It's Time Again to Remember Servicemen Here and Abroad

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: It is again time for the Operation Dear Abby/America Remembers Campaign and the great work it does for our servicemen and women stationed overseas — and, for the first time, here at home.

From my years of experience as a Navy fighter pilot, I know the importance of the Operation Dear Abby/America Remembers Campaigns. A supportive card or letter to a young man or woman serving our nation can make all the difference in the world.

Operation Dear Abby/America Remembers played a major role during Operation Desert Storm, and we need to keep the momentum going with the America Remembers "Adopt a Unit" program.

For years, schools, groups and communities have been able to "adopt" U.S. military units stationed overseas. Now, for the first time ever, thanks to the Armed Services YMCA, local units in the United States can be "adopted." (Not all the troops stationed here in the United States get to go home for the holidays!)

School groups and communities can "adopt" a ship or unit for the holidays by sending a stamped, self-addressed business-sized envelope (No. 10 envelope) to: Operation Dear Abby/America Remembers, c/o Taco Bell Corp., 17901 Von Karmen, Irvine, Calif. 92714.

Each group will receive a newsletter and other materials on the unit it "adopts." Once again, dozens of volunteers from Taco Bell will process the incoming material.

As the first honorary national chairman of the America Remembers Campaign, I want to say "well done" to America Remembers, Taco Bell, and to you and your readers.

RANDY "DUKE" CUNNINGHAM, HONORARY NATIONAL CHAIRMAN, 1991 AMERICA REMEMBERS CAMPAIGN

DEAR ABBY: I am getting married soon, and I have my bridal party already picked out, but I have a slight problem. I would like to change my maid of honor because we are no longer as close friends as we used to be.

I am wondering how I should go about telling her I have changed my mind without hurting her feelings.

CHANGED MY MIND

DEAR ABBY: How long ago did you ask her to be your maid of honor? If it was a childhood promise made several years ago and you have since drifted apart, she may be relieved to be replaced. Discuss it with her.

However, if you asked her recently, there is no way to tell her you no longer want her to be your maid of honor without hurting her feelings.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 79-year-old woman living at the California State Veterans Home in the beautiful Napa Valley.

One of the first questions I'm asked when I tell people that I live at the Veterans Home is: "Oh, was your husband a veteran?"

Abby, I proudly served as a master sergeant in the U.S. Army during World War II and in the Korean conflict. When will people learn that women are veterans, too?

Abby, perhaps if you publish this, it will serve to remind millions of people that there are women veterans, too.

MARTHA L. WALKER, YOUNTVILLE, CALIF.

DEAR MARTHA: Consider it done.

White House ethics policy tried

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $600,000 contract between a former senior White House aide and a Saudi Arabian sheik implicated in the BCCI banking scandal sent a shudder through the White House.

On orders from President Bush, the White House had meticulously laid down an ethics policy designed to prevent the revolving-door opportunism that repeatedly embarrassed the Reagan administration.

Edward Rogers, until recently the top assistant to presidential chief of staff John Sununu, signed a $600,000 legal representation contract with Sheik Kamal Adham, a central figure in the scandal surrounding the bank of Credit and Commerce International.

BCCI, which operated in the United States and many foreign countries, has been accused of involvement in drug smuggling, money laundering, arms peddling and bribery of public officials.

The White House moved quickly to defuse the controversy — ordering an internal investigation and disavowing any connection with Rogers and his contract. Bush led the effort, saying he could not envision himself working for the sheik.

But before the mini-storm could blow out of control, Rogers announced last Tuesday night he was canceling his contract with Adham.

A combination of quick damage control and lucky timing — with the Middle East peace conference dominating the headlines — appeared to squelch the matter and keep Bush above the fray.

The president, who has ordered his aides to avoid even the appearance of impropriety, appeared to emerge without any "sleaze factor" residue.

"We're glad that's over with," said Bush political adviser Charles Black, who chatted with Rogers before Rogers announced that he had severed his Adham contract.

The issue fed into a general White House wariness regarding the unpredictability of where the BCCI investigation might eventually lead.

"It's too early to say it's over," said one senior official, wondering aloud if an investigation by Bush's counsel, C. Boyden Gray, would unearth any impropriety by Rogers.

In fact, the latest issue of Newsweek magazine quotes unnamed senior administration officials and congressional sources as saying that "questions remain concerning Sununu's connections to BCCI."

But Sununu said Sunday that Gray and the Justice Department had "made it clear that there is absolutely no wrongdoing by Mr. Rogers, before or after he left the White House, or by anyone at any time in the White House on the BCCI situation."

The chief of staff, interviewed Sunday on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," denounced the Newsweek article as "irresponsible, reckless and malicious, and wrong."

Asked whether he thought a special prosecutor should be appointed to investigate, Sununu said, "We have left everything in the hands of the Justice Department."

Sununu said he knew of no contact between Rogers and anyone connected with BCCI while he was at the White House.

On Friday, Gray said he had found no evidence that Rogers

"made any communication to anyone in the White House concerning BCCI" and that Rogers had no responsibility for monitoring the government's investigation of the bank.

Rogers, a 33-year-old attorney who had not practiced law before leaving the White House last summer, said he signed a contract to join the sheik's legal team in September after carefully reviewing ethics rules.

Rogers insisted his relationship with the sheik had no connection to his White House days. Sununu and the Justice Department both denied Sununu was monitoring the BCCI investigation.

EPA will shift focus to more obscure sites

HOUSTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency says it will be shifting its focus from the major pollution sites in Texas to the more obscure targets.

EPA officials said the agency will be looking at thousands of old landfills, chemical plants, transformer storage yards and other light industrial sites and small businesses that may be contaminated.

A total of 2,470 of these sites have been identified in Texas by the EPA.

However, most will probably be found to pose no health or environmental threat, said David Bary, a spokesman for the EPA's Region 6 office in Dallas, which runs the waste cleanup program in Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana.

Superfund has collected more than $4 billion in cleanup costs from waste disposers or contributors and has taken emergency cleanup action on some 2,600 sites nationwide. It has treated or properly disposed of enough contaminated soil and debris to cover a football field a mile high, and collected more than 1 billion gallons of liquid hazardous waste, an agency spokesman said.

Drug dealers now using rental cars

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Investigators say they want to know whether rental car companies are aware that some of their clients may be planning to transport drugs.

If authorities could prove a pattern of the rental companies repeatedly and knowingly renting the vehicles to known drug traffickers, they should be subject to the seizure and forfeitures laws, said Beaumont police Lt. Mike Siebe.

The Beaumont Enterprise reported in Sunday editions that drug dealers drove rental cars in the past three drug busts officers made on Interstate 10 last month in the Beaumont area.

Police seized 50 pounds of marijuana, 97 hits of LSD, pagers, cellular phones, about $1,000 in cash and three rental cars, Siebe said.

