That such a disgraceful procedure could have been wished on Texas would have been declared an impossibility a year ago.

The Hesperian thinks the convention system in Texas never did any worse and couldn't do as bad again. And we write now about the same thing we would have written had the result been different in the senatorial campaign. The klan is not powerful enough in Texas to elect a candidate. Nor is the "light wine and strong beer" clique strong enough to elect a candidate. But the two together managed to make Texas people look like a bunch of "boobs" in the eyes of the nation. If a convention of representatives from the different counties of the state could do worse we wonder how it would be undertaken.

CARRYING ON

Although the past two months of bad weather for crops have been very serious and have worked a hardship on all alike, striking first at the farmer ,agood illustration of the spirit of "carrying on" is found in the merchant of Floydada-one and all-who have gone to market, have provided as usual for their fall and winter trade and are prepared to take care of their customers in an extraordinarily excellent way. That these merchants will reap the reward in increased homebusiness and will also reach out and get "long-distance" business in large amounts cannot be gainsaid. The dry goods merchant is perhaps the best example because his business is dealand trends, and they are now ready to to-wit: tell their customers, near and far,

who won't stagnate.

A Startling Comparison

Here is a rather startling comparison between THE NEW and OLD LOAN METHODS:

THE OLD METHOD

The interest on a straight old line 7 per cent loan of $5,000.00 would amount to $350.00 annual interest and 33 of these payments would amount to $11,550.00 and the principal sum of $5,000.00 is still due and unpaid, making a total amount of $16,550.00 under the OLD METHOD OF FARM

THE NEW METHOD

A similar loan of $5,000.00 amortized under the NEW PLAN at 6 per cent interest with semi-annual payments of 1-2 of 1 per cent of the principal would cost as follows: 65 semi-annual payments of $175.00 principal and interest.......$11,375.00

AND THE MORTGAGE IS CANCELLED AND

RELEASED

SUMMARY

Cost of OLD line straight 7 per cent loan, interest and principal $16,550.00 Cost of NEW method, 6 per cent Amortization loan, principal

Why Chiropractors Adjust Vertebrae

It does not readily occur to those who are not familiar with Chiropractic, what relation could possibly exist between a vertebrae of the backbone and a sore foot, rheumatism in the knee, a boil on the wrist or a case of lung fever, scarlet fever, typhoid fever, or any other pain, sickness or ailment they might have. They can readily understand that an application to the back for pain in the back will relieve, but when it comes to telling them that stimulus will remove a boil on the calf of the leg after proper adjustment of the vertebrae in the lower part of the back, and that a fever, be it typhoid or otherwise, will be removed in one to a few days after proper adjusting, their imagination flags and desbelief takes possession of them.

Many laugh and refuse to give it consideration, but others being of a more modern spirit, announce that "they must be shown;" they are investigators and are soon relieved from pain and sickness and harm, as others must come to know, that these results which at first seem so strange and impossible, are simply brought about by coming into harmony, by placing the parts of the human machine in relation as nature made it.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—During the height of the New Orleans carnival season Jachin Fell, wealthy though somewhat mysterious citizen, and Dr. Ansley, are discussing a series of robberies by an individual known as the Midnight Masquer, who, invariably attired as an aviator, has long defled the police. Joseph Mailiard, wealthy banker, is giving a ball that night, at which the Masquer has threatened to appear and rob the guests. Fell and Ansley, on their way to the affair, meet a girl dressed as Columbine, seemingly known to Fell, but masked, who accompanies them to the ball.

CHAPTER III.—In his library Joseph Maillard and a group of friends are held up and robbed by the Midnight Masquer. CHAPTER IV.—Lucie Ledanois, the last of an old family, is in straitened circumstances. Joseph Maillard's handling of her funds has been unfortunate. Fell is an old friend of her parents and deeply interested in the girl. Henry Gramont, really the prince de Gramont, son of a French father and an American mother, but who spurns the title of prince, is enamored of Lucie and believes himself a not unfavored suitor.

