Drug war erupts in Mexican prison

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Anti-terrorist troops and police in riot gear surrounded a state prison early Saturday following a bloody battle between rival drug gangs that officials said left 18 people dead and five hurt.

Officials said the fighting began Friday night after a prisoner apparently tried to kill another inmate described as a Colombian drug lord. They said prisoners fought for three hours with guns, knives and Molotov cocktails.

The Tamaulipas state prison was quiet in the predawn hours Saturday. Police officers and soldiers surrounded the building and stood guard.

Silvio Brussolo Torres, a sub-director of the Mexican Federal Judicial Police, said authorities planned to enter the prison, but (see PRISON, page 13A)

Briton joins Soviet crew into space

BAIKONUR COSMODROME, U.S.S.R. (AP) — With a brilliant blaze of orange flame, a Soviet rocket blasted off from the desert of Central Asia Saturday, carrying the first Briton into space along with two Soviet cosmonauts.

The blastoff was right on schedule, at 3:52 p.m. Moscow time (8:52 a.m. EDT) from the Baikonur Cosmodrome in Kazakhstan, 1,500 miles southeast of Moscow.

Soviet television interrupted its usual programming for live coverage of the countdown and launch.

The Briton, 27-year-old Helen Sharman, won a contest to fly on a Soviet space mission. Soviet television showed her lying in the Soyuz TM-12 capsule, her face serene, minutes before the launch.

"We can feel gradual acceleration. Slight vibration. We are feeling all right. More noise ... Normal. Less vibration," flight commander Anatoly Artsebarsky reported to ground controllers in a steady voice.

Two days after leaving Earth and docking with the Mir space station, Artsebarsky and the fellow crewman Sergei Krikalev are scheduled to begin five months of repairs and other work at the 5-year-old orbiting station.

Ms. Sharman, a former chemist with Mars Confectionary Ltd., is expected to spend eight days in space performing Soviet medical and agricultural experiments.

Appearing at a joint news conference with her crewmates on Friday, Ms. Sharman agreed with them that the mission would be difficult. But she joked that she hoped it wouldn't be worse than learning her co-workers' native tongue.

The SDN Column

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Politics is the science of who gets what, when and why."

Much has been written about the Robin Hood approach to school finance. Former SDN Editor Wacil McNair sent us a masterpiece by R.L. Palmer, columnist in the Mt. Pleasant Tribune.

The State of Texas vs. S. Claus: You are hereby requested and required to show cause before the Supreme Court of the State of Texas on or before Dec. 23, 1991, why you should not be held in contempt.

It has come to the attention of this august body that you may be in violation of Article 47, Section 3, Amendment 123 of the Texas Constitution requiring the efficient delivery of Christmas presents.

Testimony has been heard how you work tirelessly each year to deliver all presents on the evening of Dec. 24 and that you do this at little or no cost to recipients. In fact, more than one witness testified that they received a present in exchange for a glass of milk and a stale Chips Ahoy.

This commendable record, however, cannot offset the damaging testimony of other witnesses.

This court is abashed to learn that not every child receives the same present. This is obviously discriminatory.

We have heard that children are actually allowed to tell Santa what they want for Christmas. It is clear that a 3-year-old will not be as well informed as to his gift options as a 7-year-old.

Also, testimony has shown that the number, quality and worth of presents seem to vary according to the economic resources of the parents. These practices must cease and desist.

Mr. Claus, you will submit to this court your proposal by Dec. 23, 1991, to remedy these injustices or the court will appoint a special Christmas master who will administer gift distribution.

The Christmas Master may consider a variety of alternatives, including, but not limited to, giving the same present to each child in Texas regardless of age, sex or need. An alternative would be to raid all rich homes at 2 a.m. Dec. 25, collecting excess presents, above state minimum, and redistribute them to poor homes. Lastly, he could order an end to Christmas until an acceptable plan is developed.

If any of the above suggestions require additional money, we suggest that you apply to the Texas Legislature which is in session and has access to unlimited funds.

Schools, Reynolds 'DARE' kids to stay away from drugs

It may take a few years to judge the impact, but Scurry County teachers and administrators believe that after two years, they've already seen enough to enthusiastically endorse the drug education program, DARE.

"It's a wonderful program. If we can just save one kid from falling in those footsteps it will be worth it," said Ira fifth grade teacher Betty Burrow.

DARE, Drug Abuse Resistance Education, has been taught for the past two years to all sixth grade students in Snyder public schools and to all fifth graders at Ira and Hermleigh. In addition, students who have "graduated" from the program get a refresher course the following year.

The semester-long program concluded at Hermleigh and Ira on Thursday and Friday, and will end with ceremonies at North Elementary, West and Stanfield on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, respectively, this week. Students at Northeast, East and Central elementaries took the program the previous semester.

"I think it has been an excellent program," said Scurry County Sheriff's Deputy Charlie Reynolds, who conducts the DARE program for all the schools in the county. "We've found that the interest that was there in the sixth grade is still there in the seventh grade. That's a real good sign. I believe that when these kids get older, we won't see near as many problems with alcohol and drug abuse. That's our hopes. By the time these kids are sophomores and juniors, we ought to be able to see something."

When school opens for the fall semester, every student at Snyder Junior High will have had at least one semester of the DARE program, unless he or she is a transfer student. To date, some 600 students have been in the program.

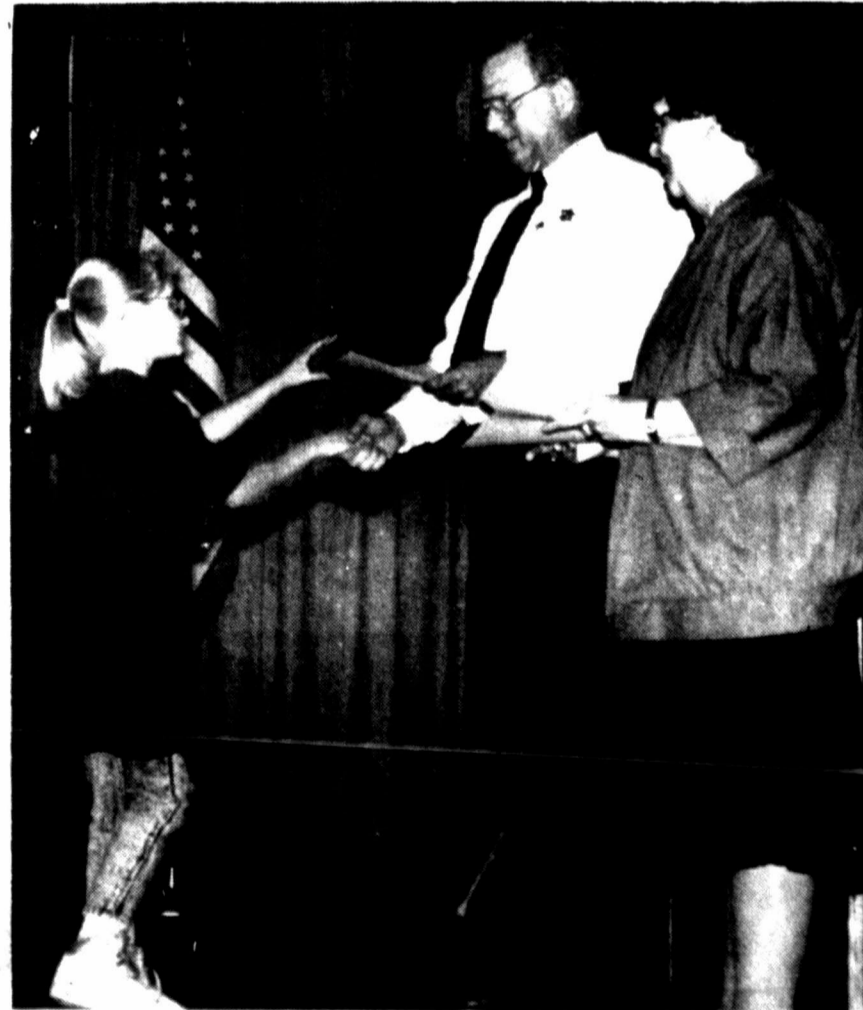

Reynolds visits a different campus each day — all day. This past semester, he spent Mondays at North, Tuesdays at West, Wednesdays at Stanfield, Thursdays at Hermleigh and Fridays at Ira.

"The kids can't wait until they see Charlie coming. He relates really well," said Mrs. Burrow.

But while teachers point to Reynolds as a key to making the program a success, he refers to the cooperation of the schools, the program lessons, and the kids themselves.

"The superintendents and the teachers at the schools have been tremendous," said Reynolds. "And the kids are very receptive. I was told that it would be hard to see these kids leave at the end of the year but I didn't believe it. Now I know what the teachers were talking about. You develop a bond there."

"I've done a lot of things over (see DARE, page 13A)

Burglars steal donated food

HOUSTON (AP) — Burglars virtually emptied the food cupboard of a Houston organization that furnishes food for the needy to eight distribution and provides Thanksgiving Dinner to tens of thousands of poor people, officials say.

An official of the City Wide Club of Clubs said donated food worth about $75,000 was stolen from the club's warehouse sometime Thursday night.

The food is used for poor families, the homeless and the mentally ill, said City Wide coordinator Sally Holmes.

"We have people calling us who were to receive food, and we don't know what to tell them," Ms. Holmes said Friday. "We have one woman with eight children who was upset by the small amount of food we sent her. It's hard to explain that someone stole it."

Bob Clark, another coordinator with City Wide, said nearby residents saw three men with a large truck near the warehouse.

The men somehow ripped the steel doors from the rear of the building and carted off hundreds of pounds of food, Clark said.

The club provided a free Thanksgiving dinner to more than 50,000 people last November at the George R. Brown Convention Center.

White alligators new superstars of New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Priceless, pretty and so rare they are precious, white alligators occupying the Louisiana Swamp exhibit at this city's Audubon Zoo seldom move as they laze suspended in their pools.

Blue eyes and white noses regularly poke above the swamp exhibit's murky waters, seemingly oblivious to the crowds they are attracting and the oohs and aahs they elicit from their visitors.

Like China's giant panda, the white alligators have become hometown celebrities.

"There is no way to put a price on them," said Curt Barnett, general curator at Audubon Zoo. "They are the only ones in the world. When something is the only one, it's priceless."

They are not true albinos, because they have blue eyes rather than pink, Barnett said.

There are 18 of them, found in a south Louisiana swamp four years ago. Zoos around the world are clamoring for them to visit.

As far as can be determined, no other white alligators have ever been found, Barnett said.

"There isn't even any folklore about them," he said. "I have to assume if any had ever been found before, there would be stories about them at least, but I couldn't find any."

Their small numbers aren't surprising, Barnett said, because without their normal protective coloration, baby alligators normally don't last long in the wild.

Noah Project's annual show slated June 8

The advisory committee of Noah Project is presenting an evening of family entertainment on June 8.

"The Shaky Tale of Dr. Jakey" will follow a Coney Island supper on that date at Scurry County Coliseum as Noah Project offers its annual fundraiser.

The melodrama is directed by Eleanor Dryden and reveals how good can triumph over greed and jealousy and shows the "lovely" Formida Hide confronted with the "sneaky tactics" of Dr. Hooza Fraidy!

Food service will begin at 6:30 p.m. with music and the drama to follow. Tickets are $7 for adults and $3.50 for children 10 and under. Proceeds will go to the support of Noah Project, for use in shelter and services.

Tickets will be available at Bar-H-Bar, Blanche's Bernina and Elizabeth Potts Realtors.

AIDS-transplant infection chance called slight

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A patient's risk of receiving AIDS from organ transplants are "slim to zero," health officials said after three AIDS deaths linked to heart and kidney transplants were reported.

The three victims were among more than 50 patients who received organs or tissues six years ago from a donor officials only recently learned may have been infected with the AIDS virus.

A fourth transplant recipient, an elderly Colorado woman who received a hip joint, has tested positive for the AIDS virus, Doug Wilson, a spokesman for LifeNet Transplantation Services of Virginia Beach, said Friday.

LifeNet distributed the donor's organs and tissues to 30 hospitals around the country.

Saturday's Atlanta Journal-Constitution identified the donor as William Norwood, a 22-year-old Richmond gas station attendant who was shot in the head by a robber in 1985.

"He tried to do something for other people, and look how it turned out," Norwood's mother, who was not named, told the newspaper.

Norwood's body was tested for the AIDS virus twice before his organs were transplanted. The test results were negative both times.

Wilson said the virus may have evaded scrutiny because testing methods were less sophisticated six years ago. Also, Norwood may have been infected so soon before he died that his body registered no signs of the illness.

Jellyfish will fly on shuttle

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — In a NASA laboratory eight miles from the launch pad, biologist Dorothy Spangenberg dotes on 2,478 tiny jellyfish bound for space next week aboard the shuttle Columbia.

That's her prime crew. About 22,000 others are on standby.

Spangenberg needs a fresh batch of jellyfish, at just the right stage of development, for every launch attempt. She has enough for eight tries; the first is Wednesday morning when Columbia is scheduled for liftoff.

