Heart Walk scheduled for Nov. 2

Scurry County Division of the American Heart Association will hold its annual walk Saturday, Nov. 2.

The American Heart Walk, formerly known as the Turkey Walk, will begin at Towle Park Pavilion.

"This fundraiser has long been one of our major ways to fight heart disease in Scurry County, and we hope to make this year's walk the best ever," said local AHA spokesperson Becky Winkler.

"The T-shirts we will be giving away as part of the event have a new logo. They are wonderful," added Winkler.

Everyone who turns in $50 will receive a Heart Walk T-shirt. Pledges turned in for the amount of $150 will receive a T-shirt and a turkey. For $200, walkers will receive a T-shirt, a turkey and a sweatshirt.

Cardiovascular disease was the number one killer in Scurry County in 1989, accounting for 62 deaths.

For more information about the walk or to register, call Winkler at 573-5441 or Glen Gray at 573-2681.

Arafat, Shamir strike hopeful notes despite taking tough stances

JERUSALEM (AP) — PLO leader Yasser Arafat and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir

have taken steps toward keeping next week's Middle East peace talks on course, with hopeful words to balance their hard-line bargaining positions.

Meanwhile, Jordanian Prime Minister Taher Masri has formed a 14-man delegation to the peace conference, including two who once lived in Jerusalem, a Jordanian official said Saturday.

The official, a member of Masri's cabinet who participated in forming the delegation, said the list was submitted to King Hussein, who could make changes before it was final.

The Jordanian delegates will be joined by 14 Palestinian representatives from the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Although Arafat has said repeatedly that the Palestinian delegation represents the Palestine Liberation Organization, he said on Friday that he wouldn't communicate with the delegates during the talks in Madrid.

Israel refuses to negotiate with anyone from the PLO, which it calls a terrorist organization, as well as any delegates from outside its occupied territories.

Asked if he was optimistic, Arafat said in a satellite television interview from Tunisia: "We are in need of more efforts to achieve real peace, but we have to work now for it. ... We may succeed to achieve real peace in this area."

Shamir, meanwhile, expressed hope Friday on Israel TV for the conference — on the same day he named a hard-line delegation to the talks in the Spanish capital.

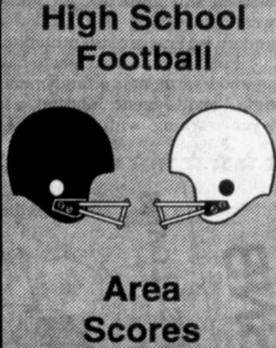

"It's an unprecedented attempt to negotiate with several Arab leaders at once. We have always demanded it and wanted it and should do it. This time, we will start a process that maybe has a chance," he said.

The talks — the first broad regional discussions on peace since 1973 — will open in Madrid, then break into a second stage of negotiations between Israel and the Arab nations that have long opposed its existence.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III, who shuttled around the Middle East for months to convene it, on Friday tried to temper expectations.

The Palestinians are going to the conference in a joint delegation with Jordan, as Israel has demanded, and will be advised by a 14-member committee.

WTC to present play by O'Neill

Western Texas College drama department will open its season Thursday with Eugene O'Neill's Pulitzer Prize-winning play "Long Day's Journey Into Night."

Performances will be in the WTC Fine Arts Theatre at 8 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 31 through Nov. 2, and at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 3. Tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for students and can be reserved by calling the box office.

"Long Day's Journey Into Night" serves as an autobiographical document for O'Neill as he depicts in the time frame of one day, from morning to midnight, his family's tortured background.

In what has said to be a "magnificent and shattering play" by New York Post writer Richard Watts Jr., O'Neill explores the cause and effect of chemical dependency upon his family.

Director Jim Rambo said the play relays a strong message about drug abuse without actually pointing a finger.

Richard Lack of Snyder will portray James Tyrone, the penny-pinching father. Amber Adams, also of Snyder, is Mary, the mother plagued with a drug addiction.

James Jr., the elder son who is an alcoholic, is played by Brandon Neeley of Snyder. Scott Clark of Sterling City portrays the younger son, Edmund, and Sherri Cribbs of Hawley is Cathleen.

Greg Combs of Muleshoe has been named as director's assistant/stage manager. In charge of make-up (see PLAY, page 12A)

Citizens fleeing Zaire

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Western governments appealed Saturday for their remaining citizens to flee violence-torn Zaire, while foreign military commanders also considered pulling out when the evacuations are complete.

Riots and looting sprees were reported in some southern towns in the central African nation as protests continued against President Mobutu Sese Seko's government, diplomats said.

In the capital, Kinshasa, troops loyal to Mobutu patrolled the streets and people hunted in vain for food and other provisions. Markets have been closed since last week. Protesters on Thursday pillaged and burned Mobutu's home and ransacked the residence of new Prime Minister Bernardin Mungul-Diaka.

Political tension also escalated Saturday when opposition parties branded Mungul-Diaka a traitor for accepting the post and vowed to boycott any government he forms, state radio reported.

Mobutu on Wednesday appointed Mungul-Diaka to replace Etienne Tshisekedi, a popular opposition leader he named prime minister under pressure from Western governments after riots last month by rebellious soldiers seeking back pay.

The opposition Sacred Union, a coalition of more than 150 parties, expelled Mungul-Diaka from its ranks, state radio reported. The opposition accused Mobutu of de-liberating fomenting chaos in an effort to impose a military regime in the former Belgian colony.

European Community ambassadors on Friday also rejected Mungul-Diaka, saying "a government that does not meet the criteria of consensus and democratization ... will result in grave consequences."

Belgium joined Britain, France and the United States in issuing orders for their citizens to leave the country.

Most evacuees were ferried across the Congo River to Brazzaville, Congo, to be airlifted from the region.

About 10,000 foreigners were evacuated after the September riots.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Mini-skirts are back. Don't worry about the costs, but rather the upkeep."

Retired veterinarian Pop Kidd had rather be lucky than good any day. Folks who play golf in Snyder know that Kidd combines skill with luck and usually comes out a winner.

For example, Kidd's golf career includes nine holes-in-one, and he has scored an eagle on all the holes at Snyder Country Club.

But on a recent Sunday, it was his luck that was most important when Kidd passed a patrolman enroute to the golf course.

Knowing he was not speeding, Kidd wasn't concerned when the officer pulled him over.

The patrolman explained that his vehicle inspection sticker had expired the previous month. He asked to see Kidd's driver's license. It also had expired.

The patrolman then wanted to see proof of liability insurance. The latest card in his glove compartment was 1989.

Kidd's luck continued to hold out. We guess the patrolman felt sorry for the Aggie, and he got off with a warning.

Said Kidd, "I did have my seat belt fastened."

Another die-hard Aggie, Dr. Charlie Church, has a Texas Tech bumper sticker on his pickup.

It's not a joke on the Aggie vet, since Dr. Church's daughter, Dayla, is now a freshman at Texas Tech.

More than a few Aggie cars came through Snyder enroute to the recent Tech-A&M clash. Highway patrolmen saw this bumpersticker on a car which they assumed belonged to an Aggie: "Proved To Be An A Stewardant."

Commissioners meet Monday

Paying bills is the only item of business on the agenda facing Scurry County commissioners when they convene at 10 a.m. Monday.

Discussion items include insurance, redistricting and 911. The county is currently in the process of addressing rural county residents for the coming 911 emergency assistance system.

Commissioners will discuss a recent equipment auction and their consolidation of county equipment. In addition, the county law library and the purchase of right-of-way along a county road are on the agenda.

Police chief to decide officer's fate next week

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP)—Fort Worth's police chief says he will decide next week whether to fire a patrolman who was videotaped in July while beating a prisoner in his custody.

Police Chief Thomas R. Windham called the actions of officer Edward J. Parnell's actions on July 3 an "extremely serious" act of misconduct.

Windham said he also will consider Parnell's past performance; except for the July incident, Parnell has never had a citizen's complaint filed against him.

"That bodes pretty well for him," said Windham, who met with Parnell Friday to discuss the matter.

Last summer, a person whose identity was never publicly disclosed taped Parnell while he used a police baton to beat a handcuffed prisoner trying to escape from a patrol car.

The chief has already received a recommendation from a group of police supervisors to fire Parnell. A five-member review board reportedly made the same recommendation.

Despite an outpouring of public support for Parnell, Windham said nothing he has learned in the past four months leads him to believe the officer's actions were justified.

"It was a totally unauthorized use of force," Windham said. "It is my opinion that he (Parnell) did not have sufficient cause to use the amount of force he used. ... Nothing has occurred to change my mind on that."

After the meeting between the two men, Parnell described Windham as polite and cordial.

Jail officials report easing underwear rules for inmates

DALLAS (AP)—Policies that restricted the type of underwear that women inmates could wear were changed five months ago, Dallas County Sheriff Jim Bowles told American Civil Liberties Union officials.

The revisions in policies regarding women's underwear were made in May, but were not disclosed until a meeting Friday between Bowles and ACLU members, The Dallas Morning News reported in Saturday's issues.

ACLU branch president Joe Cook said afterward, "We feel we have made progress, but we feel there is still some discrimination." The rules need to be revised even further, Cook said.

The old policies severely limited the kinds of underwear women were allowed to wear in jail. Men are routinely issued boxer shorts when jailed.

"We disagree that there is any inequity," said assistant chief Bob Knowles, head of detention services for the sheriff's department.

Sheriff's officials said they altered the policies shortly after media reports drew attention to the underwear restrictions.

Under the old rules, the only panties allowed for female inmates were white, plain and full-cut. All others were confiscated. Women had to rely on relatives for new undergarments or could buy panties from the jail commissary wagon on its daily rounds.

Indigent women had to request new panties from the jail.

The new policy removes most restrictions on panty styles and colors; only G-strings are specifically excluded.

Old standards dictated the old rules, Knowles said Friday.

"Red and black used to be considered sexually provocative," he said.

ACLU representatives raised objections to the new policy on Friday, pointing out that indigent women still must ask for underwear and noting that padded or underwire bras are still prohibited.

"For a woman, the right to have an undergarment is a fundamental right," said Janette Johnson, a lawyer working with the ACLU.

"JESUS DIED FOR YOU"

By Homer Anderson

Everyone is lost without Christ, else His death would have been in vain. Jesus said, "I am the way, and the truth, and the life; no one comes to the Father, but through Me" (John 14:6). You may feel you have done nothing which is extremely evil. Yet, if you have sinned one time and remain unforgiven, you are lost because the guilt of that sin still remains. Sin can be by transgression or commission (I John 3:4), or it can be by omission (James 4:17).

"For all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God" (Romans 3:23). Whether it be murder or hatred (I John 3:15), adultery or strife (Galatians 5:19-21), lying (Revelation 21:8), jealousy or envy (Mark 15:10), it will separate us from God (Isalah 59:2) and keep us from heaven, unless it is washed away in the blood of Christ through baptism (Acts 2:38; 22:16, Romans 6:3-5).

Come this Sunday, let us learn of Him who died for us!

HERE COMES THE JUDGE

Army denies friendly fire coverup

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — An Army investigation found nothing to verify a soldier's statement to a newspaper that he was ordered to tell the parents of a soldier killed by friendly fire that their son was killed by Iraqis, a published report said.

Several Army units launched an investigation this week after Army Spec. Ted Lane was quoted in a story published Sunday in the Washington Post. Lane said in the story that when he met with the soldier's family last spring, he was ordered to cover up how the soldier died.

Cpl. Douglas Fielder, member of the Charlie Company, 54th Engineer Battalion of the 1st Armored Division, was killed when a Fort Bliss 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment troop mistook him and four others for Iraqis the night of Feb. 27.

Lane, an Army emissary, said an officer in Germany ordered him to tell Fielder's parents at their son's funeral about a week later that their son was killed by the Iraqi Republican Guard, the Post reported.

"We have no evidence that something like that occurred," Army spokeswoman Maj. Barbara Goodno said in a story published in the El Paso Times. "There was never any intent by the Army to not provide accurate information."

Lane is now stationed at Fort Polk, La. Public affairs officials could not be reached by phone Friday by The Associated Press.

Ms. Goodno said no loved ones of the 35 U.S. soldiers felled by American fire during the war were officially told about the friendly fire until Pentagon reviews of the deaths were finished in August.

Fielder and four other engineers were stranded with a disabled truck at the Uhm Hajul Airport when MIA1 tanks and Bradley Fighting Vehicles from the India Troop of the 3rd Cavalry's 3rd Squadron opened fire, mistaking the engineers for Iraqis.

The 3rd Cavalry and the engineers were on different radio frequencies and couldn't communicate.

Fielder was hit in the chest by a shell fired by 3rd Squadron Commander Lt. Col. John Daly. Daly was on desert maneuvers in California and unavailable for comment, said Lt. Col. Prevost, Fort Bliss spokesman.

Fielder's parents, Ronald Fielder and Debbie Shelton of Nashville, Tenn., said they first learned the truth about their son's death through his buddies who called them from Saudi Arabia in May.

Officers who delivered the news to the family Feb. 28 read from a report that made no mention of the friendly fire, Ms. Goodno said. But Lane was not part of the official notification team, she said. He was an escort for Fielder's body at the funeral several days later.

Ms. Goodno said the Army now is trying to determine if the next-of-kin notification process broke down.

Orbison's widow donates $40,000

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Barbara Orbison, saying her famous late husband, Roy Orbison, knew better than most what it was like to be without a permanent home, dedicated a homeless shelter named for the Grammy Award-winning singer.

"Being in the business, he had to sleep on so many couches," Mrs. Orbison said Friday as she donated $40,000 to Orbison House, a Hollywood area residence for homeless mentally ill people.

Mrs. Orbison organized a tribute concert to her husband last year that raised more than $600,000 for homeless organizations. Orbison, whose hit songs included "Oh, Pretty Woman" and "Only the Lonely," died in 1988.

Controversial minister files for bankruptcy

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A Baptist minister known for his weekly downtown Sunday services for the homeless has filed for bankruptcy, according to records in U.S. bankruptcy court.

The Rev. W.N. Otwell and his wife, Charlotte, filed Oct. 17 for protection from creditors under Chapter 7 of the federal bankruptcy code.

The filing is the latest legal skirmish for Otwell, who spent several years doling out sandwiches and sermons to the homeless at the Fort Worth Water Gardens while feuding with city officials over his right to feed the underprivileged without city health permits.

Otwell listed his monthly income as pastor of Heritage Baptist Church near Mansfield at $400 and monthly living expenses at $535.

Records show the couple had $71,435 in debts and $4,375 in assets. The assets were itemized as

Illegal movie tapes seized

GATESVILLE, Texas (AP) — Video rental stores have been duped by near-perfect copies of popular movies, according to prosecutors who have seized thousands of bootleg tapes.

Two Gatesville businessmen are suspected of copying tapes and boxes and then placing them in eight stores, Coryell County District Attorney Sandy Gately said Friday.

"There was never any effort to make a case on the stores," Ms. Gately said. "We didn't have any reason to believe they were anything but innocent victims."

The case will be presented Nov. 11 to grand jurors, who could decide to return felony theft charges or allege violations of the Texas Business and Commerce Code, she said.

Deputies from the Coryell County Sheriff's Department and movie industry investigators confiscated 7,200 video movies last week in Gatesville on grounds they were illegally copied.

cash, furniture, household goods clothes, jewelry and three pet Chow dogs.

The Otwells show $17,000 in unpaid credit cards and $6,600 to a North Carolina couple whose home the couple rents in Mansfield, court records show.

They also owe $6,240 to Crawford Broadcasting, owner of Christian radio station KPBC in Dallas, for six months of unpaid air time.