CHAPTER V.—Gramont's chauffeur, Hammond, sergeant in the American army in France, and there known to Gramont, lives with him. He was the original Midnight Masquer, and Gramont, for a particular purpose, after discovering Hammond's activities, assumes the role. Where Hammond had been a robber for financial gain, Gramont, of course, is not. He arranges to return the "loot" to those whom he has robbed. The jewels and money, in individual packages, are got ready for delivery next day to their original owners. That night they are stolen from Gramont's auto.

CHAPTER VI.—Ben Cacherre, an in-

CHAPTER VI.-Ben Cacherre, an in dividual of unsavory character, appears to be associated with Jachin Fell. He has a peculiar interview with one Mem-phis Izzy Gumberts, notorious influential crook, in which there is significant refer-ence to a mysterious "boss."

CHAPTER VII.—Lucie summons Gramont to her home and shows him the packages from his auto. He admits he is the Midnight Masquer, but convinces her that he had no thought of robbery. He refuses, however, to explain his purpose. The packages are returned to their owners.

CHAPTER VIII.—That evening Fell, Gramont, and Dr. Ansiev, at the Krewe of Comus ball, are accosted by an intoxtcated masked individual whom they recognize as Bob Maiflard. He invites them to a convivial party in a private room. They refuse, and Gramont leaves the building. Joseph Maillard seeks his son, fearing public scandal as a result of Bob's condition. With Fell and Ansley they find the room where the revels are going on. Entering they discover an individual, attired as an aviator, in the act of robbing the intoxicated youths. In a struggle that ensues Maillard is shot and killed. The "Masquer" escapes.

CHAPTER IX.

On the Bayou.

At three o'clock on the morning of Ash Wednesday the great white Maison Blanche building was deserted and desolate, so far as its offices were concerned. The cleaners and scrubwomen had long since finished their tasks and departed. Out in the streets the tag-ends of carnival were running on a swiftly obbing tide. A single elevator in the building was, however, in use. A single suite of offices, with carefully drawn blinds was lighted and occupied. They were not ornate, these offices. They consisted of two rooms, a small reception room and a large private office, both lined to the celling with books, chiefly law books. In the larger room were sitting three men. One of the three. Ben Chacherre, sat in a chair tipped back against the wall, his eyes closed. From time to time he opened those sparkling black eyes of his, and through narrow-slitted lids directed keen glances at the other two men.

One of the men was the chief of police. The second was Jachin Fell. whose offices these were.

"Even if things are as you say, which I don't doubt at all." said the chief, slowly, "I can't believe the boy did it! And darn it all, if I pinch him there's goin' to be a h- of a scandal!

Fell shrugged his shoulders, and made response in his toneless voice: "Chief, you're up against facts. Those facts are bound to come out and the newspapers will nail your hide to the wall in a minute. You've a bare chance to save yourself by taking in young Maillard at once."

The chief chewed hard on his cigar. "I don't want to save myself by putting the wrong man behind the bars." he returned. "It sure looks like he was the Masquer all the while, but you say that he wasn't. You say this was his only job-a joke that turned | showed up!" out bad."

"Those are the facts," said Fell. "I don't want to accuse a man of crimes I know he did not commit. We have the look with almost a trace of defithe best of evidence that he did commit this crime. If the newspapers fasten the entire Midnight Masquer size of it, Fell. You're keepin' quiet business on him, as they're sure to about the name of the real Masquer; do, we can't very well help him. 'The later editions, comin' out now.' said the chief, "will crowd all that stuff off the front page with the Maillard murder. Darn it, Fell! Whether est the young fool." Chacherre chuckled. Jachin Fell smiled faintly. "Nothing could be plainer, chief," he responded. "First, Bob Maillard comes to us in front of the opera house, and talks about a great joke that he's going to spring on his friends across the way-

"How'd you know who he was?" interjected the chief, shrewdly.

"Gramont recognized him: Ansley and I confirmed the recognition. He was more or less intoxicated-chiefly more. Now, young Maillard was not in the room at the moment of the murder-unless he was the Masquer. Five minutes afterward he was found in a nearby room, hastily changing out of an aviator's uniform into his masquerade costume. Obviously, he had assumed the guise of the Masquer as a joke on his friends, and the joke had a tragic ending. Further, he was in the aviation service during the war. and so had the uniform ready to hand. You couldn't make anybody believe that he hasn't been the Masquer all the time!"

