Oil field fires are causing concerns

HOUSTON Firefighters returning from the burning oil fields of Kuwait are being tested amid concerns that toxins from the oil-well fires may jeopardize their health, officials

The firefighters are getting chest X-rays and blood tests and a team of experts organized by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency will begin a second round of blood tests next week to see if toxins from the oil-well fires have found their way into the workers' bloodstreams.

Health investigators say they fear the firefighters may be exposed to potentially cancercausing compounds often associated with smoke from oilwell fires but not yet linked to the Kuwaiti blazes.

The firefighters are somewhat alarmed because of working beneath the thick blanket of smoke now tagged as one of the worst environmental disasters in modern history.

"I plan on being around for awhile, and this bothers me," said James Tuppen, a firefighter for Boots & Coots, one of the three Houston companies hired to snuff the 500 oil-well fires now burning out of control in Kuwait.

"When you're in Kuwait, you're living in a cloud of smoke all the time," said Tuppen, who has taken a lung X-ray to gauge the effects of his first 28-day tour in Kuwait. "You sleep in it; you eat in it.'

Ms. McAshan said Franklin defendant, stole Collins' checkbook and at least two checks were forged.

Officers said Speer, Manyoma and Collins' 16-year-old son were friends at Nimitz High School.

Officers allege that Manyoma, on probation for carrying a pistol on school grounds and charged with capital murder in the Collins slaying, tried Jan. 20 to enlist two other students to kill Collins before he could call police about the checks. When the two youths turned down the proposal, officers said, Speer volunteered to become "the shooter."

The prosecutor told the judge that Speer admitted to Houston detectives that he was accompanied by Manyoma when he climbed into Collins' home through a window and found the man sleeping.

"I shot him," Speer admitted to detectives.

They returned to their own homes. Speer put his mother's pistol back and went to school the next morning, he told police. He later attended the funeral.

Universities face cuts in some funds

WASHINGTON (AP) - As many as 75 universities would see their reimbursements shrink under the Bush administration's plan to limit how much the government pays for overhead costs related to federal research.

"It's tough medicine for universities to take," Robert Rosenzweig, president of the Association of American Universities, said Wednesday after the White House announced its plan.

The proposal to cap reimbursement of administrative costs at 26 percent of the direct costs of federally sponsored research would mean a loss of about $100 million to schools that now receive a higher rate, he

Redfish abundant at C-City Lake

COLORADO CITY - Recent gill net surveys on Colorado City Lake by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Inland Fisheries crew from San Angelo found the redfish to be doing very well.

Redfish ranging in size from seven to 10 pounds and averaging about 30 inches in length were found to be very abundant in the Local reports to TPWD biologists included catches of over 15 pounds. While none of the larger fish were caught in the gill nets, It is likely that many fish of that size, and possibly even larger, are in the lake, according to TPWD biologist John Dennis. The 15pound and over fish are probably from the 1981 and '82 stockings. Redfish were also stocked here in 1986 and '87.

Texas Parks and Wildlife personnel stocked 183,000 redfish fingerlings, brought from the state fish hatchery in Palacios, into

Colorado City Lake just over a week ago. Also caught during the gill net survey were several white bass, numerous channel and blue catfish and many large yellow cat-

Biologists from TPWD will return in the fall to assess the largemouth bass and crappie populations at the area lake.

Pistons take 3-2 playoff lead

BOSTON (AP) - The Detroit Pistons knew the Boston Celtics, winners of an NBA record 16 titles, had the will and the skill to rally from an 18-point deficit.

The Pistons also knew, having won the last two championships, that they wouldn't come unraveled when the Celtics came back.

A 79-61 cushion shriveled to nothing when Larry Bird's 18footer tied the score at 100 with 3:40 left.

But Bill Laimbeer's long-range 116-111 victory Wednesday night, giving them a 3-2 lead in the bestof-7 Eastern Conference semifinal. Detroit is a win away from a third straight conference final matchup with the Chicago Bulls, who defeated Philadelphia in five games.

Portland plays host to the Los Angeles Lakers in the opener of the Western Conference finals on Saturday.