Government agencies have to trim forces

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A five-year drought has left several parts of the state susceptible to a fire as deadly as this week's Oakland blaze, but engines are being retired and firefighters laid off because money is short.

California is shutting down 31 fire lookouts — which employ nearly half of the state's lookout staff — including the last fire spotters from Santa Clara, Santa Cruz and San Mateo counties. Fire officials say those areas are highly dry and susceptible to a fire like the one this week that killed 24 people and destroyed more than 3,000 homes in the Oakland hills.

Authorities have also closed two of the state's 47 conservation camps, where prisoners are trained to assist in fighting fires. They have also retired 12 engines from the state's 344-engine fleet and seven of its 65 bulldozers.

The California Department of Forestry also is slated to lose personnel and equipment added during the summer season, including three helicopters, an extra air tanker and an additional firefighter on each of the department's 344 engines.

3 urban homeless become farmers in New York state

CAMDEN, N.Y. (AP) — A year ago, John Dixon, Tony Mastro and George Wilder were living in meat trucks, cardboard boxes and homeless shelters in New York City. Today, they are living off the land — land that could someday be theirs under a plan to turn street people into farmers.

"If someone had told me a year ago I'd be digging in the earth, I would have said they were crazy," said Dixon, 50, who lost his museum job and then his apartment in 1990 and wound up on the streets.

Now, he is a pioneer, one of first homeless men brought to an upstate New York farm by a visionary farmer and crusader for justice, Winston Gordon.

Gordon saw the number of homeless people rising while the number of farmers fell. It was a mathematical problem for which he offered a solution: Plucking the homeless out of the city and transplanting them to his family's farm.

There they rise early and work hard, living the lives of latter-day homesteaders.

The three men are the first crop of pioneers sown by Earthwise Education Center, a non-profit group founded by Gordon, his brother Joe and organic farming advocate David Yarrow. Gordon calls it "bringing the people back home."

"On the streets, you can say, 'Well, putting money in that homeless man's cup is a dead-end street,'" he says. "Well, why not teach him to farm, then buy vegetables from him? Then he can say, 'I'm back on the streets, providing for your nutrition.'"

Earthwise is built on the premise that America has lost respect for its two greatest resources, the people and the land. It borrows ideas from new age farming, the utopian communes of the 1960s and the Iroquois Indian spirit of giving back to the land what you take out of it.

"Our Onondaga Indian friends say we must think today for seven generations," Gordon says.

The group is looking into the future of farming. Most farmers are nearing retirement, and "there's no one to take over from them," Yarrow says. Since 1981, the number of U.S. farms fell 13.7 percent, from 2.44 million to 2.1 million.

"Street people have good potential to become farmers because they're survivors," Yarrow says. "Training landless people in the methods of sustainable agriculture is laying the foundation for a new food system."

Last March, working on referrals from welfare agencies, Earthwise chose eight homeless men from New York City and brought them to Cornerstone Farm, 30 miles northeast of Syracuse. Gordon persuaded his family, who live in Chicago, to buy the 250-acre farm eight years ago.

The startup costs were minimal; the land and buildings already were there. Earthwise gets some donations and is applying for government and private grants.

The 44-year-old Gordon says he was a homeless farm laborer for 10 years himself after serving in the Air Force during the Vietnam War. He also lived in communes in the 1960s and has studied utopian experiments.

At Cornerstone, the emphasis has been on organic farming, which produces food without chemical pesticides and puts as much nourishment back into the soil as it takes out.

King speaks out

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — Best-selling author Stephen King, whose specialty is telling horror stories, is telling his neighbors to stop the "concrete monster."

King recorded a 60-second radio commercial urging voters on Nov. 5 to reject the proposed widening of a 30-mile stretch of the Maine Turnpike.

The spot, to begin airing on radio stations this weekend, has King saying, "Horror is my bread and butter, but I can't imagine a worse horror than to waste $100 million of Maine's hard-earned public money just to widen a stretch of road in southern Maine."

King says stopping the expansion would keep a "concrete monster from gobbling up more of Maine's countryside."

Vote YES To Fight Crime!

Since 1987, the FBI index crime rate has risen 30 percent. Worse yet, the rate for violent crime has increased 51 percent. These numbers are shocking but hardly news for Texans. The sad thing is that Texas is one of the leaders of violent crime in the United States.

If statistics are correct, one in four persons will become a victim of a violent crime. We in Scurry County can give Texas the opportunity to become a leader in doing something about this ever growing crime problem.

We would like to think that this is not a problem for us locally. However, violent crime can strike anywhere at any time and we must act to prevent such an occurrence.

Join me in a yes vote for Proposition 4 on the Nov. 5 ballot as a positive step in keeping violent offenders where they ought to be.

Financial Focus

Despite their attractive tax-free status, municipal bonds aren't for everyone. The promise of a regular income that isn't shared with the Internal Revenue Service has lured many people in low tax brackets into buying municipal bonds even though investments paying better interest rates may be available. For example, similar corporate or government bonds, the interest of which is taxed, offer more income than municipal bonds. There is a simple method to help determine if tax-exempt bonds are for you.

Begin by looking at your last year's tax return to determine your tax bracket. If you are in a 28 percent marginal tax bracket, for example, subtract that from 1, which gives you .72.

Now, assume you are offered a municipal bond paying 6 percent. Is this a wise investment when there are corporate bonds of comparable quality and maturity offering 9.5 percent? To figure the advantage or disadvantage of the tax-free income over the taxable, divide 6 percent (.060) by .72 which gives you 8.33 percent. This is the interest rate you, must earn on your taxable income to equal a 6 percent return that is tax free.

The following chart illustrates the tax-equivalent yields necessary to equal tax-exempt yields for the three major tax brackets. For example, for someone in the 31 percent bracket, a 7 percent tax-free yield is equivalent to a 10.14 percent taxable yield.

As with any investment, the quality of the bonds is also important. Tax considerations of an investment should never outweigh its overall quality. When comparing tax-free and taxable yields, make certain the quality of the two investments are comparable; otherwise your analysis is worthless.

For many taxpayers, tax-free income can mean a better standard of living. For others, it offers little or no advantage. To see how tax-free income might benefit you, sharpen your pencil and figure it out.

Perot's tapes gives glimpse of Oliver North's thoughts

DALLAS (AP) — H. Ross Perot released a taped telephone conversation with Oliver North to boost his contention that he did not tell the former White House aide to shield President Reagan from the Iran-Contra scandal.

But, in doing so, the Texas billionaire also provided an inside glimpse of the way he approaches the world as well as some of North's thoughts on the drama long before the poker-faced Marine squared off with senators in televised hearings.

In a half-hour conversation recorded days after the scandal broke in late 1986, Perot offered North compliments, instruction, jokes and self-deprecation.

"Ollie, I can write a book on bad judgment ... Nobody's got a patent on that," Perot told North.

He urged directness, quick disclosure of what North knew about the scheme. If that action came at personal cost, Perot said he would do what he could to ease North's burden.

"My advice is you either quickly go on the offensive or you are doomed to being on a tactical legal defensive program that will probably protect you but will leave you feeling completely, totally rotten as a person," Perot told North.

"Well, I'm already there," North replied.

The two shared their worries for rebels in Nicaragua, who were receiving money in the scheme from profits of U.S. arms sales to Iran. They also talked about the chance North would be given immunity to testify about the affair and whether he would have access to his files again.

But now, North and Perot appear no longer to be on friendly terms.

Perot released the tape Friday to help disprove an assertion in North's just-published book, "Under Fire: An American Story." North wrote Perot told him to tell the FBI that President Reagan didn't know about the affair.

According to the book, Perot made the request during two meetings in December 1986 with North's attorney, Brendan Sullivan. Perot said there was only one meeting and that the Dec. 15, 1986, phone conversation he recorded helped set it up.

"While I don't have a taped record of the face-to-face meeting I had with him and his lawyer together, this is exactly what we talked about again," Perot said when he gave the tape to reporters Friday.

Perot said he doesn't record phone calls often.

"This was a very sensitive phone call at a very critical time to a man under a great deal of pressure. I wanted to make sure there was never any confusion about what we discussed," Perot said.

Of North's book, he said: "If you won't tell the truth to your country, I think you lose your credibility when you go out to sell the truth and put it in your pocket."

Sullivan did not return a phone call Friday.

During the 1986 phone call, North expressed gratitude for Perot's offer, which Perot told him was meant to assure that he was "acting in the interest of the nation" rather than worrying about his family's livelihood.

During another exchange, Perot drew on his resignation a few days earlier from the board of General Motors Corp. after a months-long fight with chairman Roger Smith.

"In my case, and I don't think there's a dime's worth of difference between us, I'd rather just go out and slug away," Perot said. "Like this thing I'm involved with at General Motors now, I'd just rather just beat the hell out of them if I can in open combat or lose."

"I want to do that but I tell you I don't want to be a convicted felon," North said.

Winnebago used in gas siphoning operation

EL CAMPO, Texas (AP) — Three men have been jailed in the Wharton County Jail in connection with an elaborate, sophisticated gasoline bootlegging operation, police said.

Police detective David Juarez said the operation used a modified Winnebago that contained a 1,000-gallon tank and intricate siphoning equipment.

Juarez said the men would drive up to a service station, park the Winnebago over an underground gasoline storage tank, open a trap door and pop the lid where the storage tank is filled. After using electronic siphoning devices to fill the tank inside the Winnebago, the men would drive off.

Juarez told the Victoria Advocate the equipment has the capability of siphoning 1,000 gallons of gasoline in 12 minutes.

The next step of the operation was to pump the fuel into an 18-wheeler tanker truck — then move on to another underground storage tank where the siphoning was repeated.

Officers arrested Joe Ellis Dees,

21, of Cameron, La., and Lawrence Ray McHorse, 27, of Deer Park. Early Friday morning, officers arrested a third man, Donald Clayton Smith, 52, of Channelview. He was also arrested in El Campo.

WIRE ROAD ...

North Central Texas in the 1850's had only a few roads. One of the major roads through this area was the Butterfield Overland Stage route from Sherman to Fort Belknap, near present-day Newcastle. This road paralleled the military telegraph line between these two points. It was known as the "wire road."

Adcock leads B.C. to win over Trent

GAIL — Brandon Adcock rushed for 150 yards and a pair of touchdowns to lead the Borden County Coyotes to a 39-18 District 6-A six-man football victory over the Trent Gorillas Friday night.

The Coyotes are now 5-3 on the year and 2-1 within the district. Trent falls to 2-6 in all games and 1-2 in loop action.

A one-yard Will Shafer to Kirk Jones pass opened the scoring for Borden County in the first period before Trent answered with a 35-yard TD scamper by Jeff Sanford with under three minutes to go in the quarter.

Adcock returned an interception 50 yards to wind up the first-quarter scoring.

The Coyotes held a 24-12 advantage at the half and built on that in the third with a 40-yard TD run by Clint Wills and an Adcock score that covered 18 yards.

All told, Borden County rushed for 247 yards. The Coyotes will travel to Loraine to tangle with the Bulldogs Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Bulldogs post 66-8 win over Cardinals

HERMLEIGH — The Ira Bulldogs scored a convincing 66-8 District 6-A win over Scurry County six-man football rival Hermleigh Friday, taking a 26-8 lead after a quarter and scoring 40 points in the second period.

"I thought it was a good effort," said Ira coach Mike Cook. "I was afraid there might be a letdown after getting so pumped up for Borden County last week, and we did start out a little slow. But we picked it up as the game went along."

Toby Haynes scored on a seven-yard run sandwiched between Brian Luna TD rushes of one and eight yards to give the Bulldogs an 18-0 advantage with under three minutes to go in the opening stanza.

Travis Goswick added a 35-yard pass reception from Chris Haynes for a score and Toby Haynes added the PAT.

On the ensuing kickoff, Hermleigh's Freddie Martinez scampered 65 yards then tacked on the two extra points for the Cardinals' only points of the evening.

Wyatt Webster opened the second-quarter Ira onslaught with a one-yard pass reception from Chris Haynes.

Toby Haynes scored again on a five-yard blast then caught a Mike Hughes pass for a 19-yard touchdown put Ira on top 48-8.

A bad snap on a Hermleigh punt attempt sailed out of the end zone for a safety and a 50-8 IHS lead followed by a 14-yard run for paydirt by Chris Haynes, a Justin Donleson interception return of 30 yards for a TD and consecutive Webster PAT kicks.

The game was called at the half on the 45-point rule.

Ira improves to 4-4 on the season and remains unbeaten in three District 6 games while Hermleigh is winless in eight tries on the season.

Ira is at Trent Friday and Hermleigh hosts Highland.

Second straight shutout...

Tigers de-claw Dunbar, 24-0

By PHIL RIDDLE
SDN Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — Will Clay rushed for two fourth quarter touchdowns to pad a 10-0 lead Friday as the Snyder Tigers raced past the Dunbar Panthers, 24-0, for their second straight District 2-4A shutout victory.

"It was a big game," said Snyder head coach David Baugh, "and you have to play well in big games."

"We've done it two weeks in a row."

"It just makes next week's game (against Frenship) that much bigger."

The Tiger defense, which has now gone eight consecutive quarters without giving up a single point, was stingy versus Dunbar, allowing a total of 188 yards and only 50 of that through the air.

"I think we're just playing harder," said defensive coordinator Jack Dorsett of his squad's improvement over the past two games.

"You've got to remember we had a bunch of rookies — we only had four back (from last season's district championship team) — and the young guys are coming on and being lifted by the caliber of play of our proven players like Hayward (DE Clay) and Todd (DT Iglehart)."

Dorsett also had praise for senior safety Mark King, who had two knocked down passes and a tackle behind the line of scrimmage against the Panthers.

"Mark's been playing well," said Dorsett. "He's probably had the two best games he's played in the last two weeks."

"He makes a difference," he added. "When he's on, we're on."

"Mark's played great," Baugh echoed. "our entire defense was great. We bent but we never did break."

The Tigers' rushing game also was impressive Friday, racking up 232 yards on the night. Junior fullback Wayland Harrison led the SHS attack with 110 yards on 21 carries. Clay picked up 91 yards and a pair of scores and had two long runs, totalling 87 yards, and a TD called back on motion penalties.

"Wayland had a pretty good night," Baugh reported "and Will had some good runs. He had a sweep and a trap that went for big yards called back, or he'd have been the top rusher in the game."

Sophomore quarterback Matt Cave came on in relief of junior Chris Sutherland in the last quarter Friday, completing one of two passes for eight yards and leading the Tigers to a pair of touchdowns.

Does Cave have a shot at the starting job?

"We'd have to consider him real carefully," said Baugh. "I think you judge a quarterback by how often he gets his team in the end zone. He got us there twice."

"I was pleased with a sophomore doing that."

Starter Sutherland hit one of two passes, as well, finding tight end Hayward Clay for a 63-yard first quarter touchdown that put the Tigers up 7-0.

The scoring pass came one play after a Will Clay 58-yard run for a TD was called back due to illegal motion by SHS.

Kicker J. Parker booted a 22-yard field goal in the second period to give Snyder a 10-0 advantage at halftime.

The third quarter was scoreless as Dunbar mounted a ten-play drive that was snuffed on the Snyder 38 on downs. The Tiger defense stopped Panther standout running back Typail McMullen after just a yard on fourth and three to get the ball back to the Snyder offense.

Later in the quarter, Dunbar got the football back after a punt was ruled to have touched a Snyder player and was recovered by a Panther defender.

Four plays later, with under a minute to play in the quarter, SHS safety Eric Braziel intercepted a Shaft Davis pass that started the Tigers on their way to the end zone.

King gained 11 yards for a first down to the Snyder 49 followed by a four-yard blast by Harrison.

