He was a class officer for three years, and won numerous awards in sports, including track and football, and was captain of the track team.

Heart and sole walk scheduled

The first annual "Heart and Sole Classic," a five kilometer walk/run to benefit the American Heart Association, will be held Saturday in Towle Park.

Chevron USA is sponsoring the event which will begin with an 8:30 a.m. registration and 9 a.m. start from the Towle Park Pavilion.

"Heart disease, stroke and high blood pressure afflict more than 40 million Americans and are responsible for half of all deaths in this country. So you can see, this is a very important cause," noted local AHA president Glen Gray.

Gray also noted the importance of aerobic exercise such as running and brisk walking in decreasing the risk of heart disease.

Participants raise money by enlisting sponsors for the event. Sponsors can be obtained even after the event. All monies should be turned in by June 5 to Becky Winkler at West Texas State Bank, said walk/run organizers.

Chevron sponsors note that the first 100 participants to turn in $50 or more in pledges will receive a T-shirt and the top five money winners will receive prizes.

"This will be our last fundraiser of the year and we are hoping for a good turnout," said Gray.

For additional information contact Gray at 573-2681 or Susan Kiker or Kevin LaHay at 573-2688.

He received all-district accolades in football for three years and served as captain his senior year.

Holmes plans to get an agricultural degree after he graduates.

More than 400 band and choir students from the local high school and junior high will participate in a patriotic celebration set for 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Scurry County Coliseum.

Admission is free. Yellow ribbons will mark special seating for returning soldiers and their families.

The program will begin with a call to colors, followed by the Pledge of Allegiance and prayer. The combined bands will then perform John Phillip Sousa's "The Stars and Stripes Forever." The seventh grade band will perform "The Rifle Regiment" and "Joyous Episode" and the junior high choirs will perform "I Have a Dream."

Enterprise zone proposal to be mulled by officials

Marshall Lyons, coordinator of the economic development planning committee, will meet with Snyder City Council Thursday in an effort to get the city to designate a city enterprise zone.

Through such a designation, Lyons said he hopes that the zone would qualify for the Texas Enterprise Zone Program in which the designated area would be eligible for state incentives to encourage business retention, expansion or start-up.

Incentives include the refund of certain state sales and use taxes to businesses designated as enterprise projects; priority status for state administered programs and funds; and treasury deposits to financial institutions doing business in the zone.

According to Lyons, among the things the council must do is map the area to be designated; direct with the coordination of county commissioners the development of an overall tax incentive package, to include tax abatement; hold public hearings; adopt a resolution to nominate the zone; and appoint five people to serve on the Enterprise Zone

Board.

The enterprise classification is seen as a key part in efforts to retain the Walls Industries, Inc. manufacturing plant which has announced a July 12 closing. Lyons said the designation must be made by July.

The meeting with the council is scheduled for noon Thursday at Snyder Country Club. Lyons will meet with Scurry County Commissioners and representatives from other taxing entities at 8 a.m. Friday at the county courthouse.

PATRIOTIC TRIBUTE — Snyder High School band member Kim Wilson and Snyder Junior High band director Leticia Ledesma rehearse with the junior high band for Thursday's 7:30 p.m. patriotic music tribute at Scurry County Coliseum. High school and junior high bands will combine with junior high choirs for the free concert. (SDN Staff Photo)

House-okayed plan combines districts of Counts and Fraser

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House approved a redistricting plan early today that could set up a dozen races between House incumbents, increase minority representation and give Democrats more seats.

Under the plan, incumbents Democrat David Counts of Knox City and Republican Troy Fraser of Big Spring would be in the same district.

The 90-57 vote for preliminary passage of the plan came minutes after midnight. The bill later won final House approval, and it goes to the Senate for consideration.

Democrats, who already have 93 seats in the 150-member House, could gain six or seven more under the plan, said Rep. Sam Russell of Mount Pleasant.

He is chairman of the House Democratic Caucus.

Rep. Eddie Cavazos, a Democrat from Corpus Christi who heads the House Mexican American Legislative Caucus, predicted the plan would give Hispanics at least five more House seats. There currently are 19 Hispanics in the House, he said.

The number of blacks in the House should increase by at least two, from the current 13, said Rep. Fred Blair, a Dallas Democrat who heads the Legislative Black Caucus.

Chairman Tom Uher of the House Redistricting Committee told House members, "This is never an easy process... Overall, the plan, because of you, is a good plan." Rep. Uher, D-Bay City, sponsored the bill.

But Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland, who heads the House Republican Caucus, said the plan is "not a fair plan for us."

Rep. Jeff Wentworth, R-San Antonio, called it "a travesty of justice."

Democrats won a partisan battle that erupted over Dallas County, getting approval in an 80-53 vote for an amendment to give the area nine Democratic districts and seven Republican districts.