The young creatures, transported from her own laboratory in Norfolk, Va., fill covered casserole dishes that are stacked in incubators. The Pyrex dishes are clear so Spangenberg can keep an eye on the action inside.

"The jellyfish just love them," she said. "I check them every day to make sure they're happy and in good shape."

How does she know they're happy?

"After 30 years, you know," she said, laughing. "It's like knowing your child."

Spangenberg beamed as she showed off her menagerie Friday.

"They're the best little jellyfish in the world. You can't find any better jellyfish," she said. "I went to a conference and I didn't find anyone who pays more attention to their jellyfish than I do."

Spangenberg's pampered brood will be the first jellyfish to fly in space.

Hearing Aid Express Provides Advanced Technology

Rich Cook, hearing aid technician for Hearing Aid Express, recently completed factory training courses in advanced technology for the in-office assembly and repair of hearing instruments - a capability that is revolutionizing services to the hearing impaired.

The courses Cook completed enable Hearing Aid Express to manufacture custom in-the-ear hearing aids right in the local office/laboratory. This means they can build, assemble, modify and fit custom instruments with the latest advance in hearing aid technology.

The significance of this in-office assembly capability is that Hearing Aid Express can continue to provide designed and fitted hearing instruments in a very short time; and also can provide any needed adjustments, modifications or repairs right at the same location.

This eliminates the older, time-consuming procedures under which a client's measurements and test results have to be sent to a factory for an aid to be built with a possible waiting period of several weeks. Then, the client faces the possibility the aid might have to be returned to the factory for adjustment or modification.

Cook participated in the hands-on training course in the corporate headquarters of Electrone, Inc., one of the four major manufacturers of hearing aids in the U.S. located in Longwood, a suburb of Orlando, Florida.

As a result of his training there, Cook also can provide hearing aid repairs in the local office, in most cases within hours, eliminating the delays encountered where such capabilities are not available.

This module assembly service, as it is known, features the latest in precise circuitry techniques and the hearing health sciences. Using the techniques learned at Electrone, graduates of the course will be in full compliance with regulations set forth by the U.S. Food & Drug Administration.

Space station cuts disappoint crew

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The astronauts who flew on the recent "Star Wars" research mission said Friday that members of Congress were being shortsighted in cutting money for the proposed space station.

Discovery commander Michael Coats said he was disappointed and stunned Wednesday when a House appropriations subcommittee voted 6-3 to deny further funds for the proposed station, which already has cost taxpayers more than $4 billion.

"I think most of us are confident that the full committee and the House itself will reverse that vote," Coats told reporters at an afternoon news conference. "It would be almost inconceivable to me that they would cancel the space station. It's hard to grasp that."

"It's hard to understand why Congress is being so shortsighted," Coats added.

The seven-member crew, which returned to Earth May 6 with a rare landing in Florida, spent eight days in space conducting tests aimed at helping Pentagon scientists design a missile-defense system.

"I'm personally very disappointed in their shortsightedness," said Discovery pilot Blaine Hammond. "I know it costs a lot of money, but I think we've spent a lot of money getting it to where we are now, and just to throw it down the tubes is just not a wise thing to do."

In a closed session, the panel voted to cut the entire $2 billion President Bush had requested for the station so it would not have to trim other programs competing for the $81 billion the committee controls this year.

The spending bill now goes to the House Appropriations Committee, which is likely to ratify the subcommittee's action, then to the full House. The process starts again in the Senate, where some say the station has its best chance for survival.

Richard Heib, a mission specialist aboard Discovery, said exploring space through such programs as the space station is important for the entire country, not just scientists and astronauts working on the project.

Financial Focus

One of the changes occurring in the securities industry is the impending elimination of stock certificates.

Traditionally, when you purchase a stock or bond, you receive a certificate as evidence of ownership. The certificate represents tangible proof of your investment. When you decide to sell the security, you give up your certificate in exchange for money. Simple enough.

Actually, it's not quite this simple. The broker who sells your stock for you has only five business days to get your certificate to the broker representing the buyer. Then your name is removed from the corporate books as a registered owner, the name of the new owner is registered, and finally a new certificate is issued and delivered to the new owner.

The Oct. 19, 1987, stock market crash magnified the weaknesses of such a paper-intensive system in our automated society. What's the solution?

The Group of Thirty, an international group of bankers and securities executives dedicated to speeding up the processing of security trades, sees the answer in replacing stock certificates with a paperless, electronic system called book-entry.

Actually, electronic book-entry has been around for a long time. U.S. Treasury certificates are available to individuals only in book-entry form. In addition, most investors have their mutual-fund shares held in "non-certificate," or book-entry, form. And many new issues of government, corporate and municipal bonds are now registered only in book-entry form. Investors generally accept this with no problem.

There is little doubt that such a system for stocks would be less costly and more efficient. Security settlement would be reduced to three days from the current five-day settlement. This alone would make U.S. markets more efficient and globally competitive, a major concern in the 1990's.

Critics of an electronic book-entry system claim that small investors would be scared away from a "certificate-less" market. A recent survey by U.S. Banknote Corporation, a company that prints stock certificates, showed that 81 percent of 750 investors surveyed opposed the elimination of stock certificates. Their major concerns were potential computer error and collapse of a brokerage firm.

The debate continues, but the outcome is almost certain to be an electronic book-entry system. The target date is 1993, but realistically the move would take longer.

The stock certificate has become a symbol of investing. Like most traditions, it will be hard to see it go.

However, as generations change, so does the way we do business. Soon, the stock certificate may be as obsolete as the manual typewriter that once processed it.

Reporters must reveal sources

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawyers for The Washington Post are studying their legal options after an appeals court ruled that one of the newspaper's reporters must disclose a confidential source or go to jail.

The newspaper's lead attorney, Patrick J. Carome, said he was "surprised and disappointed" by Friday's ruling that Linda C. Wheeler must obey a trial judge's order to disclose who gave her secret plans for a failed 1986 drug raid.

The District of Columbia Court of Appeals decision upheld an April 24 contempt-of-court order that Wheeler be jailed for refusing to make the disclosure in the civil trial of a lawsuit brought by six police officers.

Carome, who represents both the newspaper and Wheeler, said he would spend the weekend studying the decision and take "a very hard look at what our next step is."

Those options include a request that the panel or the full nine-member court release the case. Wheeler could also go directly to the Supreme Court.

The appeals panel temporarily left intact its stay of the contempt order issued by Superior Court Judge Richard A. Levie, who is presiding at the civil trial. The six officers claim they were unfairly made scapegoats for the failed "Operation Caribbean Cruise" anti-drug operation, which produced far fewer arrests than had been anticipated.

The officers' trial, which is in recess, is to resume Monday.

The appeals court upheld Levie's findings that Wheeler had waived any claim of confidentiality by disclosing to two U.S. Park police officers that she obtained a secret handbook outlining the drug raid from Police Chief Isaac Fulwood, then the assistant chief.

The six white officers claim that Fulwood, who is black, manipulated an internal investigation of the raid to shift blame onto them because of their race.

Candidates' list said exotic

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A movie star, a bordello owner, a rifle-toting ex-bandit, a former king and his mother — these and other colorful candidates are winding up their campaigns for next week's national elections.

Most of them are not serious contenders. But the list of candidates makes one thing clear: elections in the world's largest democracy are no longer the preserve of professional politicians, who are losing respect among Indians.

"Politics has become so undisciplined that we need a change of scene. That is why more educated people like army generals, auditors, film actors are coming forward," said Rajesh Khanna, a leading Hindi actor.

Khanna is running for a seat in the policy-making lower house of Parliament from a New Delhi constituency. The Congress Party, led by former Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, supports him.

In addition, the voting beginning Monday will involve local assembly seats in six of India's 32 states or territories.

Victor Banarjee, another actor who had leading roles in British movies including David Lean's "A Passage to India," will also be on the Parliamentary ballot, for the Hindu revivalist Bharatiya Janata Party.

And two actors who starred in a popular Hindu mythological TV series are contesting seats for the Bharatiya Janata.

"In the beginning I had to convince the people I have not come as an actor, that I mean business. I told them I got your adulation for years, now I want to help you," said Khanna. His soft voice that charmed fans for three decades is hoarse after two weeks of campaigning.

Other contenders are three former members of the national cricket team, a former chief auditor of the government and a 78-year-old former world body building champion.

RAWHIDE HIGHWAY ...

On the banks of the Red River, northeast of present-day Vernon, is Doan's crossing. Established in 1874, Doan's was the last stop on the Western and Kansas Cattle Trail before the 300 mile push to Dodge City. In less than twenty years more than six million longhorn and thirty thousand cowboys crossed this portion of the "rawhide highway."

Horns edge Aggies in tournament tilt

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — It took some last-inning heroics, but the Texas Longhorns were in the driver's seat at the end of the second round of the 15th annual Southwest Conference baseball tournament.

Charles Abernathy's high-chopping single in the bottom of the ninth allowed the sixth-ranked Longhorns to edge the No. 10 Aggies 5-4 in dramatic fashion late Friday night. The Texas Christian Horned Frogs earlier blanked No. 24 Baylor 3-0 in an elimination game.

"It was a classic college baseball game," said Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson. "And I was going to say that whether we had won or lost."

"It was a great college baseball game," echoed A&M Coach Mark Johnson. "I'm proud of the way we came back."

Texas (45-16) now waits on the winner of Saturday afternoon's A&M-TCU loser. Texas can win the championship with a victory over the survivor in a game to be played at 7 p.m. Saturday night. Should the Longhorns lose, another game would be needed to determine the championship of the double elimination tournament.

Scott Malone and Kyle Caple launched home runs, while Jared Shope threw shutout baseball to even his record at 5-5 in TCU's win. The Horned Frogs (33-24) — making their first tournament appearance ever — are looking to earn their first NCAA bid since 1956. Texas seemingly had the game won early, taking a 3-1 lead with single runs in the third, fourth and fifth innings.

However, the Aggies (42-20) rallied for three runs and grabbed a 4-3 lead going into the ninth.

The Longhorns opened the inning with a pair of singles by Clay King and Scott Pugh and after Roger Luce walked to load the bases, Abernathy brought home the winning runs.

"I've been in this situation before and not produced," said Abernathy. "I was just committed to putting the ball in play on the ground. Fluke hits or not, I've been getting them."

Western Texas College athletic boosters hosted a pot-luck supper for incoming men's basketball coach Kelly Green Monday night at Towle Park Barn.

There was more than enough food and almost as much banter between boosters and coach Green.

"I had just sat down," the coach began, "and barely had my first bite of chicken to my lips when I started getting directions on how to get to Hutchinson, Kansas (site of the juco men's basketball national tournament). Now that's pressure."

Green was quick to thank the boosters for their help in getting him and his wife, Ginger, situated in Snyder but the former Frank Phillips College coach did have one question no one wanted to answer.

"Who was that sitting behind the Frank Phillips bench when we were here last year that kept yelling at me to sit down?"

On a related subject.

Green has been beating the bushes for recruits, recently, and feels like he has come up with several good possibilities.

One is Keno Outlaw, a 6-7 standout from North Carolina who has, in Green's words, a "Robert Parish demeanor".

You could do worse.

The state track meet in Austin signalled the end of Snyder High School athletics for the 1990-91 school year.

It was a year, probably to be remembered by most as the season the Tiger football team won the district 2-4A trophy.

As dominant as football is in sports fans' minds in West Texas, it should also be remembered that The Tigers and Lady Tigers did well in all their athletic endeavors in the just-completed year.

Besides the Tiger gridder who went all the way to the regional semifinals, Snyder's volleyball team advanced to the bi-district round of the playoffs, the fall-season tennis team won a loop title, the Lady Tiger golf squad moved into the Region I tournament, as did boys' medalist and district runner-up Chad Jacobi.

Also, Snyder sent three qualifiers to the state Class 4A track meet, Ed Rios in the high jump, Ninnie Clay in the shot put and Katina Brandon in the discus, as well as sending Marcus Best in boys' singles and the girls' doubles team of Rachel Wilson and Gayle Henderson to regionals in tennis in the spring.

The SHS baseball squad, supposedly in a rebuilding mode, went down to the final regular-season game before being eliminated from the post-season tourney.

All Snyder High athletes are to be honored at the school's annual All-Sports Banquet at the coliseum May 25.

Banquet organizer Paula Fox assures us that it will be an event to be remembered with jungle-effect decorations, a video of Snyder's sports highlights, a memory wall of sports photos and a rib-eye steak dinner catered by The Shack.

Tickets, available at city banks and Iglehart Insurance or from booster club members, will go for $10 for adults and $8 for students.

The dinner is to feature Snyder athletic director and District 2-4A Coach of the Year David Baugh as Master of Ceremonies.