Harrison got the call on the next two plays, an eight-yard pass from Cave and a 11-yard rumble on the ground before Will Clay took the handoff and scooted the last 33 yards.

The Parker PAT set the tally at 17-0 with 9:32 left in the game.

Dunbar's next possession lasted only four plays and ended when King dumped McMullen for a four-yard loss on third and six.

Snyder took possession on the ensuing punt and started a four-play march to the goal line highlighted by a 25-yard burst by Will Clay to the Panthers' eight.

On the very next play Clay shot into the end zone, ending the scoring for the night.

Tiger cornerback Jason Green ended all hopes of scoring by Dunbar when he intercepted a Davis pass with just a minute and a half remaining in the game.

The win lifts Snyder to 5-3 overall and 2-1 in loop contests. Dunbar falls to 4-4 in all games and 1-2 in district play.

In other games Friday, Estacado moved to 3-0 in district competition with a 51-6 lambasting of Frenship and Levelland remained tied with Snyder for second place with a 27-6 win over Lamesa.

Snyder resumes district play Friday when the Frenship Tigers come to town for a 7:30 p.m. battle.

ON THE RUN — Snyder tailback Will Clay looks for running room during the second quarter of Friday night's 24-0 Tiger win over the Dunbar Panthers. Clay rushed for 91 yards and two TDs on the night. (SDN Staff Photo)

NFL roundup...

Kicker Allegre rejoins N.Y.

by The Associated Press

Considering that the New York Giants have beaten the 7-0 Washington Redskins six times running — by 29 total points — one could be led to believe they may need a super effort from a Super Bowl kicker.

But don't conjure up images of Matt Bahr, whose clutch kicking was a major factor in the Giants' march last season to their second Super Bowl title in five years. He probably won't be there.

Nonetheless, New York's kicker Sunday night will be a Giant with a Super Bowl ring.

Raul Allegre, who lost his job last season to a leg injury that opened the door to Bahr, probably will be the man.

"Right now I am here until Matt can kick again," Allegre said after signing a contract Thursday.

"I have no idea how long that might be."

Whether Allegre kicks will depend on Bahr's strained right thigh. The injury, sustained Oct. 14 against Pittsburgh, has bothered Bahr for almost a week and he cut short his workout on Wednesday because of pain.

Bahr kicked five field goals in the NFC title game, including a 42-yard clincher to put the Giants in the Super Bowl.

Allegre, 32, signed with Atlanta as a Plan B free agent and later had a tryout with Houston, but didn't make either club. He just about gave up any hope of kicking again until contacted last week by the Giants.

In another key game Sunday, New Orleans — the only other unbeaten team in the league — plays host to Chicago. Elsewhere, it will be Dallas at Detroit, Cincinnati at Houston, Denver at New England, San Francisco at Philadelphia, the Los Angeles Rams at Atlanta, Pittsburgh at Cleveland, Minnesota at Phoenix, San Diego at Seattle, and Green Bay at Tampa Bay. The Los Angeles Raiders are at Kansas City on Monday night.

Chicago (5-2) has struggled offensively, and doesn't figure to get healthy against New Orleans (7-0) with Neal Anderson doubtful with a hamstring injury. The Saints' have allowed only 60 points. But New Orleans may be without quarterback Bobby Hebert, who sustained a concussion last week.

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Jimmy Johnson and Wayne Fontes both get a little of their own medicine this week. They both have to devise a defense to stop one of the NFL's best running backs.

Emmitt Smith plays for Johnson at Dallas. Barry Sanders plays for Fontes at Detroit. Smith leads the NFC with 701 yards and Sanders is second in the conference with 666 yards.

Sunday, they'll be on opposite sides of the field when the Lions (5-2) host the Cowboys (5-2) at 4 p.m.

"If you spend a lot of time thinking of ways to stop Barry Sanders, you'd be in an insane asylum, because he can't be stopped," Johnson said. "The way to contain Barry Sanders is to not let him have the football."

"Barry Sanders is going to be Barry Sanders. We just have to deny him those long runs."

Smith is currently averaging 100.1 yards on 21.1 carries per game this season. At that rate, he could eclipse the 1,000-yard barrier in Game 10.

"You don't want to make a living trying to stop Emmitt Smith," Fontes said. "But with Dallas, Smith isn't the only thing you have to worry about. The Cowboys have an outstanding quarterback in Troy Aikman and he just makes Smith even better."

The Cowboys are returning to action following an open week. They will be looking for their fifth consecutive victory.

But the Lions now know that coming off that bye week can be tricky business. Last week the Lions, fresh off their bye, were clobbered 35-3 in San Francisco.

PRESSURE — Dunbar quarterback Shaft Davis (10), feels the pressure of the Snyder defense first-hand Friday as defensive tackle Todd Iglehart applies the hit. Iglehart and the Snyder defense blanked the Panthers, 24-0, to stretch their scoreless streak to eight straight quarters. (Mike Price Photo)

JV edges Dunbar

Snyder scored a 28-20 junior varsity football win over Dunbar Thursday, in what coach Roland Hererra called his team's "best game of the year."

"They showed a great deal of character," Hererra said of his squad. "They have overcome some tough breaks. Everybody contributed to a fine team victory."

Gilbert Orusco gave Snyder a first-quarter lead on a one-yard TD dive. Quarterback Jim Griffin hit Chris Stansell on a pass for the two-point conversion and Snyder led, 8-0.

Randy Fish put the Tigers up by a tally of 14-0 on his eight-yard blast for the end zone in the third period.

Dunbar answered in the third with 14 quick points, tying the game.

Griffin slipped in from a yard out, then made the two-point to lift Snyder to a 22-14 advantage early in the final stanza.

Snyder frosh lose to Glen

SAN ANGELO — Snyder's freshmen Tigers fell to San Angelo Glen Thursday, 19-0, in football action.

"They were a very well coached team," said Snyder coach Mike Meek. "Their defense was real tough."

"They stunted a lot," Meek continued, "and that really messed us up."

Snyder standouts for the game included Chris Mitchell and Dennis Creager, who each snagged an interception.

Mitchell also blocked an extra-point attempt.

The SHS freshmen, now 4-3, will host San Angelo Lee Thursday at Tiger Stadium at 5:30 p.m.

Oilers dream of Super Bowl

HOUSTON (AP) — Cincinnati Bengals safety David Fulcher knows how the Houston Oilers are feeling. It's super — Super Bowl, that is.

"When you start getting the feeling that when you step on the football field and wherever the ball is, it's going to be your's, that's when you're going to win," Fulcher said.

"They have a good chance of getting there (Super Bowl). I can't see anybody stopping them unless Houston stops themselves."

The Bengals had that feeling in 1988 when they advanced to the Super Bowl.

Atlanta seeking crown

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A day after one of the bigger routs ever in the World Series, the Atlanta Braves and Minnesota Twins dismissed the mismatch and said it meant nothing.

"I really believe my players, after five to seven minutes, forget about the games," Twins manager Tom Kelly said during Friday's off day. "You ask them what the score was and they don't know. I even lost count."

The Braves set a record for most runs by an NL team in a World Series game and established another mark with 34 total bases in blasting Minnesota 14-5 Thursday night.

The Braves rolled up the biggest Series score since the New York Yankees trounced the Pittsburgh Pirates 16-3 in 1960 and took a 3-2 edge in games.

"Whenever we lose, we try to forget about it, too," David Justice, who homered and drove in five runs for Atlanta, said Friday.

"I think that's a good thing to do. But we hope the game carries over."

Steve Avery, the NL playoff MVP, was to try to win Atlanta's first World Series championship when he faced Scott Erickson in Game 6 Saturday night.

Avery and Erickson pitched against each other in Game 3, and neither got a decision in Atlanta's 5-4 victory in 12 innings. Avery gave up four hits in seven innings, while Erickson was knocked out in the fifth inning.

"These people have pitched an awful lot of innings," Kelly said. "You can't be surprised when they get tired."

Kelly's bullpen is also a little fatigued. Since Rick Aguilera gave up the winning run in Game 3, ending a streak of 27 2-3 Series innings without an earned run given up by Twins relievers since 1987, Minnesota's bullpen has allowed 13 earned runs and 15 hits in 7 1-3 innings.

The Twins are 6-0 in World Series games in the Metrodome, including two victories last week.

"I think we improved a lot over the first game we played there," Avery said.

"When we first came here, we were told that you can't take your eye off the ball and that you can't hear," Justice said. "It's true, you can't hear. But you can take your eye off the ball for a moment when it's on the way down. Just don't do it when the ball is going up."

Justice and second baseman Mark Lemke botched the first ball of Game 2 when Lemke couldn't see it, then couldn't hear Justice calling for it.

The teams seemed to reverse roles in Atlanta, where the Braves won two close games before ending their home season with a rout.

"I think the Twins are a better team at home. We know that. But I think — no, I know we can win one of the last two," Justice said.

"The ball is bouncing their way and I know how they are feeling because when we went to the Super Bowl (1988), it was exactly the same thing," Fulcher said.

"When the ball bounced 25 yards down the field, our man ended up with it."

The ball has bounced away from Cincinnati this season. The Bengals are 0-7 going into Sunday's game in the Astrodome against the Oilers, who are trying to improve to 7-1 for the first time in franchise history.

Kickoff is at noon CDT. The Oilers have the No. 1-ranked passing offense in the NFL and they rank third in total defense. But they almost grounded themselves before beating Miami 17-13 last week.

The big break came when the

Wichita Falls wins regional tennis event

LUBBOCK — Favored District 5-4A team tennis champion Wichita Falls beat Burkburnett, 10-8, in Friday's Region I tournament final here.

Burkburnett, runner-up in District 5, beat District 3 title holder Andrews in the semis to earn a spot in the finals while District 3's second-place team, Big Spring, fell to Wichita Falls by the same score.

Snyder's consolation bracket match against Saginaw Boswell Friday morning was canceled due to time considerations.

The Tigers, who won their second straight District 2 title, fell to Burkburnett, 10-8, in Thursday's first round, then beat Crowley in consolation action, 12-5.

Dolphins' Sammie Smith fumbled from the Oilers' 1-yard line and Cris Dishman recovered in the end zone with three minutes to play.

The Bengals can only look with envy on the Oilers' good fortune. Cincinnati's defense ranks 27th in total defense among the 28 NFL teams and although the offense ranked No. 8 overall, mistakes at the wrong time have been costly.

"It's been like we've played 50 games and haven't won any," Fulcher said. "It's been a tough season. It's not like we went out there and played every game and got our behinds kicked."

The Bengals intercepted Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly three times in the first quarter but got only three points and eventually lost 35-16 on Monday night.

"A pretty good team can name two or three plays that decided the outcome," Cincinnati coach Sam Wyche said. "We're right with everybody, but they execute where we don't or the ball comes loose at the wrong time."

Cincinnati drove to the Houston 1-yard line on its first drive and fumbled, helping the Oilers to a 30-7 victory in Cincinnati Sept. 8.

Wyche said the Bengals would try to control the clock against the Oilers as they did against Buffalo. "When Houston's offense is clicking, it can score on anyone," Wyche said.

Houston quarterback Warren Moon had his poorest statistical performance last week when he completed 21 of 35 passes for 171 yards, one touchdown and three interceptions.

"It was nice to get a win when I didn't play well," Moon said. "It's good to know we have a defense that makes the kind of plays our defense has been making all season. It's fun watching them."

Snyder soccer team hosts Odessa

Snyder will host Odessa in a men's soccer match at noon Sunday on the soccer field next to West Elementary. The public is invited and there is no admission charge.

Mavs edge N.Y. in exhibition game

DALLAS (AP) — Derek Harper scored 18 points, including a critical 3-pointer down the stretch, pushing the Dallas Mavericks past the New York Knicks 99-95 in an exhibition game Friday night. Harper hit a 3-pointer with 3:24 to play to give Dallas a 94-93 lead, then connected from 18 feet with 55.2 seconds left to give the Mavericks a 96-95 advantage, and James Donaldson added three free throws in the final 23 seconds. Patrick Ewing led the Knicks with 22 points, 11 rebounds and 7 blocked shots, but missed a turnaround jumper with 3.4 seconds left that would have tied the game. Dallas improved its preseason record to 2-4. The Knicks fell to 4-3. Randy White and Rodney McCray scored 16 points each for the Mavericks, who placed seven players in double figures.

Franco becomes American citizen

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas Rangers second baseman Julio Franco was one of more than 500 people who became U.S. citizens Thursday in a ceremony at the University of Texas-Arlington. The American League batting champion and All-Star, a native of the Dominican Republic, said: "It's nice to have all those awards, but that's baseball. This is my life. This is a privilege. It's very important to be a part of this country, this state and the city," he told The Dallas Morning News. U.S. Judge David Belew administered the oath to 511 immigrants representing about 60 different countries. He acknowledged Franco. "He's not only the batting champion, but a champion in life," Belew said. "He's no different than many of you out there. I just want to introduce him so you can see that this man has done so much in a short time. We are so proud to have him here like we're proud to have each of you here."

Barber shares Senior Classic lead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Miller Barber wasn't sure he could finish the round. Fighting off a sudden attack of asthma on the 18th hole, Barber managed a par that gave him a share of the first-round lead in the Security Pacific Senior Classic. "I have allergies and something hit me," Barber said after his 66 on Friday put him in a four-way tie for the lead. "I couldn't breathe. I almost thought I was going to faint there for a minute. I wish I knew what it was," said Barber, who carries three inhalers with him. Barber, the No. 3 career money leader in professional golf behind Jack Nicklaus and Lee Trevino, is looking for his 25th Senior Tour victory but first since 1989, when he ended a record run of nine consecutive years on the over-50 tour with at least one victory.

U.N. finds complete blueprint for bomb

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N. weapons inspectors have obtained the blueprints for Baghdad's atomic bomb, a weapon that would have been lighter and smaller than the Hiroshima bomb and could have been harnessed to a missile, officials said Friday.

U.N. officials said Iraq's chemical weapons arsenal is so vast and dangerous that inspection teams will not be able to finish destroying the cache until at least 1993. The reports underscored Baghdad's war-making potential prior to its defeat in the Persian Gulf War. Under U.N. resolutions passed since the end of the war, Iraq must destroy all weapons of mass destruction and submit to years of oversight of its industry.

After months of denials, Iraq admitted only this week to nuclear weapons research, but said it had never gone forward with building an actual bomb.

U.N. officials confirmed this week that Baghdad had tested aspects of a nuclear bomb and could have produced a "working" weapon in as little as a year.

Officials of the U.N. Special Commission in charge of destroying Iraqi weapons said the complete plans for the Iraqi bomb showed it would have used less enriched uranium than a crude Hiroshima-style A-bomb, and therefore would have been lighter and smaller.

"You could put it on a missile," said Johan Molander, spokesman for the Special Commission, which is charged with dismantling Iraq's weapons of mass destruction under terms of the Gulf War cease-fire.

The first-generation model bombs of the type that the United States dropped on Japan are so cumbersome that they require delivery by an airplane, he said.

U.N. nuclear expert Michel St.

Mleux disclosed Thursday that Iraq had gone beyond the design phase of its nuclear weapons program and was conducting test blasts of nuclear weapons components in the desert before the Gulf War. The latest reports are part of a

$40 million judgment hurts Sunshine Mining

DALLAS (AP) — Sunshine Mining Co. has lost a $40 million judgment in a dispute over mining rights in the West Africa country of Sierra Leone.

The ruling comes at a bad time for the Dallas-based company, which has previously indicated it is considering a bankruptcy filing.

The award, issued by a jury in Dallas Thursday, must still be approved by state district Judge Joseph Morris.

