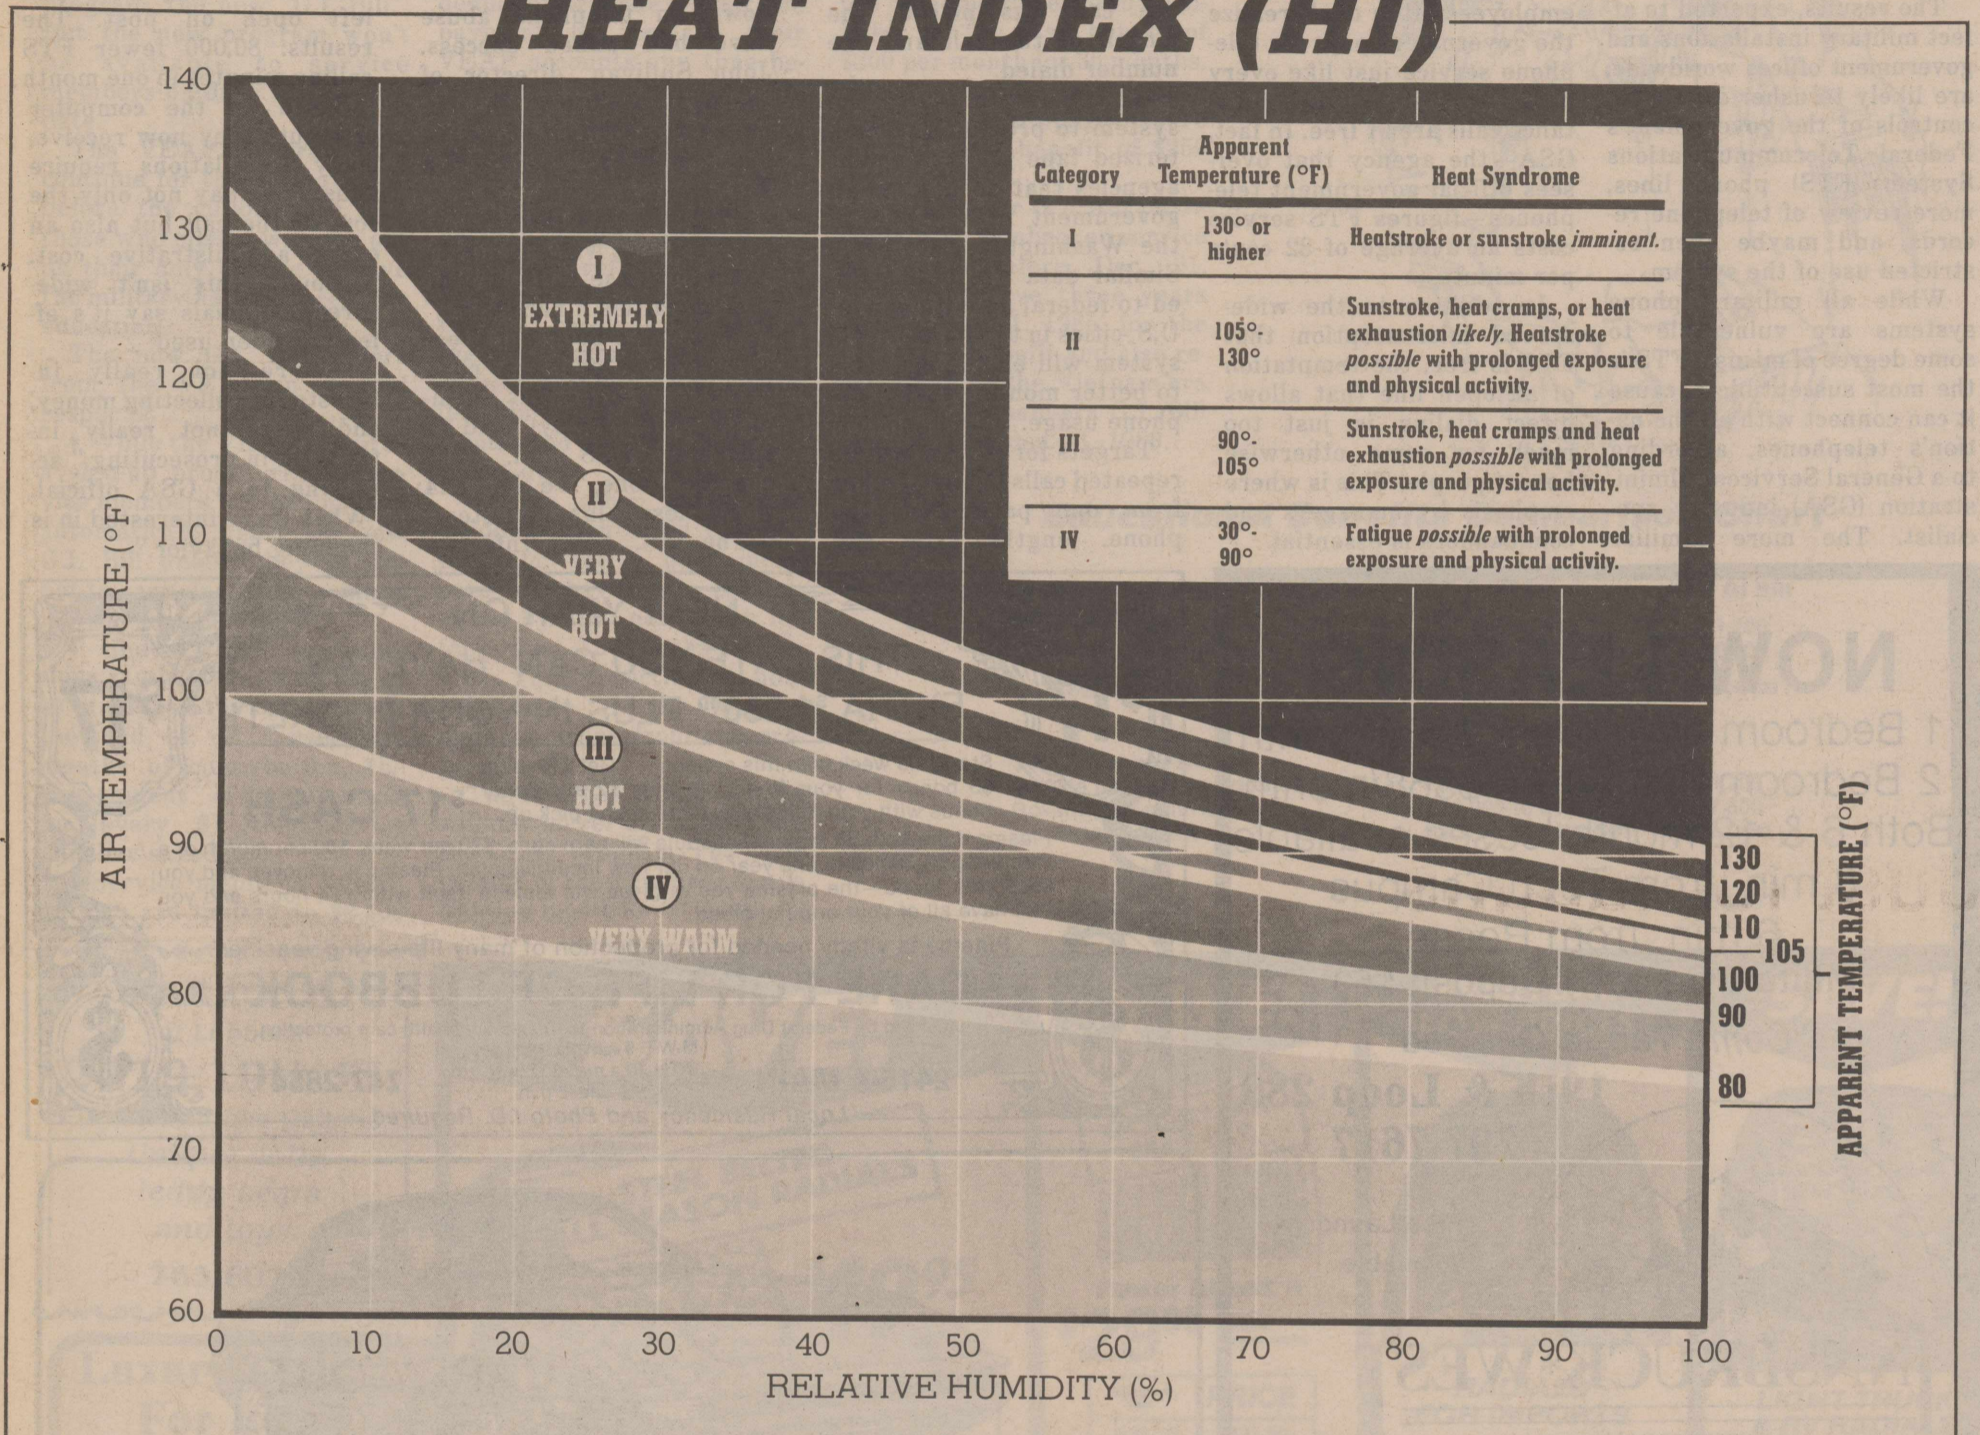

Of course, high temperatures can be dangerous even without high humidity. "Clothes make a big difference," says Duane Cooley of the National Weather Service. "If you exercise in clothes that don't 'breathe,' you'll have problems even in 85 degree weather." Take a cue from experienced desert dwellers and wear a hat and loose, light clothing when you must work in the sun.

In the 40-year period from 1936 through 1957, nearly 20,000 people died from heat exposure in the United States.

F-4s to get digital gas gauge

F-4 aircraft no longer will register inaccurate fuel readings when the Air Force begins replacing the current analog fuel indicators with a digital model.

The Air Force plans to begin installing the digital indicators in all F-4 models—about 1,600 aircraft sometime next year.

The new system will be more accurate and save money, according to Joe Kirton, who manages the system at Ogden Air Logistics Center at Hill AFB, Utah.

Mr. Kirton said the anti-static fuel additive used in the F-4 interferes with the analog's system's ability to accurately measure fuel. The digital system will not be affected by the additive, he said.

The digital indicator will also last about 50 times longer than the current system, saving the Air Force about $15 million during the life of the aircraft.

Mr. Kirton said the analog system must be replaced every 500 hours at a cost of about $500,000 annually. (AFNS)

Missile fire lighting sky

TYNDALL AFB, Fla. (AFNS)—Live missile firings are lighting the Florida skies this month as Combat Archer Exercises get underway here.

Exercise officials said aircrews are flying F-15, F-16, F-4 and F-106 aircraft June 1-July 13, attempting to shoot down unmanned target drones with live infrared and radar-guided missiles.

The 475th Weapons Evaluation Group here is hosting the exercise sponsored by Tactical Air Command to measure the effectiveness of air-to-air weapon systems.

Officials said the exercise also gives U.S. and Canadian Forces the chance to evaluate weapon and Weapons-delivery systems, and to train aircrews and maintenance people for their wartime commitments.

Participants will also have the chance to take part in air-combat training flights, officials said.