"About 20 percent of the stops officers make involve rental cars," Siebe said. "The drug dealers aren't stupid enough to use a brand new car that they just paid cash for."

Personal cars used in drug crimes can be seized. But rented cars are returned to the rental companies, Siebe said.

Most rental companies require authorization on the renter's credit card before leasing the cars, he said.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What causes post-nasal drip, and why does mucus drip down the throat causing major irritation? Would surgery be a corrective measure?

DEAR READER: The membranes high in the back of the throat, behind the nose, are often the source of a profuse mucous discharge. This is usually caused by a low-grade allergic reaction (to smoke, pollen or dust) but may also appear when these tissues are infected. The condition is aggravated by sinus inflammation, too.

This mucus drainage typically heads south, pulled by gravity down into the throat and trachea where it triggers a cough reaction for the same reason we cough when we swallow food the wrong way. Such coughing spasms are usually quite violent and occur in paroxysms, frequently more pronounced at night. Because there is little material to "bring up," the cough is termed "dry," unlike the "productive" cough characteristic of pneumonia.

Post-nasal drip is one of the most common complaints I see in the office. It can be diagnosed by looking in the throat with a strong light; the gobs of mucus can be seen washing over the back of the pharynx. Avoidance of tobacco smoke and the use of anti-histamine/decongestant medications (such as Actifed, Sudafed or Dimetapp) usually relieve symptoms. Patients with persisting and especially, bothersome post-nasal drip may require prescription drugs (such as Hismanal or Seldane) or referral to an allergist.

Surgery is ordinarily not used to treat this condition, unless the sinuses are chronically infected and must be opened and drained.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Recently I discovered fresh blood at the end of a urine flow. A urologist easily discovered a tumor inside the bladder that was treated with cautery. I was commended on being very observant to catch the problem so quickly. What is my prognosis for the future?

DEAR READER: Your prognosis is probably excellent because you identified the problem early and received prompt, definitive care. However, I must add one caveat: Your prognosis depends to a large degree on the type of bladder tumor you had. Ordinarily, these growths are slow-growing and do not readily spread. Thus, you will need a periodic cystoscopic exam (where the urologist examines the lining of your bladder with a light tube) so that any recurrences can be cauterized (burned off).

On the other hand, if the tumor was highly malignant and invaded the bladder wall, your future is less certain.

From the information you supplied, I suspect that you needn't worry if you follow the urologist's advice about follow-up. I suggest you discuss your prognosis with the specialist, who is familiar with your case and should be able to answer your questions.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Bladder." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

Patron terrorizes club with saw

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A man accused of brandishing a roaring chain saw inside a topless nightclub was being held in the Bexar County Jail on an aggravated assault charge, authorities say.

Donald Louis Cox, 36, was being held in lieu of $5,000 bond, police said. Cox was treated at Medical Center Hospital after he complained of dizziness and some minor facial cuts. He suffered the cuts when customers and employees teamed up to subdue him Saturday night.

Witnesses at Conner's Place said Cox, angry at a waitress, left the club and returned minutes later to terrorize patrons and dancers with a chain saw.

"I've seen everything but a chain saw," said Richard Conner, club owner. "That's a first." A dancer identified as Tammy Varner, 19, suffered a cut to her right middle finger during the fracas. No other injuries were reported. Patrolwoman Karen Falks said in a written report on the incident.

Police service agent Tom Ferguson said Cox became angry when a waitress brought him change for a $20 bill. He argued that he gave her a $50 bill.

"I'll get all of you for this. I want my money!" witnesses quoted the man as saying when he left the club.

Cox left the club and returned with a chain saw, trying to slice through a wooden partition just inside the door, police said. He then cut an 8-inch gash in a table.

"I was on stage when it happened," said one dancer, who declined to identify herself. "I thought I was going to die."

One dancer hit Cox over the head with a chair and a waitress clubbed him with a wine cooler bottle as club patrons wrestled away the saw and threw it, still running, outside, said Lola, the cashier.

Police have been unable to find the saw, which someone apparently stole, Ferguson said.

"It was one of the longer, bigger types," he said.

No charges were filed against a man arrested with Cox, Ferguson said. Witnesses said the two men had been drinking and watching the dancers for about two hours before the incident.

S. Plains farmers grow colored cotton

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Call it agricultural fashion: colored cotton grown specially for non-dyed jeans.

South Plains crops are capitalizing this year on clothing whims. Several farmers are growing brown cotton, a preferred fiber for tan jeans, in a new project.

"We're excited about it. It yields about 80 percent of what we expect from white cotton. But we get a premium that makes the price about double that of regular cotton," said Eugene Bednarz, who farms near the communities of Slaton and Wilson.

Bednarz told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal that some 40 growers in Texas planted the brown cotton on 1,200 acres this year. He is the state production coordinator.

"We're able to produce cotton with the preferable colors in this area," Bednarz said. "The color is exceptional, and they (the users) are really tickled about that."

Sally Fox, owner of Natural Cotton Colors Inc. at Wasco, Calif., is the entrepreneur and plant breeder behind the project. She contracts with farmers to grow the cotton from seed and the brown fiber is sent to the manufacturers. It is then used to make non-dyed tan jeans.

The project started on a 2-acre test plot in 1988 and was expanded to five growers last year. John and Henry Kveton of Abernathy, 20 miles north of Lubbock, were the first to plant colored cotton.

Some farmers in Arizona also are participating in the project.

"Colored cottons have been around for centuries," Bednarz said. "Some years ago, Ms. Fox improved the cottons through plant breeding to make them spinnable."

Seed from the wild plants has been used in public and private cotton-breeding programs for years, but usually to impart traits other than color. Ms. Fox initially studied colored cottons for insect resistance.

The cotton is spun into yarn at the American Cotton Growers denim mill at Littlefield.

The new line will be marketed at first in a small number of specialty stores because of the limited supply of brown cotton. Ms. Fox said she plans to have much more of the crop grown next season.

The brown cotton requires a lot of water, Bednarz said. It's not a dryland crop, he said.

"This cotton is a little loose in the burr, and that's a worry," Bednarz said. "But farming is a risk anyway, and we're getting decent yields."

Beaumont College sponsors creativity classes for children

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — More than 135 children in the Beaumont area forego Saturday cartoons each week for a little extra schooling.

These gifted and talented students, ages 6 to 14, truck off to college — Kollege for Kids, that is. Lamar University sponsors Kollege for Kids, a program that teaches children imaginative thinking and problem solving by removing them from the typical public school atmosphere.

"The traditional classroom setting in this program is a forgotten thing," said Kay Allen, a first-grade teacher. "Creative thinking and expression are encouraged, and these methods encourage a lot of problem solving and higher thinking."

Ms. Allen, who teaches a class on dinosaurs, said the main thing children learn is how to use imagination and creativity to solve school work problems.