The current split is 10 (see DISTRICTS, page 8)

Seniors plan Freedom Bowl

In the wake of Monday's decision by high school administrators to cancel Powder Puff activities, seniors at Snyder High School have planned a "Snyder Senior Freedom Bowl" at the local Boy's Club.

School administrators canceled the annual Powder Puff pep rally, volleyball game and football game this year after 106 of 165 seniors were absent from school Monday. The events were to be held Friday at the high school gym and Tiger Stadium.

Those activities have now been moved off school grounds to the Boy's Club and will go on as planned. A pep rally is scheduled for 4:15 p.m., followed by the volleyball game at 4:45 p.m. and a football game at 6:45 p.m.

Admission is free but donations will be accepted and given to the Boy's Club.

A concession stand will be open.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The seat of government is often where the pain is located."

Efforts to limit terms of congressmen have yet to be successful, so the next best thing is to pay the guys to leave.

A recent wire story revealed that House members who retire from Congress after the next election will get a big pay hike, as much as $7,000 annually for a 12-year veteran.

The pension will be higher because of the hefty 29.5 percent pay increase that Congress voted itself last year. Those who arrived in Congress before 1980 are eligible for even a second sweetener if they retire next year.

Those who leave at the end of their current term may legally pocket leftover campaign funds. This means that 165 senior House members are eligible to convert a total of $41 million in leftover campaign funds to their personal use if they leave Congress at the end of 1992.

Members of Congress can start collecting a pension at any age with 25 years of service, at age 50 with 20 years of service. At age 62, members can collect with only five years of service.

A congressman with 12 years of service will be eligible for an annual pension of $34,641.

It's just more proof that folks who live in Washington, the seat of government, don't live in the real world.

We're reminded of the 40 congressmen who were lined up at the entrance to the pearly gates. As usual, St. Peter was doing his job by questioning each of the 40 congressmen. Then he asked the entire group, "How many of you took an unnecessary trip at taxpayers' expense?"

Thirty-nine hands shot up.
St. Peter was impressed. "You have been very honest," he said to the 39. "You can pass into Heaven — and so can the deaf one."

Nurses give dying patients drugs; may be suspended

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Six nurses who gave morphine from an unauthorized stash to dying patients in agony are in danger of losing their licenses for what many colleagues and ordinary citizens regard as an act of compassion.

The nurses of the Hospice of St. Peter's in Helena have admitted using the morphine when a pain-wracked patient's prescription supply had run out and a refill was slow in coming from the pharmacy at night or on weekends or holidays.

The secret supply — mainly leftover morphine suppositories donated by families of patients who died — was kept in a stethoscope box in an unlocked drawer of supervisor Mary Mouat's desk from the fall of 1989 to mid-1990.

No one contends the nurses got the drugs illegally, or used the drugs themselves, or sold them or administered any drug that was not prescribed by a doctor.

But a state lawyer has recommended the Montana Board of Nursing suspend the licenses of the nurses — known as the Hospice Six — for violating drug-control rules.

The nurses have said that patients writhing in agony sometimes had to wait hours for painkillers. Debbie Ruggles testified she heard a patient's screams when she drove up to his house at night. The patient was receiving care at home.

The case has generated an extraordinary drumbeat of support for the nurses: Ms. Mouat, Ms. Ruggles, Ruth Sasser, Lynn Zavallney, Alene Brackman and Verna VanDuyhoven.

The nurses are not out campaigning for support. They refused requests for interviews or did not return calls to their homes and the hospice.

But for weeks, the Helena Independent Record has published pages of letters to the editor, many from doctors, other nurses and families of patients, unanimously praising the nurses.

"So what they did was bend the rules. Is that so bad? Is it so awful to relieve the excruciating pain of a terminal patient?" wrote Sarah Herold-Breidenbach of East Helena.

"I hope that none of the deciding board ... have to stand by helplessly while one of their loved ones writhes in pain only to have some smiling nurse say, 'I'm sorry, you'll have to wait until morning when the pharmacy opens.'"

Demos to undercut spending plan for social programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic-controlled House is ready to scale back nearly $2 billion in commitments it made to health, education and labor programs and shift some of the money to pork-barrel projects.

The switch, outlined in documents obtained by The Associated Press, has some Democrats concerned that it undermines the party's efforts to criticize President Bush's budget and to cast themselves as more concerned than Republicans about kitchen-table issues.

It also has worried educators, health-care administrators and advocates for the poor, who fear they may end up with less federal aid than the budget promised.

"It really raises the question of whether the real dollars will be where Democrats say they should be," said Ellen Nissenbaum, lobbyist with the Center for Budget and Policy Priorities, which champions programs for low-income people.

Republicans have been harsher, contrasting the Democrats' repeated speeches about improving education and health programs with their decision to spend less than their own budget indicated.