"Of course," and the chief nodded perplexedly. "It'd be a clear case only you call me in and say that he wasn't the Masquer! D-n it, Fell, this thing has my goat!"

"What's Maillard's story?" struck in Ben Chacherre.

"He denies the whole thing," said the worried chief. "According to his story, which sounded straight the way he tells it, he meant to pull off the joke on his friends and was dressing in the Masquer's costume when he heard the shots. He claims that the shots startled him and made him change back. He swears that he had not entered the other room at all, except in his masquerade clothes. He says the murderer must have been the real Masquer. It's likely enough, because all young Maillard's crowd knew about the party that was to be held in that room during the Comus ball-" "No matter," said Fell, coldly.

"Chief, this is an open and shut case; the boy was bound to lie. That he killed his father was an accident, of course, but none the less it did take place."

"The boy's a wreck this minute." The chief held a match to his unlighted cigar. "But you say that he ain't the original Masquer?"

"No!" Fell spoke quietly. "The original Masquer was another person, and had nothing to do with the present case. This information is confidential and between ourselves."

"Oh, of course," assented the chief. 'Well, I suppose I got to pull Maillard, but I hate to do it. I got a hunch that he ain't the right party.

"Virtuous man!" Fell smiled thinly. 'According to all the books, the chief of police is only too glad to fasten the crime on anybody-'

"Books be d-d!" snorted the chief, and leaned forward earnestly. "Look here, Fell! Do you believe in your heart that Maillard killed his father?" Fell was silent a moment under that intent scrutiny.

"From the evidence, I am forced against my will to believe it," he said at last. "Of course, he'll be able to prove that he was not the Masquer on previous occasions; his alibis will take care of that. Up to the point of the murder, his story is all right. And, my friend, there is a chance-a very slim, tenuous chance—that his entire story is true. In that case, another person must have appeared as the Masquer, which seems unlikely-"

"Or else," put in Ben Chacherre, smoothly, "the real original Masquer

There was an instant silence. Jachin Fell regarded his henchman with steady gray eyes. Ben Chacherre met ance. The chief frowned darkly.

He departed. Neither Fell nor Chacherre moved or spoke for a space. When at length the clang of the elevator door resounded through the deserted corridors Ben Chacherre slipped from his chair and went to the outer door. He glanced out into the hall, closed the door, and with a nod returned to his chair.

"Well?" Jachin Fell regarded him with intent, searching eyes. "Have you any light to throw on the occasion?

Chacherre's usual air of cool impudence was never in evidence when he talked with Mr. Fell.

"No," he said, shaking his head 'Hammond worked on the car until about nine o'clock, then beat it to bed, I guess. I quit the job at ten, and his light had been out some time. Well, master, this is a queer affair! There's no doubt that Gramont pulled it, eh?"

"You think so?" asked Fell.

Chacherre made a gesture of assent. When the tree falls, the kid can climb it! Any fool can see that Gramont was the man. Don't you think so yourself, master?"

Jachin Fell nodded.

"Yes. But we've no evidence-everything lies against young Maillard. Early in the morning Gramont goes to Paradis to examine that land of Miss Ledanois' along the bayou. He'll probably say nothing of this murder to Hammond, and the chauffeur may not find out about it until a day or two-they get few newspapers down there.

"Drive down to Paradis in the morning, Ben; get into touch with Hammond, and discover what time Gramont got home tonight. Write me what you find out. Then take charge of things at the Gumberts place. Make sure that every car is handled right.

A headquarters 1 an from Mobile will be here tomorrow to trace the Nonpareil Twelve that Gramont now owns.' Chacherre whistled under his breath.

What?" Jachin Fell smiled slightly and nodded. "Yes. If Gramont remains at Paradis, I may send him on down there-I'm not sure yet. I intend to get something on that man Hammond." "But you can't land him that way,

"Master, you are magnificent!" he said, and rose. "Well, if there is notning further on hand, I shall go to bed.' "An excellent program," said Jachin Fell, and took his hat from the desk "I must get some sleep myself."