Sessions offer instruction in topics such as logic, graphing, guitar, math, Spanish, sign language, spontaneous writing, psychology, video camera operation, art, and creative word usage.

Area teachers come to the Lamar Education Center to teach the Saturday morning classes each six-week session.

The program is an extension of the Gifted Child Center at the university. The center's director, Dorothy Sisk, said the sessions aim to help gifted and talented students improve in their regular studies.

The concept has proven to be quite popular.

More than 135 children are participating in this fall's session, said director Tia Webb. Some come to Beaumont from as far away as Woodville, nearly 100 miles away.

Debra Goodman Thomas of Beaumont, who has two children in the program, said it's helped her daughter increase her vocabulary.

"I've been really impressed with the program," Mrs. Thomas said. "It enhances a lot of what they get in public schools, and I like that."

Ms. Webb, a Nederland kindergarten teacher, said the success of the program's teaching methods helped the academic enrichment program grow since its start in the spring.

"I'm pleased to say that we've not only increased the number of courses that we offer, but we also have more students enrolled," Ms. Webb said.

New project

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Johnny Carson already is working on one of his first post-"Tonight Show" projects — a TV special on political humor.

It will air as the 1992 presidential campaign starts, he said in TV Guide. Carson steps down as host of "The Tonight Show" in May.

The special will contain political humor "going all the way back to President Coolidge and will also have a lot of new material about current politicians," he said.

"After 35 years of daily work on the tube — five years with a daytime show and 30 years with 'Tonight' — I am looking forward to slowing down a bit and taking time to smell the flowers," he said.

Hungary and Scandinavia converted to Christianity in A.D. 1000.

Bridge magazines from all over

By Phillip Alder

This week I will introduce each of the six independent English-language bridge magazines that are published around the world.

Bridge Today is produced by Pamela and Matthew Granovetter in a house in Ballston Lake, New York. It is a 64-page bimonthly with a variety of articles, both technical and humorous, intended primarily for the serious tournament player. The annual subscription is $21 (800-872-2081).

Today's hand is based on a contribution to the magazine by Eddie Kantar. Cover the East-West cards and plan the play in seven spades, West leading the heart king.

North's two no-trump was the Jacoby forcing raise; three hearts showed a singleton or void in that suit; four diamonds was a cue-bid; and seven spades showed a touching faith in South's declarer-play.

The correct line is a dummy reversal. Win trick one with the heart ace, ruff a heart in hand, play a club to dummy and ruff another heart with the spade jack. Now lead a spade to dummy, ruff the last heart with the spade ace, draw trumps and unblock the club ace. In hand you have the Q-J of clubs and diamond ace left, so you can claim.

Note that if you lead a trump to dummy at trick three and ruff another heart, you will go down. West discarding his singleton club. True, you would have been defeated if West had led his club, but he didn't. Make him pay.

'Skins drop Oilers with OT field goal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Redskins found a way to stop the Houston Oilers' run-and-shoot offense: Keep Warren Moon and Co. on the sidelines.

The Redskins, the NFL's only unbeaten team, improved to 9-0 with a 16-13 overtime victory over the Oilers (7-2) on Sunday. Afterward, Washington coach Joe Gibbs rejoiced that his ball-control offensive scheme worked.

"I think we had some good, long drives in there, which is what we were trying to do," Gibbs said. "Then at the end, it winds up getting close and we opened it up a bit. But we wanted to keep the ball."

They did. When the game was over, Washington had held the ball for 37:07, compared to 26:54 for Houston.

"It was a classic game and a disappointing loss," Houston coach Jack Pardee said. "We're both ball-control teams, and you can't waste series."

But other factors came into play, like making the most of opportunities.

"We moved the ball pretty well, but we didn't execute in some crucial situations, and then we had the turnovers," said Houston quarterback Warren Moon, whose 25-for-44, 250-yard effort was overshadowed by the interception he threw to Darrell Green, setting up Chip Lohmiller's 41-yard game-winning field goal with 4:01 gone in overtime.

Green and Lohmiller only had a chance to become heroes thanks to Houston's Ian Howfield, who missed a 33-yard attempt with one second left in regulation.

"It was elation," Green said of the missed kick. "We felt very positive going into overtime ... like we had a chance."

"You never know until it's over," Moon said. "Our kicker has had some problems lately, so you never know."

Because of Washington's ball-control strategy — an approach Pardee was forced to imitate in order to get his defensive unit some rest — the game turned into a defensive struggle that was decided by a few big plays.

Trailing 6-3 at the half, Washington took 9:04 to set up Lohmiller's 20-yard field goal that tied the game with 20 seconds left in the third quarter. That drive was Washington's second-longest of the season — the longest came in the first quarter, with the Redskins using 10:36 to set up Lohmiller's 24-yard field goal with 1:42 left.

The Oilers had a chance to win it when they recovered Brian Mitchell's fumble at the Washington 23 on the ensuing kickoff.

But Howfield, who missed three extra points in Houston's 35-3 win over Cincinnati last week, sailed his 33-yard attempt wide to the left to force the extra point.

Three runs by Byner, who carried 21 times for 112 yards, set up Lohmiller, who did what Howfield couldn't.

Fontenot wins all-around...

Westerners nab first at Tech

LUBBOCK — Western Texas College roughstock specialist Benji Fontenot scored 175 points, claimed the men's all-around title and led WTC to a first place finish at the Texas Tech Rodeo last weekend.

The Reeves, La. cowboy wound up third in bareback riding with a two-ride total of 121 points. He also captured second place in saddle bronc riding with a 138 on two head.

Fontenot's 65 in Friday's round of bareback riding left the WTC sophomore in third place in the long go. He added a 56 in Saturday's final. In saddle bronc competition, Fontenot scored a Friday-night 72, good for second in the go-round, then rode to a 66 in the short go.

With the win, the Westerners moved into second place in the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association's Southwest Region.

WTC has accumulated 673.3 points in their four rodeos to trail only Tarleton State's 693.3.

The Texas Tech rodeo was the final appearance for the WTC rodeo squad for the fall season.

The spring season is tentatively set to begin March 12 at Odessa.

Canadian wrangler Travis Whiteside gathered first-place honors for Western Texas in bareback riding, scoring a 62 in Thursday night's opening performance and rising from fourth in the long go with Saturday-best 69.

Whiteside is from Turner Valley, Alberta.

NFC East tilt...

Cowboys handle Cards, 27-7

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys are off to their best start since 1986 and it hasn't hurt any to have played the Phoenix Cardinals twice.

In fact, Emmitt Smith puts on a happy face when he sees the Cardinals on the schedule.

Smith has scored nine touchdowns in his last three games against the Cardinals and got three more scores in a 27-7 victory on Sunday.

Dallas increased its record to 6-3, the club's best start since the 1986 team opened with the same mark. Phoenix dropped to 4-6.