"It's a now-you-see-it, now-you-don't kind of budget," said Rep. Willis Gradison of Ohio, ranking Republican on the House Budget Committee. "It's obviously a sham."

At issue is a decision by the Democratic leaders of the House Appropriations Committee to set aside $57.8 billion for education, health and labor programs. That's $1.7 billion less than the amount proposed in the Democratic-written 1992 budget that the House approved in April.

Documents show that at the same time, the committee leaders plan to add $900 million to the $19.7 billion the budget proposed spending for energy and water projects, favorite prizes lawmakers like to bestow on their districts.

And they would increase the $2.1 billion the budget set aside for Congress itself by $200 million.

The full Appropriations Committee, meeting today, was expected to lock in the decisions the panel's leaders made at their annual private meeting last week. The committee and its Senate counterpart control spending of $527 billion — more than one-third of the federal budget.

The Senate Appropriations Committee has not decided how its spending will be distributed.

Simultaneously, the House and Senate plan to approve a compromise $1.45 trillion federal budget this week for fiscal 1992, which starts Oct. 1.

The budget is used to guide Congress' spending decisions. The appropriations panels often ignore the budget's priorities, but rarely do they stray this far from it.

"It's the greatest deviation I can recall," Rep. Dale Kildee, D-Mich., a member of the Budget Committee, said in a sentiment echoed by others.

The amount the appropriations panel's leaders set for education, health and labor programs is still $450 million more than Bush has proposed.

Nonetheless, some Democrats regret that the gap between their own budget proposal and the amount that actually will be spent is so large, particularly since it comes in social programs they have repeatedly dubbed priorities.

"It concerns me," said Rep. William Ford, D-Mich., chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, who led a successful fight in April to add $200 million to the budget for education and job training. "I was operating on the assumption that we'd get the money."

Monday's deal showed one method by which declarer can mislead the defenders. He discarded from a suit in which he was strong, rather than one in which he was weak.

On today's hand, taken from the Vanderbilt Knockout Teams at the Spring North American Bridge Championships, declarer was strong in the suit led but was wide open in another suit. He had to try to keep that fact from his opponents.

After the speedy auction at both tables, West led the heart 10. The first declarer made the bad play of the heart ace from the dummy. He led a diamond back to his queen, then a diamond to the jack, king and ace. Feeling sure South had the heart king, from his "failure" to finesse at trick one, East switched to the spade four. West took declarer's 10 with the jack and returned the spade eight. East won with the king and led back his last spade so West could cash two more tricks in the suit. That gave the defenders five tricks, and declarer was minus 50.

At the other table, John Roberts of New York "finessed" dummy's heart queen at trick one. He led a diamond back to his queen and a second diamond, covered by the jack, king and ace. Now the position was not nearly so clear to East. If his partner held the heart king, a spade switch rated to be second best. Also it wasn't obvious that declarer had four club tricks ready to run. After some thought, East played back a second heart, and South claimed nine tricks for plus 400. The swing was 450 points or 10 IMPs.

Finland and the Soviet Union concluded an armistice in 1940 during World War II under which the Finns ceded part of their territory to the Soviets. (Fighting between the two countries flared again the following year.)

PROM NIGHT

Astrograph by Bernice Bede Osol

May 23, 1991

There are indications you may make some critical changes in the year ahead that will have a positive effect upon your financial position. There's a chance you may fulfill a long-standing expectation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try to avoid speculative involvements today, especially those where you may have to borrow in order to enter the venture. What starts out wrong could end quite dismal. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This might not be one of your better days for decision-making. Unfortunately, there's also a chance that those whom you go to for counsel could be even more inept than you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Try not to do anything today that could disrupt what is presently running smoothly. Let your motto be "If it ain't broke, don't fix it."
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Deliberately playing up to another in order to make someone you like jealous could lead to all types of complications today. Don't play games.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Success is within your grasp today — if you're tenacious and consistent. The odds won't be as favorable, though, when you take gambles in hopes of winning.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If associates sense that you have little regard for their opinions and ideas, they aren't apt to have much respect for yours. Keep an open mind and avoid prejudging.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't let someone who is notorious for falling to manage personal resources try to manage yours today. This could turn out to be a very expensive error on your part.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You can bring into being what you positively envision today. However, this may not be true of the people you'll be involved with; what you collectively attempt could fail.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You won't object to going out of your way to be of assistance to another today. What could bug you, however, is this individual's lack of appreciation and acknowledgment.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you want to do something social with others, check to see what your old stand-bys are doing. Involvements with new acquaintances mightn't work out comfortably today.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Guard against the inclination to undo your own accomplishments today. Once you've successfully achieved something, let it rest and move on to your next goal.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You have a very keen imagination today, and this can be a big plus, provided it's channeled constructively. However, if you start conceptualizing negatively, you'll be self-defeating.

