Lawmakers line up to pre-file bills

AUSTIN (AP) — The first day to pre-file bills for the Feb. 27 special legislative session produced proposals that would allow changes in teacher pay structure, require students to practice bus evacuation bills and tighten ethics rules for government officials.

State Sen. Steve Carriker, D-Roby, filed a bill that would allow school districts to abolish the teacher career ladder and use the money to provide a general pay raise for all teachers.

"Educators overwhelmingly agree that the career ladder serves no purpose but to inject more politics into our educational system and lower teacher morale," Carriker said.

State Rep. Alex Moreno, D-Edinburg, on Monday filed a bill that would require students who ride school buses to participate at least once every semester in an emergency bus evacuation drill.

The legislation is in response to last September's deadly bus accident in Alton, in which a soft

2nd suspect

NEW YORK (AP) — A man injured in the crash of a Colombian jetliner passed 14 condoms filled with a white powder, becoming at least the second passenger suspected of carrying cocaine in his intestines, police said.

A nurse at the Nassau County Medical Center told police Monday that a 46-year-old Colombian had passed four of the packages, said Nassau County Detective Brian McCormack. Early today, Antonio Zuluaga passed 10 more, McCormack said.

Authorities said they will test the powder to see whether it is cocaine.

Killer bees

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Representatives of agencies that will be called on to fight the spread of Africanized honey bees, the so-called "killer bees," were to meet today to draw up a battle plan.

The first Africanized bees will likely reach Texas this spring, officials at Texas A&M University say.

But the various agencies that will attempt to stop the spread of the Africanized bees have been hit with budget cuts.

Texas A&M, which handles both research and regulation of bees in Texas, asked the Texas Legislature for $690,000 to deal with the Africanized bees, but the request was denied.

Need medals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army is trying to fill a shortage of medals to give its infantrymen who fought in Panama.

"When we looked ahead, we didn't anticipate needing the ones for Panama," said Shari Lawrence, a spokeswoman for the Army Personnel Command.

The shortage of the combat infantryman's badge cropped up at Ford Ord, Calif., where officials are several thousand shy of the coveted three-inch medals.

Wind-aided grass fire keeps firemen busy over five hours

A rampaging grass fire burned alongside Round Top Road and College Ave. from six miles south of Snyder to the southern edge of town Monday afternoon, raising a tremendous cloud of white smoke that clouded the whole southern sky.

The fire department was notified at 2:48 p.m., and local firefighters and volunteers from Colorado City and Fluvanna worked until 8 p.m. to extinguish the blaze, which a department spokesman said had blackened from 1,200 to 1,500 acres of mostly pastureland.

He said the fire may have started where some men were welding at Round Top Acres, a land development about six miles south of Snyder, although the cause was still being investigated.

Roadgraders from county commissioners' Pcts. 3 and 4 and a backhoe supplied by Thompson Ditching Service were used to cut "fireguards," or areas graded free of grass and foliage.

Fueled by a 35 to 40-mph southwest wind, the fire jumped the fireguards several times and kept the more than 50 firefighters, who met the emergency, scrambling to get back ahead of it.

It jumped College Ave. and burned a small portion of the northwest corner of Western Texas College golf course.

"I had 100 pounds of pressure, and I still couldn't shut that sucker down," a fireman said, recalling when it jumped College in the golf course area.

"There were a couple of times I thought we'd lose it, but we never

Following a review of the applications, testing will be held Feb. 13 beginning at 8 a.m. in the Christian Student Center on campus. Successful applicants will be notified on Feb. 28 and registration will be held March 1.

Applicants must be at least 18 years old, meet weight standards and pass a pre-employment test. A background check is also taken.

Crisis assistance applications taken

Area citizens who meet Department of Energy income guidelines may qualify for energy crisis assistance or weatherization programs.

Applications will be taken at Gentle Dove Ministries, Inc., from 9:30 a.m. until noon and 1 p.m. until 3:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday.

The purpose of the Energy Crisis Program is to provide assistance to eligible people experiencing an energy-related crisis. The Weatherization Program assists people on low incomes by helping reduce utility bills on a long-term basis. It addresses items dealing strictly with energy conservation such as insulating the attic, weatherstripping and replacing broken window panes. Those applying for the programs must be income eligible according to income guidelines as issued by the secretary of Planning and Evaluation. Priority will be given to eligible households with family members 60 years or older, and the handicapped.