"We'll find out how far we've come the next three weeks at Houston, New York (Giants), and Washington," said quarterback Troy Aikman. "We're not going to concede those games. But we'll have to play better offense than we did against Phoenix."

However, Smith likes playing Phoenix just fine.

"It's hard to explain my success against Phoenix," Smith said. "I guess anybody could have done it since they were from short distances. I'll take 'em, though."

Smith scored twice on 3-yard runs and again on a 1-yard run. He scored twice earlier this season in a 17-9 Dallas victory at Tempe and made four touchdowns against Phoenix last December.

Smith said coach Jimmy Johnson gave the team a tough talk at halftime when Dallas led only 10-7.

"Coach Johnson wasn't too happy with us at half time," Smith said. "He sounded like he was real fired up. He told us we weren't responding so we got with it in the second half."

Wide receiver Michael Irvin said he hasn't seen Johnson so mad since he played for him at the University of Miami.

"He told us at halftime: 'Do you guys want this game because you're playing like you don't. You better step it up.'"

Irvin said "that sounded like a threat so we stepped it up."

Smith will have to be hale and hearty for the Cowboys down the stretch drive. Backup Ricky Blake suffered a fractured right hip on the last play of the game and could be lost for the season.

Robert Williams blocked a Rich Camarillo punt on the Phoenix 38 in the third period and Smith scored on a dive from the one-yard line to put the Cardinals out of reach at 17-7.

Williams said "I just took off and the Cardinals got mixed up in their assignments. I was right there to block the punt and nobody touched me. I think they were looking for Ike Holt."

Johnson said it was a huge play. "The blocked punt was a big play," said Johnson. "It gave us the boost we needed. Now we're 6-3 and we have a rough schedule coming up with three straight road games (at Houston, New York Giants and Washington). We're pleased to be where we are."

Johnson gave Williams a game ball for his efforts.

"Normally, we wait until Monday to pass those out but I thought he ought to have his right now," Johnson said.

Phoenix coach Joe Bugel said errors killed his Cardinals whose only score came on a one-yard run by Johnny Johnson, who out rushed Smith with 89 yards.

"We had our opportunities but bad things, ugly things happened in critical situations," Bugel said. "We played hard enough and we hung in there but it's one of those games that's hard to explain."

Undefeated Aggies claim lead in SWC

by The Associated Press
Texas A&M doesn't have a lot of time to relish its new role as Southwest Conference frontrunner.

The No. 12 Aggies travel to Fort Worth for a Thursday night ESPN game against Texas Christian.

Given the climate in college athletics, some coaches have questioned the value of Thursday night football games that force players to miss class.

"That argument probably is not that big ... because all other sports: basketball, baseball, they regularly miss classes," Aggies coach R.C. Slocum said. "This will be the only time our players miss all season."

"My thoughts are if they give us $650,000 to play the game, we'll play it any night they want," said TCU coach Jim Wacker.

The Aggies are 6-1 overall, 4-0 in the SWC. The Horned Frogs are 6-2 and 3-2, assured of only their fourth winning season in the last 30 years, but have a rash of injuries at quarterback and defensive tackle.

Both teams worked out in sweat suits Sunday, normally an off-day, and planned little or no contact work during the short week.

"I'm really, really concerned about this game," Slocum said. "They're 6-2" and might have been 7-1 but for a 22-21 loss to Arkansas last month after holding a 21-0 lead.

With Arkansas losing 9-5 to No. 21 Baylor Saturday, the Aggies emerged as the only unbeaten team in the league, thumping Rice 38-21.

Texas Christian assured itself of its first winning season since 1984 with a 18-10 victory over Southern Methodist, its 23rd straight SWC defeat.

Butch Hadnot ran for a career-high 166 yards and two touchdowns as Texas beat Texas Tech 23-15.

Next week, Arkansas (5-3, 4-1) visits Texas Tech (3-5, 2-3); Rice (3-5, 1-4) visits SMU (1-7, 0-6); and Texas (4-3, 3-1) visits Houston (2-5, 1-3).

Slocum said the Aggies will have to bus to Fort Worth after Wednesday night's practice, giving the Frogs the edge.

Wacker said the Aggies will gain from TCU's decimated defensive line.

Both agreed the short week was to nobody's benefit.

"Normally, you've got that full week to get over those little bumps and bruises ... We'll have to have limited contact in practice," Slocum said.

Wacker said the banged up Frogs, with five defensive tackles sidelined, were without time or method to prepare for A&M's running game. "It is scary. We don't have time to heal up."

After TCU, the Aggies play three games, all at home.

"I like the fact that we are the only undefeated team," Slocum said. "And I think the important thing for us to keep in mind is that it only takes one week — and in this case, less than a week — to become one of the teams with a loss."

Arkansas became one Saturday, losing its final SWC game at Razorbacks Stadium in Fayetteville. Quarterback J.J. Joe's 1-yard touchdown run in the first quarter stood up for a 9-5 victory, knocking the Razorbacks from first place in the SWC and out of The AP Top 25.

"This is going to be a very difficult game to get over," said coach Jack Crowe of Arkansas, which is leaving for the Southeastern Conference next year.

"We didn't want Arkansas to play in our Cotton Bowl," said Baylor defensive tackle Santana Dotson.

Baylor coach Grant Teaff was sorry to see the last of Arkansas, which had risen to No. 24 on its farewell tour.

"It's the end of 70 years of football and that saddens me greatly," Teaff said.

Baylor (7-2, 4-2) was the fifth straight SWC team to outgain Arkansas, but the first to win.

The Bears were watched by representatives of the Liberty, Peach, Copper and Independence bowls.

Emotional scars deep for Japanese family

EDITOR'S NOTE — With the approach of the 50th anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, a family of Japanese Americans caught up in that war recall their experiences. Theirs is the story of brothers fighting on opposite sides, of a son volunteering for the U.S. Army while his parents are being detained in an internment camp. Their emotional

His older brother, Katsuji, was drafted into the Imperial Japanese Navy and fought against the Allies in the South Pacific before he was captured by the Dutch.

Another brother, also an American citizen, and four men who later would become Ed's brothers-in-law also were wounded in action in Europe. Like Ed, each received a Purple Heart.

After the war, Katsuji married a woman who was living in Hiroshima, Japan, when the United States dropped an atomic bomb on the city. She receives compensation for possible radiation contamination from the Japanese government.

Ed's wife, Connie, was a young adult when the war started. Along with her Japan-born parents and a younger brother, she was forced into a California internment camp by the U.S. government. At the same time, her older brother volunteered for U.S. Army duty and was sent to Alaska.

Connie, her sister and two brothers all were born in Hawaii or the Pacific Northwest and were American citizens when the war started.

"...I want to share my story so that this kind of tragedy will never, never happen again in America."

With the 50th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor approaching, Connie and Ed decided to "tell our story" about their experiences during and just after the war, a period in which they said they suffered discrimination, harassment, intimidation and other indignities.