HONORED SIBLINGS — Dave and Amy Holmes were named Athlete Hero and Sweetheart at Friday's annual Ira Sports Banquet at the IHS cafeteria. Senior Dave, brother to Amy, a freshman, participated in football and track for the 1990-91 season, while little sister played basketball and ran track. Dave Holmes was also named Male Athlete of the year for the Bulldogs. Female Athlete of the Year, sophomore Mauricia Rosas, was unable to attend the banquet. Fans of the Year, selected by a ballot of Ira athletes, were Doug and Susie White. (SDN Staff Photo)

In Eastern semifinals...

Detroit ends Celtics' season

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — They used to play games filled with passion and hate. Now the Detroit Pistons and Boston Celtics have great respect for one another. And the games somehow keep getting better and better.

The Pistons, trying to become only the third team to win three consecutive NBA championships, got an eight-point lift from Isiah Thomas in overtime Friday night and ousted the Celtics 117-113 in Game 6 of the Eastern Conference semifinals.

The Celtics weren't buying any of that. But they clearly appreciated the fact that Thomas was gracious.

"Even though Isiah said his 3-pointer was all luck and no skill, you don't have to tell me that," Ed Pinckney said. "Those things just happen. He hit a real tough shot down the stretch. He just came through for them. That's what they expect of him. That's his job. He did what he had to do to win the game. He took over."

The two teams, both plagued by injuries to key players throughout the series, made up in emotion what they lacked in healthy bodies. In Game 5, the Celtics overcame an 18-point lead only to see the Pistons pull out a 116-111 victory in Boston Garden. In Game 6, the Celtics trailed by 17 points late in the third quarter but refused to give in.

"I guess these last two games would have to rank as two of the better games I've ever seen in the NBA," Detroit coach Chuck Daly said.

Boston guard Brian Shaw called Game 6 a microcosm of everything that has happened to the Celtics this season.

"It was a heckuva season, and we went down with a fight," Shaw said. "We just came up a little short and nobody should feel bad."

Detroit, making its fifth consecutive appearance in the conference finals, will open against the Bulls in Chicago on Sunday afternoon.

The game was tied at 105-105 after regulation and Boston took a quick four-point lead in overtime. Then Thomas took over, although he claimed to be aided by divine intervention.

Thomas, who finished with 17 points, began his crunch-time run by banking in a 3-pointer as the 24-second clock expired. He had two more baskets and a free throw, all at the expense of Boston rookie Dee Brown, in overtime.

But it was the 3-pointer that broke the Celtics' hearts, wiping out their hard-earned lead.

"Somebody lied. I didn't call bank," Thomas said. "I was basically trying to get it up on the rim. I was trying to make the shot, but God picked up the ball and put it in."

Players are charged in credit card scam

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The University Interscholastic League said it won't bar from the playoffs two high school baseball players who are suspected of credit card fraud.

UIL Athletic Director Bill Farney said the UIL, which regulates high school sports in Texas, doesn't bar students charged with criminal offenses from participating in sports or other extracurricular activities.

"We just hope the school would use common sense in this area," Farney said. "A certain code of conduct is expected, not only from students, but from district personnel."

Martin High School left fielder Steven Johnson and second baseman Christopher Erik Warner were arrested this week along with a former Martin student on suspicion of credit card fraud.

Johnson and Warner practiced with the team Thursday. Martin coach Terry King and principal Steve Jacoby said disciplinary action had been taken against Johnson and Warner, but refused to elaborate, citing federal privacy law.

School officials also declined to say whether the two would be allowed to play Friday night against Grand Prairie High School in the opening game of a best-of-3 series to determine the area Class 5A champion.

Police contend the pair, along with former Martin student Darren Little, were involved in a scam in which the 18-year-old suspects used credit cards lost by patrons at an Arlington movie theater to buy compact discs, video games and other merchandise for themselves and friends.

Police said the investigation began in February when a teacher tipped police to rumors circulating at the school. More arrests are possible, police said.

MIDLAND — District 2-4A champion Estacado handed Pecos, District 3 runner-up, a 6-3 loss here Friday in their best-of-three Area baseball playoff.

In other Area action Friday, District 2's second-place squad, Frenship, upset 9th-rated District 3 champ Big Spring, also in the opener of a best-of-three series, 4-1.

Estacado dropped Pecos on the strength of outstanding pitching by winner Roctrus Sanders, who allowed seven hits and just two earned runs.

The two teams were to wind up the series Saturday at Johnson Field here.

Frenship's Brad Cade hurled a no-hitter into the fifth frame Friday night in Big Spring before the Steers' Shane Myrick slapped a hit up the middle.

Hospital baby abductions causing concern

LAS CRUCES (AP) — When Patricia Cullen went to the hospital to have her baby she never thought it would disappear. But 11 hours after her daughter was born a woman snatched the infant from its hospital bed.

"I don't think anyone ever thinks about it. They don't think about it until it's news around where they live," said Ms. Cullen, whose baby was abducted April 12, eleven hours after it was born in a Rhode Island Hospital. The baby and mother were reunited April 17.

Twelve to 18 babies a year were taken from hospitals nationwide between 1983 and 1990, the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children reported in March. Most recently, a New Mexico couple's twin son, Kevin, was taken from Memorial Medical Center nursery by a woman who posed as a medical student. His brother, Kristopher, remains at the hospital.

"While not a crime of epidemic proportions, the abduction, by non-family members of infants from hospitals has clearly become a subject of concern ...," the center reported in a March publication.

Sandra Chavez, 21, and her husband, Jerry, 23, of Las Cruces, have made two public pleas for the return of Kevin, who was 4½ weeks premature. And they cling to the hope that their son's abductor wanted a baby so much that she is taking care of the delicate, 5-pound child.

"If you are listening to me, I know you care for children. I know you will not hurt him. I know you are aware of how much I need to hold him and have him back again," Mrs. Chavez said in a recent news conference, directing her plea to the abductor.

The National Center for Missing and Exploited Children began tracking baby abductions in 1988 and found that in 59 cases of children abducted from hospitals, 90 percent were found and reunited with their families, usually within a few days to two weeks after they were taken.

Ms. Cullen said she thinks the crime has occurred often enough that it is time for hospitals to start taking steps to prevent it.

"I'm sure hospitals don't even think about that when they are building the hospital and putting in their security system. They really should. I think it's happening more often lately that they should," she said.

Texas led the nation in number of abductions with 13 from 1983 to 1990, followed by California with 12. New Mexico has had two during that period. Twenty-one states did not have any during those years.

The missing children center publishes guidelines for health professionals for preventing baby abductions. Among some of its recommendations:

- Take fingerprints of each infant.
- Take clear, high-quality photographs of all infants.
- Require all hospital personnel to wear conspicuous photo identification, and those in contact with infants should wear a second form of identification.

An Oklahoma City couple whose child was taken from Deaconess Hospital last summer has filed a multimillion-dollar lawsuit against the hospital alleging negligence for allowing the baby to be taken from the hospital nursery.

"This kind of thing does irreparable damage to a hospital.

People start wondering how safe it is," said Tim Bukowski, president of Security Audits International.

Tightening security, however, can be a dilemma for hospitals and for their budgets, Bukowski said.

"There's a conflict for hospitals that want to have an openness to attract mothers to have babies in their hospital," Bukowski said.

Improving security is usually a matter of making use of available technology, but for a hospital that has never had an abduction or has a limited budget such an investment could be a low priority, he said.

Exile group launches plan

MIAMI (AP) — A powerful exile group has launched a post-communist transition plan to turn Cuba into a free-market democracy, and its members claim to have secret support from Fidel Castro's inner circle. The program unveiled Friday by the Cuban American National Foundation maps out a plan for if and when Castro's government falls. It envisions a government transition of Cuban bureaucrats and military officials, followed within a year by free elections. At the same time, Cuba's state-owned companies would be sold off, raising $15 billion to reinvest into the country's deteriorated infrastructure. The plan would be fleshed out by a committee of U.S. and foreign business and political leaders.

prime mover behind U.S.-supported Radio Marti and TV Marti. "These are merely recommendations that would avoid the pain and suffering that the Eastern European countries ... are going through," Mas said. The commission has neither sought nor received the Bush administration's support, Mas said, but former President Reagan spoke in favor. "The entrepreneurial vocation of the Cuban people is legendary," Reagan told a foundation audience Friday. "Unshackled from Castro's brutal yoke, and communism's dehumanizing chains, investment — not loans — will pour into Cuba, creating jobs and opportunity."

The plan calls for revising Cuba's legal code and renegotiating its international debts. Some 10,000 young Cuban-American professionals would be sent to the island nation to help carry it out. "We are not trying to impose anything on the Cuban people or trying to become a government in exile," said Jorge Mas Canosa, the foundation's chairman and a

ATLANTA (AP) — "Georgia On My Mind" crooner Ray Charles, former President Carter and home run king Hank Aaron were among 10 people enshrined as the first members of the Atlanta Celebrity Walk.

"This is more touching than getting on Hollywood Boulevard," Charles said during Thursday's induction ceremony, which was moved indoor because of a thunderstorm.

"This is my state, man. This is where it all began," added the singer-songwriter, a native of Albany.

Aaron and architect John Portman also attended, but the two other living honorees, Carter and former Mayor Andrew Young, could not make it.

Navy used flawed data for base-closing list, GAO says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy used flawed data to select bases for closure or realignment, congressional investigators told a base-closings panel Friday, contending the service will end up with more space than it needs if the panel, lawmakers and President Bush go along.

Frank Conahan of the General

Accounting Office told the panel that it should not simply revise the proposed list, despite what the agency said were inaccuracies in the information it was based on.

Rather, he said, it is imperative that the Navy and Pentagon provide the Base Closure and Realignment Commission with specific details about how it arrived at its recommendation to close nine bases and realign 17.

"The Navy and the Defense Department owe you people that information," Conahan testified before the commission at a Capitol Hill hearing.

The Navy had no immediate comment on the report or the General Accounting Office testimony.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney recommended last month the closure of 43 domestic bases and the realignment of 28 others, including major facilities such as Fort Ord in California and the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard.

The list drew criticism in Congress where a number of lawmakers complained that their local facilities were unfairly singled out. Members of Congress are certain to use the GAO testimony faulting the Navy in arguing to keep open naval installations in their states.

Lawmakers and affected communities are also expected to cite separate General Accounting Office concerns about a possible increase in the amount of time it would take for the Defense Department to recoup its money on a base closing.

The GAO said that the Pentagon's estimates on base-closing costs and savings did not rely on fiscal 1991 data so there could be reductions in the estimated annual savings and increases in the payback period for several closures.

For example, it said, a 50 percent increase in the one-time cost of shutting down some facilities could increase the payback period from 10 years to 100 years.

Miss Universe from Mexico

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Lupita Jones, of Mexicali, Mexico, was crowned the new Miss Universe Friday night as hundreds of her countrymen cheered wildly on the glitzy Las Vegas strip.

The 23-year-old beat out 20-year-old Paulien Huizinga, Miss Netherlands, and 18-year-old Yulia Lemigova, Miss U.S.S.R., a crowd favorite, who finished second runner-up.

The two-hour television special featured women from 73 countries and was beamed worldwide to some 600 million people, pageant promoters said.

It was the 40th anniversary of an event that began in 1952 as a swimsuit promotion. Today, contestants are judged in swimsuit and evening gown competition, and interviews by a panel of judges.

The 73 entrants competed for $250,000 in cash and prizes, plus a title that could lead to a modeling or film career. The pageant concluded a year's reign for the outgoing Miss Universe, Mona Grudt, whose hometown is Hell, Norway.

The show was broadcast live by CBS. "Entertainment Tonight" reporter Leeza Gibbons and Dick Clark were the co-hosts for the event.

Kelli McCarty, Miss USA, had a large cheering section for the show at the Aladdin Theatre for the Performing Arts.

graduation is usually attended by representatives from the sheriff's office, Snyder police department and the Department of Public Safety.

Superintendents also attend. "I think it's a workable program," said Jerry Church, Hermleigh superintendent. "Our kids are really enjoying it. I think they are learning something they may take with them. It's all positive as far as we're concerned."

Those involved said the DARE program works because it goes beyond "Just Say No."

The students learn about peer pressure, self esteem, consequences of their actions, and decision making. They learn in a variety of ways, even acting out skits and anti-drug and alcohol commercials.

As the school year comes to a close, Reynolds is planning summer activities.

"We want to try to provide some alternative activities for them. We're going to plan two or three swimming parties and other activities," he said.

He also plans to attend softball and baseball games and visit the boy's club and swimming pool and talk with kids.

"I'll be going to where ever the kids are, just to visit," he said.

Meanwhile, the DARE continues to spread.

DARE programs were began by the Sweetwater police department and Mitchell County sheriff's office in January.

"It's already in all 50 states. Eventually, I think you'll see it taught in all communities," said Reynolds. "It's something I believe in very strongly."

Delay sought in execution of prison uprising figure

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — An appeals court has been asked to postpone the execution of one of the prisoners involved in a bloody 1974 prison uprising that left two prisoners and two hostages dead.

Lawyers for Ignacio Cuevas, 59, claimed in a 71-page writ filed Friday with the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals that they have uncovered new evidence that Cuevas was incompetent at the time of his first trial in 1974.