Applicants should be prepared to furnish proof of residency and citizenship, proof of social security cards for all household members, and proof of income which may include checks, check stubs, award letters, employer statements or similar documents.

Applications will be taken in the basement at Gentle Dove Ministries, located at 1411 25th St.

Long-time Snyderite Amos Joyce, 91, dies

Services for J.A. "Amos" Joyce, 91, of 2709 28th, were to be held at 4 p.m. today at First Baptist Church Chapel with Rev. Miller Robinson, pastor of Colonial Hill Baptist Church, officiating and Rev. Don Taylor, pastor of First Baptist Church, assisting. Burial was to follow in Hillside Memorial Gardens.

Joyce died at 10:53 a.m. Monday at Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Born Sept. 28, 1898, in Mt. Vernon, he had resided in Snyder since 1920. He was active with his three brothers and their father, James R. Joyce, in the family cotton ginning business, Joyce Gin Company, from 1923 to 1951.

He married Tommie Jenkins Feb. 3, 1928, in Sweetwater. She preceded him in death June 2, 1989. He was also preceded in death by a sister, Ella Mae Templeton of Los Angeles, in 1983, and a brother, John R.

"Sam" Joyce of Snyder, in 1988. He was a Master Mason and a member of Scurry Lodge 706 A.F. and A.M. He served on the Snyder School Board from 1947 to 1949. He was a longtime member of First Baptist Church.

Survivors include a daughter and son-in-law, Jane and Ted Crenwelge of Snyder; two grandchildren, Carrie Cox and Scott Crenwelge, both of Snyder; three great-grandchildren, Teddi and Katy Crenwelge and Courtney Cox, all of Snyder; two brothers, Ixon and Fla "Skipper" Joyce, both of Snyder; a nephew, John Joyce of Dallas; and two nieces, Bette Harris of Abilene and Helen Hatter of Snyder.

Pallbearers were to be Sonny Harrell, Roger Blackard, John Reed, A.C. Floyd Jr., Dean Floyd, Billy Wayne Williams, Wayne Bethel and Tommy Echols.

The SDN Column By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Tolerance is what we have toward matters that don't affect us."

One month of 1990 is about to slip away and we might as well file away one resolution for the New Year into the junk drawer.

Every home and business has at least one junk drawer. If you claim not to have one—it's because you likely have more than one. The junk drawer is universal in nature. It's where you put things you never needed in the first place for that future time that you'll never need it.

A quick check of our office revealed that we now have more junk drawers than we do drawers with necessary information and useful items.

Right under the telephone, for example, is a typical junk drawer. In it is a 1981 Snyder telephone directory along with a "Robinhood" brand golf ball that would be a reject at any miniature golf course.

Most junk drawers have an empty box. Ours is small and once contained six rechargeable nickel-cadmium batteries. We can't find the batteries, but we've saved the box.

One real treasure is a tape of a January, 1988 speech by the darling of Texas education reform, H. Ross Perot. There's an 1986 Ernest Sears calendar, and a used pair of glasses stored there since 1983.

There's lots of buttons: a button commemorating the 100th anniversary of Scurry County, a Reagan-Bush campaign button from 1984, a Bush-Quayle button from 1988 and a "Official Gramm Wagon Puller," from the early 1980s.

There were several items from the 30th anniversary celebration of Snyder Savings and Loan, and a photograph of a 40th birthday observance. The junk drawer included a non-working pocket calculator and an electrical adapter to yet another calculator, probably tucked safely away in another junk drawer.

Fortunately, it was a small drawer. It had a Troy Williamson for mayor button, a nametag, an orange plastic golf tee and matchbook from Riverhill Country Club in Kerrville.

One item troubled us. Somebody's been in our junk drawer. It had a screwdriver in it, and editors have no use for a screwdriver.

Paddling Kids at School Assaults Their Self-Esteem

DEAR ABBY: Please speak out against corporal punishment in our schools. Paddling children with boards is child abuse. It also promotes child abuse in our communities by sending a message that it is OK for adults to hit children.