On Dec. 6, Ed, along with architect Alfred Preis and author James Michener, will speak in ceremonies at the USS Arizona

Memorial Center, operated by the National Park Service in Pearl Harbor. Preis designed the famed memorial that rests over the sunken battleship and is visited by millions of people each year. More than 1,000 U.S. sailors are entombed in the ship.

In interviews, Ed and Connie both said they harbor no bitterness.

For what she called "personal reasons," Connie declined to disclose where her family lived at the outbreak of the war, except to say it was in the Pacific Northwest. She also won't disclose the last name of her parents, her brother and sister.

Ed retired in 1983 after nearly 33 years with the federal Social Security Administration. For nearly nine of those years, he was Pacific area manager for Hawaii, Guam, the commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands and American Samoa. He also is retired from private law practice.

Connie for many years worked with Honolulu's elderly affairs division. She and Ed met when his work brought him to Connie's office. Each had been widowed and they were married several months ago. Ed is 68. Connie declined to give her age.

Ed's war experiences began in March 1943 when, at age 19, he volunteered for duty with the 442nd Regimental Combat team. All of its non-commissioned officers were Americans of Japanese descent. Most had volunteered. The 100th division of the 442nd was one of the most decorated units in U.S. military history, Ed says.

He became a forward observer with a field artillery battalion in Europe. He suffered shrapnel wounds from German artillery, but later returned to battle.

Ed was with the 522 Field Artillery Battalion when in April 1945, it liberated Jewish inmates from one of the concentration camps in Dachau, near Munich.

Although born in Hawaii, Ed's brother, Katsuji, went to Japan at age 9, returned to Hawaii in late 1940 and went back to Japan in mid-1941 to live with his grandparents.

Ed says Katsuji, now 71, has told him that Allied bombers sank a destroyer on which he was serving east of the Solomon Islands. Katsuji was rescued. Later he was captured by the Dutch in what was then the Dutch East Indies and was held prisoner for about one year.

"He has been reluctant to talk about his war experiences, but each time I talk with him I learn a little bit more," Ed says.

"As brothers, one was the victor and one was the vanquished,"

For Connie, her psychological scar tissue began to form on May 13, 1942, when she and her family were ordered moved from their home by armed U.S. soldiers.

"I haven't talked about this before because it was demeaning and painful," she says. "This is difficult, but I want to share my story so that this kind of tragedy will never, never happen again in America."

She says her family was told to take only those possessions they could carry. As they left their home, a shotgun-wielding neighbor pressed her father to sell him their property. She said her father resisted the pressure.

For two days, Connie and her family and others of Japanese ancestry from the small community traveled by train under military escort. At midnight on the third day, the train and its passengers reached Pinedale Assembly Center in California.

In another incident, a man threatened to fire a shotgun at his family as they looked for a house, he says.

"I never felt any animosity toward those fellows," he says. "Maybe they had their own reasons and, probably, they were trying to scare my kids."

Later they were taken to an internment camp at Tulelake, Calif., which Connie likened to a concentration camp. She says the thousands of inhabitants were subjected to inhumane indignities.

In late 1942, Connie and her family moved to the Midwest under a friend's sponsorship.

Three years later, her parents returned to the Northwestern community with mixed feelings, "because a petition had been circulated not to have us return."

A letter to her parents, who had been active in community affairs before their internment, said, in part, "You are returning at your own risk," she says.

"...Maybe they had their own reasons and, probably were trying to scare my kids."

he says. "I didn't, and I won't pour salt into the wound."

Katsuji, who lives in Hiroshima, has visited Hawaii a few times, but he hasn't seen the Memorial.

Ed's brush with postwar prejudice and discrimination started in 1962 when he and his family were moved from Honolulu to Baltimore, Md., by the Social Security Administration.

He says that when he took his boys, then ages 5, 8, 11, for a haircut, service was refused even though there were four barbers and four empty chairs.

"The lead barber told me, 'We don't serve Japs and get out,'" Ed recalls.

"Through sheer perseverance and under great hardship and suffering my parents and I rescued and thank God, live out their lives in peace and with dignity," she says.

In 1952, he and his family became naturalized citizens. Due to enactment of the McCarran Act of December 1952, Japanese residents were ineligible to become U.S. citizens.

She says the happiness of her parents at becoming U.S. citizens "knew no bounds."

"My mother, who is 91 and lives in the Pacific Northwest, said, 'Now that I am an American citizen, I can vote for the president of the United States.'"

Imelda back, and in fine form

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Former first lady Imelda Marcos returned today to a rousing welcome nearly six years after a populace that considered her and her late husband corrupt despots drove them and their untold riches into exile.

Mrs. Marcos, 61, told supporters she had come home to unite the country and vindicate her husband, who died in exile in Hawaii in 1989. She was all emotion and moxie, at one point leading supporters in song at a news conference.

The government says President Ferdinand Marcos and his flamboyant wife stole up to $10 billion from the Philippine people during his 20-year rule.

"Your smiles wiped away my pains and frustrations," Mrs. Marcos said after arriving on a chartered Boeing 747 from Hawaii with 250 supporters, staff and journalists.

"My countrymen, I came home not to fight," she told supporters outside the luxurious Philippine Plaza Hotel, where she is occupying the $2,000-a-night Imperial Suite. Hotel staff said Mrs. Marcos had booked about 60 other rooms for a week and paid in advance.

Crowds cheered, "Imelda, Imelda" and surged to catch a glimpse.

Mrs. Marcos faces nine tax fraud and other charges in connection with allegations she and her husband pillaged the treasury before their February 1986 exile in the "people power" revolution.

Police said Mrs. Marcos would be arrested if she did not report and post bond by Wednesday.

President Aquino's chief aide, Franklin Drilon, said the former first lady was allowed to return so the government could prosecute her and thereby meet Switzerland's conditions for returning $350 million from banks there.

After Mrs. Marcos' arrival, the government announced it was dropping a $5 billion civil suit against her in California.

Maximo Maceren, a member of the Presidential Commission of Good Government, said $40 million had already been recovered and an additional $5 million would be obtained by the government under a compromise agreement with Mrs. Marcos.

Mrs. Marcos' attorney, James Linn, told reporters the agreement to drop the suit, set for trial in Los Angeles federal court, would effectively lift the worldwide freeze on Marcos assets the court imposed in 1986.

She motored to her hotel past thousands of people who lined the streets and stood on the balconies of skyscrapers to catch a glimpse of her.

Schools reopen but attendance sparse

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Schools opened today for the first time since the military coup on Sept. 30, but supporters of ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide urged a student boycott and attendance was sparse.

Parents' fears of renewed unrest and a lack of public transportation also apparently contributed to the poor turnout.

It was seen as a blow to the monthlong interim government, which had sought a normal resumption of classes as a display of public confidence in its administration.