In a series in which the homecourt hasn't been an advantage. Detroit can clinch at home Friday night. Boston, 1-1 on the road and 1-2 at home in the series, would be home for a seventh game on Sunday, if necessary

"It's not grim in here," guard for it. Dee Brown said in Boston's locker room. "We just have to go back there and (win) again."

"I like Boston, but I sure don't want to come back here for Game Detroit coach Chuck Daly said. "Only on vacation."

Wednesday night's game was hardly that for the Pistons, who couldn't relax until the final seconds even though they never four games. But on Wednesday trailed in the last period.

"They made a tremendous run his last three shots. bombing carried the Pistons to a in the fourth quarter," Detroit's James Edwards said. "I knew they would.' And the Pistons, with all their

Giants coach quits

(AP) - Just because Bill job.' Parcells walked away from his Giants for a rest doesn't mean his NFL coaching career is over. Not by a long shot.

Parcells 49, resigned as coach of the Super Bowl champions after eight seasons Wednesday, but he left the door wide open for a possible return to the sidelines, a prospect some Giants officials don't want to discuss.

Giants general manager George Young refused to answer questions whether the club would stand in the way of anyone wanting to hire Parcells, who left the Giants with a year left on his con-

For his part, Parcells said relaxing was all he wanted for

Leaving the Giants was not an dream job with the New York easy decision for Parcells. He mulled it over for months after New York's 20-19 victory over the Buffalo Bills in the Super Bowl in January before coming to a decision this past weekend.

"It's time," Parcells told a jam-packed news conference that had all the appearances of one being held for the Super Bowl instead of a coach resigning.

"It's time to move on," he added. "That's the best way I can say it. It's been a great eight years here. Who's been luckier than I have? In show business you want to play the Palace. I was fortunate to play the Palace for a while."

Ray Handley, the Giants' softspoken offensive coordinator, was immediately named the team's head coach, Parcells guided the team to five playoff appearances and posted an 85-52-1 record.

Best friends carry out suicide pact

ROUND LAKE BEACH, Ill. (AP) - Two teen-agers, best friends for years, wrote a suicide note together, sat down on the railroad tracks and were run over by a train.

Susan Zingales and Julie Pallach, both 14, were killed instantly late Tuesday by a commuter train traveling from Chicago to suburban Fox Lake, police said.

The girls, who attended the same school and played on the same basketball team, left a joint suicide note.

"The note basically said, 'This is the only way out. We have a stressful life. Love always,' "Round Lake police Sgt. Mike Kemmerer said. "Then they both signed it. He said police didn't know what prompted the girls' unhappiness, but their school principal said Wednesday that Pallach had been depressed since her father died of cancer in December 1989.

The girls lived in the same neighborhood and had been best friends for years. They were to graduate from eighth grade next month.

Sen. Kennedy defends his actions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy says an "honest semantic misunderstanding" prevented him from realizing on Easter Sunday that his nephew faced a rape allegation.

Nevertheless, Kennedy, according to his own sworn deposition, briefly discussed "an allegation of sexual harassment" with his son, Patrick, his bodyguard, and his nephew - the rape suspect -William Kennedy Smith, before he spoke to police.

In addition to those discussions on Sunday, March 31, the day after the alleged rape, Kennedy also called a Miami lawyer.

Kennedy on Wednesday sought to portray his actions that day as those of a concerned uncle who was unsure of precisely what police were investigating but who wanted to help.

'None of us thought that the investigation was about 'rape,'" Kennedy said in a one-page statement issued by his office late Wednesday. "I thought the police were investigating a different offense such as sexual harassment. This was nothing more than an honest semantic misunderstanding.

The response, which took Kennedy's Senate office all day Wednesday to issue, came a day after Palm Beach police released 1,300 pages of documents including sworn statements by Kennedy, and his son, a Rhode Island state legislator.

Patrick Kennedy told police that his father became aware on Easter Sunday of the alleged sexual assault.

That comment was potentially damaging because it raised questions about why police were unable to reach the Senator on Easter, the day they were beginning their rape investigation. The comment also called into question Kennedy's earlier remarks that he first learned of the sexual assault allegation on Monday, April 1, after he had returned to Washington.