Godair plans to travel after she retires

By Shirley A. Gorman
SDN News Editor

Jean Godair can't wait for June 7. In fact she's counting the days with great anticipation, for that date will mark the end of a 10-year career as junior high school secretary.

Now, it isn't that Godair doesn't like her job — far from it. In fact, she loves working with students and teachers.

But Godair and her husband, Homer, who retired last July after working 35 years for Chevron, have made some traveling plans and, quite frankly, they can't wait to hit the road.

The camper is ready to go and the fish are beckoning from their favorite fishing spots and Mrs. Godair has a fresh supply of reading material which she carries with her on fishing trips, because Homer is the fisherman in her family — and that is the way she likes it.

The Godairs have four children and two grandchildren, so there is plenty of opportunity to pop in on family. With no job responsibilities, they will be able to structure their free time as they like.

A daughter, Jennifer Godair Muncey, lives in Snyder with her family and teaches English at the high school. A son, Greg Godair, and family live in Odessa where he is self-employed.

A twin daughter, Jean Godair Head, farms in Snyder with her husband. The other twin, Janice Godair, is a senior at Tarleton State University.

Grandchildren include Chrystal Godair, 16, of Odessa and Jessica Muncey, 6, of Snyder.

Besides traveling, reading and visiting family, Mrs. Godair also plans to sew, work with ceramics, do volunteer work at Cogdell Memorial Hospital through the auxiliary, and work in the First Baptist Church library.

Her present church duties include working on Sundays in the "creeper" nursery for children aged six months to one year.

It all sounds like a busy agenda, and it probably will be, for though Godair is retiring, she has no intention of giving up being active because, in her words, "When you stay active, you stay well."

She also admits, "I have waited a long time to be able to do this."

Some years ago, Godair became the mother of twin girls somewhat late in life. With her first two children partially grown, it was a shock to start all over again with another child.

Then, six weeks before Janice and Joan were born, she learned she was to have twins. While many of their friends were putting their child rearing years behind them, the Godairs started all over again.

She jokes about she and her husband being the oldest parents at PTA meetings, but she readily admits that the twins "kept her young." And she has really been happy that her third child turned into twins, not only because they kept each other company through the growing up years, but also because they have been very good company for their parents.

According to Godair, raising two families made her a late bloomer in the work force. She did not begin her first job until 1977, when the twins were eight years old.

She worked at Burgess Pharmacy for several years before she joined the Snyder school system, starting as a teacher's aide and serving two years at North Elementary, under then principal Jim Erwin, and two years at West Elementary during Frank Miller's tenure as principal.

In April of 1981, Godair went to work at the junior high as the attendance clerk. The following year, when the secretary's position became vacant, she said she asked then principal, Jim Stehley, for the job and she said she is very grateful that he "took a chance on me."

Godair had never worked as a secretary prior to that, but she has since filled the role admirably. As secretary, some of Godair's duties, in addition to the principal's correspondence, include central accounting, bookkeeping and the lunch program.

Throughout her tenure at the junior high, she has come into contact with students and teachers on a regular basis, and that has been one of the "perks" of her job as far as she is concerned.

"I have developed close ties with teachers at all the schools I have worked for," she said. "We have become like family and the association has continued even after I changed buildings."