"We are optimistic that the court will enter a judgment against the Sunshine Mining Company for at least $40 million and perhaps as much as $617 million," Stephen F. Malouf, attorney for the French diamond merchants who accused Sunshine of stealing the mining concession in Sierra Leone, said in a statement Friday.

"Sunshine believes that the findings ... were erroneous and that the damages were grossly excessive," the company said in a statement Thursday.

The company said it would pursue remedies, including a motion for a new trial and an appeal. Sunshine had assets of $169 million as of June 30.

The French partnership, called the Boule Group, filed suit against Sunshine Mining in April 1990. Boule claimed they had been studying the mining potential in Sierra Leone since 1971 and had negotiated the concession painstaking process by inspectors to uncover and dismantle Iraq's nuclear, chemical and biological weapons stocks against resistance by Baghdad.

Rolf Ekeus, executive chairman with the country's government before forming a 50-50 venture with Sunshine in 1989.

The suit charges that after the venture was formed, Sunshine tried to circumvent the agreement and "evicted" the French group from the deal.

Initial data from the disputed mine site proved diamond reserves of between $650 million and $2.1 billion. Boule's attorneys said they would ask Morris for a judgment of $600 million, based on that estimate.

In a news release in June, Sunshine said the Sierra Leone project had a 15-year life based on a projected annual production of 485,000 tons that would yield 2.4 million carats of diamonds.

The judgment froze a debt restructuring plan the company had been working on since April, the Dallas Times Herald reported, citing an anonymous source close to the company.

"It took them completely by surprise," the source told the Times Herald. "They didn't even have (the lawsuit) in the disclosure statement because they didn't think it would have a material impact."

Greenland, which encompasses 839,999 square miles in the North Atlantic, is the world's largest island.

of the Special Commission, said inspectors from the chemical weapons division of the commission would have to proceed cautiously with destroying Iraq's arsenal.

"The filled munitions, that are filled with nerve agents and mustard gas and so on, as you can imagine, those are extremely dangerous to handle," he said Thursday.

About 50 U.N. inspectors are presently surveying the main chemical weapons site at the Muthanna military base outside of Baghdad.

The inspectors are reportedly checking all of the many buildings on site because Baghdad has consistently understated its weapons programs in its declarations to the United Nations.

Ekeus told reporters work on the destruction of chemicals would continue into 1993.

"We have now 125,000 items to take care of, an enormous amount," he said.

Oakland fire damage estimate downscaled

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The firestorm that stripped hill-sides, leaving them vulnerable to mudslides during rains, caused less damage than first thought, said officials who downgraded damage estimates from $5 billion to $1.5 billion.
Meanwhile, crews worked on storm drains as rain began to fall Friday on the hilly neighborhoods, creating fears of possible mudslides. But the National Weather Service later said it wasn't raining enough to cause concern.

"It's raining right now, but not heavy enough to trigger anything," forecaster Norman Hui said late Friday. He said 1/4 of an inch of rain had fallen in the previous 24 hours.
It would have to rain 1 1/2 inches in six hours, or 1/4 of an inch in one hour, to set off slides, said Hui.

More rain was expected Saturday, but fair weather was predicted for Sunday.
The fire stripped the vegetation from 1,800 acres in what were once the most expensive and scenic neighborhoods in the two cities. Walls of 100-foot flames destroyed more than 3,000 houses and apartments, killed at least 24 people and injured 148.

Idaho's 'Jesse Turner' day will honor former hostage

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Jesse Turner, the university professor who spent 4 1/2 years as a hostage in Lebanon, returned to his hometown a hero, arriving by limousine to the cheers of thousands who waited hours in the cold to greet him.
"It's cold," Turner told the crowd late Friday as he made his first public statement since returning to the United States. "So, all I want to say is thank you. Thanks for everything."

Gov. Cecil Andrus proclaimed Saturday Jesse "Jon" Turner Day to honor the 44-year-old mathematician professor freed Tuesday by his Shiite Moslem captors in Lebanon. Turner had taught at the American University in Beirut when he was taken hostage.
He stood with his Lebanese-born wife, Badr, and their 4-year-old daughter, Joanne, atop the Capitool steps, on a platform festooned with yellow ribbons and red-white-and-blue bunting.

When reporters asked how he felt, he just shrugged and smiled. He and his family members were whisked to the celebration in a stretch limousine after they arrived at the airport in Boise shortly after 11 p.m.
"Boise, Idaho, your son, Jon Turner, is home," said Mayor Dirk Kempthorne.

Proposition 8: you decide

propositions are passed, they become part of the state constitution. If passed, this proposition would still require propositions that create debt to be approved by a two-thirds vote of the legislature and a majority of the voters. However, when these propositions are passed, they will not become part of the state constitution, but instead will be enacted by statute. In addition, when the proposition is placed on the ballot, it must clearly describe the purpose of the debt, the cost of the debt, and how the debt will be repaid. The amount of the debt in the proposition can not be exceeded or renewed unless the proposition says that the debt can be exceeded or renewed.

also help keep the Constitution, which already contains more than 300 amendments comprising thousands of words, from becoming even more cluttered.
Opponents Say: Creating new state debt is a serious matter. Each time the legislature proposes to create a new exception to the constitutional prohibition against state debt by authorizing new general-obligation bonds, it is fitting that a specific constitutional amendment should be required. Getting more information about bond proposals to voters could be achieved more easily if the legislature adopted clearer ballot language proposing each amendment. If one believes that the Constitution need not be amended for every new bond authorization, then the Constitution should contain a ceiling on the creation of new debt by means of propositions. A reasonable debt cap as part of a debt-proposition amendment would reduce the number of times the Constitution has to be amended while still maintaining a constitutional restraint on the total amount of state debt.

"We deeply regret your kidnapping, your incarceration by the terrorists," Andrus said. "But we're very proud of the dignity you displayed."
Earlier in the day, Turner and his family landed at O'Hare International Airport on a flight from Frankfurt, Germany.
"He smoked a pack of cigarettes, drank a couple beers and ate a bunch of food," said Ray Hipp, who sat in front of the Turners during the flight.
Hipp said that during the flight he told Turner, "Welcome to America," and that Turner did not respond. "He was very quiet," said Hipp, of Chicago.

Supporters Say: Proposition 8 would give the voters more information about state bond proposals without taking away any authority from the voters to control and monitor state debt. Currently, ballot proposals to create state debt only tell the purpose of the bonds, not necessarily the amount of the method of repayment, which can mislead and confuse the voters. This proposed amendment would

Police arrest 3; assist in pursuit

Snyder police made three arrests and assisted in one other Friday and early Saturday.
Three units of the department assisted Big Spring Police in pursuing and capturing a suspect 22.4 miles north of Snyder on Texas Hwy. 208 at 4:04 a.m. Saturday. The subject, 17-year-old Francisco Vega of Big Spring, was booked into Scurry County Jail on a charge of attempted aggravated assault of a police officer with a motor vehicle. He is also expected to be charged by Big Spring Police with evading arrest. He was transported to the county jail in Snyder because Kent County did not have a judge available.
Bond had not been set as of mid-morning Saturday.
The chase began in Big Spring when police attempted to stop a 1985 Pontiac Fiero. A Snyder unit picked up the chase north of Ira. The pursuit continued through Snyder and toward Clairmont. In all, some eight units — three police units from Snyder and two from Big Spring, a Snyder-based DPS unit, a Howard County Sheriff's Office unit and a Kent County Sheriff's Office unit — participated.

According to reports, Officer Carl Plock of Snyder was in a patrol car waiting to intercept Fiero outside of Ira. The patrol car was parked at an angle, with its lights facing the oncoming vehicles. The Fiero vehicle swerved toward the patrol car, causing Plock to back into the ditch to avoid a collision.
In other activity, police arrested a 28-year-old male for driving while intoxicated and another male, age unknown, for public intoxication at 2:28 p.m. Friday in the 2500 block of Ave. M. Officers also arrested an 18-year-old male for public intoxication at 2:13 a.m. Saturday in the 1900 block of 24th St. All three subjects were transported to the county jail.
At 10:02 Friday, a female subject came to the police department to file Class C assault charges against another female. Then, at 2:45 p.m., the female who had been charged in the earlier report filed charges against the first complainant.
Officers took another report for Class C assault following a family disturbance at 8:40 p.m. in the 500 block of 34th St. And at 1:16 a.m. Saturday, officers filed a report of family violence after responding to a call in the 3300 block of Ave. C.

Border health issue always intertwined

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — A joint environmental-health agency to coordinate binational efforts between the United States and Mexico is the best way to solve the problems that have plagued both nations, officials said Friday.

U.S. Health officials attending the Third Annual Border Health Conference say the need to address those problems has never been as crucial as it is now, when the nation is on the verge of building a free trade agreement with Mexico and Canada.

"We can't build a bright future on top of a cesspool," said Dr. Sam Nixon, president of the Texas Medical Association.

"We can't just open up the border and this free trade agreement and not express concern about the people," Nixon said.

Officials noted that while the proposed free trade agreement has brought attention to border health issues, the ongoing problems must be addressed regardless of the pact.

"We've got to clean up the present situation and we have to build for the next step and prepare for the future," Nixon said.

The health conference is an attempt to combine the knowledge of physicians, public health officials, civic leaders and elected officials to formulate plans for a border cleanup.

Nixon said conference participants have three goals: to draft legislation for the proposed joint health agency; discuss the impact of the free trade agreement from a health care perspective; and to designate a research agenda and identify funding sources.

Three separate committees will meet Saturday morning to formulate "concrete plans" in each of those areas, said Catherine Edwards, a member of the TMA and one of the conference coordinators.

The legislation for the border health agency, which officials hope will bring together existing health and environment efforts, is expected to be ready for introduction next year, Ms. Edwards said.

A successful effort hinges on addressing all the issues simultaneously and progressing toward solutions on parallel tracks, officials say.

Yale okays Dylan concert

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Bob Dylan fans know how to behave at a concert, Yale officials say, so they're not afraid to let them fill the university's stately Woolsey Hall for a show next month by the veteran rocker.

Dylan's Nov. 16 concert will be the first major rock show in nearly a decade to play Woolsey, which is home to the Yale Symphony Orchestra. The Irish rock group U2 performed there in 1982.

Death sentence assessed in slaying of Houston couple

HOUSTON (AP) — As the jury deliberated his punishment for the execution-style slayings of a couple in their southeast Houston home last year, an unrestrained Daryl Keith Wheatfall approached and threatened prosecutor Joan Huffman.

A short time later on Friday, the jury recommended death by injection for Wheatfall, a 25-year-old habitual criminal, and State District Judge Bill Harmon pronounced the sentence.

Four days earlier, the same jury found Wheatfall guilty of the Dec. 13, 1990, killings of James Fitzgerald, 62, and his invalid wife, L.B. Fitzgerald, 67. The couple's son, James Jr., was wounded in the attack.

Wheatfall maintained his innocence throughout the 11½-week-old trial, during which he attributed his criminal record to a stressed, turmoil-filled childhood in a broken home.

Ms. Huffman had described Wheatfall as impulsive, aggressive, violent and fearless, "an absolutely awesome threat to society."

"Daryl Wheatfall is mean, and he's been mean for a long time," she said. "Daryl Wheatfall let loose into the hands of society would be a grave mistake."

Terrell pleaded guilty to murder and agreed to testify in Wheatfall's case in exchange for a 50-year prison sentence, Ms. Huffman said.

Ms. Huffman said the murders occurred the night Wheatfall's friend, Mack Terrell, lent $50 to an intoxicated Fitzgerald to pay a prostitute.

Sen. Kennedy takes responsibility for his private shortcomings

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, whose popularity has been shaken by his connection to a rape case and the rancor of the Clarence Thomas hearings, appealed for understanding Friday as he acknowledged "faults in the conduct of my private life."

"I am painfully aware that the criticism directed at me in recent months involves far more than honest disagreement with my positions or the usual criticism from the far right," Kennedy said in the nationally televised speech.

"It also involves the disappointment of friends and many others who rely on me to fight the good fight."

Kennedy did not directly mention the Palm Beach, Fla., rape charge against his nephew, which followed a late-night bar visit initiated by the senator. His connection to that case hung over him during the Senate Judiciary Committee hearings into sexual harassment allegations against Thomas, the Supreme Court nominee.

"I recognize my own shortcomings," he said. "I realize that I alone am responsible for them, and I am the one who must confront them."

The speech brought recollections of another 22 years ago, when Kennedy made a nationally televised address to explain his conduct in the 1969 Chappaquiddick car accident in which he drove off a bridge and Mary Jo Kopechne drowned.

For 29 years, Kennedy has retained a firm grip on his Senate seat, but the Palm Beach case raised again the specter of Chappaquiddick.

Kennedy has acknowledged that he woke up his son, Patrick Kennedy, and his nephew, William Kennedy Smith, to go drinking over the Easter weekend while staying at the family estate in Palm Beach. A woman they met at a bar alleges she was raped by Smith later at the family compound.

During the Thomas hearings, Kennedy battled with Senate colleagues who hinted that the senior senator from Massachusetts was in no position to judge Thomas on charges of sexual harassment.

"Some of the anger of recent days, the powerful public reaction to the final phase of the Thomas hearings, reflects the pain of a new idea still being born," Kennedy said.

There are signs that Kennedy's image has suffered. A Gallup Poll taken after the Thomas hearings showed Kennedy with a 54 percent unfavorable rating, which was almost twice the negative rating of any other Judiciary Committee member. He received a 22 percent favorable rating.

Kennedy made his speech at the celebration of the 25th anniversary of the Institute of Politics at the John F. Kennedy School of Government, named after his brother, the late president.

"Unlike my brothers, I have been given length of years and time," Kennedy said. "And as I approach my 60th birthday, I am determined to give all that I have to advance the causes for which I have stood for almost a third of a century."

Kennedy has said that he will seek re-election to his seat in 1994 and he said he will continue to fight for the issues that have made him a leading voice for liberal causes.

He said "individual faults and frailties are no excuse to give in."

The senator helped craft a compromise version of a civil rights bill that was accepted by the Bush administration Friday, ending a two-year stalemate.

"It's the polling that suggests to him that once again, he needs another catharsis," state Sen. Robert Havern said.

During an emotional three-day funeral among the Surma people of southwestern Ethiopia, milk is poured into the corpse's ears, says National Geographic.

Scurry County Folks

By Shirley A. Gorman

Since August of this year, Emma Skold has experienced a number of "firsts," not the least of which was her first trip to the United States.

Currently a senior at Snyder High School, Emma, who is from Sweden, is living with Bruce and Trish Burdett and their children, Shannon and Joshua. Her year-long stay has been arranged through the American Intercultural Student Exchange (AISE) program.

Since arriving in Snyder in August, Emma has been introduced to many new things. She recently attended her first football game and homecoming and received her first mum.

Other new experiences have included attending a wedding in Houston, eating Mexican food, attending a rodeo, shopping at the Galleria in Houston, water skiing and riding "The Bullet."

Emma, who plays volleyball at SHS, recently said she felt at home in Snyder because it is about the same size as her hometown in Sweden. She also played volleyball in her native country.

Though she has only been in Snyder a few months, Emma has already noted some differences between American and Swedish high schools.

For instance, Swedish students must finish 13 years before graduating. She will have two more years when she returns home at the end of this current school year.

Swedish students do not attend the same classes everyday and they are allowed breaks between classes. Students don't have six weeks tests, but teachers and students together plan tests which students take. The tests can take as long as three hours.

Swedish students also eat lunch on campus.