Paddling creates fear in children and lowers their self-esteem. This adds to the dropout rate and lowers the test scores as the students lose interest in education in a Nazi-like atmosphere. It also humiliates and angers children, increasing vandalism and violence in the schools.

Schools that forbid paddling are more peaceful and the students appreciate being treated with respect. They return this respect to their teachers and to the school.

Thankfully, 19 states have now abolished corporal punishment, with eight having done so last year!

JIMMY DUNNE, PRESIDENT, P.O.P.S. (PEOPLE OPPOSED TO PADDLING STUDENTS INC.) HOUSTON

DEAR JIMMY DUNNE: Your letter was indeed an eye-opener; I thought corporal punishment had gone out of fashion in our schools generations ago. I realize that in this age of one-parent households, latchkey children and increasing violence, many feel we are "losing control" of the younger generation. But children learn through example, and the message a child receives when he is struck, slapped or paddled is that might makes right.

Teachers and principals should not be expected to do the work of parents. And the job of parents is to prepare a child to appreciate an education, respect one's elders and to work cooperatively with others.

Those lessons come from the head and the heart — not the fist or the paddle.

first baby is due in March. When I married Mr. Slaff, I kept my last name (Zurawski).

Now we cannot agree on what last name to use for our child. Our choices are: (1) Combine both our names into "Slaffski." (2) If the baby is a boy, give him his father's last name, Slaff. (3) If it's a girl, give her my last name, Zurawski. (4) Or should we use both names, hyphenated: "Zurawski-Slaff"?

I feel that the child's name should reflect both our names. My husband wants to follow tradition and have his name be the last name and use my last name for the middle name.

We have agreed to go by your decision.

BAFFLED IN BOULDER

DEAR BAFFLED: For the sake of uniformity, I suggest all your children should have the same last name, and it should be the hyphenated combination of both your names — Zurawski-Slaff.

DEAR ABBY: I followed with interest the letters about the woman who wrote complaining about her husband's poor grammar. (She didn't notice it before they were married.)

My husband has the same problem, though it hasn't kept us from having a wonderful life together.

When we first met, I was attracted to him because of his gentleness, warmth, sense of humor and common sense. I was also appalled by his language, which was littered with "aint's," "gonnas," "wit choos" (with you) and "dints" (didn't).

I kept wondering how could such a classy guy talk so poorly. Then we went home to meet his family, and his mother said, "Why dincha tell me youse was gunna git married?"

County inmate allocation...

Board refuses to change plan

AUSTIN (AP) — Despite an order from the Legislature, and pleas for fairness from some officials, the Texas Criminal Justice Board voted to wait six more months before tackling the politically sensitive issue of determining how many inmates counties can send to state prisons.

The delay Monday angered county officials, who said they are being unfairly penalized under the current allocation formula, which is based on 2½-year-old statistics.

But counties that would have lost under a proposed plan praised the criminal justice board's decision, which in effect leaves the current system in place until at least August.

Under the current system, Bexar County is allowed to send fewer inmates to state prisons than Travis County, although Bexar County is about twice as large in population.

State Rep. Orlando Garcia, D-San Antonio, a member of the prison legislative oversight board, said that "is not equitable."

Criminal Justice Board Chairman Charles Terrell of Dallas said, "Neither is life."

Terrell pushed for keeping the current system in place until prison officials could recommend an allocation plan that will take into account what actions individual counties are taking to ease jail overcrowding through alternatives to incarceration, such as restitution centers, supervision and counseling.

"I do not believe that a change in our current historical allocation can be made at this time," Terrell said.

Board member Allan Polunsky of San Antonio, the lone dissenter on the board, said Bexar County already has taken the initiative to divert inmates from the state prison system. "We're being penalized for doing an excellent job. Those who did a bad job are rewarded," he said.

Lawmakers passed legislation to change the allocation plan by Thursday because of state prison and county jail overcrowding. More than 10,000 convicted felons awaiting transfer to state prisons are backed up in county jails. Several counties have sued the state over the problem.

Under a proposed allocation plan, counties such as Harris and Dallas would have been able to send fewer inmates to state prison.