The affidavit claims that Cuevas was incompetent because he suffered brain damage from having served as a "human punching bag" for professional boxers, is functionally illiterate, can't understand English and has paranoid delusions.

Cuevas is scheduled to die early Thursday for his role in the death of Julia Standley, 43, a librarian at the Huntsville "Walls" Unit. She was one of 16 hostages seized during the escape attempt by Cuevas, drug kingpin Fred Gomez Carrasaco and Rudolph Dominguez.

Gomez Carrasco, Dominguez, and Elizabeth Beseda, 46, another hostage, also died in a shootout with law enforcement officers.

did not elaborate.

The Mexican Judicial Police called in an elite anti-terrorist group known as the Zorros, or Foxes, to quell the disturbance, said sheriff's Lt. S.R. Garcia from Cameron County, across the border in Texas.

At least five Mexican navy platoons, army troops and state and federal police were called to the prison, in a residential area on the western edge of Matamoros, across the Rio Grande from Brownsville, Texas.

Garcia said there were "15 to 17 dead inmates" and that Mexican judicial police had removed some of the bodies from the prison. A Mexican official told reporters early Saturday that there had been 18 deaths.

Officials said most of the victims died of beatings or knife wounds. The body of one victim viewed at a local funeral home by a reporter was burned beyond recognition.

Brussolo said the five injured included a woman, and two were in grave condition at a local hospital. Earlier reports had indicated that 11 people had been injured.

Asked how the prisoners obtained weapons, Brussolo said, "That's a question for the (prison) director, not for me."

Sierra Club lawsuit seeks to save endangered species

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — A Sierra Club lawsuit to restrict withdrawal from the Edwards Aquifer could limit water use by Central Texas residents in order to save endangered species in the state's largest springs.

The lawsuit, filed in Midland federal court Friday, alleges that the U.S. Interior Department under Secretary Manuel Lujan Jr. failed to regulate use of the aquifer, which provides drinking and irrigation water to the San Antonio and Austin areas.

Residents of San Antonio, the largest city in the nation to get its entire water supply from an aquifer, had been asked to limit usage last year when Comal Springs, the state's largest, almost went dry, officials said.

The lawsuit follows San Antonio voters' rejection of an alternative surface reservoir and state and local officials' failure to negotiate a water use plan with the federal government.

Papers filed in the lawsuit ask the court to order the Interior Department to enforce the Endangered Species Act with regard to the aquifer to preserve almost a half-dozen endangered species and implement recovery plans to ensure the flow of water to San Marcos Springs, Texas' second largest.

"I very much support the idea of filing the suit," said Dr. Glenn Longley, director of the Edwards Aquifer Research Center at Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos.

"After San Antonio had turned down and stopped construction on its first attempt at an alternative water supply, it was a good indication they were not concerned about the springs," he said.

San Antonio residents recently voted in a referendum to halt construction of Applewhite Reservoir on the Medina River, in a project which Longley said had already cost millions of dollars.

"The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, under threat of suit, could ask that various things happen to federal activities to limit water use, with all the military bases and federally funded activities in that city," Longley said.

"Or a judge could place an injunction on users, limiting their use or telling the Texas Water Commission to do so," he said. "Any of the possibilities will involve limitations. The people in San Antonio made a very bad mistake."

Heavy rains this spring did not avert a crisis that's looming with the aquifer, a 175-mile underground reservoir that underlies eight Texas counties. Drought conditions last year helped to almost drain Comal Springs in New Braunfels.

THRIFTWAY

Scurry County Folks

By Shirley A. Gorman

It has been said of Bill Hart, 78, Scurry County native, that he "knows" what a horse is thinking. That may be true because he has spent most of his life either training them, riding from dawn to dusk or searching the range for missing or sick cows.

A true cowboy of the West — the likes of which are almost extinct in today's modern world — Hart was always so devoted to leading the solitary life of a cowboy that he never thought any woman would "put up" with him. So he had never married.

By age 70, Hart thought he had seen and experienced just about everything life had to offer. He was ready to slow down a bit, lie back and take it easy. After all, he was not as young as he used to be.

But something happened to change all that and no one, least of all Hart, saw it coming. The grizzled but jovial cowboy, got married.

When he met Dotty Birdsall, widow of P.W. Birdsall, eight years ago, it was a case of "love at first sight." He was nothing if not persistent throughout the courtship which soon blossomed into a lasting marriage which has endured for the past eight years.

Dotty, who was staying with her daughter near Dunn at the time, said Hart never missed a day or evening that he didn't come by at least once. They met first at the local bowling alley and saw each other again at the Senior Citizens Center.

She jokingly said that she married Hart because he had "put a hackamore on her."

Hart, who turned 78 on April 6, and Dotty, who celebrated her 73rd birthday 20 days later, have remained very active.

They may qualify as senior citizens according to age, but as far as activities are concerned they act much, much younger.

For instance, some three years ago the Harts climbed into their Nissan and drove straight through to the entrance to Canada in three days. They later

HAPPY TOGETHER — Bill and Dotty Hart stay active and involved even though their birthdate qualifies them for senior citizen status. Bill, who cowboied most of his life, never married until eight years ago. Since then the Harts have traveled some including a trip to Canada three years ago. When at home in Snyder, they love to work in their yard tending gardens, flowers and fruit trees. Hart loves to share memories of his younger days when he cowboied, often riding the range from daylight to dusk. A horse lover since a boy, he has quite a reputation for making even the owner of horses do what he wants it to do. However, he retired about three years ago. (SDN Staff Photo)

Baldwin, Mitchell wed

ABILENE — Kim Leona Baldwin, former resident of Snyder, and TSGT Lorne Austin "Mitch" Mitchell of Abilene were married by Judge Samuel Matta at the Abilene courthouse Tuesday afternoon, March 26.

Parents of the bride are J. Clyde and Reta Baldwin of Snyder and the groom is the son of Mrs. Lois Mitchell and the late Melville Lorne Livingston Mitchell of Troutdale, Ore.

The bride wore a robin egg blue taffeta dress, tea length, with a V neckline and off the shoulder short puff sleeves. Her tight bodice, accented by a drop-waist, featured a large full rhinestone-trimmed taffeta bow in back.

For something old, the bride wore a gold watch given to her by her father. Something new was a 14-inch pearl necklace and matching earrings. She carried a bouquet of white roses, accented with baby blue carnations, daisies and streamers of robin egg blue satin and white lace.

The bridegroom wore a beige shirt and slacks with a white rose boutonniere. The bride's son, B.J. Baldwin, stood by her and wore a matching boutonniere. The bride's father, J. Clyde Baldwin Jr. wore a red rose in his lapel, and her mother, Mrs. Reta Baldwin was presented a long stemmed red rose.

A reception was held in the bride's home, 3833 Trinity St., Abilene. Out-of-town guests were her parents; Carl Baldwin of Perryton, brother of the bride; Letha Pearson and sons of Beaver, Okla.; her sister-in-law, Jackie Baldwin, and her children of Snyder; Mrs. L.R. Jones of Fort Worth, grandmother of the bride; and Mrs. Betty Leslie of Hurst, the bride's aunt.

Following the groom's retirement from the Air Force, the couple will take a delayed honeymoon, a motorcycle tour across Canada and the United States. Mitchell has recently returned to duty in Korea.

OBERLIN, Ohio (AP) — The old proverb about a sound mind in a sound body came true for Jesse Malkin of Oberlin College.

Malkin, a mediocre student before enrolling at Oberlin, took up cross-country running as a freshman. In four years he won four letters. His grades improved dramatically.

Late in 1990 he won a Rhodes Scholarship, the first for an Oberlin student in more than 15 years.

visited with Dotty's daughter, Kay Bennett, who lives in Telkwa, B.C.

They were so chipper and spry that Hart laughed when he told of his telling passersby that "he had jogged up the mountain."

Besides visiting with family, the Harts took in the sights such as the largest mall in Calgary, an underground zoo at Edmonton and the flowers in the Island of Victoria.

They also rode the ferry boat to other sites and saw beautiful sea shells and flowers too beautiful for pictures to do them justice.

Dotty has two other children also, Gay Kimmel, who lives near Dunn, and Mickey Birdsall of Pagosa Spring, Colo. All three graduated from Snyder High School and Texas Tech University.

When the Harts aren't traveling, they work in their yard and grow such gorgeous, lush flowers that people consider it a treat to just drop by for a visit.

After they first married, a big project they took on was digging up the elm trees in their yard.

Hart had remained fairly active with training horses until a couple of years ago when he decided it was time "to cut back on his work." He was born in a house on Clairemont Road in 1913. Also living in Snyder, are three sisters, Treva Abercrombie, Helen Tate and Ida Jo Longbotham. Two brothers, Jack and Gerald, have died.

Hart's dad was a rancher so it was natural for Hart to follow in his footsteps. His first job was on the Fuller Ranch when he was only 12 years old.

In spite of his youth, Hart did the same amount and type of work as the other hands. Through years of patiently learning what anyone had to teach him about horses, he acquired quite a reputation for his expertise.

It was on the Fuller Ranch that Hart said he had his first real encounter with taming horses. Since they were thoroughbred mares he was told not to "choke them down" because that would ruin them.

More than 50 years ago, Hart remembers crawling out of bed at the crack of dawn, eating a substantial breakfast around 4 a.m. and then gathering horses for the day's work.

"We had 35 minutes to get the horses rounded up and if we didn't make it in time we were asked, 'what took you so long?'"

They rode the range looking for cattle infected with screwworm and when they did find some they applied an ointment on each animal. That was just about the only way they had to doctor sick animals in those days, he explained.

Hart stayed on the job until the work was done and then it was home to a hearty supper. He ate nothing between the two meals because he had no room in his pack for food.

Hart said he got his love of horses from his father, Pete Hart, who once operated a wagon yard where the present post office building is now located.

"I remember breaking more than one horse in that yard," he said.

To become an expert with horses, Hart always observed the pros as they worked. He learned to gentle horses, even the most mean-spirited and ill-tempered ones, by approaching them slowly, "sweet talking" them and rubbing them between their eyes.

It worked every time. And all it took, Hart said, was tender loving care—TLC.

Hart has many stories to tell about his life as a cowboy and one is about a horse named "Archie." He was asked to break Archie so he drove to Post in a Model A, mounted the horse and rode it all the way back to Ira — gentling him as he rode. By the end of the ride, Archie was a tame horse.

Hart worked for numerous ranches in the area, including the O.S. Ranch near Post. One time he had seven colts to break and he did so, one after the other, by following his TLC method. Once each settled down, he said he put a blanket on him, ran a rope around his stomach, and then he would drop the lead rope and "let the colt come to him."

When Hart was hurt on the job he usually just doctored himself just like he did the sick cows. One time though, his injuries were a bit more severe. "Schoolgirl," the horse he was riding, stepped into a sinkhole, which caused her to do a summersault with Hart still on her back. When the 1,400 pound horse landed on Hart he suffered a split rib and he was so shaken up at first that he couldn't see for a while.

The horse survived the fall and in a little while Hart climbed back into the saddle and rode her back to the ranch. "The rest of the hands could tell by the way I got off my horse that something was wrong," he said. At first, he just rubbed horse liniment on himself and went to bed. He saw no reason to visit a doctor.

But, the rest of the ranch hands took him to the doctor anyway, whose office was located on the top floor of the building where Stinson's Drug is today.

"The doctor took an x-ray which revealed the rib injury and told me I was the worst bruised fella he had ever seen," Hart explained.

Hart rested the next day, after the doctor bandaged his ribs, because he could not ride. A day later he was able to ride a gentle horse.

Hart said "Schoolgirl" was aptly named by her then owner, Robert Koontz, who used to ride her when he courted a girl.

Hart remembers one summer when all hands but him had quit the Fuller Ranch. "Powie was mad. And the screwworms were very bad that year," he said. All the same, he rode the range alone and was responsible for some 60 sections of land.

Another time, Hart said Powie had decided to build a race horse barn and sent some hands into town to purchase supplies. They took the wagon into town, loaded it and began the journey home — some five hours work in all.

Hart was as good as finding stray cattle as he was about "reading" horses' minds. One time a bunch of hands were searching for a calf which had become separated from its mother, but Hart was the one who found her. He said he "followed the trail right to her."

The others had tried and some even passed the calf earlier in the day, but none of the others saw it.

Hart worked with all types of people during his ranching days including "an old Indian who chose me to work with since I was a young kid," he said. "I learned a lot from him." The two tracked a lot of errant cows who had become separated from the rest of the herd.

Hart constantly amazed people with his way with horses.

He also attended his share of horse shows including one in Pendleton, Ore. Hart had helped take several horses to Oregon from Jordan, Mont. When they got caught in the rain, they had no protection so they all got wet and dirty.

By the time they arrived at the auction, the horses were filthy and so to stall for time Hart took a horse into the arena and began to entertain the crowd while the others in his party quickly cleaned up the other horses.

Hart put the horse through its paces, getting it to back up and sit down while he tipped his hat and bowed to the audience.