The national education director, Joseph Willio Noailles, acknowledged the poor attendance and blamed it mainly on a lack of transportation.

He conceded, however, that the political crisis kept some students away. He criticized what he called "the negative atmosphere and disinformation" spread by Aristide

Police note seven arrests

Snyder police made seven arrests over the weekend, including one for felony driving while intoxicated.

Police arrested 38-year-old Ramon Luera of 320 25th St. for felony DWI at 8:14 p.m. Sunday in the 1400 block of Ave. I. Also arrested was a 44-year-old male for public intoxication.

Luera was free on $2,000 bond today.

In one other arrest Sunday, officers took a 37-year-old male into custody for public intoxication at 3:34 p.m. in the 1500 block of 27th St.

Four other arrests occurred Saturday. At 11:38 a.m., a 22-year-old male was arrested and charged with Class A assault following a complaint of a family disturbance in the 400 block of 30th St. A 51-year-old female was taken into custody from Kmart at 2:02 p.m. and charged with Class B theft, shoplifting.

A 35-year-old female was arrested for driving while intoxicated and a 34-year-old male was arrested for public intoxication at 11:08 p.m. Sunday in the 900 block of 25th St.

All seven subjects arrested over the weekend were booked into the county jail.

At 8:09 a.m. Saturday, Fred Sanchez reported the theft of some money and a gun. It was later reported at 5:21 p.m. that his wallet had been located but the contents were missing. The gun has not been returned. Police filed a report of Class A theft in the case.

At 9:06 p.m., someone advised police that a 1982 Ford Supercab pickup reported stolen Friday evening was located at Merchants Motor Lines building. The vehicle was towed. The case is still under investigation.

At 12:37 p.m. Saturday, felony criminal mischief charges were filed in reference to damages to a Great Western Motel room earlier that morning. Police were called to the motel twice between midnight at 2 p.m. on that date, and took four males and a female into custody for public intoxication. The female, a juvenile, was released to a guardian.

Damage included holes punched in the bathroom walls, burns on the carpet, a bent towel rack, broken switches, writing on a wall, a broken lamp, and a missing cable converter box.

In one other report, police were notified at 5:18 p.m. Sunday that someone had found a girl's 10-speed bicycle in the alley of the 2600 block of Ave. K. The bike was taken to the police station.

dinator Julie Strunk told commissioners that some addressing cards delivered a month ago had not been returned. Strunk said that an effort is made to identify those who have not returned cards, but eventually those failing to complete the information and return the card may not be a part of the 911 emergency system.

Strunk also said that all rural residents in Precincts 3 and 4 should have received cards but those who have not should contact her at the county courthouse.

Precinct 1 Commissioner Jerry Morgan said today that some 14 sets of law books had been removed from the county law library and an effort was being made to sell the books, which include current additions of federal and state publications.

By eliminating supplements on these sets, which are duplicates or seldom used, Morgan estimates the county is saving $6,500, making the library self-supporting.

Commissioners will also look at establishing regular hours at the county airport. Currently, there is no policy on the hours of the facility, said Precinct 2 Commissioner Roy Idom.

In addition, later this week commissioners will discuss county employee health insurance and Tex Pool investments.

Gray presided at the meeting in the absence of County Judge Bob Doolittle. Present were commissioners Idom, Morgan and Gannaway.

Health

"We appreciate all of those who donated prizes for the health fair and helped make Healthfest '91 a tremendous success," said Dillard. Tim Lancaster, hospital CEO, expressed his appreciation to Cogdell employees who volunteered their time.

"We are very fortunate to have such highly skilled and dedicated professionals," said Lancaster, who also noted the number of positive responses received from members of the community attending the health fair.

Health fair committee members were Dillard, Chris Bane, Lana Chambers, Iva Haywood, Brenda Meurer, Kris Riojas and Pat Vineyard.

Organizers added that they hope to build on this year's success in planning Healthfest '92.

DPS notes mishap

A hit-and-run accident involving a utility pole was reported to Department of Public Safety officials Saturday.

According to the accident report, the mishap occurred at 4:30 p.m. at Texas Ave. and Texas Hwy. 208. An unknown vehicle struck a utility pole owned by TU Electric. Damage was estimated at $200.

Mishap injures Abilene man

A 32-year-old Abilene man was treated at Cogdell Memorial Hospital emergency room Saturday for accidental gunshot wounds to the face, chest and right arm.

Bruce Alton Boyd Jr. was apparently injured during a hunting accident in Fisher County Saturday and transported to Cogdell at 9:25 a.m.

He was later transferred by Snyder EMS to Abilene, where he was placed under the care of a family physician. He was reported in good condition and his wounds — caused by shotgun pellets — were considered non-life-threatening.

Clerk killed

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — An employee was killed at a grocery store across the street from the San Angelo Police Department.

The store manager found Donald James Huisenga Jr., 38, face down in the cashier's box early Sunday. Police reports say the clerk had been bleeding profusely.

The slaying occurred some time between midnight Saturday and shortly after 2 a.m. Sunday, police said.

Workers at the store's alarm company notified the manager when they did not receive the usual call from store employees leaving the "M" System store, the San Angelo Standard-Times reported.

Astro-Graph
By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

Nov. 4, 1991

Conditions in general look rather hopeful for you in the year ahead. When you do get into sticky situations, Lady Luck should be there with the cavalry just in the nick of time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Members of your family might profit from delegating the shopping chores to you today. You're the one who will know how to get the best values for every dollar spent. Major changes are ahead for Scorpio in the coming year. Send for Scorpio's Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You might have an opportunity to get a critical matter involving a friend off your chest today. Talk it out in detail until both parties feel satisfied.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Follow your intuition today in your business dealings with others. Use your perceptions as a support to your logical assessments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) There is a loyal, old friend you haven't had too much time for lately. Make it a point today to take some of the slack out of the bonds that bind you together.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In career situations today, the race is likely to be won by the smartest, not the swiftest. Put on your thinking cap, and don't trip over your own feet.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be alert, because today you might learn of something extremely important. The purveyor of this information is a friend of long standing, and what's said should be restricted to the parties involved.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your determination in pursuing objectives will be impressive today. Equally as important, others will recognize your intentions and step out of your way.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It may be necessary for you to make difficult decisions today. Even though companions might not agree with your reasoning, they'll admire your courage in sticking to your guns.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You may embark upon a rather risky endeavor today. However, if you lay out your plans carefully, knowing each step you must take, it has a good chance of succeeding.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you hug the middle of the road today in social involvements, you'll fare better with friends than you would by taking one side or the other.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There is some type of preventive maintenance you can perform in your house today that could spare you from calling an expensive repairman. Do it yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be sure to include an introverted friend in your plans today. If the invitation doesn't come from you, it won't come from anywhere else.

Not responsible director says

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — The director of Arnold Schwarzenegger's "Terminator" movies scoffs at suggestions filmmakers are responsible for violence in society.