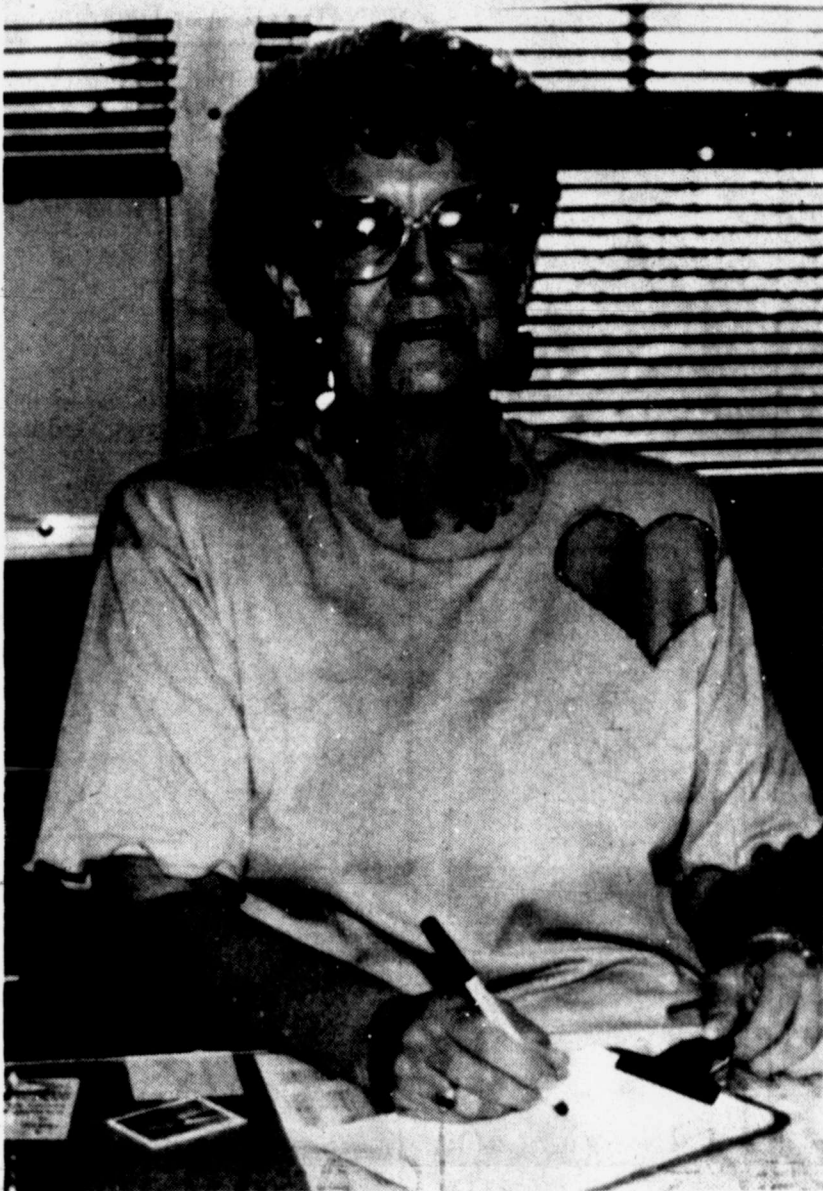

This family feeling also extended to faculty parties which she described as "being just like family get-togethers."

She also referred to teachers "as some of the most caring people I know." To her, teachers have to really love their work and be dedicated to it, or else they would not stay in the profession.

Transferring to the junior high was quite a change for Godair in the beginning as she had worked with kindergarten children while at both North and West. But she made the adjustment easily because she has always liked children at the junior high age.

Godair also jokes about outlasting the three most recent principals at the junior high. Besides Stehley, she also worked under Charles Anderson, who has since retired, and currently serves with Gary Patterson, who will assume the role of high school principal next school year. One of the jokes banded about is that she has "run off three principals."

Godair is a native of Lamesa and her class of 1949 was the last to graduate at the old high school building in that city.

READY TO RETIRE — Though Jean Godair has enjoyed her long association with Snyder ISD — including 10 years at the junior high — she is looking forward to her retirement because she and her husband, Homer, plan to travel. (SDN Staff Photo)

Snake found in car

WACO, Texas (AP) — A The snake, 18 to 20 inches long, was taken to Central Texas Zoological Park. But Caughenbaugh has refused to work on the LTD until he is reassured there will be no more surprises.

"Rattlesnakes have a tendency to crawl up into motors," said animal control officer Bill Vieregge. "They're warm, and rattlesnakes like to wrap themselves around them. It was probably brought in with the car."

Caughenbaugh, used to cars that rattle, was frightened by the ominous noise coming from near the battery.

"It was only an inch or so away," he said Tuesday. "I don't want any part of that sucker. I ran the other way. I got plenty to do without messing with a rattlesnake-infested car."

Animal control officers removed the reptile from the car, which belongs to a Valley Mills man.

Pecan nut casebearer...

Extension office sets spray application date

Scurry County Extension Office agents have said May 24 through May 30 is the best time for applying a spray to treat for the pecan nut casebearer.

Extension agents Deanna Holladay and Mike Morrow have been contacted by a number of county residents in regard to treating for the insect.

They offer the following suggestions:

To time spraying applications for casebearer control, first check for eggs on a daily basis. Eggs are usually found on the tips of nutlets and are about the size of the ball in a ballpoint pin. The eggs are white when first laid.

Casebearer eggs hatch in four to five days. The tiny larvae feed for a day or two on a bud below the nut cluster and then enter the pecan nut, often tunneling in at the base. Silk and black flass (excrement) are often visible on the outsides of infested nuts. Insecticide should be applied two to three days after the first eggs hatch to kill the larvae before they enter the nutlets. A second application may be required if unhatched eggs are found seven to 10 days after the first applications.

Insecticides recommended for casebearer control include Zolone, Sevin and Malathion. Zolone may be difficult to locate since the company will no longer offer the chemical, but it is still labeled for this insect.

If zinc deficiency symptoms are observed on pecan trees, applications of zinc may be required. Zinc should be applied using foliar applications at a rate equal to one pound of actual zinc per 50 gallons of water.

Make sure to cover all areas of the tree — especially new growth — because zinc is more readily absorbed through younger leaves. This should be done every two to three weeks through the end of July. When spraying zinc, take care not to get the spray solution on peaches or apricots.