The calculation was based on county population, total crimes, violent crimes, drug arrests, unemployment and the capacity of the state prison system.

The current allocation formula

Bell Labs announce new development

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Researchers unveiled a prototype computer that uses light instead of electrical impulses to process data and said it could be as revolutionary as the transistor, which ushered in the computer age.

The computer that Bell Laboratories displayed Monday is crude, with enough power only to operate something like a dishwasher. Within a decade, however, it could lead to development of light-based supercomputers operating at least 1,000 times faster than current machines, perhaps even 10,000 times, said Brian Monahan, a spokesman for Bell Labs.

"This stage says it can be done," said Bob Trier, technical program director for Research Consortium Inc. of Minneapolis, which studies high-performance computing. "The next stage is to find out what can be done with this technology."

For years, researchers have been looking at photons, the fundamental particles of light, as replacements for electrons in electronic equipment. Such a shift promises computers vastly more agile and powerful than today's machines.

The prototype data processor is the first to transmit information with light rather than electricity, the movement of electrons. The technique could allow a much greater flow of data.

"Your only limit when it comes to those things is the speed of light," said Jim Hammons, an analyst at The Sierra Group computer consulting firm in Tempe, Ariz.

Unlike current computer chips, information would pass not just from a chip's edges but also from its surface. Bell Labs physicist David Miller likened the development to a Manhattan island in New York City where cars suddenly weren't limited to bridges and tunnels at rush hour, but could leave through the air.

By the end of the decade, supercomputers could be using more light, or "photonics," components rather than electronic, and may run at least 1,000 times faster than today's generation, Monahan said.

The prototype — a variety of lasers, lenses and prisms and contained in a 2-foot-square box — differs from a true computer in that the program that runs the optical processor is built into its hardware rather than being contained in software, said Bell Labs spokeswoman Marj McKean. It also has limited memory, she said.

She said the processor originally took up three large lab benches. Eventually, scientists believe it can be reduced to the size of today's microchips, no larger than a fingernail.

Transmitting light impulses, as fiber optics do, is nothing new, but controlling them is another thing.

Clever clerk foils holdup in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — When a Houston convenience store clerk found himself looking at the business end of two robber's pistols, he did the sensible thing — he bought them.

A gunman came into the store about 11:15 p.m. Friday, plunked down a can of beer, pulled out the guns and demanded cash. That's when Wazir Jiwi decided to bargain.

"I said, 'You don't need two. Why don't you sell me one of them?'" Jiwi said.

The robber thought about it for a moment and named his price — $100.

As Jiwi placed the pistol under the counter, he pushed a button automatically locking the door of the store.

Then, he bartered for the other gun.

"He didn't want to give it to me. But I figured he needed the money, and I told him I would pay him for it," Jiwi said.

The robber grabbed the cash and put the other pistol on the counter. Jiwi grabbed it and the robber headed for the door, but couldn't open it.

"He turned to me and asked what was going on. I told him to bring the money back and I would let him go," Jiwi said. "He brought the money back, and I opened the door."

"It was pretty strange. When the police came and I told them, they said it was a miracle," Jiwi said.

The robber is still at large.

Peter Gott, M.D.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 47 years old and have been having blackout spells for one year. I stay weak and dizzy all the time, have headaches and suffer from fatigue. My blood pressure falls when this occurs. What's the matter with me?

DEAR READER: I hope you are under the care of a physician, who will take a detailed medical history and perform a thorough examination to diagnose your condition. There are many possibilities to explain your symptoms.

You could have a blood disorder. An insufficient quantity of blood cells can cause headaches, faintness, fatigue and low blood pressure. Anemia is an example. Your symptoms could be a consequence of hidden bleeding in the intestinal tract, or it could be associated with problems with white blood cells, such as leukemia.

Another possibility is circulatory insufficiency. For instance, you may be experiencing symptoms from ineffective heart action, such as angina, that causes periodic drops in your blood pressure, which results in dizziness and weakness.

A third possibility is epilepsy. If you are truly blacking out, these lapses in consciousness could be the result of seizures.

Finally, serious infection, diabetes or various tumors could cause your symptoms.