"People would still chop each others' heads off" even if the only movies produced were films like "Driving Miss Daisy," James Cameron said.

Drug convicts don't serve much time

DALLAS (AP) — The public outrage about drugs and crime has not led to longer sentences for those convicted of drug offenses, state officials and parole statistics indicate.

"It doesn't make the old saw about 'crime doesn't pay' ring very true," said Tom Krampitz, executive director of the Texas District and County Attorneys Association.

"If I were a drug trafficker, I'd look at the cost-benefit analysis, and a few months in the pen isn't much of a deterrent. It's the cost of doing business."

Verlean Crow was convicted of dealing cocaine in Dallas, and prosecutors wanted him to spend several years behind bars.

Last June, the 47-year-old felon received a 15-year prison sentence on four counts of selling cocaine.

But like thousands of others convicted on drug offenses, Crow's sentence didn't mean much. He was paroled last month after serving only 18 months.

Crow's case isn't the exception in Texas — it's the rule, according to a study by The Dallas Morning News. Results of the study were published in the newspaper's Sunday editions.

The study involved 635 inmates released from state prisons during the week Sept. 9-13.

The problem has not gone unnoticed by state officials, who say the early releases are part of an overloaded criminal justice system that is constantly trying to make room for new inmates.

"In order for the prisons to accept more people, someone has to be released," said Raven Cazen, spokeswoman for the state Board of Pardons and Parole. "It doesn't surprise me that (drug offenders) are the first people getting released when you've got to consider that they're non-assaultive persons."

"I can't say they're the best (release prospects), but we're also looking at it from victims of violent crimes' point of view, and I'd say they posed the lesser threat to the community than someone who is a rapist, armed robber or serial killer," she said.

State law requires drug offenders to serve one-fourth of their sentence, but "good time" awards could allow someone sentenced to five years to become eligible for parole within six months.

Dallas Police Chief Bill Rathburn said he sees regular reminders of an imperfect legal system.

"We clearly have a problem with drug dealers coming back again and again and again," he said. "I'm sure they've figured it out, and I think that's why we see the repeaters time and again."

"That kind of an actual sentence served is not a deterrent to anybody."

Members of the state's 18-person parole board are appointed by the governor. That appointment is a full-time job that requires each member to interview thousands of inmates annually.

Three parole board members sit as a panel to decide whether to parole an inmate based on the personal interview, his criminal history, family background, job prospects and prison conduct.

Krampitz said he does not blame parole board members for working within a system that offers few choices.

"It's not a choice between the two bests, it's the two worsts," he said. "We bounce out those drug offenders quicker so that those who are out there murdering, raping and robbing will stay there longer.

Ex-king stabbed

ROME (AP) — A man posing as a journalist repeatedly stabbed the former king of Afghanistan at his home in Rome today, police said.

Mohammed Zaher Shah, 47, suffered multiple wounds, but the hospital where he was being treated said he was out of danger, according to the press office of the Carabinieri, Italy's paramilitary police.

The former king has been living in exile in Rome since he was overthrown in 1973 while vacationing in Italy.

Reclaiming Control of Texas Prisons

By DAN MORALES, Attorney General

For nineteen long and costly years, our state prison system has been governed by outsiders. Texans have been forced to witness the evolution of an environment in which the rights of criminals seem to be more vigorously guarded than the rights of their victims.

Recent progress aimed at reversing this alarming trend could well be the catalyst to return control of our prisons to state leaders, while also restoring proper recognition and protection of the first right of every Texan: the right to be safe in our homes, in our businesses, and on our streets.

Last month, state and county officials settled the difficult jail overcrowding lawsuit. County jails across Texas have for too long been filled with state prisoners who cannot be sent to state facilities because of a desperate lack of available cells. In the wake of last month's settlement, we now have an historic opportunity to seize upon the momentum and take the next step toward reclaiming complete control of our prisons.

The history of the lawsuit that led to our loss of state control has been particularly arduous. On June 29, 1972, inmate David Ruiz filed a handwritten petition with Federal Judge William Wayne Justice, stating that living conditions in Texas prisons were unconstitutional. Two years later, his and seven other inmate petitions were consolidated into a class action lawsuit known as Ruiz v. Estelle, which cited overcrowding problems, the use of inmates as guards, inadequate health care, solitary confinement, and a host of other abuses. In December 1980, after a 161-day trial that included some 350 witnesses and more than 1,500 exhibits, Judge Justice declared the system unconstitutional, ordered sweeping reforms, and appointed a special federal master to oversee our prisons.

Today, our prison system is in compliance with federal standards in all aspects, and we are prepared to prove that we have a mechanism in place to ensure that they never again fall into unconstitutional disrepair.

In my second week on the job as Attorney General, I filed a motion to end the litigation and federal supervision because I don't believe Texans want to see the suit and outside control of our prisons drag on into yet another decade. During the recent legislative session, specific regulatory measures were enacted with the help of Governor Richards, Lt. Governor Bullock, Speaker Lewis, and their criminal justice leadership teams. These measures provide that, as our prison system grows to accommodate more prisoners, the availability of medical, recreational, academic, and other inmate facilities will grow in concert. The measures also put in place a structure that will closely monitor inmate population growth. And they modify our prison policies in such a way that Texas prisons can become more civilized and more cost effective with strict guidelines for inmate classification, staffing, nutrition, health care, disciplinary actions, facility maintenance, and other concerns.

In addition to these regulatory measures, the Legislature laid the groundwork for the construction of more than 25,000 additional prison cells to ensure that adequate space exists to house those individuals convicted of criminal acts.

An integral part of this initiative is the dedication of some 12,000 prison beds to confine and treat those criminals whose abuse of drugs and alcohol has affected their ability to follow society's laws. As many as 85 percent of those individuals who break our laws do so because of substance abuse. If we are to succeed in truly turning the tide of crime, we must close the revolving door that shuttles addiction-driven criminals in and out of our criminal justice system.

These actions represent the most comprehensive effort to date to address the needs of our criminal justice system and to end federal control of our state prisons. Texas voters will now be called upon to lend their support to this effort by approving the $1.1 billion bond package on the November 5 ballot to fund the construction of these new prison cells.

Voter approval of these bonds will ensure that our state's best effort is made to inject stability and predictability into our criminal justice system. It will also place Texas in the best position to end the Ruiz litigation once and for all. It is for these reasons that I encourage voters to exercise their right to vote and support Proposition 4 on November 5.

As the state's chief law enforcement official, I recognize that the coming years will bring no escape from the increasing numbers of Texans sent to our prisons, no escape from the need for more prison capacity and more jail cells, no escape from the need to choose very carefully from among the array of community-based sentencing options.

I believe, however, that we can now escape the specter of a prison system governed by the federal courts. The people of Texas are tired of the courts running our affairs, and they believe the time has come to put our policy-making authority back in the hands of those who have been duly-elected to represent the people of this state—where it belongs.