Some commercial zinc fertilizers contain nitrogen. Pecan trees generally require about a third of a pound of nitrogen per inch of trunk diameter per year. Foliar applications may be used to supply nitrogen; however, trees within the yard and landscape usually receive enough nitrogen from lawn fertilizer applications.

More wealthy schools join challenge to school finance

AUSTIN (AP) — Dozens of wealthy school districts, faced with losing some of their local property tax revenue to their poorer counterparts, are challenging the state's new school finance law in court.

But the sponsor of the measure, Sen. Carl Parker, said Tuesday he would bet in favor of the law being upheld.

"The courts have given us an open invitation to do what we did. They almost told us to do it," said Parker, D-Port Arthur.

The Supreme Court twice has unanimously ruled unconstitutional the $14 billion-a-year system that relies on state aid, local property taxes and some federal money.

School districts' use of their own local property tax revenue now causes large funding disparities. The court told lawmakers to even out education funding available to school districts.

The new law will shift hundreds of millions of dollars in local property tax revenue from wealthier to poorer school districts within new education taxing regions, drawn largely along county lines.

Unless overturned, it will replace the current finance system beginning in September.

It is estimated the new law will cost $992 million to $2.1 billion more in local property taxes, and $1.3 billion in additional state aid, over the next two years.

The first challenge to the law was filed earlier this month by two wealthy suburban Dallas-area school districts, Carrollton-

Farmers Branch and Coppell. State District Judge F. Scott McCown, who is overseeing the case, has scheduled a June 17 hearing.

Republicans and seven Democrats. Dallas County would lose a seat in the redistricting plan.

In a Harris County amendment approved 86-55, that delegation would be decreased from 26 to 25. The Democratic-Republican split would become 16-9, rather than 16-10.

Twelve districts in the state each would contain two incumbents, including: — Counts and Fraser.

— Democrat Jerald Larry of Dallas and Republican Glenn Repp of Duncanville.

— Democrat Tim Von Dohlen of Goliad and Republican Steve Holzhauser of Victoria.

— Democrat Tom Cate of Lytle and Republican Harvey Hilder-

Shuttle launch delayed until June 1 at least

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Three equipment problems in quick succession forced NASA to delay for at least 10 days the launch of Columbia today on a flight to study the effects of weightlessness on the body.

"I walked in this morning and it was like walking into a buzz saw. Bam! Bam! Bam! I said, 'What's going on?'" Bascom Murrah, a NASA official in charge of Columbia's countdown, said after the postponement Tuesday.

The shuttle had been scheduled to start its nine-day biomedical research mission today.

Murrah said NASA engineers received a report from a contractor about midnight Monday that there could be a problem with temperature sensors in the fuel lines.

Within hours, engineers found that one of 23 units that processes computer signals had failed. Later, one of five main computers on the spacecraft shut down.

Murrah said NASA decided to replace all of the faulty parts, a process that will delay the launch until at least June 1.

Scheduled to fly with the astronauts are 30 white rats and 2,478 tiny jellyfish. The goal of the flight is learn how humans and animals react to weightlessness.

Four of Columbia's seven astronauts have been training for the biomedical mission since 1984. It was delayed by the Challenger accident in 1986.

The problem with the fuel sensor was discovered in an analysis of a sensor that had been removed from Columbia in September. A report received from the manufacturer of the device said that it had a crack in a stainless steel weld.

Engineers, worried there could be a similar flaw in the other sensors on Columbia, decided to replace them all.

Murrah said there was concern a faulty weld could allow the pencil-sized sensor to break loose and flow with the fuel into a pump that feeds Columbia's main engines. The sensors measure the temperature of the liquid propellant.

Though the sensor was removed from Columbia eight months ago, NASA received the analysis on Monday and Murrah said mission managers learned of it around midnight.

Police work numerous calls

Snyder police took two people into custody Tuesday and worked a number of disturbances, including assaults and mischief.

A 7:33 a.m., Tillie Rios of 2903 Ave. J reported that someone had written on her 1984 Chrysler with shoe polish. A report for Class C criminal mischief was taken.

A woman called from the 500 block of 28th St. at 12:36 p.m. and requested an officer in reference to being assaulted by her husband. No arrest was made.

At 2:43 p.m., a clerk at McD's 66 on College Ave. reported a disturbance between a male and a female in the parking lot. Officers located the female, who said she had been assaulted by her boyfriend. However, she requested no action be taken.

At 5:54 p.m. Maggie Martinez, manager of Colonial Garden Apartments, requested an officer in reference to subjects not leaving an apartment. She was advised of the proper steps to take and the subjects were advised of the complaint.

At 5:59 p.m., Lenora Quiros called from Snyder Junior High School in reference to a window being shattered on her vehicle. A report was taken for criminal mischief.