See your doctor for a diagnosis and treatment.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Physical Illness." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband had heart surgery this fall and contracted a staph infection. How long will it take to clear? He was operated on two weeks after the surgery to clean out the infection, yet he still has it.

DEAR READER: One of the most common complications of any surgery is infection, and one of the most common causes of infection is staph bacteria. These microorganisms are plentiful in our environment and on our skins. Fortunately, staph are killed by modern antibiotics.

After certain types of surgery, however, infection can be a real problem, because foreign material — such as artificial joints and suture material, for example — act as a focus from which bacteria spread. Once the foreign material becomes contaminated in the body, it is extremely difficult to sterilize.

Therefore, infections often have to be drained, as in your husband's case. In particularly resistant infections, the prosthesis may have to be removed and the bacteria aggressively treated with intravenous antibiotics before a new, sterile prosthesis is surgically implanted.

In simple terms, foreign material acts like a splinter: Once it is infected, it causes problems until it is removed.

I do not know how long your husband will experience difficulty; this depends on the extent of infection and which foreign substances were used in his surgery. If he had a synthetic valve placed in his heart, he will probably need another operation. On the other hand, the infection on wire sutures behaves in a somewhat different manner; it will eventually disappear with antibiotic treatment. His surgeon is the logical person to answer your question specifically.

Court flag sparks flap in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — A Confederate battle flag hanging above the bench in a state district court here is inflammatory and inappropriate, say several groups that want the banner removed.

The flag hangs in the 310th District Court of Judge Allen J. Daggett along with a longhorn steer head and five other flags that have flown over Texas.

"The connotation of the Confederate flag in 1990 in the United States is one of representing pro-segregation and pro-racism," said Bruce Griffiths, attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union in Houston.

"Judge Daggett certainly has the right to show his own belief on his own time," Griffiths said. "But a Confederate flag should not be shown in a courtroom as the official paraphernalia of the court."

Daggett, a Democrat up for reelection this year, refused to discuss the flag Monday, according to the Houston Chronicle.

"Anyone with clear eyesight can see it's all six flags. I'm not going to talk about that or anything else, sweetheart," Daggett told a Chronicle reporter.

The issue arose last week when an attorney representing New York Yankees outfielder Dave Winfield in a divorce hearing commented on the Confederate flag's presence in the courtroom.

Benjamin Piggot, president of the Houston Lawyers Association, a black group, said he will write Daggett a personal letter asking for an explanation and requesting the flag's removal.

The five other flags in the courtroom, all draped along a wall, are the Texas flag, the U.S. flag and those of France, Mexico and Spain. But their presence and the historical context in which the Confederate flag is likely included do not dilute the latter's significance, some said Monday.

"I think people would be more understanding of a flag that engenders unity rather than division," said Justice of the Peace Alexander Green, president of the Houston branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"Traditionally, the flag has left a bad taste in the mouths of persons who have been oppressed," he said.

Writer gives biography program

Scurry County Penwomen met Jan. 24 in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Bryant. Dorothy Cox gave the invocation. Janelle Burk presented the program on "Writing Your Personal Experience." She explained how to write a biography and genealogy, along with other events, noting that they would be important to descendants. She also said that one's life is a precious piece of time and should not be forgotten. Even non-writers are encouraged to write their biography and genealogy.

Cox reported that she had a Haiku and a poem entitled "Autumn's Song," published in "A Galaxy of Verse." Burk won the critic judge's award in the December monthly contest of Poetry Society of Texas. She also submitted a limerick and recipes which were included in a cookbook by Jackie Pellham of Day One Publications of Houston.

Sherry Bryant gave a poetry reading for the Golden K Club at the Senior Center during December. Her play, "The Littlest Angel," was presented at Snyder Oaks Care Center Dec. 16 and at Trinity United Methodist Church Dec. 17.

The penwomen welcomed new member Jean Everett and a visitor, Grace Bryant.

Burk announced the results of Tarrant County Poetry Society in which Mary Westmoreland won first place for her poem, "Regrets." Burk won second place with her poem "Woman at the Library," and Estelene Murphy won third place with her poem, "Michael's Flowers."

