Debunking High Taxes Complaint

Some surprising facts concerning cost of operating the local school system were given by Supt, Robert R. King in a talk to members of the Rotary Club recently.

It may come as a surprise to those who complain about "high" school taxes to learn that local taxpayers pay only 16 per cent of the total cost of operating the school system! Yet, all the benefits from the school system accrue to the resident taxpayers.

Supt. King explained that total income of the school district for the last fiscal year was $327,000, of which $131,858 was from ad valorem tax, the remainder from State Aid in various forms. Of the total tax bill, oil and industries paid $70,099, while $61,759 came from the advalorem tax on local property. Of this latter sum, resident property owners paid $52,495, with non-resident owners of local property paying $9,264.

When we consider that by paying only 16 per cent of the cost of operating and maintaining Haskell's splendid school plant we receive ALL of its benefits, it is difficult to find any basis for complaining about taxes.

The same is true concerning all other local taxes-the resident taxpayer receives the larger benefits while paying the lesser proportion of taxes.

Hospital Project Stymied

Almost two years ago, Haskell County taxpayers approved an $80,000 bond issue for needed improvements and enlargement of the Haskell County Hospital.

A matching grant from Hill-Burton federal funds was to be available, to provide a total of $160,000 for the project. Improvement and enlargement of the hospital was a pressing need at the time, and the passing of almost two years has made the need even greater.

Because Haskell does not have a source of approved domestic water, the Hill-Burton grant has been held up. Administrators have been frank in telling county and hospital officials the grant will not be approved until the hospital has an approved water Hospital officials are reluctant to start a piece-meal program of improvement which could only be carried as far as the $80, 000 bond issue would permit.

They are reluctant, too, about trying to develop a private water system which would only be a temporary solution, with no assurance that this would qualify for the matching grant. There the matter stands. Without a finger being raised in opposition to the hospital project as such, its fate apparently rests on the outcome of the Miller Creek program,

Cablevision Co. Provides Improved Television With Modern Equipment

A large amount of specializ- to electronic waves for transed equipment has been installed in Haskell by the Cable Vision Company in order to pro-vide their customers a complete range of channels and near-perfect reception of television programs.

One of the major units in the 'nstallation is the tower, 410 feet high, located near the northwest edge of town. It is equipped with an electrically controlled elevator for use in servicing equipment on the tower, changing tower lights. etc. The tower and tower base are so constructed as to be able to add additional height if such is required.

The tower can also accommodate micro-wave equipment to open a wider range of transmission and receiving television signals as conditions fustify. The tower was fabricated by the Walsh Welding Service, Abilene, and was erected by Communications Co., San Angelo.

Fourteen antennae are employed: Four for KSWO-TV, Lawton (Channel 7), carried on the cable as Channel 5; four for KSYD-TV, Wichita Falls (Channel 6), carried on the cable as Channel 6; four for KFDX-TV, of Wichita Falls, (Channel 3), carried on the cable as Channel 3; one for KR-BC. Abilene (Channel 9), carried on the cable as Channel 2. An antenna is also attached to the tower for KPAR-TV, Sweetwater (Channel 12) which can be carried over the cable in the event of a prolonged inter-ruption of service from KRBC-TV, or for any special programs on Channel 12 of general interest not carried on the CBS Station in Wichita Falls.

The reason for having four antennae for the Lawton and Wichita Falls stations is to increase the signal strength from those stations. The conversion of the regular channel to the channel carried on the cable is required to provide the most efficient signal strength which in turn provides the maximum. audic and video reception.

In order to preserve the signal strength that contacts the antenna a pre-amplifier is attached to the antenna, which in turn sends the signal without less down the coaxial cable to the equipment room at the base of the tower,

In the equipment room there a bank of equipment including converters that make the channel changes, filter traps that allows only certain sigrals and provides amplificaof signals required for distribution through the cable. In addition there is equipment to produce the music that is carried over Channel 4 of the cable. This is Seeburg equipment that works on the same principle as a record player, except that it contains 600 musical selections which will play constantly for 22 hours ers to handle up to six 40-inch without repeating the same selection. These records are changed periodically to maintain variety. Naturally, this equipment cannot work as an ordinary record player since the sound has to be converted mission over the cable, which St. Ann Catholic is all done in the equipment room at the tower.

There is a main transmission line running to all points of service in town, with 26 amplifiers used at strategic points in the cable system to maintain proper signal strength, thus insuring clear, trouble free reception.

A special tap is made for individual service, which only picks up the desired signal strength to carry to each TV set, Capacitors are used to filter out unwanted signals and to keep interference from getting back into the main line.

The electronic equipment used in the cable system was manufactured and installed by the Jerrold Electronics Company, Philadelphia, Pa., who is the pioneer of Community Antenna Systems in the nation and leader in manufacturing and installation of these sys-

This is a new industry in town and one that created employment for a number of local people during construction and will create permanent employment for others in the operation of the system. It is a business that is expected to grow with the town and render a service in TV reception that has not previously been available. It can be adapted for P. M. Easter Mass at Midnight. many uses for service to the community as the growth is experienced. The cable system is owned by local people who are interested in the welfare of the community.

(Continued from Page 1) expired and he immediately leased the land, along with 3, 500 privately owned surrounding acres. He said he learned of the location from a friend of his who made the discovery in 1927 while working on an oil and gas line through the area.

The mine site is about 10 miles deep in the cedar breaks and much of the work in the past three weeks of operation has been in building a road through this rough county to the river site. After Harrelson got heavy equipment into the area, he started clearing away the land for his copper mine,

Late last week a bulldozer dug into the gold deposit. which lays directly in the river bed. Pumps are being used to keep the water out, Harrelson hopes to start trucking ore out within the next month to a smelter in El Paso. After operations are started, he plans to build a concentration plant at the river site to separate the different ores.

'News has traveled fast out here," Harrelson said, "dozens of residents have been out here to see what we are doing." Digging has turned a large section of the ground a bright green with copper ore and, said Harrelson, "one farmer who has lived around here for 30 years told me he never knew the dirt was that color under-

Harrelson displayed a handfull of pea-sized gold nuggets he had chipped out of the ore with a pocket knife.