They left the office and the building together. Three hours afterward the dawn had set in-a cold, gray and dismal dawn that rose upon a city littered Wednesday" it was, in sober fact Thus far, the city in general was ignorant of the tragedy which had taken place at the very conclusion of its get a fresh fish out of the bayougayest carnival season. Within a few hours business and social circles Hammond grinned widely. would be swept by the fact of Joseph Maillard's murder, but at this early point of the day the city slept. The morning papers, which today carried a news story that promised to shock and stun the entire community, were not vet distributed.

Rising before daylight, Henry Gramont and Hammond breakfasted early and were off by six in the car. They were well outside town and sweeping on their way to Terrebonne parish and the town of Paradis before they realized that the day was not going to brighten appreciably. Instead, it remained very cloudy and gloomy, with a chill threat of rain in the air.

Weather mattered little to Gramont. When finally the excellent highway was left behind, and they started on the last lap of their seventy-mile ride, they found the parish roads execrable and the going slow. Thus, noon was at hand when they at length pulled into Paradis, the town closest to Lucie Ledanois' bayou land. The rain was through. still holding off.

"Too cold to rain," observed Gramont. "Let's hit for the hotel and locate the land, which is somewhere

The man who brought in fish or oysters in his skiff might be a bayou fisherman, and he might be a murderer wanted in ten states. Curiosity was apt to prove extremely unhealthy. Like the Atchafalaya, where chance dered elsewhere, the Terrebonne swamps have their own secrets and know how to keep them.

Gramont had no difficulty in locating the Ledanois land, and he found that it was by no means in the swamp. A part of it, lying closer to Houma had been sold and was now included in the new oil district; it was this portion which Joseph Maillard had sold

The remainder, and the largest portion, lay north of Paradis and ran along the west bank of the bayou for half a mile. A long-abandoned farm, it was high ground, with the timber well cleared off and excellently located; but tenants were hard to get and shiftless when obtained, so that the place had not been farmed for the last five years or more. After getting these facts, Gramont consulted with Hammond.

"We'd better buy some grub here in town and arrange to stay a couple of nights on the farm, if necessary," he said. "There are some buildings there, so we'll find shelter. Along the bayou are summer cottages-I believe some of them rather pretentious placesand we ought to find the road pretty decent. It's only three or four miles out of town." With some provisions piled in the car, they set forth. The road wound along the bayou side, past ancient 'Cajun farms and the squat homes of fishermen. Here and there had been placed camps and summer cottages, nestling amid groups of huge oaks and cypress, whose fronds of silver-gray moss hung in drooping clusters like pale and ghostly shrouds.

Watching the road closely, Gramont suddenly found the landmarks that had been described to him, and ordered Hammond to stop and turn in at a gap in the fence which had once been an entrance gate. "Here we are! Those are the buildngs off to the right. Whew! I should say it had been abandoned! Nothing much left but ruins. Go ahead!" Before them, as they drove in from the road by a grass-covered drive, showed a house, shed, and barn amid a cluster of towering trees. Indeed, trees were everywhere about the farm, which had grown up in a regular sapling forest. The buildings were in a ruinous state-clapboards hanging loosely, roofs dotted by gaping holes, doors and windows long since gone.

Leaving the car, Gramont, followed by the chauffeur, went to the front doorway and surveyed the wreckage inside.

"What do you say, Hammond? Think we can stop here, or go back to the hotel? It's not much of a run to town-"

Hammond pointed to a wide fireplace facing them.

"I can get this shack cleaned out in about half an hour-this one room, anyhow. When we get a fire goin' in there, and board up the windows and doors, we ought to be comfortable enough. But suit yourself, cap'n! It's your funeral."

Gramont laughed. "All right. Go ahead and clean up, then, and if rain comes down we can camp here. Be sure and look for snakes and vermin. with the aftermath of carnival. at home and go to it. We've most of the afternoon before us."