The audience loved what they thought was a show being held in conjunction with the auction, Hart said. Once the horses had been cleaned up, they took them to the auction and conducted business as usual.

Hart may have been a dedicated cowboy, but every couple of weeks or so he would dress up for "town day" which included getting a bath, a shave and a boot shine. Ice cream parlors and picture shows were the popular places to frequent in those days. He also had fun walking around the square and visiting with local merchants.

Hart has had many experiences breaking horses but some of his favorite stories to tell are about a Benny Binion, now deceased, who used to own the Horseshoe Casino in Las Vegas. The two men had a long time relationship which spanned many years.

At their first meeting, Hart asked Binion how he wanted the horses caught — the right way or the wrong way. Hart was told to do it the "right way" and that's how he preferred it because it was easier for him.

Another time Hart bought a 12-year-old thoroughbred from a race track in California and turned it into a cutting horse. Race horses have a tendency to turn their heads sideways, but after Hart rode this horse for a short way he said "he knew he would make it." And he did indeed become a "really good cutting horse."

Binion was so impressed that he wanted Hart to do the same thing for a horse he wanted to buy.

Another time, Binion had given three grandsons horses and had asked Hart to teach them about horses. From the first, Hart put his foot down and insisted the three young boys ride their own horses. He showed them what to do but made them do the work themselves. That made the grandchildren mad because they wanted Hart to do all the work while they just watched.

Later, Hart told Benny how he had "ruined" the three boys, by making them ride their own animals, but when Binion saw how expertly his grandsons rode their horses he told Hart to "keep ruining them."

Hart tells of another time when Binion hired him to break colts and he made the trip from Snyder to Jordan, Mont., encountering snow packed highways. The temperature at the ranch registered 50 degrees when he finally got there, but eventually the readings dipped to 10 and then 20 degrees below zero.

Hart has, in previous years, done quite a bit of horse breaking and training for area people, including Judy Hays. One such horse was a real "tiger" who liked to knock people down.

Hart approached this animal a little differently, working from behind her as he gently sought to get a blanket on her, all the while rubbing her head and talking gently to her. Later, all he had to do was rub this horse's eye and she'd put her head down.

When he got through working with a horse, they always did what he wanted to do. This mare was put in with other horses and did just as they did, even winning her class in a horse competition.

Sometimes, Hart would just have a day to get a horse ready for a show, but he always came through. Another colt, "Madam," also benefited under Hart's steady hand and polished style. He played with her and when she got scared he kept handling and talking to her gently and before long she did whatever he told her to do.

Even though Hart was so well suited to a cowboy's life that he never thought of doing anything else, he did serve in the quartermasters division of the U.S. 7th Army during World War II. He enlisted in 1942 and was deployed overseas in 1945. True to his prediction, he stayed there one year exactly before returning home.

In March of 1945, Hart landed in Glasgow, Scotland, and later went to England. He worked in the commissary and laughed when he said his main duty then was to be "in charge of the orange juice."

The voyage back to the U.S. proved hazardous as the ship was caught in hurricane force winds which kept "pushing it back." Hart said they came close to capsizing, but the ship and its crew made it back in spite of the difficult weather.

During nearly four decades of life, the Harts have seen many changes. They grew up in the era when electricity was scarce and every home did not have a refrigerator.

Radios were their main form of entertainment and party lines were the only way anyone could have a phone. Milk and ice were delivered daily and butter was kept cool in a big tub in the basement. Hens were often traded for candy and food items could be purchased from traveling salesmen.

Before refrigeration, Hart said whenever someone butchered an animal he sold parts of it to his neighbors to keep the meat from going spoiled.

Families grew vegetables in the garden and kept the produce in specially prepared root cellars.

Gasoline cost 5 cents a gallon and in the absence of heaters, a lantern kept people's feet warm. Children especially loved to ride on the running boards of Model Ts. People taught themselves how to drive and Dotty remembers colliding with a barn when she was learning how to drive.

People generally relied on home remedies, with trips to doctors considered both a rarity and a luxury.

The Harts also shared some of their memories of earliest childhood.

Entertainment consisted of live plays staged either at the school or in the community. Children played together, often forming their own rodeos. Dotty remembers getting thrown by a horse during a rodeo and landing in the grass burs.

Families visited each other often for days at a time. People were always getting together for church activities, or the like, and for fun, Dotty said. Her dad told her stories of how he and friends would switch the children in the wagons so that when their parents got ready to leave they had to sort everything out.

Mischvious children also sometimes liked to throw rocks to make the horses pull the wagon faster.

Since people made their own fun in those days, they often organized sing-ins, old fashioned dances, parties and even revivals.

"Preachers used to preach a very long time in those days," Dotty said. "I remember one very long-winded one who just kept talking until someone stood up in the audience and said 'If you don't shut up we're all going to starve to death.'"

Transportation was usually by horse and wagon and both said they remember riding in the back with their feet dangling out the back end.

Walkways around the square were made of wood, not concrete. Water troughs were kept for horses and wagons used to periodically come through town wetting the ground to keep the dust down.

Hart often walked because as he put it "my feet were my buses."

He attended school in Snyder and later Ennis Creek. To get to school he had to walk through his grandparents' home, entering through the back door and leaving by the front door, sometimes crying because older sister Treva was "outwalking him."

Hart, who recently received an excellent checkup from his doctor, likes to keep busy. He restores small covered wagons and carves images of horses from wood or other material.

He also tends to their herb garden, vegetable garden, flowers and fruit trees.

Hart said that when his doctor couldn't find anything wrong with him he jokingly said, "You're so healthy I'm going to quit doctoring and become a cowboy."

Dotty, originally from Oklahoma, came to Snyder during the oil boom with her first husband.

Their lives are rich with memories, but perhaps the best is yet to be.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — What would you get if you crossed a dolphin and a cellular phone? A phone with a lot more channels, says University of Rochester Professor Edward Titlebaum.

Titlebaum is searching for ways to increase the number of channels available to users of sonar, radar, cellular telephones and satellites. He takes his research cues from dolphins and other animals such as bats whose sonar systems are much more sophisticated than manmade systems.

"I sit back and learn from the sonar systems nature has provided," he explains.

CHURCH WEDDING SET — Lawrence and Juana Jaramillo of Snyder, formerly of Muleshoe, announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Nancy, to Abraham Lopez. Polly's Pointers by Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — A recent column asked for meal ideas for toddlers. My son is 2½ and at the "picky" eating stage, so here are some ideas that are popular — on the days he eats! (Please remind new moms that you can't make a child eat!) These are suggestions that also make things much easier for me.

Yogurt: It has lots of protein, vitamin B and it's easy! Serve with fruit and bread.

Cheese: Melt it over whole wheat bagels or make toasted cheese by toasting the bread and then laying on the cheese. It won't melt completely, but your child won't care.

Pasta: A small (3 tablespoons) serving is quickly boiled. Give the little ones small "side orders" of cheese, spaghetti sauce, etc. to blend as they want.

Have your deli slice lunch meat fairly thick, so little fingers can pick it up.

Shave carrots into peanut butter sandwiches.

Make carrot cake into muffins. There's tons of vitamin A and protein (from the eggs) in this snack, which is healthier than cupcakes.

If your child hates casseroles, separate the parts and wash any sauce off them under hot water.

Refrigerated crescent-roll dough makes great filling wrappers for pizza sauce and cheese, ham, cheese and broccoli, as well as other fillings. (Hot dogs are just full of bad stuff. Resist them, please.)

Scrambled eggs are great for lunch. So are French toast slices cut into fun shapes with cookie cutters.

Shakes comprised of milk plus wheat germ and fruit or fruit juice take relatively little time to make and your child will love to help you make them.

Put fish, veggies, a little orange juice (two tablespoons) or a pinch of thyme into aluminum foil and bake until tender. Delicious and no clean-up.

Stew is easy, economical and, if you let them help make it, children love it. Allow your child to learn to eat fruit with the peel. It saves time! If they hate the peel, try peeling — but not slicing — the fruit.

Serve directly onto the family's plates. Serving dishes only add to dirty dishes.

Microwave cheese sauce and pour it over peas and carrots.

Chili in soft tortillas is easy and good for everyone.

Prepare noodles and layer them with apples, butter and a touch of brown sugar. Bake covered for an easy side dish. Put in some cooked ground turkey to make a whole meal.

AF wants GD to correct F-16 problem

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The Air Force has asked General Dynamics Corp. to correct problems in F-16 production that the government says could force the Fighting Falcon off schedule for the second time, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported.

Gen. Ralph Graham, the Air Force's F-16 program director, wrote in a letter to Herb Rogers, general manager of GD's Fort Worth division, that the production operation is in a "negative spiral" and the blame "rests squarely on the shoulders of top GD management."

A copy of the May 3 letter was obtained by the Star-Telegram.

Rogers told the newspaper he would see to it that Graham's concerns are dealt with. He said the problems won't force F-16 production off schedule for the second time in the jet fighter's history.

In November 1989, GD acknowledged that F-16 production had fallen as many as 20 planes behind schedule because of production problems that cost GD millions of dollars in delayed government payments, contract adjustments and overtime pay, the newspaper reported Thursday.

GD said in October that the problems had been corrected and that the program was back on schedule two months ahead of time.

Graham noted in the letter that he recently read GD chairman William Anders' remarks in a company publication about improving the defense giant's value to shareholders, customers and employees.

"Well, as one of your biggest customers, I was very disappointed when I reviewed critical manufacturing indicators for April and became deeply concerned about the failure of your managers to permanently improve the Fort Worth Division's performance on the F-16 program," Graham wrote.

"Despite excellent written policy and several great initiatives from Bob Schwalm (GD's division vice president for manufacturing), there is little evidence of correction to systematic problems which plague production performance.

"It seems that each new day brings new revelations of defective engineering on the pilot airplanes for Block 50 and Peace Marble III (an Israeli-ordered F-16)."

Graham said in the letter that the division could do a better job of planning its production process and that it has tooling problems and parts shortages, among other problems.

He also said the division's production control system is "incapable of functioning properly."

Rogers said that the problems noted by Graham all deal with production efficiency and quality control and that he already has taken steps to meet the Air Force's demands.

"We have already instituted some new planning and control systems and we are instituting some changes in the production arrangement in the shop," Rogers told the Star-Telegram. "We are making changes to improve our efficiency."

Much of the problem, Rogers said, also is due to the wide variety of F-16s now being produced at the Fort Worth Division, which is building about 16 Falcons a month.

The Air Force has several equipment variations on order, and other countries receive several different configurations of the aircraft.

Explorers may have found lost 'Bermuda Triangle' jets

MIAMI (AP) — The mystery of the "Lost Squadron" that vanished 45 years ago in the Bermuda Triangle may be close to being solved with the discovery last week of five Navy planes sunk in the ocean 10 miles off Fort Lauderdale.

The salvors, Scientific Search Project, went to federal court Thursday to stake their claim on the wrecks of the five TBM Avengers.

Graham Hawkes was surveying the coastline for sunken Spanish galleons aboard the high-tech vessel Deep See when the first plane showed up in about 750 feet of water.

Using sonar and submersible camera equipment, the salvors discovered the other planes over the course of 24 hours a week ago, he said.

"By the third one we kind of looked at each other and started wondering what was going on," said Hawkes. "People stopped taking their rest periods and crowded around. No one was getting any rest — it was pretty intense."

No human remains were seen in the planes, though further examination is needed.

Man charged in poisoning death

DALLAS (AP) — Police Friday arrested a 34-year-old man on an investigative charge of murder in the January poisoning death of his wife.

Bond was set at $2 million for Richard Lyon, a Dallas nursery consultant.

Law officers said a four-month investigation led them to believe Lyon was responsible for the Jan. 19 death of his wife, Nancy Dillard Lyon, 37, a former partner at Trammell Crow Co.

On March 13 the case was ruled a homicide after investigators said she had apparently been poisoned with arsenic over a period of time.

Police said they thought Lyon was a risk to leave the area because he has several foreign contacts, but defense attorneys were trying to get the bond lowered.

Several days before her death, Mrs. Lyon was rushed to Presbyterian Hospital of Dallas with stomach cramps and nausea. She was treated for toxic shock syndrome but was unresponsive.

Mrs. Lyon, a Harvard-educated land planner and one of Navy spokesmen in Washington had no immediate comment on the find. The Navy usually goes to court to enforce its salvage rights in such cases.

The salvors' priority is to send submersible robots to the site to determine if the planes are in fact Flight 19, the so-called Lost Squadron, that vanished Dec. 5, 1945, on a training flight from the naval air base in Fort Lauderdale.

No trace of planes or pilots was ever found. Their disappearance helped build the myth of the Bermuda Triangle, an area bounded by Bermuda, Miami and Puerto Rico, where ships and planes were said to mysteriously disappear.

The search team archaeologist, Ted Darcy, of the Kailua, Hawaii-based aircraft recovery company Wreckfinders, warned that he couldn't yet confirm the planes' identities. The Navy lost more than 100 TBM Avengers off Florida, he said.