EXTENDED FAMILY — Emma Skold, center, one of Snyder's foreign exchange students, is living with Bruce and Trish Burdett and their children, Shannon and Joshua, while she attends high school during the 1991-92 school year. Her extended stay in Snyder has been arranged through the American Intercultural

In Sweden, Emma has chosen courses such as science, history, the technical line of high school English, and math as well as specialized classes.

Student Exchange (AISE) program. They are shown here looking at some of Emma's books about Sweden and a world map. Mrs. Burdett has been associated with AISE for several years and is currently serving as the area representative for the organization. (SDN Staff Photo)

Emma hasn't made any specific plans for after high school, but she did say she chose the technical field because it has a wide variety of job opportunities. She enjoys photography, cooking, drawing and traveling. In recent years, Emma has visited other countries, including Greece (twice), Turkey, Denmark and Finland."

Prior to arriving in America, Emma received some idea of what to expect from studying world history and talking to a friend of her sister who had been a foreign exchange student.

Before leaving the U.S., Emma will be able to participate in one of two AISE sponsored trips to either Washington D.C. or Disney World in Orlando, Fla.

Tentative plans for the Burdett family include skiing during the Christmas holidays and visiting the Grand Canyon during Spring Break.

Emma said she chose to come to the U.S. because she wanted to learn how Americans live. After visiting several countries in past years, she said "People are basically the same wherever you go."

The Burdetts chose Emma from about 30 applications because they were impressed with her comments and goals. Emma explained how important it was for her to get acquainted with America and its people. She wanted to do as much as she could.

She had also listed all the school activities in which she was participating. The Burdetts made their choice in February of this year and during the ensuing months they and Emma exchanged "long, newsy letters."

As a result, they became acquainted before they actually met several months later.

"We lucked out," Mrs. Burdett said. "We got the best first."

Emma hasn't experienced any homesickness yet, but Mrs. Burdett said that most foreign exchange students experience "highs and lows" during their stay. Being homesick is normal but it passes.

Emma's father, a military officer, and her mother, a third grade teacher, approved of her plan to come to the U.S. Her father was especially pleased because he had always wanted to be a foreign exchange student but never had the opportunity.

She also has a sister who is 20. The Burdetts first became involved with AISE while living in Houston. As an AISE volunteer, Mrs. Burdett took applications from prospective host families. In addition, she also interviewed applicants and made every effort to match the right family with the right student.

While still living in Houston, Mrs. Burdett placed a student from Brazier but they were transferred to Snyder (some 14 months ago) just before she arrived in the U.S. They did, however, get to meet the student at a later date.

She considers her AISE work as an "incredible experience" because of all the people she gets to meet. She currently is serving as the AISE representative for Snyder and the surrounding area.

Mrs. Burdett said that about 3,000 AISE students are living in the U.S. at this time, but that more host families are needed.

Even though the Burdetts don't have teenagers of their own, they wanted to be a host family because, they said, "We have always wanted to open the door for others."

Though they have two small children of their own, they had discussed both adoption and foster parent possibilities before they chose becoming a host family.

The Burdetts also were motivated because they too had wanted to live in other countries when younger but it had never worked out for them.

Burdett is employed at SACROC.

Couple marries in evening at formal church ceremony

Jodie Guyneth Hayler became the bride of Stephen Kirk Taylor in a candlelight ceremony at 7 p.m. on Oct. 12 at Victory Baptist Church. Jerry Cline officiated the double ring rites.

Parents of the bride are Tony Hayley of Snyder and Jan Hayley of San Antonio. The groom's parents are Ronnie and Barbra Alexander of Kermit.

Vows were promised before an altar decorated with a 15-taper, rainbow candlelabrum.

The wedding music included vocalist Leah Sealy of Big Spring singing "Somewhere in the World Today," and Mandy Alexander of Kermit, sister of the groom, singing "Only God Could Love You More." They were accompanied by pianist Elaine Githens.

The bride's father gave her in marriage as she was attired in a tiered gown of Chantilly lace over satin accented by a cathedral length train and veil. She carried a cascading bouquet of roses and carnations interspersed with teal baby's breath, adorned with ribbons of white and teal, tied in love knots.

In keeping with tradition, for something old was her grandmother's handkerchief worn in her garter; something new was her dress; something borrowed was her pearl necklace and earrings borrowed from her aunt; something blue was her garter. She also carried pennies in her shoe minted in the couple's birth years.

Maid of honor, Misty Murphy wore a tea length, teal dress and carried a single, long stemmed white rose tied with teal ribbon.

Flower girl was Jamie Hayley, sister of the bride and ring bearer was Adam Alexander of Kermit, brother of the groom.

Serving as best man was Bryan Sawyer and ushers were Jerry Hayley of Turpin, Okla., brother of the bride, and Ronnie Alexander of Kermit, brother of the groom.

The groom wore a full dress tuxedo with a teal tie and cummerbund. Sawyer also wore a tuxedo and accessories like the groom. They wore white rose boutonnières adorned with baby's breath.

Rachel Morgan registered guests at a table decorated with the guest book, heart shaped pins and baskets holding rice bags.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church's fellowship hall. The bride's table was covered with a teal cloth overlaid with white lace. Placed at one end of the table were the bride's and groom's baby pictures. Cake, fruits and nuts were served by Elaine Githens and Bea Cline.

The groom's table, covered with a black tablecloth, held a traditional German chocolate cake, made by the groom's aunt, Shirley Cooper. His baby pictures were displayed. Mrs. Cooper also served the cake and coffee.

Out-of-town guests were from Kermit, Big Spring, San Antonio, Turpin, Okla., and Lubbock.

Penwomen travel to Rotan

Scurry County Penwomen met in the home of Schooler-Sumakawa in Rotan for their October meeting. Vice president Sherry Bryant presided and Christine Killgo gave the invocation.

Schooler and Berthe Warren announced that they have organized an Independent Writer's Group in their area. It will meet every Tuesday at 6:45 p.m. and they invite all persons interested in writing.

Warren composed the lyrics to a song, "The Contest," and Cindy Nix arranged the score. Betty Boyd, Bryant, Schooler-Sumakawa and Warren received the Golden Poet's Award for 1991 from the World Day of Poetry.

Bryant presented the program on "Black Poetry," stating that formal or written aspect of the poetic tradition concerning Black poetry reaches back to the 18th Century and contains a substantial body of composition which at best equal of much of the other American poetry of the period.

"Aside from the formal or written aspect, is the other side of tradition—the unwritten songs, hymns and the speech of Black slaves using their talents in the abolitionist cause. Another group wrote in dialect and took for subject matter the lives of the common folk," said Bryant.

She noted that black music represents the most fluid body of black songs — spirituals, shouts, jubilees, gospel songs, field cries, blues, pop songs, and in addition jazz, and now — jazz music by black composers who draw upon black musical tradition.

R. T. Kerlin, author of "Negro Poets and Their Poems" says "There is nothing more precious in English literature than this crude old poetry of the people."

She concluded by reading poems from the book, "Poetry of Life," by Arnold Aboss; "Heritage," by Gwendolyn B. Bennett; and "Saturday's Child," by Countee Cullen.

During the reading session, members read their own works. Dorothy Cox read "For Only a Moment;" Schooler read an excerpt from her story, "The Curses;" Warren read "I Hate to Hoe," and "Energy;" Estelene Murphy read "The Rain Will Go Away;" and Garnet Quiett read "A Halloween Night," and "Thoreau."

Also, Boyd read her poems, "Icobod Crane," and "Thoughts," and Bryant read "Broken Hearts and Mended Pieces."

The door prize was won by Murphy. Mary Westmoreland gave the words of encouragement relating her interpretation of influences of two women: Esther, who did much good, while Madelene O'Hare represents how one person can cause evil.

The group will meet on Nov. 20 in the home of Mrs. Westmoreland and visitors are welcome.

The main characteristics used in handwriting analysis are flow of line, size of letters, angle of letters and letter form," she concluded. She then analyzed club members' handwriting.

Hostesses were Martha Knowles and Claudia Fields. The next meeting will be Nov. 5.

Just before the start of the Summer Nationals, the concluding rounds of the Grand National Teams were played. Each district of the American Contract Bridge League had run qualifying events to pick its team for the final stage.

This year's winners were Steve Garner, Jerry Goldfein, Peter Nagy, Jack Oest, Jerry Robbins and Howard Weinstein, all from the Chicago area. They are the first qualifiers for the 1993 World Championship Trials.

Garner, sitting West, judged the defense well on today's deal. If you wish to test yourself, cover the South and East cards in the diagram. Against three no-trump, you lead the spade three: four, nine, queen. Declarer plays a diamond to the ace and a diamond back to the jack and your queen, partner following. What do you lead at trick four?

Garner could see that declarer had two spade and three diamond tricks for sure. Also Garner's weak club holding didn't bode well for the defense, declarer being marked with some length in the suit after denying a major in reply to North's Stayman inquiry. It looked as though the heart suit offered the only hope, so Garner switched to the ace and another heart. Partner had the perfect holding, and the contract was defeated by two tricks.

At the other table, the Chicago pair stopped in one no-trump. The defense didn't switch to hearts, so the declarer won nine tricks: two spades, three diamonds and four clubs.

Limit backers and Democrats at odds

AUSTIN (AP) — The state Democratic Party chairman says his party is just doing its job in considering new rules that drew complaints from a group seeking to limit terms of Texas politicians.

"The state party is neither supporting nor endorsing term limits, but Democrats do have a legitimate right and responsibility to make sure that matters of party policy are determined by members of the party," said Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle.

Texans for Term Limitations, a Houston-based bipartisan group, announced last week that it was beginning a petition drive to place a non-binding term limit referendum on both the Democratic and Republican primary ballots.

The group favors limiting most elected officials to six to eight years in a single office. Texans would be limited to 12 years in the U.S. Senate under their plan.

The organizers are trying to collect signatures of 60,000 Republicans and 90,000 Democrats to put the question on both party ballots. The outcome would carry no legal weight. The number of signatures required is a percentage of votes cast in each party's last gubernatorial primary.

But the State Democratic Executive Committee is scheduled to consider a rules change Saturday that the term limit group said would "rob" Democrats of a chance to vote on the term limit referendum.

"This is an attempt to place a roadblock in the grassroots drive toward term limits," said Jim Callaway, a veteran Democratic fundraiser and co-chairman of the term limit group. The other co-chairman is Republican Rob Mosbacher, who lost last year's lieutenant governor's race to Democrat Bob Bullock.

Ed Martin, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party, said the proposal is simply designed to make sure Democrats are involved in placing questions on their own ballot.

"We don't mind the people speaking. But the facts, a referendum that establishes a Democratic Party position on an issue should involve Democrats from the start to the finish," Martin said.

Richards puts 6 on panel

AUSTIN (AP) — Six people have been named to the new board that will oversee the Texas Workers' Compensation Insurance Fund.

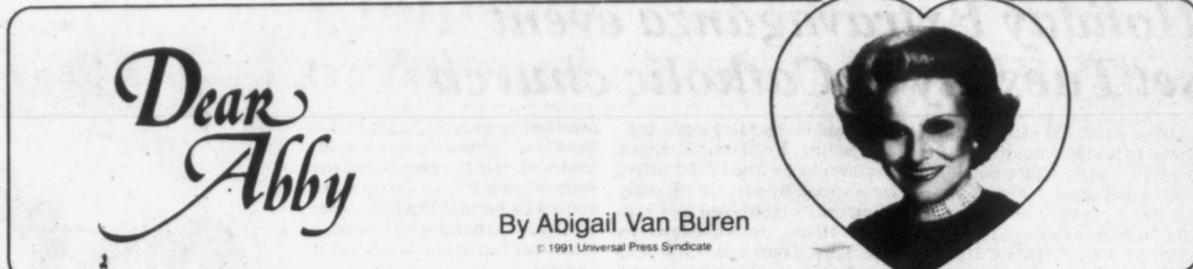

The panel was created by the Legislature to direct the fund which is to provide affordable workers' compensation insurance to Texas employers. The fund is to be capitalized by $300 million in revenue bonds.

"This board has a vital role to play in the state's effort to get a handle on the skyrocketing cost of workers' comp insurance in Texas," Gov. Ann Richards said in making the appointments.

"The Workers' Compensation Insurance Fund will be a provider of affordable insurance to many of the small employers in the state," she said.

Three more members of the nine-member board remain to be appointed, said Bill Cryer, the governor's press secretary.

Appointed Thursday were: Ben Munson, 49, mayor of Denison; Irma E. Guzman Flores, 42, San Antonio; Lowell Lebermann, 52, Austin; Stephen Van Sadler, 51, Cleveland; Lloyd E. Moss, 55, Cleburne; Glenn Biggs, 58, San Antonio.

Streamlined Postal Service Slows Down Mail at Home

DEAR ABBY: Sometimes I think that the U.S. Postal Service is its own worst enemy. They came out with a five-digit ZIP code, which the public finally accepted (after a lot of grumbling). But right on top of that, they reduced the state abbreviations to only two characters, which makes them very, very confusing. And now, four more ZIP code digits have been added!

Abby, ask people who don't come from these nine states the following questions:

Is "MA" Maine, Maryland or Massachusetts?

Is "NE" Nevada or Nebraska?

Is "AL" Alaska or Alabama?

Is "MS" Mississippi or Missouri?

I have recently had five mailings returned by the U.S. Postal Service because the address on the envelope had no apartment number on it. If the people who gave me their address did not include an apartment number, I have to address their mail as I see it. Why put the onus on me?

People tend to ignore decisions they feel are wrong and that they had no choice in making. Maybe they hope that the rules will be modified.

HOPEFUL
IN DAYTONA BEACH

DEAR HOPEFUL: The Postal Service now uses computers to speed up mail delivery. However, the machines that scan and sort the envelopes cannot decipher them properly unless they are coded with the new two-letter abbreviations. Mail addressed using the old familiar abbreviations is automatically shunted aside to be handled by postal employees — which slows the process.

If you have forgotten the new abbreviations for each state, a pamphlet listing them is available at your local post office. Keep it handy, and you'll be amazed at how quickly you will learn the new system.

DEAR ABBY: You ran a piece about the benefits of hugging. I believe it was in 1988. Will you please run it again?

B. REAVES, WINTERVILLE, N.C.

DEAR B.R.: Here it is:

HUGGING

Hugging is healthy: It helps our body's immune system, it keeps you healthier, it cures depression, it reduces stress, it induces sleep, it's invigorating, it's rejuvenating, it has no unpleasant side effects, and hugging is nothing less than a miracle drug.

Hugging is all natural: It is organic, naturally sweet, no pesticides, no preservatives, no artificial ingredients and 100 percent wholesome.

Hugging is practically perfect: There are no movable parts, no batteries to wear out, no periodic checkups, low energy consumption, high energy yield, inflation-proof, non-fattening, no monthly payments, no insurance requirements, theft-proof, non-taxable, non-polluting and, of course, fully returnable.

DEAR ABBY: My wife's first cousin died several years ago, but my wife continues to invite this cousin's husband and his two single adult children to our home every Thanksgiving and Passover. We don't hear from these people throughout the year — not even a telephone call, yet they continue to accept our invitations. Moreover, they leave immediately after dinner. (Last Thanksgiving, after accepting our invitation, the young man didn't show up and didn't cancel.)

Although we enjoy their company during the brief time they are with us, I think we should rid ourselves of this "obligation" that is taken for granted and never reciprocated. I would prefer inviting other friends and family members who would appreciate spending the holidays with us.

My wife and I have had a difference of opinion about this for years. Should we continue to invite these people? If we decide not to, I think we should give them plenty of notice so they can make other plans. Incidentally, we always have to leave messages on their answering machine — then wait until they get back to us at their convenience. We await your advice.

N.J.G. IN WELLESLEY, MASS.