Gramont left the house, and headed down toward the bayou shore. He took a letter from his pocket, opened it, and glanced over it anew. It was an old letter, one written him nearly two years previously by Lucie Ledanois. It had been written merely in the endeavor to distract the thoughts of a wounded soldier, to bring his mind to Louisiana, away from the stricken fields of France. In the letter Lucie had described some of the more interesting features of Bayou Terrebonne—the oyster and shrimp fleets, the Chinese and Filipino villages along the gulf, the far-spread cypress swamps; the bubbling fountains, natural curiosities, that broke up through the streams and bayous of the whole wide parish—fountains that the earth's interior, and breaking

Gramont knew that plans were already afoot to tap this field of natural gas and pipe it to New Orleans. Oil get something to eat. I'll have to had been found, too, and all the state was now oil-mad. Fortunes were be ing made daily, and other fortunes were being lost daily by those who Gramont stared at it. travelers find themselves abruptly or- motionless. He watched it for a space -then, abruptly, he started. It was a violent start, a start of sheer amazement and incredulity.

He leaned forward, staring no longer at the gas dome, but at the water closer inshore. For a moment he thought that his senses had deceived him, then he saw that the thing was there indeed, there beyond any doubt -a very faint trace of iridescent light that played over the surface of the

"It can't be possible!" he muttered, bending farther over. "Such a thing

happens too rarely-' His heart pounded violently; exitement sent the blood rushing to his brain in blinding swirls. He was gripped by the gold fever that comes upon a man when he makes the astounding discovery of untold wealth lying at his feet, passed over and disregarded by other and less-discerning men for days and years!

It was oil, no question about it. An extremely slight quantity, true; so slight a quantity that there was no film on the water, no discernible taste to the water. Gramont brought it to his mouth and rose, shaking his head.

Where did it come from? It had no connection with the gas bubbles-at least, it did not come from the dome of water and gas. How long he stood there staring Gramont did not know. His brain was afire with the possibilities. At length he stirred into action and started up the bayou bank, from time to time halting to search the water below him, to make sure that he could still discern the faint irides-

He followed it rod by rod, and found that it rapidly increased in strength. It must come from some very tiny surface seepage close at hand, that was lost in the bayou almost as rapidly as it came from the earthdepths. Only accidentally would a man see it-not unless he were searching the water close to the bank, and even then only by the grace of chance. Suddenly Gramont saw that he had lost the sign. He halted. No, not lost, either! Just ahead of him was a patch of reeds, and a recession of the shore. He advanced again. Inside the reeds he found the oily smear, still so faint that he could only detect it at certain angles. Glancing up, he could see a fence at a little distance, evidently the boundary fence of the Ledanois land; the bushes and trees thinned out here, and on ahead was cleared ground. He saw, through the bushes, glimpses of buildings. Violent disappointment seized him. Was he to lose this discovery, after all? Was he to find that the seepage came from ground belonging to some one else? No-he stepped back hastily, barely in time to avoid stumbling into a tiny trickle of water, a rivulet that ran down into the bayou, a tributary so insignificant that it was invisible ten feet distant! And on the surface a faint iridescence.

Excitement rising anew within him, Gramont turned and followed this rivulet, his eyes aflame with eagerness. It led him for twenty feet, and ceased abruptly, in a bubbling spring that welled from a patch of low tree-inclosed land. Gramont felt his feet sinking in grass, and saw that there was a dip in the ground hereabouts, a swampy little section all to itself. He picked a dry spot and lay down on his face, searching the water with his

Moment after moment he lay there, watching. Presently he found the slight trickle of oil again—a trickle so faint and slim that even here, on the surface of the tiny rivulet, it could be discerned only with great difficulty. A very thin seepage, concluded Gramont; a thin oil, of course. So faint a little thing, to mean so much! It came from the Ledanois land, no doubt of it. What did that matter, though? His eyes widened with flaming thoughts as he gazed down at the slender thread of water. No matter at all where this came from-the main point was proven by it! There was oil here for the finding, oil down in the thousands of feet below, oil so thick and abundant that it forced itself up through the earth fissures to find an outlet!