Voting yes on the November prison bond proposal is a critical step toward reclaiming control of Texas prisons.

Safe blood hard to find in Zaire

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — In a city with one of the world's highest known AIDS rates, the main blood bank has run out of testing agents for the virus and some hospitals are dispensing untested blood.

"It's criminal. They are giving transfusions without knowing, and they know some of the blood is contaminated. But they have no choice. It's the way of the future," said Dr. Manzila Tarande.

Manzila is the Zairean doctor left in charge of Project AIDS, a U.S.-funded and run research program until September, when American doctors fled amid domestic political turmoil.

Foreign governments and relief agencies had supplied AIDS testing kits and funds to hospitals in Kinshasa. But when they pulled their personnel out because of riots triggered by a mutiny by President Mobutu Sese Seko's poorly paid troops, the money and supplies went with them.

Soldiers have stolen much of the supplies the foreign aid organizations left behind, according to Dr. Pelagie Maholo, blood bank director of Mama Yemo Hospital, and Dr. Bernard Hody, chief of Doctors Without Borders-Zaire.

"When donors arrive we just ask them what blood group they are and take the blood. We have no facilities for testing it and no choice but to give it," lamented Dr. Oma Lok at Kalembe-Lembe Hospital, the city's main children's hospital.

Mama Yemo Hospital, the city's main hospital, hasn't been forced to give blood without testing it. "But it's a day-to-day affair. Each day we go from one place to another looking for someone who can give us the test agents," said Maholo.

Transfusions of infected blood is a major cause of AIDS in Zaire.

"I shudder to think what will happen if we have new riots. We certainly will have to give blood directly without testing it," Maholo said.

On Saturday, Mama Yemo hospital didn't even have enough blood for its normal operations.

"We have 24 units. It's the same as having nothing," said Maholo.

A technician said the hospital normally provides blood for 40 transfusions daily, and supplies other hospitals in the city of 3 million.

Maholo went on Zairean television and radio Saturday to appeal for donors, whose numbers have decreased because of transport and other problems resulting from the collapse of the economy.

She also has appealed to foreign donors to send the AIDS testing agents.

"We have to take in two units of blood for each one we give because so much of it is contaminated with AIDS," she said.

Patients have to supply their own blood by arranging for donations from friends or family or buying it from donors.

Studies over the past three years have estimated that as much as 6.7 percent of Kinshasa's population is infected with the AIDS virus.

Zaire reported 13,000 AIDS cases in 1990.

But the national committee fighting AIDS said this figure was only a small percentage of cases because information collection suffers a lack of staff and facilities.

Gonzalez marks 30th year as congressman

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, a maverick when he was elected 30 years ago today, is still proud to be called a liberal.

"To really be a liberal is one of the greatest honors I could have ever thrown my way," Gonzalez says.

Elected to the House Nov. 4, 1961, Gonzalez was the first Mexican-American from Texas to serve in Congress.

Since then, he has raised the ire of liberals and conservatives alike. But the 75-year-old San Antonio Democrat is quick to point out that his reputation remains spotless.

"I walked through the mud of San Antonio politics. I walked through the mud of state politics in Austin. And for 30 years, I've walked through the mud in Washington, D.C., and I still haven't gotten the tips of my shoes dirty," Gonzalez boasts.

Gonzalez, commonly known as Henry B., has earned a reputation as a shrewd politician.

His service on the San Antonio City Council and in the Texas Senate led to the House, where he is chairman of the Banking Committee.

Gonzalez claims credit for boosts to San Antonio's military bases and legislation that has helped the poor.

He also remains in touch with his constituents.

"This office has to be as accessible to the people as this telephone," Gonzalez said in a recent interview with the San Antonio Express-News, pointing to the instrument atop his desk and next to a sign announcing: "Se Habla Ingles."

But Gonzalez has his critics in Washington, where he is viewed as a loner and maverick, even by some of his colleagues in the Texas delegation. Some members went to Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont, dean of the delegation, earlier this year to complain that Gonzalez was not cooperating on various legislation.

Brooks avoided an intradelegation squabble by convincing the others that it was in their interest not to challenge the occasionally stubborn Gonzalez.

Last year, Gonzalez called for the impeachment of President Bush for sending troops to the Persian Gulf without consent of Congress. Gonzalez also had called for the impeachment of President Ronald Reagan.

Didn't believe Hill

NEW YORK (AP) — Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas' wife says Anita Hill accused him of sexual harassment because she was in love with him and "never got what she wanted."

Virginia Thomas also said faith helped her and Thomas through his stormy Senate confirmation hearings.

"It was spiritual warfare," Mrs. Thomas said in People magazine. "Good versus evil. ... We shut the kitchen blinds and turned on Christian praise music to survive the worst days."

Mrs. Thomas said she believes Hill's allegations were "obviously political" because of their timing. Hill claimed during the confirmation process that Thomas harassed her when she worked for him in the early 1980s.

Police shoot south Dallas man

DALLAS (AP) — A 70-year-old man who pointed his pistol at police and "clicked" it twice was shot and wounded after he refused to drop the weapon, police said.

The man, who was not immediately identified, was in critical condition at Baylor University Medical Center early today. He suffered bullet wounds.

Deputy Police Chief Pam Walt said the man "clicked" the gun twice after pointing it at officers.

Officers were called to the scene late Sunday after the man, who had been drinking, shot at a woman, Sgt. Patty Ellyett said.

Witnesses told police the man had been shooting at his girlfriend and neighbors. Two officers arrived to find the man holding a gun, said Sgt. J.S. Kaiser.

"He pulled a trigger, I don't know if there was any ammunition in the gun," Ellyett said.

Isaac Turner, a friend of the wounded man, said the man had bought a .22-caliber pistol at an area flea market earlier in the day.

Turner said he did not know why his friend bought the pistol and said he told his friend to put the weapon away before police arrived.

Incumbent mayor trails in poll

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire is trailing her top two contenders in a poll conducted the week before Tuesday's election.

The Houston Chronicle's poll, which questioned 411 registered voters last week, showed candidate Bob Lanier with 31 percent, Sylvester Turner with 21 percent and Mrs. Whitmire with 16 percent. The remaining third was undecided.

If no candidate gets the majority of votes, the top two finishers would meet in a runoff election. The poll's results, published in the Chronicle's Sunday editions, indicated Turner would meet Lanier in a runoff.

However, the poll's margin of error was six-percentage points, meaning Mrs. Whitmire was statistically within range of edging out Turner.

In a similar poll conducted in September, Mrs. Whitmire was favored by 31 percent, Lanier had 26 percent and Turner had 14 percent.

The 411 respondents in last week's poll were among the 500 polled in September. The rest couldn't be reached, the newspaper said.

University of Houston political scientist Richard Murray conducted the surveys for the Chronicle through the university's Center for Public Policy.