But one of the sunken planes bears the number 28. That was the same number on Flight 19's lead plane, Darcy said. And the letters FT are visible on some of the aircraft, designating they only two women to achieve the position of partner at Trammell Crow, had resigned her full-time job last year to spend more time with her daughters, ages 2 and 4.

The couple had been separated about a year at the time of Mrs. Lyon's death.

Police said the case is the first known slaying by poisoning in Dallas in at least a decade.

were based at Fort Lauderdale.

Additionally, no other ditching of five Avengers was ever reported by the Navy, Darcy said.

Flight 19 ran into trouble after the first leg of its flight when the leader's compass failed and hazy weather disoriented the pilots. According to their final radio transmissions, they spotted islands they thought were the Florida Keys and believed they were flying over the Gulf of Mexico, Darcy said.

Sheriff's office gets plane owned by smuggler

MENARD, Texas (AP) — A new Piper Cherokee — minus its contraband cargo — has been turned over to the Menard County sheriff's department.

The U.S. Customs Service presented the single-engine airplane to the department Thursday for deputies' help in helping catch a convicted drug smuggler.

Menard County officers found Curtis Mitchell O'Brien hiding under a bridge not far from his abandoned airplane on April 6, 1989, at the Menard County Airport. He was hauling 645 pounds of marijuana.

O'Brien had been convicted previously of smuggling 248 pounds of marijuana into the Dallas area, but fled. He was sentenced to 19 years in federal prison and fined $18,000 for smuggling and related offenses, officials said.

Pride is like cholesterol. Too much can be detrimental, but you have got to have some.

When the going gets tough, those who let themselves run out of pride fare worst. This applies not only to individuals, but also to organizations, business firms, political entities and even to religious denominations. Put all of these together and they form a community, and there is nothing so bland as a community without pride.

Pride can produce the municipal adrenalin to thrust a community out of the doldrums. Its most effective factor is participation. This may involve a mere change of attitude, but best results appear when substantial numbers of people focus on specific goals and actively pursue them. The spirit of cooperation stimulates the participants and often results in amazing success. And it is contagious.

Maintaining the pride-level following a successful activity may be a chore, but it can be achieved by those who refuse to surrender to mediocrity. The recent war in the Middle East which we call "Operation Desert Storm" is an example of a unified effort that restored the pride-level of millions of Americans to new heights that had been missing for a while. Now, attention must be focused on other tasks with hopes of cooperation and success to justify pride.

Communities, cities and towns experience similar fluctuations. Those who perpetuate their positive attitude and refuse to devalue their pride are going to enjoy life considerably more than those who sit on the sidelines and criticize...or just sit, period.

Talk is like pride and cholesterol. The proper amount delivered with the proper attitude can become a potent jump-start. On the other hand, medical experts tell us that a person can talk himself into ill health and economists say a community can talk itself into apathy. Eitherway, the key word is attitude and its running mate is optimism.

SDN letters to the editor

Dear Editor:

I would like to express my appreciation to the people of Snyder for the warm welcome I received during my brief tenure as consultant and director for the chamber of commerce. Because of the many good people who live in Snyder, I feel an explanation is due them for my resignation.

Last Friday (May 10), one board member in particular questioned my integrity by questioning my commitment to Snyder and wanting to know if I was looking for another job. Even though I transferred my two boys from the Weatherford school system to the Snyder school system (at more than a little emotional stress to them), assumed the responsibility for coaching one baseball team and assisting another, and my wife took a personal leave day to interview for a position in Snyder last Friday, I evidently have not expressed enough commitment to Snyder, at least not enough to satisfy this particular board member.

As far as expressing interest in other jobs, I was very frank at the meeting last month when the board offered me the position on a permanent basis that my employment here was contingent on my wife finding a job. It would be ludicrous not to keep my options open until such time as that job materialized and we could relocate.

I was uncomfortable with the situation at the chamber where a person serves as an officer and board member of a non-profit organization while receiving remuneration for services rendered to that organization and affiliates. In expressing that discomfort to some people, I may have caused the personal attack on me last Friday, but I suspect that there were many other motives at work.

Snyder has a lot of good people and I was fortunate to meet a lot of them. As is typical of West Texas, I found the people of Snyder open, warm, and friendly. The town has a lot of people working hard to make it a better place to live, and they deserve all the support you can give them. I wish you the very best in the future.

Sincerely,

To the Editor:

We would like to take this opportunity to express a sincere "thank you" to the various merchants and businesses that have sponsored one of the many girls softball teams this season and in seasons past. Their willingness to our youth is certainly appreciated, not only by our local United Girls Softball League, but by the parents and relatives of the girls that play as well.

I would encourage these businesses and merchants to attend some of the games between the team they have sponsored and opposing teams. Get out on a warm summer evening at the ball park. Eat a hot dog or chili pie and enjoy your friends and neighbors. More, important though, get behind a team and enjoy the competition.

Again, thank you, Snyder, for your help and concern in regard to "our girls!"

Sincerely,

Debbie Vaughn,
UGSA board members

To the Editor:

The American Diabetes Association, Texas Affiliate, wishes to express a sincere appreciation to the volunteer blockworkers and contributors in Snyder for making the first Dear Neighbor Campaign a success. Thanks to the generous support of Snyder, the Dear Neighbor Campaign raised over $321,000 statewide with $5,600 coming from the support of the Snyder community. This represents 12,000 volunteers and contributors statewide. This will enable the American Diabetes Association to make advances in research and provide patient and public education in your area.

We look forward to working with the fine people in Snyder for the 1992 Dear Neighbor Campaign.

Sincerely,
Lynn Alexander

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

On a recent episode of the TV show, "Thirtysomething," the character of Michael Steadman walked away from the high-powered advertising job that was in the process of making him rich. He'd been selling little pieces of his soul to the job for years, and when his best friend was killed in an automobile accident recently, he was forced to look inside himself...and found nothing there. He grabbed a phone memo pad, wrote the words, "I quit," signed his name, and gave it to the boss's secretary. After that, he went home and slept for the first time in weeks.

According to a recent issue of "Time" magazine, and a followup program on ABC's "Nightline," what Michael Steadman did is being mirrored in the lives of thousands of Yuppies who wake up one day on the fast track and realize that all it's done is speed them inexorably away from the things in life that matter the most: family, friends, and a certain spiritual wholeness. More and more talk-show therapists are repeating the maxim: "No one ever sat up in his death bed and said, 'Oh, I wish I'd spent more time at the office.'"

The newly converted are leaving their law practices and stockbroker's offices and corporate ladders, and buying country stores in Vermont and ranches in Montana.

I only have one thing to say: We were country before country was cool.

Kent and I left all that urban madness years before the word "Yuppie" was even invented, and moved to a small-town, rural environment—not because it was trendy or chic—but because it was RIGHT. All through our twenties and thirties we had to endure snide wisecracks and wondering head-shakes of our urban friends and relatives, who thought we'd lost our minds by moving "way out in the middle of nowhere" to raise a family. For the first few years we tried to explain, but quit when we discovered that no one was listening.

They'd come out to visit. We'd build a crackling mesquite fire and grill fat steaks and drink beer out of cold, sweaty bottles and visit—and all the while, they'd pace and whine and say, "There's nothing to do here."

Finally, for the most part, they quit coming.

And now Ted Koppel is talking about "action junkies" and stress-related illnesses and the breakup of homes and families over workaholicism. Those reformed workaholics are talking about finding meaning and purpose to their lives, restoring a measure of control over their former frenetic existences, and getting back to simpler, deeper values.

You know what? I think it's easy to make this kind of "spiritual" change when you've got a small fortune stockpiled away to cushion yourself through the lean times. I'd like to see them do it in reverse, the way we did, struggling to make land payments while we built a home and raised a family, choosing the simpler existence because we knew it was the BEST, no matter how tough it was—not because we were running away from our own burnt-out souls.

I hope it's not too late for all those Michael Steadmans out there to realize that true riches come from so many places that don't pay anything—bowing your heads in family prayer, donating time and energy to your community, standing by your friends through thick and thin, getting the bleacher butt from cheering your kids on in sporting events and other activities, and staying married even through those times when you don't like each other much—on through those times when there aren't enough words to describe the power of the bond.

The article in "Time" stated that, in a small town, "Everything that is important seems to be tied directly to children." Yes. To family. To friends. To LIFE, for heaven's sake.

Personally, I'd like to see Ted Koppel do a followup program in about five years. Let's see how many of these "action junkies" stick to their fast-track derailment. Me, I'll still be over here, poking down the slow country lane, checking my neighbor's pasture to see how much rain he got, and filling my lungs with the scent of wildflowers.

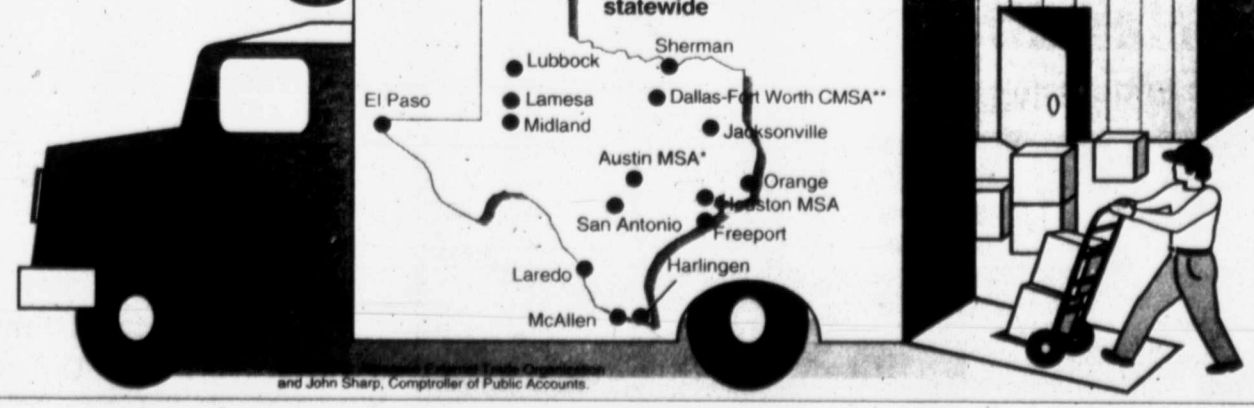

Texas home to 56 Japanese factories

The Houston metropolitan area has 20 manufacturing plants solely or mostly owned by Japanese business, more than any other metro area in Texas and fully one-third of the 56-plant total in the state run by Japanese concerns.

Second is the Dallas-Fort Worth metro area with 15 plants, followed by El Paso with five and Austin with three. The remaining 13 Japanese manufacturing plants are scattered among 11 cities across the state.

The Japanese have a stronger manufacturing presence in seven other states. California, largely due to its orientation to the Pacific Rim, leads with 246 Japanese factories, followed by several industrial Midwest states.

Bus rider troubled by 'personal difficulties'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman who raged about Nazis and killed a fellow passenger on a city bus before police shot her to death was described by neighbors as a troubled person whose parents survived the Holocaust.

Esther Rachel Rogers, 42, armed with a .357-caliber Magnum, held off authorities for three hours until early Thursday when sheriff's deputies stormed a Southern California Rapid Transit District bus and killed her.

The incident began when Rogers shot a 30-year-old French national to death as the bus traveled through Beverly Hills. The man's name was withheld until his family could be notified, said coroner's spokesman Bob Dambacher.

The bus rolled to a stop as the shooting began, and the 20 or so passengers, including the victim, scrambled out. His body lay just outside the bus during the standoff, and he was later pronounced dead at a local hospital.

Rogers and her victim, who lived in Los Angeles, had been sitting near the back of the bus, Beverly Hills police Lt. Frank Salcido said.

"She had been displaying the gun, waving the gun in a threatening manner for a while, and what provoked her into shooting this guy we don't know," he said.

One passenger said two people on the bus had conversed in German before Rogers started shooting. "There was a couple speaking German who got off the bus," said Jerry Veal, 32, "and then the woman started screaming that she hated Germans and blacks and Asians. She yelled, 'There's Nazis on the bus.'"

Herman Rotsten, who lived across the street from Rogers in West Hollywood, said the woman's parents had been prisoners in a Nazi concentration camp during World War II. "Her parents were in Auschwitz. Her mother died of cancer. Her father ... died about 1 1/2 years ago, which hit her very hard," said Rotsten, 76.

"It is my educated guess that it was sort of her last hurrah," Rotsten added. "She was sad enough to want to be killed. She was becoming more and more lonely."

"She was eccentric, no question about it," said next-door neighbor Warwick Sims. But Sims said Rogers could also be kind and compassionate. "She was a very sweet, very gentle, loving woman who used to help the homeless," Sims said.

Company spokesman Leslie Zuke, responding to the charge, said the efforts of the health groups "are based on the fact that they don't want anybody to smoke. They prefer to prevent those people who choose to smoke from smoking."

"They make extravagant claims about our advertising when in reality our ads are very simple," Zuke said. "They say quite clearly and simply that our de-nicotined cigarettes are low in nicotine, which results from a process similar to that used in decaffeinated coffee, and that our cigarettes offer a smooth, light taste."