Jury selection abruptly postponed

COALVILLE, Utah (AP) — Jury selection in the penalty hearing for one of the men accused in the slayings of two women at a mountain cabin was postponed over an unspecified legal issue.

Less than 30 minutes after 3rd District Judge Frank Noel began questioning a prospective jury pool of more than 80, and after meeting privately with attorneys for both sides, the judge excused the group Wednesday.

A 12-member panel will determine the fate of Von Lester Taylor, a halfway-house walkaway who pleaded guilty May 1 to first-degree murder in the shooting deaths of Kay Tiede, 49, Humble, Texas, and her mother, Beth Potts, 76, Murray, Utah.

Taylor faces a sentence of execution or life imprisonment.

Defense attorney Elliott Levine declined to say why jury selection was interrupted except that it was over "a thorny legal issue." He said he expected the process to resume today.

Terry Christiansen, deputy county attorney, said he couldn't comment.

On Wednesday, a different jury convicted Taylor's fellow walkaway, Edward S. Deli, on lesser counts of second-degree murder in the slayings. Frustrated jurors said later that a single male panelist was alone in arguing against a capital homicide conviction that carries the death penalty.

Gene

Croce presented the findings Wednesday at a symposium at the opening of the 82nd annual meeting of the American Association for Cancer Research in Houston.

Lung cancer is the nation's leading cancer killer. For the last 60 years while death rates for other forms of cancer have declined, the death rate for lung cancer has steadily increased. The disease kills 87 percent of its victims within five years.

Croce, a member of the team that made the discovery, said several genes are probably involved in the formation of lung cancer, but that PTP-gamma appears to be one of the most impor-

"If it's not this gene, then it's very close to it," he said.

Dr. Gott Peter Gott, M.D.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 60-year-old mother has been diagnosed with small-cell carcinoma. This appears to be a secondary liver cancer that probably originated in the lungs. I've been economic development. Two told it is incurable but her life may be mentioned as possibilities were prolonged with chemotherapy or radiation. This prospect frightens me to the degree I am considering taking her to Mexico for immune booster

The cancer spreads rapidly and is resistant to ra and anti-cancer drugs.

Your mother would be badly served by attempting alternative, unproved treatments, such as immune therapy, which proponents claim cures cancer by strengthening the immune system. This is hogwash. For each of us, the time comes to decide how to cope with the reality of death. In your mother's case, the time is now. DEAR DR. GOTT: I read an article recently about the use of acyclovir for children with chickenpox who have impaired immune systems. Could this medication also be used for the treatment of shingles?

DEAR READER: Absolutely. In fact, acyclovir (Zovirax) has been recommended for this purpose. However, to be effective, the drug must be started early in the disease — at least within the first day or so after the blisters appear.

Shingles (herpes zoster) is a virus infection of the nerves in the skin, leading to painful blistering of a narrow area on one side of the body. Until the availability of acyclovir, shingles (as well as other herpes virus and chickenpox infections) were really untreatable; they just ran their

About 10 percent of untreated shingles patients develop a poorly understood, dreaded complication: postherpetic neuralgia, unremitting pain that can last for years after the acute infection. Experts hope that acyclovir will reduce the incidence of this complication.

But the top Democrat in the House says it isn't going to be an exodus, campaign carrot and the redistricting stick notwithstan-

"People were speculating that up to 100 members would leave, and I think that's nonsense," said House Speaker Thomas S. Foley of Washington. "I don't think it's going to be a serious problem."

One party's problem is the other's opportunity. Wholesale retirements in a House that is 62 percent Democratic should enhance Republican chances in

So Edward J. Rollins, who was chief strategist at the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, said he had tried to promote the theory of a 1992 House exodus. Anything that makes GOP House prospects look better can help in the constant hunt for candidates to challenge for Democratic seats. The retirement theory centers on a change in campaign finance rules that takes effect in 1993. Thirteen states are losing House seats, and that means that some incumbents are going to have to run against each other unless one of them quits. Eight are gaining seats.

Democrats control the redistricting process in five of those states, because they hold the governor's office and majorities in both branches of the legislatures.

In the congressional elections of the past two decades, an average of 36 House members have opted against seeking new terms. The highest count was 49, in 1978. In the last three elections,

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company has filed an application with the Public Utility Commission of Texas to add a new optional service called MaxiMizer 800 Servicesm Common Line 800 Service.