Police took a 15-year-old male into custody at Kmart at 7:25 p.m. for shoplifting. He was charged with Class C theft and later released to his sister.

At 7:50 p.m., police took a 17-year-old male into custody at Towle Park for assault. He was later released to his mother.

Queen in Dallas for music festival and anniversary

DALLAS (AP) — Boastful Dallas officials guided Queen Elizabeth II along a whirlwind tour that featured dancers, a music festival, sightseeing, dinner and an unexpected protest before she left.

"We really are saving the best for her," said Pat Curry at the city's Office of International Affairs, which helped to organize the seven hours of Dallas activities.

The British monarch, accompanied by husband, Prince Philip, attended a music festival, a reception at the Dallas City Garden Center and dinner at the Hall of State in Fair Park.

But the visit was not without controversy. About 175 protesters gathered at Fair Park to protest a Dallas City Council redistricting map.

The queen appeared oblivious to the protests. During her 10-minute address following dinner, the queen told the estimated 250 dinner guests, including billionaire Ross Perot, that she was impressed by the commerce and industry she had seen in Dallas.

The protest had been urged by two black City Council members upset over a Dallas redistricting map they say is unfair to minorities.

Some signs read "We have no democracy in Dallas," "No More Slavery," and "End Apartheid in Dallas."

Earlier, a capacity crowd of more than 2,000 people came to the Meyerson Symphony Center for "a Dallas arts gathering," with participation by the Dallas Wind Symphony and 10 other area musical and cultural groups.

After a fanfare by the Wind Symphony Brass greeted the monarch, "God Save the Queen" was read. Those words were then put to music by the symphony and women's choruses, who also sang "The Star-Spangled Banner."

In celebration of the 150th anniversary of Dallas' founding, the queen was presented ethnic dances along with a string quartet as they might have played at a Texas concert hall in the 1800s.

"I enjoyed seeing her, but she was kind of slow moving," said red-haired Austin Gunter, a 9-year-old Boy Scout. "I thought she would be faster than she was," he said, referring to her movements down the red carpet and receiving line from the plane upon her arrival.

Telltale proteins give early signs of spreading cancer

HOUSTON (AP) — Telltale proteins in the blood are giving doctors critical early warning of the spread of cancer, new studies suggest.

Cancer cells carry unique proteins on their surfaces that allow the body's disease-fighting immune system to recognize them as abnormal. Now, doctors are finding ways to track down these chemical name tags so they can destroy the cancer before it kills the patient.

In a study released Tuesday, Dutch doctors showed that a particular chemical marker, or antigen, known to researchers as CA-125 is the best early sign of ovarian cancer.

In a similar study published last month, researchers at Washington University in St. Louis said another antigen found in the blood can provide early detection of prostate cancer in most men over 50.

Still another study, published by a Denver researcher late last year, indicated that routine blood tests could uncover a protein that appears to be present only when normal cells are becoming cancerous. Tracking that protein could provide early detection of all forms of cancer, Stuart Gordon of the University of Colorado reported in the journal Cancer Research in October.

Cancer experts have said all the tests need further refinement before they can be considered accurate in consistently determining early development of cancers.

"There is clearly a need for much more precision," Dr. Roger S. Foster Jr. of the University of Vermont, said of the ovarian cancer test.

The ovarian cancer research was presented here at the annual meeting of the American Society of Clinical Oncology.

Dr. Maria E.L. van der Burg of the Daniel den Hoed Cancer Center in Rotterdam said a study of 76 ovarian-cancer patients showed that the presence of CA-125, measured in a blood sample, disclosed progressive ovarian cancer in 61 percent of the women studied before the disease could be detected by any other means.

In the rest, the antigen level was not high enough to suggest advancing cancer.

Current methods of detecting ovarian cancer fall short because the disease tends to spread in numerous tiny growths within the abdomen. Ordinarily these tumors can be spotted only when they reach a size of at least one centimeter.

By looking for CA-125, Dr. van der Burg said, "I think we can detect cancer earlier and have a chance of cure."

DEAR DR. GOTT: I think I am addicted to carbohydrates. Literature received from Overeaters Anonymous indicates this could be a problem if a person craves baked goods, pizza, bread and the like. What can be done to combat this?

DEAR READER: Carbohydrate "addiction" is an old concept that is presently being rediscovered. According to the theory, some people are fat because they crave carbohydrates, much as an alcoholic craves alcohol. Proponents argue that carbohydrate "addiction" has a physical basis, perhaps due to an errant gene; however, this view has yet to be scientifically substantiated.

All of us, at one time or another, crave carbohydrates. Some people can't resist pizza, others crave sweets, still others can't control their candy habit. (My personal Waterloo is Snickers candy.) This is OK for slim people who otherwise consume a healthful, balanced diet.