Other winners in the contest were Burk, first honorable mention for "Tree Outside My Window," Garnet Quiett, second honorable mention for "Change and Time," and Cox, third honorable mention for "About Face."

During the reading session, Bryant read her children's story and Cox read the introduction to her biography. Westmoreland read her article about a bird and showed pictures of the Pine Siskin in the article. Burk read her poem, "Robin in January," and Quiett read her poem, "Endless Love."

A secret ballot was taken for the best poem or prose read, and Estelene Murphy won the hostess gift.

Westmoreland gave the word of encouragement and the meeting adjourned after refreshments were served.

The next Scurry County Penwomen meeting will be held Feb. 21 in the home of Garnet Quiett. All visitors and writers are invited to attend.

Resort in Missouri...

Abandoned mine is wonderland under water for scuba divers

EDITOR'S NOTE — Scuba divers have a lot of things to explore, from coral reefs to shipwrecks, oil rigs to underground caves. But an abandoned mine? Yes, right in the heart of the Midwest a now-flooded lead mine is beckoning divers with a different kind of scenery.

BONNE TERRE, Mo. (AP) — Far beneath the general store and the gas station in this little Midwestern town lies a water wonderland.

Scuba diving, a sport usually associated with the tropics, has come to Missouri. And the "Billion Gallon Lake Resort," converted from a long-abandoned lead mine, may be its most unusual attraction.

"It's like diving through a ghost town, or a shipwreck," says scuba instructor Doug Goergens, who along with his wife, Cathy, owns the flooded mine now billed as the largest freshwater dive resort in the world. "Or like soaring through a cathedral. It's an awe-inspiring experience."

Goergens' superlatives can be discounted to a certain extent, since he has a vested interest. He says he's invested about $1 million in the project.

But Jacques Cousteau's son, Jean Michel, was impressed. The son of the man credited as being one of the inventors of scuba (Self-contained Underwater Breathing Apparatus) in the 1940s, gave the resort rave reviews.

And Skin Diver Magazine has touted the mine as "a time capsule, an engineering marvel, and an unbeatable weekend getaway."

Bonne Terre, or "good earth" in French, is a town of about 3,500 about 60 miles south of St. Louis. Last year the mine tapped into the landlocked Midwestern scuba market for relatively low-cost, weekend-only forays, attracting 15,000 customers.

The lake was formed when the owners of the St. Joseph Mining Co., once the provider of jobs to 5,000, closed down operations and shut off the water pumps. Natural seepage of spring and rainwater flooded the mine.

Marian Rivman, a spokeswoman for the Diving Equipment Manufacturers Association, an organization that monitors the industry, says Bonne Terre is unique.

"People are diving everywhere," says Rivman, known in the industry as the "Scuba Lady." "But inland, there's nothing comparable to the mine. It's a great destination."

Beauty, of course, is in the eye of the beholder. And the avid scuba fan has other attractions to explore in the United States, among them shipwrecks off the coast of North Carolina, oil rigs in the Gulf of Mexico or the kelp forests of California.

The Florida Keys are perhaps the prime U.S. destination for the estimated 2.65 million active scuba divers in the United States, offering warm water, coral and fish. Divers also can investigate lakes, quarries and rivers, although visibility often is severely limited.

Such is the case at Lake Norfolk, Ark., a 500-mile round trip from St. Louis where Goergens used to take his scuba students.

"Diving can be very, very inconvenient," Goergens says.

He's put a lot of work into removing that negative aspect at the Bonne Terre operation, illuminating the mine with 300,000 watts of lighting and installing showers and locker rooms.

The mine, once the world's largest producer of lead, has the craggy look of a lunar landscape. Jackhammers silent since the mine closed in 1961 jut out of solid rock. Scattered picks, shovels, ladders and helmets also were left behind, and their presence adds to the surreal surroundings.

The lake is pale blue and crystal clear, with visibility more than 100 feet in lighting conditions Goergens describes as "late afternoon," although it appears to be closer to dusk.

Unlike other diving environs, the subterranean lake is devoid of life forms — no sharks to worry about here — and other distractions such as current, surges or tidal rushes. A constant water temperature of 58 degrees, a little chilly but bearable in a wet suit, makes it a year-round resort.