Philip Morris, the nation's largest tobacco products company, is test-marketing Next cigarettes in Arizona and Florida under the brand names Next, Merit Free and Benson and Hedges De-Nic.

These advertisements falsely and misleadingly imply that Next cigarettes are a safe, non-addictive alternative to traditional tobacco products," the groups said Thursday in a petition filed with the Federal Trade Commission.

The charge was made by the Coalition on Smoking or Health. Its members are the American Cancer Society, the American Heart Association and the American Lung Association.

The petition said advertisements by the manufacturer, Philip Morris Inc., were "likely to mislead consumers" about the safety of Next cigarettes.

Unwanted Catalogs Threaten To Swamp Reader's Mailbox

DEAR ABBY: About a year and a half ago, I moved to a retirement facility in Oregon. Ever since, I have been swamped with mail-order catalogs (unsolicited) to the point that when the mail is delivered each day, there are more catalogs delivered than my mailbox can hold!

In the past you have, from time to time, printed an address to which one could write in order to put a stop to this nuisance. Would you please print it again? I am ...

KNEE-DEEP IN JUNK MAIL.
DEAR KNEE-DEEP: Not only do some catalog companies make money by selling their merchandise; they also make a bundle by selling their customer lists to one another. Therefore, once you order anything by catalog you may find yourself on many other mailing lists, and the recipient of many unwanted solicitations.

If you shop at home but want to lessen the unsolicited advertising mail you receive, simply ask the companies with which you do business not to rent your name to other mailers.

Your other option, the Mail Preference Service, screens out the national advertising mail and should be used by consumers who do not want to receive such solicitations. To have your name deleted from these lists, write to: Mail Preference Service, Direct Marketing Association Inc., P.O. Box 3861, New York, N.Y. 10163-3861. There is no charge for this service.

DEAR ABBY: I thought I'd share with you a very poignant letter that appeared in the San Francisco Chronicle recently. Perhaps you will want to share it with your readers.

S.K. IN HAYWARD, CALIF.
DEAR S.K.: I think it is well worth sharing with my readers. It appeared in the "Letters to the Editor" section, and here it is:

LOOKING FOR A PARADE
Can I march in your parade, too? I came back from World War II after being in five battles, and I don't remember any ticker tape.

We were near Japan on VJ Day and didn't get to participate, unlike some of the lucky National Guardsmen in the latest short war.

In 1945, we were so jumpy from kamikaze attacks that we had a general quarters alarm after the Japanese surrendered. It was very remote from the joyful madness I saw displayed in pictures of Market Street.

Our ship's company had not seen civilization in over a year, and it was another eight months before I was mustered out.

Can I be in your parade now?
ROBERT L. HEATON,
LAFAYETTE, CALIF.

CONFIDENTIAL TO G.H. IN OTTAWA, CANADA: "The more things a man is ashamed of, the more respectable he is." (George Bernard Shaw) You, sir, are a very respectable man.

To get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

DEAR ABBY: I read about the gentleman who saw an elderly lady take a pie out of the freezer in a supermarket, look at it, then put it back. Thinking perhaps she couldn't afford it, the gentleman walked over to her, smiled, then placed a folded $20 bill in her hand and said, "Go back and get that pie." Then he walked out the door. What a nice thing for a perfect stranger to do.

Something like that happened to me recently. On Feb. 8, my husband and I celebrated our 55th wedding anniversary. It wasn't really a "celebration" because my husband is in a nursing home in Simcoe, Ontario. He wasn't able to go anywhere, so I stopped at Kentucky Fried Chicken and ordered two dinners to go — then I mentioned I was carrying it to my husband in a nursing home so we could have our anniversary dinner together.

When they handed me my order, I started to pay and was told, "The couple who were standing near you when you gave me your order already paid for it. They asked me to say 'Happy Anniversary.'"

Abby, I have no idea who they were, but that's just about the nicest thing that's ever happened to me. So, whoever you are, thank you!

MR. AND MRS. JAMES MANN,
PORT ROWAN, ONTARIO
DEAR MR. AND MRS. MANN: Thanks for a heartwarming story. Aren't people wonderful?

DEAR ABBY: How do you feel about the media revealing the name of a person who was raped? And while I have your attention, do you think the name of the rapist should be publicized?

CURIOUS
DEAR CURIOUS: I think the name of the victim should be revealed only with the permission of the victim. And I think the identity of the person accused of the crime should be noted as "the accused" until that person has been tried and found guilty.

DEAR ABBY: Would you expose your most embarrassing moment for all the world to see? Well, that's what my wife wants me to do. When we were married, we had our formal church wedding videotaped. As we approached the altar railing, I discovered to my horror that after walking past 200 friends and relatives, the zipper in my trousers was unzipped! There I am in living color, fumbling and tugging until I eventually made myself respectable. All of this is plainly recorded on video.

My dilemma: My wife thinks this would be a great entry for a home video show contest with a nationwide audience. She is sure it would win a prize. I don't even want to try. What do you think?

J.B. IN JAMAICA, N.Y.
DEAR J.B.: I think you should block out your face and send in the tape.

CONFIDENTIAL TO LUKE IN EAST POINT, Ga. (AP) — Investigators probing the plane crash that killed former U.S. Sen. John Tower of Texas say they got few leads from tapes of conversations between the plane's pilot and air traffic controllers in Florida.

The tape, released Thursday by the Federal Aviation Administration, show the crew of Atlantic Southeast Airlines Flight 2311 reported nothing unusual before the plane went down April 5, killing all 23 people aboard.

The FAA said the control tower in Jacksonville, Fla., handled the flight properly. The National Transportation Safety Board is investigating the crash, and has said its probe could take up to a year to complete.

Michael Benson, an NTSB spokesman in Washington, said the FAA tapes have "not produced any real insight" into the cause of the crash.

"When we heard this initially, our reaction then was that the pilot was reporting nothing unusual and the radio transmissions were routine," Benson said. "That's still our view. We will be looking at this material and everything else so we are able to make a full and complete determination of a probable cause for the crash."

According to the FAA tape, the commuter plane's pilot could see his destination, the Glynco Jetport in Brunswick, and said he was headed there at 2:48 p.m.

Minutes later the plane, an Embraer 120 twin-engine turboprop, plunged nose-first into a dense clump of trees about three miles from the runway. There were no survivors.

"He (the pilot) was navigating on his own, to the airport, which he had in sight," said FAA systems effectiveness manager Pete Gullo. "Had he landed or canceled, he would have said something."

According to the FAA tape, the flight did not encounter bad weather, but did travel around some cloud formations. As it approached the jetport, the pilot reported a flight altitude of 3,000 feet.

Investigators are not certain how soon the plane would have landed after its pilots last spoke with the Jacksonville control tower, Gullo said.

The flight had been en route from Atlanta to Brunswick when it crashed. The dead included Tower, his daughter, Marian, and astronaut Manley "Sonny" Carter Jr.

Benson said the plane had neither a flight data recorder nor a cockpit voice recorder, although it was wired for both. A new FAA requirement for such devices on commuter flights does not take effect until October.

Witnesses: plane came apart before crash

AUSTIN (AP) — A plane tore apart in flight before it plowed into a field, killing four Dallas-area businessmen, said authorities who were trying to determine the crash's cause.

The National Transportation Safety Board said it planned to reassemble the wreckage of the single-engine Beechcraft Bonanza during its investigation of Thursday's crash about 15 miles east of Austin.

Residents of Manor and Elgin said they heard an explosion and saw one wing of the plane fly off as the aircraft went into a spin and debris rained from the sky.

"It sounded like a giant piece of steel or equipment had fallen off a truck," said David Palmquist, who witnessed the crash. "And as soon as that ceased, I could hear a high-pitched whine. It sounded like an engine revving up. And then all of a sudden, it shut down."

Working in heavy rain, investigators searched debris scattered over a mile-wide area in a muddy field. The crash site is about two miles south of U.S. 290 near the two communities.

The Texas Department of Public Safety identified the dead as Jeff Bales, 35, of Plano; Douglas Cory, 29, of Irving; Fred Eggers, 44, of Irving; and the pilot, Michael Nordin, 36, who was said to be a former California resident now living in the Dallas area.

The DPS said Cory, Eggers and Nordin were employees of Mentor Corp., with offices in Goleta, Calif., and the Dallas area, while Bales worked for another Dallas-area company.

Two victims were found in the fuselage of the plane. Two other bodies were found 300 to 400 yards away, officials said. All four died instantly.

NTSB investigators were studying whether wind shear, structural failure or pilot error were factors in the crash. The plane was flying at an altitude of 6,000 feet when it developed problems and crashed at 10:33 a.m., said DPS spokesman Mike Cox.

Both wings and the motor were separated from the fuselage, with part of its interior landing one-half mile away from other wreckage, scattered across a mile.

Mike Nichols, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration in Austin, said the plane took off with its four passengers Thursday morning from Addison Airport north of Dallas and was bound for Austin.

Soviet scientists interested in collider

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet scientists have renewed their interest in developing a key element of the super collider after officials rejected a bid by an international consortium of high energy physicists to participate in the $8.25 billion particle accelerator.

Roy Schwitters, director of the Superconducting Super Collider Laboratory in Dallas, last week rejected a proposal by the L-star consortium to build one of the SSC's two large detectors.

SSC Lab spokesman Russ Wylie said Thursday that Schwitters rejected the proposal after Swiss and German physicists withdrew from the consortium and because he was not confident with the L-star cost estimate of $764 million.

The SSC Lab has already approved the development of another large detector, by the Solenoidal Detector Collaboration. Headed by physicist George Trilling of the University of California at Berkeley, the consortium includes scientists from around the United States, as well as Japan, Canada, Britain, France, Italy and China, and smaller countries including Israel and Czechoslovakia.

The decision to scrap the L-star means the SSC Lab must start from scratch in finding a new collaboration to build the other detector.

The detectors will be used to determine what happens when counter-rotating beams of protons are smashed together at high speeds within a 54-mile underground ring, which the Energy Department wants to build south of Dallas.

The rejected detector was being developed by Samuel C.C. Ting, a Nobel laureate and physicist at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and U.S., German, Swiss, Soviet and Chinese scientists.

The Soviets are now negotiating to participate in the Solenoidal Detector Collaboration, according to a letter Schwitters received Thursday morning from A.A. Logunov, vice president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences and president of Moscow State University.

Logunov also told Schwitters that he had no doubt there would be groups of high energy physicists in the Soviet Union "that meet with enthusiasm your invitation to participate in the second detector."

"We're seeing a redoubled effort to participate in even a more substantial way," Wylie said.

Schwitters has invited about 100 scientists to the SSC Lab for meetings June 14-15 to discuss the formation of a collaboration to build the second detector.

Wylie said he does not believe Schwitters' decision to scrap the L-star bid would affect the collider's schedule or cost.

"He made the decision to avoid both of those possibilities," Wylie said. "We fully intend to have a second major collaboration formed and are proceeding immediately to organize it and begin development of the detector and the experimental program it will be used with."

The SSC is designed to accelerate beams of protons to nearly the speed of light before they collide in a 54-mile tunnel with an energy of 40 trillion electron volts. Physicists would use the particle detectors to analyze the collisions to search for the presence of new subatomic particles and measure their properties in an attempt to answer fundamental questions about the nature of matter.

The Energy Department hopes to complete the SSC by the end of 1999, but warned Wednesday that there could be delays if Congress goes along with plans by a House Appropriations subcommittee to spend $100 million less on the project that the president had sought.

The subcommittee voted to spend $434 million on the embattled project in fiscal 1992, while President Bush had sought $534 million.

Trumps continue to fight it out

NEW YORK (AP) — Trump v. Trump may be settled, but trying to tell that to Ivana Trump's ex-lawyer, who got into the act over things Mrs. Trump said about ex-spouse Donald to interviewer Barbara Walters on ABC-TV's "20-20."

The broadcast last Friday set off an exchange of threats and press releases.

First, Trump threatened legal action against Mrs. Trump over the Walters interview. Trump attorney Jay Goldberg claimed the interview broke Mrs. Trump's agreement to say nothing about their lives as part of her $10 million divorce settlement.

Now comes Michael Kennedy, Mrs. Trump's lawyer during the divorce. In a statement Thursday he said: "Mrs. Trump has violated neither the spirit nor the letter of her agreement with Mr. Trump."

Vasculitis calls for comprehensive exam

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: A friend has vasculitis and is unable to explain exactly what the disorder is all about. Can you define it and give the treatment most commonly used?

DEAR READER: Vasculitis simply means "inflammation of blood vessels." This seemingly straightforward term encompasses a wide variety of disorders, however; anything that inflames blood-vessel walls is classified as vasculitis. Thus, the diagnosis of vasculitis is really the starting point of a diagnostic trail.

The classification of vasculitis is based on which blood vessels are involved: large or small veins, large, medium-sized or small arteries. For example, septicemia (blood stream infection) often causes venous inflammation and bruising. Arterial inflammation is, by and large, a more challenging diagnostic dilemma.