MaxiMizer 800 Servicesm Common Line 800 Service provides for the termination of 800 Service calls to a customer's local exchange line instead of a dedicated facility such as a WATS access line. This service is primarily for small and medium businesses that expect a large percentage of their 800 Service calls to be intraLATA in nature. This service will utilize the new 800 data base network comprised of a National Service Management System data base and the common channel signaling system network utilizing the Signaling System #7 (SS7) protocol.

The proposed monthly charge for MaxiMizer 800 Servicesm is $10.00 for each 800 telephone number, plus an hourly rate of $13.50 for the first ten hours and $12.00 for each hour over the ten hours. In addition, a service establishment fee of $65.00 is proposed.

Persons who wish to comment on this application should notify the commission by June 1, 1991. Requests for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, or you may call the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256 or (512) 458-0221, teletypewriter for the deaf. The senator's conduct raises anew the issues of character and personal responsibility that have dogged his political career ever since he left the scene of an automobile accident and failed to report it to police.

In a sworn statement to Palm Beach police, Kennedy's son, Patrick, said his father knew of the rape accusation that has since resulted in charges filed against Kennedy's nephew, William Kennedy Smith.

And the senator himself admitted in a sworn statement that he was aware police had called twice to inquire about a "serious offense" but that he did not return the calls. He did, however, telephone a local lawyer before leaving the estate on Easter weekend.

The Massachusetts Democrat on Wednesday issued a statement saying: "As soon as I became aware that the police wished to speak with me, I made arrangements to talk with them and I have cooperated fully with them ever since.'

Hearings draw out reality behind plan

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) -Jim Courter sees the reality behind the numbers.

Traveling around the country chairing regional hearings of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission, the attorney and former congressman listens to pleas and reasons why this base or that post should be spared the budget ax.

"It makes you totally aware of the impact, the economic and human impact, of what we're about to do," Courter said after Tuesday's daylong hearing in Fort Worth, the fourth of eight such regional appearances.

Washington, "From anesthetized from the public in the various states, it's more of an intellectual exercise and is easily justifiable, and then when you're out in the rest of America, you find out the human consequences, and that's the impact you get," Courter said.

The commission has until July 1 to recommend to President Bush which of the nation's military installations should be closed or realigned. It is working from a list of 43 bases and posts Defense Secretary Dick Cheney recommended for closure.

Governors and mayors, business people and veterans, politicians and analysts cheered on by placard-waving, button-wearing supporters — have filled the witness list in hearings so far in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Denver and Fort Worth.

Witnesses come armed with fancy audio-visual aids and thick folders of reasons why their local installation should be left alone.

Generally, Courter said, the presentations favor fact over

"They emphasize the military contributions of their installations. They are very short on emotions, even though they are emotional, and are very long on logic and information, which is important and helpful to us."

budget moves through Congress. Subcommittee Chairman Rep. Tom Bevill, D-Ala., said he was confident Congress would actually give the collider more than $434 million before the fiscal 1992 spending bill reaches the White House Bevill said he also believes construction delays could be avoided. The Energy Department wants to begin tunneling a 54mile ring under Central Texas farmland by late summer 1992.

One SSC opponent, Rep. Jim Slattery, D-Kan., said he would take his case for killing the project to the House floor. And Rep. Sherwood Boehlert, R-N.Y., said he would ask his colleagues on the House floor to further reduce the SSC's funding.

"There is a growing feeling among a number of my colleagues that this does not deserve the priority that that sum ($434 million) assigns to it," Boehlert

The SSC Lab, meanwhile, last week rejected a proposal by a coalition of scientists to develop one of the collider's two large particle detectors, known as the L-star. While the SSC Lab has approved the development of one detector by the Solenoidal Detector Collaboration, it must start over and find another collaboration to develop the second, said spokesman Russ Wylie.

The rejected detector was being developed by Samuel C.C. Ting, a Nobel laureate and physicist at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and German, Swiss, Soviet and Chinese scientists.

SSC Lab spokesman Russ Wylie said the collaboration was beginning to unravel and that the Germans and Swiss were beginning to pull out.