"Instead of going down five or six thousand feet," he thought, exultantly, "we may have to go down only as were caused by gas seeping up from many hundred. But first we must get an option or a lease on all the land roundabout-all we can secure! There will be a tremendous boom the minute this news breaks. If we get those options, we can sell them over again at a million per cent profit, and even if we don't strike oil in paying quantities, we'll regain the cost of our drilling! The revival meeting which has just closed at Carr's Chapel Church, we feel has been a spiritual blessing to large numbers who attended. The strong sermons by Rev. L. H. Davis, the music under the direction of Mr. Price Scott, the various prayer meetings at sun rise and the deep desire of the people for a real revival has helped to bring the spiritual uplift which so many have experienced.

Will McCarty and family of Fort Worth, spent one night last week at the home of D. T. Scott.

Miss Minnie Agnes Wilson is a guest at the home of W. C. Clubb.

Rev. L. H. Davis, D. T. Scott, Price Scott, Mather Carr, L. E. Williams and Herman Krause attended the district conference of the M. E. Church at Hale Center Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Waddill and family, of Petersburg, and Mrs. Waddill's mother, Mrs. Dixon of East Texas, visited friends and relatives in this community last week.

We are glad for the interest manifested by people out of the community during the revival meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Boothe, of Floydada, called on friends in the community and attended church Sunday night.

Miss Laura Edwards, returned missionary from Korea, spent Sunday at Carr's Chapel and talked to a large audience there Sunday afternoon. Her talk was very interesting and instructive to those interested in missionary work. We are very glad indeed to have had her with us. Several friends and relatives of Miss Edwards attended services Sunday at the Chapel.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Williams and nephew of Waco, and Mr. Hancock and son of Cleburne, spent a few days at the home of L. E. Williams.

Miss Edwards, the missionary, Mr. and Mrs. John Edwards and daughter, Mrs. John Smith and children, Ott Gamble and family, Miss Flavia Baker, Miss Gwendolyn Green, Grandma Holmes and two daughters-in-law, were guests in the Williams home

Who Was It Said: "Let Every Tub On Its Own Bo

The Same Man Said---

"Let them that must disregard promptness and punctuality go on with their work of weakening the faith in mankind, but for me and mine the world must know our kind intentions toward our fellowman."

The First of the Month Will Soon Be Here.

Do we keep faith with those that trust us? Is it worth while for us to meet our obligations when they are due? Must others suffer because we have failed to sacrifice or shall we put forth our best efforts and show to the world that if we should fail to keep one promise or fail to meet obligations that it is not on account of the lack of sacrifice.

The first of the month is almost here and most everyone in Floydada has made preparations to meet their obligations on that date unless otherwise arranged for. We are glad of the fact that Floydada is made up of the highest class citizenship of any town in Texas its size and we are also glad that the majority of this citizenship believes in being punctual in meeting all obligations. We might say at this point, however, that the average monthly collections of all our business firms combined show a general average of less than 50 per cent. This is too small a percentage for a town of Floydada's class to show and since these are facts we feel that no one will take offense because it is called to the attention of the public. We couldn't expect our business men to continue on and on with the same leniency in regard to credits as they have in the past when their monthly averages have run so low. Some may feel that the business men are able to carry their accounts indefinitely, which might be true if it were not for the fact that the business men are forced to keep a buying capital on hand. The business men depend on rapid turnovers for their profits and if they are burdened with a heavy load of past due accounts they are either forced to cut down to short time credits or to see their stock of goods grow smaller day by day. Either of these alternatives would naturally revert back to the consumer. If one consumer fails to meet his obligation when due another must be told that times are hard and further credit must be withheld. The whole thing in a nutshell: You pay me—I will pay him—he will pay you and all will profit in the long run.

Realizing the convenience it affords their patrons, Floydada merchants are at all times willing to extend credit to THOSE WORTHY OF IT.

Think the statements in this ad over just for a minute.

On Sunday morning, August 27th, 1922, the spirit of George L. Roy took its flight to realms above. Deceased was born June 21st, 1859, being 63 years, 2 months and 6 days of age.

About seven years ago Mr. Roy moved to Floyd County from near Wolfe City and has lived the most of that time in the Lakeview Community where his meek and unassuming disposition and Christian character endeared him to all who knew him.

Mr. Roye is survived by his wife, two sons, two daughters, their families, two brothers and two sisters.