Erythema nodosum primarily affects small arteries and leads to tender red nodules in the skin. It is commonly caused by streptococcal infections, sarcoidosis, tuberculosis, fungus infections, ulcerative colitis and allergic reactions to many drugs, notably sulfa antibiotics and oral contraceptives.

Inflammation of medium-sized arteries, as exemplified by polyarteritis nodosa, a disease of unknown cause, produces symptoms (fever, abdominal pain, weakness, nerve malfunction, asthma, hypertension and kidney disorders) depending on the organ involved. The affliction may follow hepatitis, bacterial infections and drug hypersensitivity.

Giant-cell arteritis and Takayasu arteritis are examples of inflammation of large or major arteries. These disorders often lead to headache, blindness, stroke, weakness, stiffness and arthritis. Their cause is unknown.

Collagen vascular diseases (auto-immune disorders) are frequently the basis for vasculitis. Such diseases include lupus, rheumatoid arthritis and polymyositis. The diagnosis is usually made by biopsy, during which a small piece of tissue, ordinarily from an arterial wall, is removed and examined under a microscope.

Obviously, with so many causes of vasculitis, the therapy depends on the underlying disorder. Infection must be treated, and any drug suspected of causing the condition should be immediately discontinued. Vasculitis almost always affects the organ to which circulation is reduced because of the inflammation: typically, the eyes, brain, skin, intestine, liver and kidneys. Therefore, when possible, it's important to discover the basis of the affliction (infection, drug reaction or self-allergy), rather than merely giving a name to the symptoms.

Hence, your friend needs more than a diagnosis of vasculitis. This is a bit like saying someone has "pneumonia"; only by determining the agent causing the infection can doctors tailor-make therapy. So more information is needed.

As a general rule, prednisone (a type of cortisone) is the treatment of choice for vasculitis associated with autoimmune causes and for vascular inflammation that is NOT due to infection. In many cases, prednisone reduces symptoms with remarkable speed, thereby preventing progression of the vasculitis with all its attendant risks, such as stroke and kidney failure. The treatment may have to be continued for many months, or it may be needed for only a few days.

In either case, vasculitis is serious and can reflect a dangerous underlying disorder which is unsuspected. Patients with vasculitis require comprehensive medical testing and supervision. Not only are the causes of the disorder complex; the drugs (such as prednisone) used to treat it are available by prescription only, carry their own risks and must be cautiously administered.

Although patients with vasculitis can be monitored by their family physicians, specialists (such as rheumatologists) may be necessary to assess and evaluate the many potential complications of this disorder.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 34-year-old son has a herniated disc. Are there alternatives other than surgery, such as lasers and new methods of control?

DEAR READER: Intervertebral discs are doughnut-shaped structures that separate the vertebral bones in the back. When a disc degenerates or slips out of place (herniates), part of the disc can irritate or pinch a nerve, leading to pain, tingling and numbness. Herniated discs can be treated with bed rest, special exercises and analgesics; with this therapy, most will slip back into place and symptoms will disappear.

If this conservative therapy is ineffective, however, more aggressive treatment has to be considered. The traditional option is surgery to remove or repair the disc, thereby relieving pressure on the nerve.

In the past few years, chymopapain (meat tenderizer) injections have been shown to help some people with herniated discs. The procedure requires no surgery but is not as permanent as an operation; surgery may still be necessary if the injections fail.

Nonetheless, this is an attractive choice for patients who view surgery as a last resort. Chymopapain injections should be performed only by practitioners, such as orthopedic surgeons, who are experienced in the technique. I am not aware of laser or other experimental therapy that is appropriate or superior to conventional treatment. However, I am not a neurosurgeon or an orthopedic surgeon, two of the specialists your son should consult for specific advice.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "An Informed Approach To Surgery." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please tell me something about allergic reactions to sulfites, specifically involving severe abdominal cramps, diarrhea and intestinal bleeding. How serious is this, and what can be done to prevent it?

DEAR READER: Sulfites are chemical compounds that are often sprayed on fresh produce in the market to retard spoilage and maintain freshness. As with any additive, some people are highly allergic to sulfites and will feel unwell (headache, hives, asthma, nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, rapid pulse and nervousness) when they eat food treated with sulfites. For this reason, many supermarkets routinely post warnings if they are using sulfite sprays. Sulfites and other contaminants of fresh produce are easily washed off; therefore, people should routinely rinse fresh produce before eating it.

Sulfite reactions are true allergies; therefore, avoidance is the best treatment. People who unknowingly ingest sulfites and experience severe symptoms can be helped by treatment with prednisone (a form of cortisone).

I am not aware that sulfite allergy causes intestinal bleeding. Ask your doctor about this.

Shortage means subs won't be fully armed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A prolonged shutdown of a key U.S. nuclear weapons plant has forced the Navy to send some of its new Trident submarines to sea with less than a full complement of nuclear warheads on their ballistic missiles, military sources say.

It is the first known case in which the closure for safety reasons of the Rocky Flats plutonium processing plant near Denver has forced the American military to substantially alter its deployment plans for strategic nuclear weapons.

Unlike the eight Trident submarines in the Pacific Fleet, which are fully armed but with older missiles, the first four subs assigned to the Atlantic Fleet will have fewer than the maximum 192 W-88 warheads each, said the Pentagon sources, who demand anonymity.

The Trident submarines are the crown jewels in the Navy's strategic nuclear force. They form one leg of the Pentagon's nuclear "triad" of land-, air- and sea-based nuclear weapons capable of striking the Soviet Union.

The Navy's decision was forced by the indefinite shutdown at Rocky Flats, the only U.S. facility that makes plutonium "pits," which form the core of nuclear warheads. Plutonium is used to trigger the atomic reaction in the warheads.

The Rocky Flats closure has left the Navy with too few W-88 warheads to fully arm the D-5 long-range ballistic missiles carried aboard the Trident subs, the sources said. Each of the 24 missiles on a sub can carry as many as eight warheads; each warhead can be aimed at a separate target.

The subject of warhead deployments is so sensitive that even the Pentagon sources would not disclose how many warheads are being carried on the Atlantic Fleet subs, except to say that it is fewer than the intended eight per missile.

The first three Atlantic Fleet subs — the USS Tennessee, the USS Pennsylvania and the USS West Virginia — have entered service since Rocky Flats closed in 1989, while the fourth, the USS Kentucky, is to join the fleet next year. They are based at King's Bay, Ga.

Rocky Flats is owned by the Department of Energy and run by a private contractor. The department says it hopes to reopen the plant late this year, but the reopening already has been postponed several times and a restart date remains in great doubt.

Lt. Becky Brenton of the Navy public affairs office at the Pentagon said the service as a matter of policy does not publicly discuss how many warheads are carried on its subs.

She referred a reporter's questions about the Trident missile warheads to a statement made to Congress in April by Vice Adm. Roger F. Bacon, the assistant chief of naval operations for undersea warfare.

Bacon said the Rocky Flats shutdown means "we will be limited in our ability to fully outfit our Trident submarine force as we had planned" with the W-88 nuclear warheads, which cost an estimated $3 million apiece.

Bacon said the first four Trident subs entering service in the Atlantic Fleet are being equipped with D-5 missiles with W-88 warheads.

But in a phrase that obliquely referred to the decision not to put the maximum eight warheads on each missile, the admiral added the missiles on the four subs would not "reach full capability" until the Rocky Flats plant resumed making W-88 components.

Welfare chief will resign

AUSTIN (AP) — The next chief of the Texas Department of Human Services must bring "stability and healing," said the chairman of the board that oversees the embattled agency.

Ron Lindsey, appointed to run the $7.2 billion Department of Human Services in August 1989 by then-Gov. Bill Clements, said Thursday he is resigning because he cannot claim the unanimous support of welfare board members.

"He has made a personal decision that he wants to resign. We need to, as a board, look toward the future and make this as smooth a transition as possible," said Cassandra Carr, welfare board chairman.

"What we need to do is find the very best person that we can find to bring a degree of stability and healing to the agency," she said.

Three of the six welfare board members, including the chairman, were appointed by Gov. Ann Richards. But Lindsey emphasized that none of the board members asked him to leave.

Lindsey said he will stay as commissioner until the end of this month.

Then he said he will be on special assignment to the House for two months, with his salary still paid by the welfare agency. Lindsey makes $84,000 a year.

Woman awarded $14 million plus in settlement

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A townhome tenant who was awarded more than $14 million in damages for an attack by an intruder who took her house key from a leasing office still lives in fear, her attorney says.

Jurors in state district court returned the verdict Thursday in Juli Bliskey's negligence lawsuit against Berry Property Management Inc. of Corpus Christi stemming from the 1987 attack.

The 31-year-old woman, who was raped by the intruder, wanted her name used to publicize her ordeal in the hope that others could prevent similar attacks, said her attorney, William R. Edwards.

He said Judge Mike Westergren was expected to enter a judgment in the case within a few weeks.

Your Birthday

Partnerships in the year ahead could be more of a hindrance than a help. This is because you're likely to attract extremely obstinate individuals.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Someone with whom you're closely involved could severely test your patience today, because the more you give, the more this individual wants. Adjustments are essential. Taurus, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Taurus' Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It's best not to belittle someone whom you've had a recent disagreement with in front of others today. When things get straightened out, and they eventually will, you may regret your comments.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You are presently in a cycle where your extravagance might be vying for the upper hand. If you are not financially disciplined, this could be a very trying day.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll be a very easy person to get along with today — provided everyone is in accord with your aims. Dissenters, however, could see the less charming aspects of your personality.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't contemplate doing anything out of spite today. It could have a very unpleasant boomerang effect. Remember, a grudge is a heavy burden to bear.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you give without expecting anything in return today, rewards are likely. If you give hoping to receive a greater response, you're likely to be disappointed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Take time to re-evaluate your objectives today; there's a possibility you may be expending too much effort on goals that, if achieved, will lack significance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you feel out of sync with your philosophical beliefs today, it could be because you're putting your fears in front of your faith instead of doing the opposite.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone with dubious motives might try to set up a friend of yours today. If you sense that your pal is oblivious to what is occurring, be protective.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You might not be very good at delegating today, and this could cause you complications. To be on the safe side, it may be wise to handle difficult assignments yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you have to relay complicated instructions to someone else today, don't depend on your memory. If the directions get misconstrued, the horse you're hoping to build could end up a giraffe.

ARIES (March 21-June 20) If you get involved in a joint venture today, be sure all details are spelled out in advance, or else this situation could get out of balance and create hard feelings with one or both parties.

Keep this pal's track record in mind. Major changes are ahead for Taurus in the coming year. Send for Taurus' Astro-Graph predictions today. CANCER (June 21-July 22) People who resort to flattery may be able to write their own ticket with you today. You'd be better off paying more attention to individuals who treat you objectively.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In your impatience to get something done today, you might try to accomplish a task for which you lack the necessary expertise. It might be wise to wait for the cavalry.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Associates may have trouble discerning your political motives today and, as a result, may turn their backs on a cause you fervently espouse. Therefore, be explicit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Appearing to be a bit far out with your ideas today could have a negative effect on a present endeavor. To be successful, others must perceive you as being stable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If a friend gives the indication of being uninterested in what you have to offer today, be wise enough to read the signals. Persistence will only make matters worse.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A collective venture may not work out too well for you today, especially if, going in, there's a misunderstanding about money. Both parties could lose in this situation.

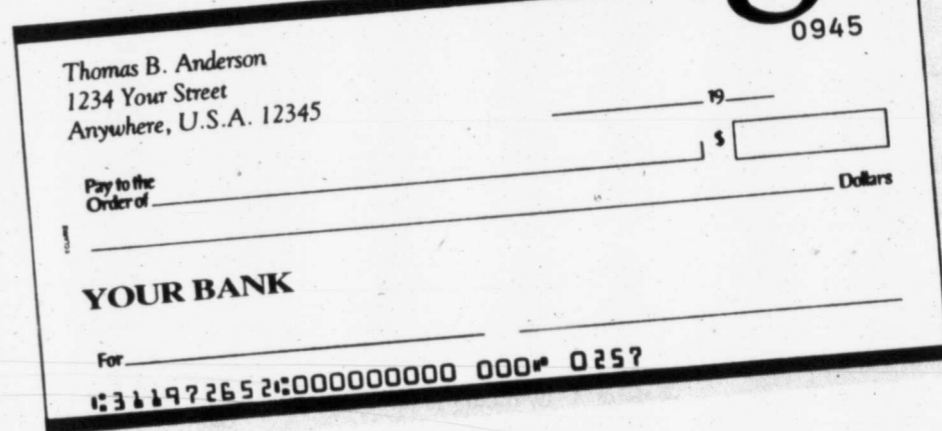

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This is one of those days where you could compound your problems by trying to do what is most expedient. Impulsive resolutions could spell trouble.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If circumstances compel you to work in close proximity with someone whose methods you distrust today, take extra measures to protect your personal interests.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you generate the feeling that your production capabilities need to be questioned, your boss could be exceptionally difficult to get along with today. Get back on track.