DEAR N.J.G.: Talk turkey: Tell them now that you have decided to revise your guest list for Thanksgiving and Passover, so from now on they are free to make other plans for those special holidays because you have.

DEAR ABBY: We relished the letter from Krista and Rick Toberio of San Clemente that appeared in your column in the San Francisco Chronicle. They were the couple who woke up after their wedding night and discovered they had been sleeping in the wrong condominium. Their story took me back — 52 years — to our own honeymoon in the midst of the Great Depression.

My husband and I had $14.28 between us to spend on our honeymoon. Fortunately, gasoline was only 10 cents a gallon. My husband borrowed a trailer, barely big enough for two; so we went camping — the first time ever for me. Luckily, he knew how to cook — for I'd never learned a thing about that gentle, necessary art, nor had I the least understanding about what camping entailed!

Somehow, we stretched those precious dollars and had a glorious weekend during which I got a terrible sunburn and was "untouchable" for a week. We bathed out of a dishpan, relieved ourselves in holes he dug for the purpose, and loved each other half to distraction — as we still do.

The Great Depression wasn't all bad, for if we could have honeymooned in style at a ritzy hotel, we would have missed that experience.

We are in our late 70s now and don't camp much, although my husband takes our grandchildren camping, while my old bones stay at home with the cat for company.

STILL IN LOVE IN ALBION, CALIF.

DEAR STILL: Thank you for sharing that precious memory. When you're in love, a lumpy mattress can be a bed of roses — and camping out is better than a suite at the Ritz.

What teenagers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." Terms upheld for Louisiana guardsmen

FORT POLK, La. (AP) — Army commanders have upheld the prison sentences of two Louisiana National Guard members convicted of plotting an unsuccessful mass desertion from Fort Hood, Texas, where their unit was training for the Persian Gulf War, Fort Polk officials said Thursday.

Another mandatory review upheld a fine and rank demotion for a third guardsman convicted on lesser charges, officials said.

The soldiers were part of the 850-member 3rd Battalion, 156th Infantry (Mechanized) which activated at Fort Polk in late November with Operation Desert Shield. The battalion moved to Fort Hood in Central Texas for combat training.

Sgt. Robert Pete, 24, and Spec. Dwayne Brown, 19, both of Lake Charles, were convicted in April of conspiring to strike, unlawfully attempting to organize a strike and soliciting soldiers to strike.

The two guardsmen were accused of plotting to illegally leave Fort Hood on Feb. 7 and return to Lake Charles to expose alleged improper training conditions at the huge Texas facility.

Pete was given a six-year prison sentence, and Brown was sentenced to one year in prison. Both were dishonorably discharged, ordered to forfeit all military pay and benefits and demoted to the Army's lowest rank.

Fort Polk commander Maj.

Gen. William Crouch approved Pete's conviction on Oct. 11. The commander has power to reduce a sentence he finds unfair or inequitable.

Brown's conviction was approved Oct. 3 by Col. R.S. Ballagh, who was acting in Crouch's absence.

Another Lake Charles guardsman, Spec. Derrick Guidry, 24, was convicted of disrespect toward a commissioned superior officer, fined $500 and reduced in rank to private first class. He was acquitted on charges of conspiring to strike, attempting to organize a strike and soliciting other soldiers to strike.

Guidry's conviction was approved by Brig. Gen. John Thompson in the absence of Crouch.

At court martials for the three soldiers, witnesses, and prosecutors portrayed Guidry as the ringleader of a five-day plot to charter buses from Fort Hood to Lake Charles to hold a protest news conference. The trip was spoiled when officers learned of the plans and military police arrested guardsmen as they tried to leave their barracks.

Following their convictions, Pete and Brown were ordered to immediately begin serving their sentences at the Vernon Parish Jail until Fort Polk's commanding general reviewed their cases. They will now be moved to a military prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Pete's and Brown's cases will be automatically examined by the Army Court of Military Review. A review of Guidry's case is optional. The guardsmen also may appeal their convictions to another military court and the U.S. Supreme Court.

81 persons arrested in 'hot check' raid

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — A hot check raid in three South Plains counties resulted in the arrests of 81 bad check suspects, authorities said.

Lawmen in Lubbock, Floyd and Hale counties executed most of the arrests around 5 a.m. Thursday, getting many of the suspects out of bed, said Lubbock County Criminal District Attorney Travis Ware.

"These are not people who have made a mistake in their checkbook addition," Ware said.

Hot check suspects have 10 days after being notified of bad checks to make good on the checks, Ware said. The district attorney's office sends an additional courtesy notice, Ware said.

Criminal charges involved in passing bad checks range from misdemeanor to felony depending on the amount of the check.

School superintendent says more metal detectors needed

DALLAS (AP) — Superintendent Marvin Edwards is pushing for more random locker searches and increased use of walk-through metal detectors at Dallas schools following the shooting death of a 15-year-old high school student.

But tighter security measures by the Dallas Independent School District may not change what one trustee called a trend toward student violence.

"If we can avenge his death by doing something, then maybe his death will not be in vain," Yvonne Ewell, a DISD board member, said Thursday.

Freshman Andrew "Pudgy" Gaston was killed Wednesday outside the front entrance of A. Maceo Smith High School. He and others had chased a group of youths from the building when he was shot in the face.

Drumestic Contreal Brown, an 18-year-old Smith dropout, was being held Friday at Lew Sterrett Justice Center in lieu of $50,000 bond in Gaston's shooting death. It was the second shooting death at a Dallas school in five years.

Edwards, who issued a list of proposed changes in school security earlier in the day, said principals have been told to increase the number of locker searches.

At Smith High, where students were ordered to pass through metal detectors the day after the shooting, staff members will search lockers each week for the rest of the school year, Edwards said.

Each secondary school also will issue identification cards to students and staff members, he said. Smith and some other high schools already were using such badges.

Chad Woolery, deputy superintendent, said the number of new walk-through detectors that will be purchased by DISD has not yet been determined. School officials also have used hand-held detectors.

One doctor tells of patients she helped die

by The Associated Press

The doctor had cared for the patient four years. And when his suffering became so overwhelming that he wanted to die, she understood. She might have administered the medication, had he asked.

She is thankful he never did. "Of all the situations I have dealt with, this is one of the few, I think, where I could have gone out there and done it," she said. "I could sense how miserable this patient was. He had said from the beginning he might want it this way."

He had a relative, a health provider with access to medication that he could use to commit suicide. The relative was ready to help. The whole family had watched their loved one's life ebb away, week after week. "He said, 'I think I'm at the point where I'm not getting any better,'" the doctor said. "And I said, 'I think you're right.' And he got tears in his eyes, and he said, 'I think I'll take care of things.' And I got tears in my eyes and said, 'I understand. If there was anything to do we haven't done, I'd tell you.

But I think you see things correctly."

She talked to the relative and confirmed the dosage that would cause the heart to stop beating in a matter of seconds or minutes. She recommended a double dose of sleeping medication to avoid any discomfort. "Things went very smoothly," she said.

She can speak freely if no one knows her name, if they know only that she is a doctor caring for people with HIV, the AIDS virus, in some nameless American city. She does not fear prosecution herself, only that her patients might be scrutinized. They don't need the judgments of others; what they need most, it seems, is to know that their doctor is being honest with them, that they will not suffer needlessly, that their pain will be relieved, that they will not be abandoned at the end.

The idea of physician-assisted suicide makes her distinctly uncomfortable; she has never administered the medication herself, and is unsure she could. She knows that a suicide wish might be depression talking.

It is an issue that has come up for her at least once a month in the years she has cared for people infected with HIV.

She remembers a patient who said to her, a year before his health began to deteriorate, that if life became unbearable he would take matters into his own hands.

"And he asked me, 'What do you think about that?' And I gave him my stock answer, which is, 'It's very understandable you feel that way, the issue makes me uncomfortable, and I'm glad we're talking about it.'"

She promised him that if it ever got to the point where treatment was prolonging his suffering rather than benefiting his life, she would tell him.

"I told him that if he wished to have the option, I would write a prescription he could use. And if he was thinking of using it, I wanted him to let me know, as a kind of reality check."

"I believe you and trust you," the patient told her, "but I really would like to have this in my hands now."

She wrote him a prescription, and four or five months later she gave him another so he would have enough to kill himself.

Dr. Gott By Peter Gott, M.D.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

Being basically unimaginative, physicians have traditionally accepted causes of obesity that were purposely vague: "exogenous" (voluntarily eating too much) and "endogenous" (low metabolic rate and genetic factors).

Recent studies have cast doubt on such overly facile definitions. Obesity is now viewed as a symptom stemming from a complex collection of disorders, involving both our environment and our inner chemistry. That is, whether we are thin or fat depends on several factors, including eating patterns, inheritance, glandular imbalances and adipose cell proliferation. This last factor, which is newly identified, has excited nutritionists because it provides a new avenue for understanding obesity.

Adipocytes are the cells that become fatty tissue in the body. By adolescence, each of us has a set number of them (about 30 billion). These cells normally increase in size, not in number, as we gain weight. However, if overeating becomes a chronic pattern, with no let-up, adipocytes irreversibly proliferate. In most overweight persons, the adipocytes double in size; however, in massively ("morbidly") obese patients, the cells increase in number, up to about 120 billion. With so many fat-containing cells, there are limits to the weight loss that can be maintained with diet alone.

Excessive proliferation of adipocytes around the hips, thighs and buttocks — seen principally in women — is not associated with the health consequences (such as heart disease, diabetes and hypertension) that invariably accompany generalized obesity. Nonetheless, this distribution of weight is frequently resistant to weight reduction with standard methods, such as dieting. Obviously, the answer to adipose cell proliferation is to avoid over-eating at a young age, because such overindulgence permanently increases the number of adipocytes.

In addition, the pattern of eating is important. Temporary food deprivation leads to compensatory, rebound over-eating, as the body attempts to retain calories and make sense out of wide dietary fluctuations. Further, short periods of starvation reduce the metabolic rate. Thus, people who skip meals are inviting a double-whammy: Not only will they subsequently eat more, but the calories are more likely to be deposited as fat than burned for energy.

Social factors also lead to obesity. Recreational eating, the cultural acceptance of calorie-rich foods (and alcohol), and sedentary lifestyles contribute to excessive weight gain. Rarer causes of obesity include medicines (such as cortisone, birth control pills and anti-depressants), polycystic ovaries, growth hormone deficiency, compulsive eating disorders (from emotional maladjustment) and habituation to high-calorie cola drinks.

Most experts agree that once the unusual causes of obesity have been investigated (and discarded), each patient must be placed on an individualized diet that he or she feels comfortable following. Dietary education, behavior modification and increased exercise are fundamental to a successful weight-loss program. Refractory cases may have to be referred to appropriate specialists for liposuction (vacuum removal of adipose tissue) or gastroplasty (surgery to reduce the size of the stomach).

Nutrition authorities warn against crash dieting because of rebound overeating; this technique is unsuitable for long-term use and can be unhealthy. Similarly, diet pills and commercial diets have been shown to be ineffective for long-term weight control; some are hazardous to health.

In summary, there is simply no quick and easy way to lose weight AND keep it off. The secret to success, for most dieters, is motivation and individualized meal planning. To be most effective, this approach should ideally begin at or near puberty (for people who exhibit weight problems at an early age) or at the first sign of uncontrolled weight gain. It's a lot easier to lose 10 or 20 pounds than it is to deal with a serious weight condition that has been present for years.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Six years ago I underwent right thyroid lobectomy surgery and have experienced hot flashes night and day since. I'm 72 years old and my doctor says I'm too old for hot flashes, yet they remain. What's happened to me? I'm concerned and afraid to go back to my doctor because he is emphatic and unyielding.

DEAR READER: Although you're "too old for hot flashes," you are having them. Therefore, the problem isn't going to go away merely because your physician believes you shouldn't have hot flashes. In my view, his thinking is a little grandiose.

Your previous thyroid surgery is an unlikely cause for hot flashes; even so, you should have blood tests to check out your thyroid gland. It's possible that either underproduction or overproduction of thyroid hormone could lead to metabolic imbalances and, hence, to vascular instability. Ask your surgeon about this.

If your thyroid tests are normal, I'd advise a consultation with a gynecologist. Your doctor notwithstanding, I have seen women in their 60s and 70s who suddenly developed some symptoms of menopause, although they had uneventfully completed the change of life years before. Estrogen therapy usually solves the problem.

Incidentally, you don't have to be intimidated by an "emphatic and unyielding" physician. Both these qualities can be very positive in moderation for a good practitioner. But it sounds to me as though these traits have become liabilities for your doctor. I say this because patients need to feel free to discuss issues openly with their doctors. When personality characteristics — such as rigidity, authoritarianism, inattentiveness and arrogance — get in the way, doctors no longer function as they should. Then, patients need to remind them of who is serving whom.

For example, I think you could appropriately address the issue with your doctor as follows: "Doctor — I have a lot of faith in your abilities and judgment. However, sometimes you dismiss my complaints and don't seem to take me seriously. I am not comfortable about this, as it interferes with the good relationship we've had for years. For instance, how do we go about getting to the bottom of my hot flashes?"

If he or she is a good doctor, he will take the hint and listen to you. If, on the other hand, you get the same old runaround, change physicians.

To give you further information, I am sending you free copies of my Health Reports "Menopause" and "Choosing a Physician." Other readers who would like copies should send $1.25 for each report plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title(s).

Gulf is an important resource which must be protected

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The Gulf of Mexico's status as one of the nation's "most important assets" is threatened by mounting environmental problems, officials say.

The Gulf, the nation's longest international boundary, is a major source of food and oil and also supports countless varieties of birds and fishes.

However, neglect and mismanagement have already caused damage and the Gulf is ripe for a catastrophe if its environment is not protected, said John Lambeth, a member of the Citizens Advisory Committee for the federal Gulf of Mexico Program.

"And it's showing some real, real major signs of problems," Lambeth said Thursday.

The advisory committee — made up of representatives from Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas — gathers environmental information and makes recommendations to the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

Lambeth, chairman of the Mississippi delegation, said the committee has identified many threats that the Gulf is facing now or may face in the future.

"Marine debris is the most visible," said Lambeth. "A lack of fresh water inflow, ships dumping garbage and toxic dumping constitute other threats, he said.

"We just didn't know how bad off it is," he said. "We're identifying those problems now."

Lambeth was one of several committee members attending a Gulf program conference scheduled through Saturday in Brownsville.

The committee will review state reports, budget matters and risk analyses.

The meeting opened Thursday with a forum featuring several local and state officials.

Texas Land Commissioner Gary Mauro, one of the most prominent Gulf advocates, echoed many of Lambeth's sentiments.

The Gulf provides economic opportunities and can continue to flourish but it has been polluted and misused in the past, Mauro said.

There is sure to be a lot of discussion about Proposition 11 on the ballot for the Nov. 5 election.

This is the amendment, of course, that would authorize a lottery in Texas.

Those for a lottery say "What the heck, it doesn't hurt anyone and it will provide some extra money for the state and if it bothers you, just don't buy a ticket."

Those against it say "It's gambling and the government shouldn't be in the gambling business, and poor people will buy lottery tickets instead of food and their families will go hungry, and it will turn otherwise decent people into beggars and prostitutes."

I believe we can resolve some of the problems associated with a lottery. I've got a few suggestions for the printing of lottery tickets, which I submit to state officials for their consideration.

—Aluminumize them. Print the numbers on rectangular (or whatever) shapes of aluminum. That way, when the number is announced on the radio all the losers can toss 'em out the car window alongside the beer cans for poor folks to pick up and recycle.