Problems arise when people are overweight, want to cut down on calories, but cannot; the carbohydrate compulsion is just too great. Such people need to address their carb habit with behavioral modification and/or support groups. Often their "addiction" is merely a habit; after all, sweets do taste good, and it's no accident that Mom and apple pie are American. Being told they shouldn't eat carbohydrates is, to some folks, about as comforting as the news that they need root canal surgery.

Nonetheless, simple carbohydrates (high-sugar foods) ARE unhealthy when eaten in quantity by obese people, who know better but are unable to control themselves. The word is not in on complex carbohydrates, such as bread, pasta, potatoes and rice, which contain nutritious substances as well as calories.

Unquestionably, people needing to lose weight should avoid excess carbohydrates, substituting protein and fruits in their place. Here's where behavioral modification and support groups become so important: They help people give up bad dietary habits.

Since there is no medicine or drug to treat carbohydrate "addiction," the issue of whether it is a real addiction is a moot point. Therapy still consists of reducing or eliminating high-carbohydrate foods (and fats) and changing eating habits to reduce calories.

U.S. Green Berets are called cyclone heroes

KUTUBDIA ISLAND, Bangladesh (AP) — The Green Berets have temporarily traded their cloak-and-dagger missions for the public spotlight, administering to thousands of sick and hungry cyclone survivors.

Leaving guns and combat gear behind, a three-man U.S. Army Special Forces team flew by helicopter to this storm-ravaged island off Bangladesh's southeast coast armed only with communications equipment, maps, survival gear and smiles.

It is one of nine teams from the Special Forces and the Air Force Special Tactics Unit sent to Bangladesh as part of a 7,000-strong U.S. military task force helping survivors of the April 30 cyclone.

Experts in the art of war, the Green Berets have been getting an education in misery in Bangladesh.

"You can't kick these people anymore. You can't hurt them anymore. They've already had it," said Sgt. 1st Class Mark "Max" McIntyre. "There's no short-term Band-aid solution to this problem."

The 28-year-old team leader from Thomaston, Conn., led a ragtag band of youngsters and middle-aged men through town, his blond hair and camouflage uniform a beacon for many who spend their days waiting for relief to be distributed.

Looking out at one of hundreds of rice paddies, now inundated with stagnant salt water, he shook his head and said: "You see one kid defecating in the water, one kid urinating in it, and one next to him drinking the water."

When American experts came to test the water, "they freaked" because there were so many microorganisms, he said. "What they need is some really, really deep wells to get beneath the contaminated water."

McIntyre stopped to pat the head of a barefoot youngster with a bloated belly. "He's full of parasites," the sergeant said, swollen knees. "He's got Then, he spotted a little boy with rickets."

Amorous Couple Stirs Widow To Light Up Her Lonely Life

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1991 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a very healthy 74-year-old widow. My first and only husband died five years ago at the age of 75. Our sex life had been non-existent for five years prior to his death.

I have a ladyfriend, 77 years old, who recently married for the third time. Her new husband is 87 and apparently is in fine physical condition for his age. According to my ladyfriend, they are having sex at least twice a week. Is this biologically possible for an old married couple who are respectively 87 and 77 years of age?

If my ladyfriend is telling me the truth, perhaps I should intensify my efforts to find such a husband to bring some spice into my lonely life.

ENVOIOUS WIDOW

DEAR WIDOW: Whether your ladyfriend is telling you the truth, only she knows. For a newlywed couple of any age to have sex "at least twice a week" is quite believable.

But if you're feeling "envious," Widow, perhaps your ladyfriend should ask her new husband if he has a friend who's young at heart.

DEAR ABBY: My eldest son is getting married in June. I am hurt and angry that my name was not included along with the parents of the bride on the wedding announcements.

My husband is dead, but I'm not, and being excluded makes it appear that I don't exist!

I called a wedding consultant and was told that the announcements are printed both ways, naming the bride's parents only, and naming the parents of the groom, too.

What would be your choice, Abby?

HURT IN MINNESOTA

DEAR HURT: I would choose the announcements that named the parents of both the bride and the groom.

DEAR ABBY: Your correspondent signed "Cherished Memories," who is presently attending a Catholic university and would give anything for a relationship with her philosophy professor who happens to be a priest, wrote: "Priests are only human, after all, and they probably don't relish the celibacy part of their commitment."

Unfortunately, some priests do not relish their celibacy and consider it a denial of their sexuality. Sad to say, many laypersons take this same negative approach.

Rightly understood, however, celibacy is not a denial, but a positive attitude that gives celibacy the aspect of a "treasured gift" offered to God through Jesus Christ. It is the "giving of one's self" in much the same way as the "giving" of a woman and man to each other in marriage. What greater gift can one give than the gift of one's self?

Celibacy is a positive choice, and a priest who approaches his commitment in this light is happy in his calling.