—Put them on edible products. Print the numbers on the plastic bags covering loaves of bread. That way, lotto addicts might be broke, but their families won't starve. Since bread and other food companies would quarrel over the rights to this, the state could use a different product for each game. It would give a whole new meaning to "Bringing home the bacon."

—Lotto-License. Get a bargain: a license plate and a lotto number in one. Issued by the state for $250.

Despite these sure-fire ideas, I still haven't made up my mind on the lottery. There are pros and cons.

Top three reasons I may vote against the lottery:

1. Everywhere we look, in every magazine we read, hundreds of times daily on the television and radio, we're going to be hammered with ads for little pamphlets entitled "How To Beat The Lotto Game" by I. Wanna Bunch.

2. Some guy is going to write a book about how he won the lottery; some idiot is going to write a book about how she found a winning lottery ticket in a recipe book for Million Dollar Fudge; and some comedian is going to go on a talk show and tell how her life was scarred because her parents were lotto-junkies.

3. My ex-wife might win.

Top three reasons I may vote for the lottery:

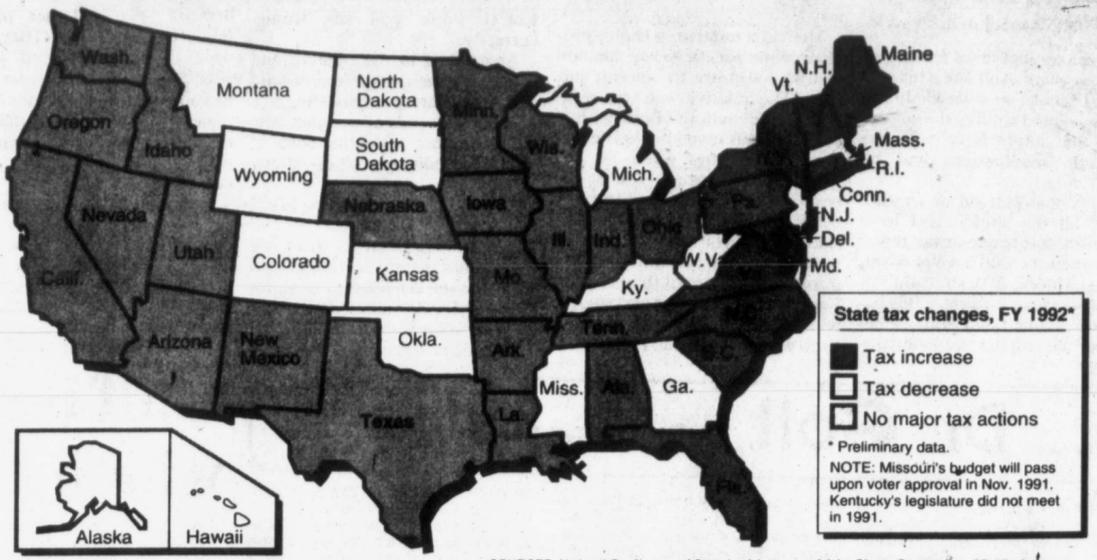

1. I might win.

2. I might win.

3. I might win.

Across the nation, a taxing year

Legislators in 34 states, including Texas, approved an estimated $16 billion in tax increases in 1991, the largest collective tax hike ever approved in a single year. Five states lowered some taxes slightly.

SOURCES: National Conference of State Legislatures and John Sharp, Comptroller of Public Accounts.

Days late, dollars short

1992 budgets balanced with largest-ever tax increase

Meeting in special session this summer, the Texas Legislature approved a $60.1 billion state budget to fund state services during the fiscal years 1992 and 1993. The budget, almost 19 percent higher than in the previous budget period, is roughly equivalent to the Legislature's estimates of the amount needed to maintain current state services over the next two years.

Caught between skyrocketing spending needs and slumping revenues, lawmakers in 33 other states also have approved tax increases this year to balance fiscal 1992 budgets.

An estimated $16 billion in tax increases approved by state legislators in 1991 (including Texas) adds up to the largest collective tax hike ever approved in a single year. These measures follow sizeable tax increases last year, and occur at a time when resistance among recession-battered taxpayers is mounting.

Eleven states started their new fiscal year without 1992 budgets in place, due in large part to financial crises left over from fiscal 1991, when some states' revenue came in well below estimates and contributed to a continuing decline in balances.

But the outlook is brighter for fiscal 1992, and most states are expected to collect more revenue than they will spend. Compared to fiscal 1991 levels, states' overall general revenue collections are expected to increase by 8.3 percent and expenditures by 4.2 percent in fiscal 1992, according to preliminary data from the National Conference of State Legislatures State Budget and Tax Actions 1991.

Revenue: A tally of net state tax changes for fiscal 1992 shows that 34 states have raised taxes for fiscal 1992, 10 more than last year. In 14 states, the tax increases exceeded 5 percent of fiscal 1990 tax collections. Only five states will have slight tax decreases in fiscal 1992.

The nationwide total for fiscal 1992 net tax increases is estimated to be about $16 billion, representing 5.4 percent of fiscal 1990 tax collections.

Except for California and Nevada, major tax increases were concentrated east of the Mississippi River, where the national recession hit hardest. Because of the magnitude of their financial problems, many state legislatures raised personal income taxes and general sales taxes — the mainstays of state tax systems.

New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont raised taxes by more than 5 percent for the second consecutive year.

Expenditures: At 4.2 percent on average, the projected increase in state general fund spending for fiscal 1992 is the smallest in nearly a decade. Health and corrections spending hit fiscal 1991 budgets hard and are expected to be costly in fiscal 1992 as well, while spending on public education, including higher education, rose by less than 3 percent in fiscal 1991. Education spending comprises half the average state budget, and is expected to rise by 9.2 percent in fiscal 1992. The big story for education budgets is that many states cut them below appropriated amounts in fiscal 1991.

Public pressure for high-dollar state services such as education, health care and corrections, combined with the impact of federal mandates, court orders and population growth, mean state expenditures are likely to exceed the general rate of inflation not only in fiscal 1992, but throughout most of the 1990s.

What states did: In 24 states, appropriations for fiscal 1992 have increased by less than the rate of inflation. But states in the Northeast and Southeast are exceptions. Many of these states are counting on revenues to increase at a faster rate than expenditures, allowing for the replacement of reserve funds or one-time revenues used in fiscal 1991.

Outside the Northeast and Southeast, California and Pennsylvania increased taxes substantially, accounting for about half of the total estimated increase nationwide.

California's $55.7 billion fiscal 1992 budget includes nearly $6.6 billion in tax increases and $5.1 billion in service cuts and bookkeeping measures to help close a $14.3 billion gap.

California legislators increased the state sales tax rate by 1.25 percent to 6 percent (now fifth-highest in the nation), broadened the sales tax base, raised alcoholic beverage taxes and increased motor vehicle registration fees. California lawmakers also reduced welfare payments by 4.4 percent.

In Pennsylvania, lawmakers approved a $13.9 billion spending plan 34 days after the state's 1992 fiscal year began July 1. The budget includes $3.3 billion in new taxes, which are expected to generate enough revenue to keep the state in the black for at least two years.

The Pennsylvania Legislature increased both personal and corporate income taxes, raised the cigarette tax from 18 cents to 31 cents per pack, broadened the sales tax base and made minor cuts in a third of its appropriations to state program.

Western states, excluding California and Nevada, are generally financially well off, and tax increases averaged 3 percent or less of 1990 collections. Nevada, however, increased taxes by 9 percent.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

There aren't many things in this world more lovely or special than an outdoor country wedding on a glorious fall afternoon. We attended one this past weekend down in Sonora, when a friend of

SDN Letters

To The Editor:

In Scurry County, we have the Scurry County Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, and an alcohol-drug free graduation party, annually. High school students have been suspended from school related activities due to alcohol related offenses, and pasture keg parties are routinely raided. In addition, we have DARE, an excellent anti-drug program in our local schools. Most of these things have been a community effort to create a drug-free atmosphere in our community. As alcohol is considered to be one of the most misused drugs in our society today, it seems ludicrous to us that it was freely served at the Chamber of Commerce fundraiser last Saturday night. What kind of message are we sending to our kids? It seems to us that we are teaching them early that a double standard society is totally acceptable — (do as we say, not do as we do).

For those who have made the choice to drink, there are plenty of places to do so. We personally do not think a community fundraiser was the place.

Thank you,
Mr. and Mrs. Larry Falls

ours gave away his only daughter on the steps of their grand old family ranch house. Since most of the folding chairs were full, we sat on the stone border surrounding a giant, magnificent live oak tree in the front yard, which sheltered the wedding party beneath its great boughs.

I have found that, no matter how well-to-do the hosting family may be, most outdoor country weddings stay true to the old-fashioned country traditions of dignity and simplicity, and this ceremony was no exception. The beautiful young bride was radiant in her mother's white lace wedding gown, content with only two attendants and simple rainbow spray of multi-colored flowers. After vows were exchanged, there was a loud Aggie "whoop" from the peanut gallery, and the whole crowd burst into applause.

Not that it wasn't classy. A huge white tent had been pitched for the reception, which featured smoked salmon and a delightful non-alcoholic champagne which looked, tasted, and nose-ticked just like the real thing, but sent no guests home on a long drive with impaired abilities.

But like most country weddings, there was a country band, dancing, and lots of good visiting with people who seldom come out of jeans. (I have to say, there sure were a lot of tall good-lookin' cowboys in Western-cut suits. I told my husband that if I were twenty years younger and husband-hunting, I might have made off with one of them instead of him.)

It put me in mind of another country wedding we attended years ago, on the verge of the Caprock at full and splendid sunset. There was a cowboy band there too, and lots of happy celebrating, which is what a wedding should be, to my mind — not an MGM production designed to show off the family's social status.

My eleven-year-old daughter, Jessica, tells me she'd like to be married in the Chinaberry grove someday, in October, when golden leaves are everywhere and the whole world looks gilded. Personally, I can think of no more lovely a cathedral, no more glorious decorations, no more impressive a setting for a couple to pledge a lifetime of honor and love before God.

And later, after the newlyweds have left for their honeymoon, I'll dance under the stars with my tall, good-lookin' cowboy, and think about how much power there is in simple things.

Fed monies released for special needs fund

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is giving $6.5 million to the Texas Crime Victims Compensation Fund, though who is responsible for the grant is a matter of disagreement among state and federal officials.

The feds say last week's massacre in Killeen — the nation's worst shooting rampage — prompted them to cut through red tape and speed up their grant process.

But state officials say they had to prod the Justice Department to free up the money, which was due last month. They claim the funding was expedited after Texas Attorney General Dan Morales met Thursday with U.S. Attorney General-designate William Barr.

The money is urgently needed to deal with the aftermath of the Luby's Cafeteria shootings, in which 23 people were slain by a gunman who later killed himself.

About 30 people have filed claims with the fund for injuries suffered in last week's shootings. Each victim could receive up to $25,000 for medical expenses, psychological counseling, funeral expenses or lost income.

The fund could eventually pay as much as $3.5 million to victims of the Killeen massacre, state officials said. The federal government contributes 40 cents for every dollar the state puts into the fund, which is funded by court fines.

A total of $24 million has been paid out by the 11-year-old fund during the past fiscal year, officials said.

The $6.5 million had been in limbo since September, when the Justice Department got word that the crime victims' fund may have been bilked of millions of dollars by several private psychiatric hospitals.

The state attorney general's office is investigating whether the hospitals had paid "bounty hunters" to find patients who were eligible for money from the fund. The investigation so far has focused on the Dallas, Houston, San Antonio and Fort Worth areas.

Morales' office has taken legal action to prevent the crime victims' fund from paying $10 million in claims for mental health care filed during the past year.

State and federal officials disagreed Thursday over whether the $6.5 million had ever been frozen.

"There was never a freezing of the funds," said Chris Rizzuto, deputy director for congressional and public affairs with the Office of Justice Programs.

Rizzuto said Texas officials may have "misunderstood" the intent of a Justice Department letter seeking information about the hospital investigation.

The department on Thursday informed Texas officials that the grant had been pushed through more rapidly than usual in light of the Killeen massacre, Rizzuto said.

Human found with monkey AIDS virus

HOUSTON (AP) — A research team from the Texas Medical Center has reported that a virus previously known to exist only in monkeys stricken with AIDS has been found in a human.

The discovery, disclosed in the November issue of the Journal of Virology, are based on studies of an AIDS patient treated at M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Houston. The patient, a homosexual, died last year.

"We don't know that it is significant, really," Dr. Richard Ford, head of molecular pathology at the University of Texas, said Thursday.

"It's more for the scientific community that this interesting patient did come into our hospital a couple of years ago. He had a bizarre type of AIDS-related lymphoma. We were able to isolate a virus that previously had been associated only with monkeys."

Ford, along with Robert C. Bohannon and Lawrence A. Donahue of the Division of Molecular Virology of Baylor College of Medicine, have found no similar viruses in any other patients. Researchers are confident the subject of their research had no previous contact with monkeys.

Prosecutors' case will not be easy

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Dr. Jack Kevorkian furnished the devices and the medical know-how for two women to kill themselves, but was careful to keep enough distance to avoid another murder charge, his lawyer says.

Prosecutors acknowledge the case is difficult and say it could be as long as six weeks before they decide whether to file charges.

"The only witnesses are people who won't talk and two ladies who are dead," Oakland County Assistant Prosecutor Michael Modelski told the Detroit Free Press.

Both women had spoken openly of wanting to die and a right-to-die organization praised Kevorkian. But a state lawmaker said Kevorkian should lose his medical license and face criminal charges.

Kevorkian, a retired pathologist known since his medical school days as "Dr. Death," met Marjorie Wantz, 58, and Sherry Miller, 43, Wednesday night at a cabin in a state park about 40 miles north of Detroit, said his lawyer, Geoffrey Fieger.

Miller was paralyzed by multiple sclerosis and Wantz suffered from a painful but not terminal pelvic disease.

Wantz, of Sodus, died first, of a drug overdose administered by an intravenous device. Miller, of Roseville, watched Wantz die before breathing carbon monoxide through a mask, Fieger said.

Wantz started the flow of anesthetic and a fatal dose of sodium pentothal by pulling strings attached to her fingers as her husband, William, sat beside her, Fieger told The New York Times.

Kevorkian called authorities to report the deaths and met sheriff's deputies at the cabin, where they found the women lying side-by-side on cots, the scene illuminated by a few flickering candles.

Kevorkian was careful not to get too close, his lawyer said. "He was present. He provided the expertise. He provided the equipment" but "did not assist in the deaths at all."

"We can't even prove there's been a crime," said sheriff's Capt. Glenn Watson. "We're still investigating." He said autopsy results needed before any charges are filed won't be available for at least a month.

Thirty-one states have laws against assisting suicides, but Michigan is not among them. A measure on the November ballot in Washington state would allow doctor-assisted suicide.

Kevorkian was charged with murder last year for hooking up an Alzheimer's patient to an intravenous suicide device he invented. The patient, Janet Adkins, of Portland, Ore., turned on the machine herself, sending a flow of lethal drugs into her veins.

The murder charge was dismissed, but a court injunction bars Kevorkian from using the device or counseling people about suicide. He could face contempt charges if found to have violated the order.

Kevorkian was questioned at the Sheriff's Department and released early Thursday.

Friends of Miller and Wantz said Kevorkian was an angel of mercy, not of death.

"I'm surprised it took this long," said Darvin Hartness, who lives near the suburban Detroit home Miller shared with her parents. "Sherry wanted to do it. She was just too dependent on her parents."

A divorced mother of two, Miller was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis 12 years ago and had lost the use of her arms, legs and neck muscles by last year. She used a wheelchair.

"It's not a life, it's just existing," she said recently.

Wantz, who appeared with Kevorkian and her husband on a Detroit TV talk show in August, said she lived in constant pain.

The Hemlock Society, a right-to-die organization based in Eugene, Ore., praised Kevorkian and said the suicides underscored a need for specific laws governing physician-assisted suicides for terminally ill patients.

handlers.

As early as 1970, researchers have isolated in monkeys viruses that are virtually identical to the human immunodeficiency virus, commonly known as HIV. The virus, when injected into juvenile monkeys, causes an AIDS-like syndrome in the infected animals.

The viruses, known as Type D retrovirus, never have been associated convincingly with humans and any similar discoveries were blamed on laboratory contamination, the three researchers wrote in the Journal of Virology. They noted in their report that they took extensive care and did multiple tests to ensure that laboratory contamination would not influence their research.

"It's something we're very cognizant of," Ford said. "Before the paper was published, we had to convince a lot of skeptical people that was not the case."

The Houston patient, a 32-year-old man, was admitted to M.D. Anderson in 1989 after complaining of abdominal pain, fever and night sweats for several months. He tested HIV positive and a bone marrow biopsy detected cancer.

He underwent chemotherapy treatment and, despite some remission, died nine months later. Researchers said they detected unusual cells in tumors and found in examining them under an electron microscope they contained large number of retroviruses.

"However, since this individual was severely immunocompromised by infection with HIV, it is possible that he acquired this type D retrovirus under conditions in which an individual with a normal immune system would resist such an infection," the researchers wrote.

They also noted an "important issue" is whether the association of the retrovirus with AIDS-related lymphomas "is an isolated phenomenon or the harbinger of other co-infections of this type."

"Further extensive screening of patients with AIDS and normal individuals will be required to confirm the validity of this observation and to ascertain whether type D retroviruses have actually entered the human population in significant numbers," they said.

The team also may have been limited by the refusal of the patient's family to allow physicians to perform an autopsy following the man's death.

"I don't know if it would have helped," Ford said. "It would have given us more tissues to confirm that the virus was actually in that patient."

Bush may get less than 'territory for peace'

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Land for Peace" is President Bush's rallying cry for the Middle East peace conference, but success may be measured with results well short of that goal.

The White House, announcing all the parties had accepted the joint U.S.-Soviet invitations, appealed to the Arabs, Israelis and Palestinians on Wednesday night to approach the Madrid conference with "an open mind."

Perhaps they will, but the fact is they are going with what appear to be irreconcilable positions.

Having pushed them this far is historic, in and of itself. Getting some sort of partial agreement would spell success.

The most promising short-term goal is limited self-rule for the Palestinians. Also, a senior U.S. official said last weekend, there ought to be some ability at the peace conference to move forward in terms of Israeli relations with Jordan and to deal with the situation in Lebanon.

These all fall short of a comprehensive settlement of the 43-year Arab-Israeli conflict based on land for peace. And they may appear attainable mostly because they are not as formidable as the Israeli-Syrian dispute — "the toughest nut," is the way a senior U.S. official described it last Friday night in Jerusalem.

AP news analysis...

If those goals are reached, Bush and Secretary of State James A. Baker III would be able to claim success approaching President Carter's virtuoso performance at Camp David, Md., in 1978 that produced an Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty the following year.

At the outset the divergence in positions is stark.

Israel, for instance, says it will not yield any more of the territory the Arabs lost in the 1967 Six-Day war. It is offering peace-for-peace.

Syria, meanwhile, refuses to offer peace for the Golan Heights, the territory it seeks to recover. And Jordan may be in no position to take back West Bank land even if Israel relinquishes it. At the same time, the United States may seek conditions on loan guarantees for Israel next year, depending on progress made by then in the peace talks, Baker told senators at a private briefing Thursday.

Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, said Baker reiterated the administration's pledge not to seek further delay in meeting Israel's request for $10 billion in loan guarantees to settle Soviet emigres. "But he said, 'I may at the time ... depending on progress in the talks, want to come back and discuss conditions'" on the aid, Craig told

Dallas schools tracking violence trends

DALLAS (AP) — School fights have always been common, educators say, but students have not always been armed.

"There have always been some fights at schools, but students didn't have Uzis and pistols then," said Bob Baker, president of the Classroom Teachers of Dallas. "They just duked it out."

Three men pulled an Uzi machine gun on a man in late August and stole his car from one school as he waited for his son to get out of a football game, DISD records show.

The reports list three seizures of other types of weapons from schools so far this academic year.

"I think it's running about the same as last year," DISD spokesman Rodney Davis said of the weapons statistics. "Last school year, we had 161 possessions of weapons in schools."

"Every year, it gets worse. It's part of a nationwide trend. Kids are exposed to more violence, not reporters.

It may be some comfort to U.S. peacemakers to recall the gap between Israel and Egypt also was wide.

Israel held the Sinai. Jewish settlers were there. And so were two of Israel's strategic airfields.

The late Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, meanwhile, was insisting on every inch of the Sinai. And he was saying peace would have to await the next generation.

When the smoke cleared, however, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin yielded all of Sinai, including a valuable strip he had tried to retain up to the end of the negotiations. And Sadat gave Israel a peace treaty — in his generation.

In the only other student shooting death at a DISD institution, officials said 16-year-old Cody Cobbins was killed in a school bus parked on the South Oak Cliff High School campus in October 1986.

"There is a sort of tolerance toward violence in the high schools. It is kind of like being in a battle zone," said Maureen Peters, president of the Alliance of Dallas Educators. "We are seeing so much verbal abuse, pushing and shoving — lower-grade violence — that we reach a point where some of the teachers get numb, like it's a normal way to live."

District records show that at least 15 unloaded handguns and eight loaded guns have been confiscated since classes began Aug. 21. District students or staff members have been wounded in at least one shooting in each of the last three school years.

Four loaded handguns have been seized at Carter High School since classes began, including two .25-caliber automatics.

Yale's Skull and Bones decides to admit women

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Alumni members of Skull and Bones voted to admit women into their secret society at Yale University, rejecting the fierce efforts of opponents to keep the 159-year-old club all-male.

A Bonesman, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said about 55 percent of the society's members voted Thursday night in favor of admitting women.

More than 100 Bonesmen debated the issue for two hours before the vote. The counting of ballots, which included hundreds of proxies, was not completed until early Friday.

The move clears the way for the initiation of six women students into the organization that counts among its members some of the nation's most powerful men, including President Bush.

Each year the organization asks 15 Yale juniors to join, and those approached last May included the six women.

Their admittance has been held up ever since by squabbling among the alumni members. The dispute came to a head last month when a group of dissident alumni, including conservative columnist William F. Buckley, sued to keep the women out.

The lawsuit forced the club to call Thursday's special meeting to take a second vote on whether to

Weight Loss Surprises Researchers

WASHINGTON -- A nutrition organization was hopeful that a nutritionally complete "hi-tech" food tablet would help erase world hunger problems, until a study revealed that one of the ingredients could cause significant weight loss.

Although other studies and scientists may not agree, researchers in Europe found that the ingredient, a natural plant colloid, actually caused people to lose weight, even though specifically instructed not to alter normal eating patterns, according to one study published in the prestigious British Journal of Nutrition. Researchers in an earlier study had speculated that the weight loss was due to a decrease in the intestinal absorption of calories.

While the development of the product called Food Source One, a project of National Dietary Research, would not be used to successfully fulfill its original goal, the formula which has since been improved with other natural colloids has been a windfall for some overweight people. A Daytona Beach, Florida woman fighting a weight battle for 12 years used the product on the recommendation of her physician and lost 30 pounds. She stated, "Not only have I lost 30 pounds but my cholesterol has dropped from 232 to 143. I have two closets full of clothes which have not fit me in two years that I can now wear." In a separate report, a telephone interview revealed that a Wilmington, North Carolina pharmacist lost 14 pounds in 3 weeks on the product and was never hungry.

Food Source One tablets are part of National Dietary Research's comprehensive plan to bring a rapid end to obesity in this country. A variety of nutritionally sound diet plans, specially prepared by NDR, accompany each bottle and provide a natural, drug free alternative for confronting the problem of obesity.

Your Birthday

Oct. 26, 1991

There are strong possibilities that two of your expectations will be realized in the year ahead. Lady Luck will play an active role in each instance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) There is a possibility that a misunderstanding might arise today between you and a friend over something rather silly. If it isn't corrected immediately, it could cause a problem. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Someone who has previously disappointed you might make another promise to you again today. Don't put too much stock in the commitment, because this individual isn't apt to CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It's best not to allocate work of an artistic nature today to someone today whose talents don't run in that vein. To spare this individual's feelings, you may have to keep the product that results.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Under most conditions, you are not a possessive person, but today you could be. Be careful, because this is a role you don't play well.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You're pretty good at making promises today, but you might have a hard time fulfilling them when the due date arrives. Think carefully before committing yourself.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't rely upon flattery to try to get others to do things for you today, especially co-workers. Insecurity might motivate them to plot against you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your need for instant gratification today might cause you to spend more for something than you should, just so you'll have it now instead of waiting until the price is more attractive.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Courtesy and politeness are extremely important today in your dealings with others. If you lack these graces, it could detract from your popularity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This is one of those days where you might wear your heart on your sleeve and be needlessly wounded by those you love. Don't let your emotions cloud reality.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you have lunch today with a female friend who is always fumbling with her make-up when the check arrives, have an understanding in advance as to how the bill is to be split — or she'll get you again.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Critical career matters should be treated with the seriousness they deserve today, or else you might start coasting and begin to lose some of the progress you recently made.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) One of your greatest assets is your ability to assess situations logically. However, today you might be more of a wishful thinker than a realistic one.

Your Birthday

Oct. 27, 1991

Profitable outlets can be found in the year ahead for the knowledge and expertise you've acquired through personal experience. Others need what it is you have to offer.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your greatest asset at this time is your ability to get others to do things for you which you cannot accomplish on your own. Just be sure they figure in the eventual rewards. Scorpio, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Scorpio's Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Try to stay out of your own way today; you could be luckier in situations that are initiated by others rather than in those you devise yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try to associate today with individuals who are producers. After you study how they operate, it will inspire you to exert greater efforts where your own interests are concerned.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Do not put off until tomorrow what you can do today. You're in a good achievement cycle, so press yourself a bit instead of merely coasting.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Something in which you're presently involved has both its supporters and detractors. Focus on friendly forces, because they represent the majority.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You have a genuine aptitude for managing the affairs or resources of others today. Looking out for their welfare will also provide certain enhancements for you as well.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you have an important issue to discuss with another, this is a good day to arrange a meeting on a one-to-one basis. Just be sure it's with the individual who has the clout to make decisions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your possibilities for generating material returns from the efforts you expend today look good. Don't undersell that which you have to offer.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In order to accelerate proceedings, an endeavor you're presently involved in with several others needs your personal touch today. Exercise your initiative without being asked.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You have greater reserve upon which to draw today than you may realize. If you are confronted by persistent challenges, your real strengths will start to emerge.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You could be more fortunate than usual in this cycle where new projects or endeavors are concerned. Think progressively, and don't be afraid to take a chance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Conditions that have an influence on your material well-being are presently moving in a favorable direction. Take advantage of these currents.

Head-injured teen had to re-learn everything

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Three years after teen-ager Steve Thompson's memory was erased in an accident caused by a drunken driver, he has learned to walk and talk again. But he's still getting to know the parents who turned into strangers.

Steve, 17, over at age 17 — learned to walk, talk and reason — was easy compared to coping with what he'd lost: all the memories of his life. He no longer knew the parents who doted over him or the kid sister who idolized him.

Thompson was a "high school jock," as one therapist characterized him, when his car was struck by a drunken driver on Oct. 31, 1988, as he drove a friend home from a Halloween party.

His parents, Randi and Alan, were called to the accident scene; Steve didn't recognize them. A hospital diagnosed a brain injury. But Steve, who was conscious and had no outward signs of injury, went home that night.

"The next morning he was in a fetal position and we knew there was something very seriously wrong," Mrs. Thompson recalled.

Thus began the family's struggle to bring Steve back. The ordeal forced his mother, Randi, to the brink of a mental breakdown, and Steve's sister, Shari, attempted suicide twice.

"I don't know these people from the lady down the street," Steve once said of his family. Their story is told in an ABC movie, "Stranger in the Family," to air Sunday night.

"All those precious things we had done as he was growing up: Pop Warner football, Cub Scouts, teaching him how to ride a bicycle, they were all gone," Mrs. Thompson said Wednesday, her voice choking. "We were total strangers to him."

Steve spent six months at the New Medico Community Re-Entry Center in Apple Valley, Calif., a head-injury rehabilitation center.

Along with his memory, Steve had lost the most basic concepts. One time, his mother said, he tried to walk across the family swimming pool.

"He didn't realize the properties of water," Mrs. Thompson said. "He fell 10 feet down into the ice-cold pool. He was exploring just like a small child."

He had the mental ability of a third-grader when he arrived at the rehabilitation center, but he progressed quickly, eventually earning a high school diploma.

Today, he works in a Las Vegas hospital, does volunteer work for an ambulance company and takes college classes. He hopes to become a doctor. But the memories never came back.

Does he have flashes of anything from his first 17 years?

"I've given up," he said Wednesday. "I don't search like I used to."

Shari Thompson, who was 12 at the time of the accident, tried to kill herself because "she could not deal with the fact her brother was gone," Mrs. Thompson said.

"He was everything to me. I thought if I were gone, I could be with the brother I needed," Shari said.

During the ordeal, Mrs. Thompson suffered a stroke and sought psychiatric help for depression.

Now the family cherishes its memories of the old Steve, but also loves the new person who has emerged.

"We're so close now it's unbelievable," Mrs. Thompson said. "It's like it was before. We're friends. It's wonderful to have that friendship again."

Customized fangs popular feature during Halloween

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most days, they devote themselves to the health of America's teeth. But at Halloween, your dentist is just as likely to be creating vampires.

In the world of dentistry, there is an otherworld of fang makers.

"Two gruesome-looking teeth," was Washington attorney Keith Waters' description of the canines his dentist, Dr. Daniel Reardon, made for him last Halloween. "They were quite effective."

"Every dentist knows how to do it," said Reardon. "It's the opposite of esthetic dentistry."

Reardon built Waters' fangs onto his regular teeth, which meant Waters had to swing by the dentist's office to have them removed the day after a Halloween party.

Some people prefer reusable fangs, so dental labs are equipped to make a variety of vampire dentures that fit perfectly over normal teeth and can be easily inserted and removed.

Jonathan Holder, who runs Dentures Plus Dental Laboratory in Silver Spring, Md., said he gets four or five orders a year.

His former boss, Jeff Michaels, owner of Restor-a-dent Dental Laboratory in New York City, said he typically gets about 100.

Holder and Michaels need an impression of the client's teeth from a dentist in order to go to work. Once they have it, the vampire teeth can be in the mouth in about a week.

The fangs are made from an acrylic resin and cost from $70 to more than $1,000.

"People go to an awful lot of effort and money on Halloween," Michaels said.

The benefit of custom-made teeth is not only a classically evil smile, but a comfortable fit. Michaels says most of his clients are dentists.

"I looked at the commercially available artificial teeth at the five-and-ten and they really don't do it," said Dr. Joseph Towbin, a Manhattan dentist who decided to become a vampire this year to coordinate with his girlfriend's Elvira outfit. "You can't smile with them and can't talk with them."

Michaels made two fangs for Towbin that snap over his eyeteeth. The tips are stained with blood red dye.

Towbin has never made vampire teeth for any of his patients, although he said he did do an impression of a man's head once for devil horns.