When Goergens first dived in the mine in 1974 he described it as a "dark, scary place." He saw potential, though, as a training ground for the 1,200 to 1,500 students his St. Louis company, West End Diving Centers, certifies annually.

It has turned out to be much more. To accommodate the divers that now flock to Bonne Terre, the Goergenses renovated a mansion once owned by the president of the mine and turned it into a country inn. They also transformed an old, ramshackle, train depot into a saloon and bed-and-breakfast inn, and their work, in part, has sparked renewed interest in tourism on the part of civic leaders.

Goergens, who opened the mine to the public in 1981, believes more wonders may be in store. There are presently 24 trails to explore, but only four of the 17 miles of flooded tunnels, which would allow the entire town of Bonne Terre to fit inside, have been developed so far.

Burros offers items ready in 20 minutes

NEW YORK (AP) — A meal in 20 minutes? You've got to be kidding!

Marian Burros, food writer and editor for "The New York Times," does it — with style and taste — in her latest cookbook, "20 Minute Menus" (Simon and Schuster, $19.95).

Burros says a recent survey indicates that most Americans are only willing to spend "20 minutes or less" preparing dinner. The market for ready-made and takeout foods bears this out; these foods reached an estimated $60 billion in 1987.

Married women, many of whom work outside the home, still do the grocery shopping and prepare the meals. Takeout foods, prepared ingredients and the growing market for frozen entrees all indicate that getting dinner on the table fast is as big a challenge for today's home cooks as it is eating well.

However, Burros, who believes in healthful cooking, insists there's no reason not to cook, when delicious and well-balanced meals can be prepared at home in about the same amount of time it might take to stand in line at the deli for takeout food.

"Not only does a home-cooked meal taste better than takeout foods, it also gives the consumer more control over the healthfulness and quality of the ingredients," she says.

Her cookbook contains 100 meals that can be on the table in 20 minutes or less — and that includes time for preheating the oven and scraping the carrots.

Another plus: Burros promises that by using her menus, the length of your average supermarket visit should drop from 20 minutes to 10 minutes!

How does she do it? There are essentially three components to a meal: protein, starch and vegetable. To streamline the menus, Burros has combined the protein and the starch, the vegetable and the protein. In a few instances, she has combined all three components into a one-pot meal.

Chopping and dicing takes time, so Burros uses the cut-up vegetables that are available at supermarket and deli salad bars. (Don't buy cut-up tomatoes, "they taste terrible," she says.) Add 1 to 5 minutes of preparation time if you want to chop your own vegetables. Pre-trimmed and pre-sliced cuts of meat and chicken are also suggested.

Another timesaver, from Burros' point of view: no desserts. If you want dessert, you can buy it.

The cookbook includes a list of ingredients to have on hand for the pantry and a shopping list for each menu. But the real key, Burros explained in an interview here, is the "game plan," those step-by-step instructions that she provides for each meal.

"People still need basics," she says. "They don't know about timing dishes, how to get everything to the table at the same time." So Burros tells the reader when to boil the water, grate the cheese, and drain the fat from the sausage.

Too simple? Too basic? No way! Her menus go from seafood to pasta to chicken and meats.

West. Zenkel now got off lead with the jack of clubs.

West won the queen and played jack of spades. Once again declarer felt strongly that West would not have preempted with as much as the king of spades outside the club suit, so she went right up with dummy's spade ace. She now ran off the rest of her trumps. Declarer's last two cards were the queen of spades and a small diamond. Dummy was left with the K-9 of diamonds, and East, with the king of spades and the Q-8 of diamonds, had to come down to two cards. East had to either make declarer's spade queen a winner or unguard the diamonds, so the slam was made.

It was a good omen for Sabine Zenkel. One week later at the North American Championships in Lancaster, Pa., she formed a partnership with American expert Rhoda Walsh and won the Life Master Women's Pairs.

Pre-empt guides the play

By James Jacoby

Here is a deal that Sabine Zenkel of West Germany played in Dallas last November. After the king of clubs lead against Zenkel's six-heart contract, the straightforward play for slam is to draw trumps and hope that diamonds split 3-3, with the queen held by West. But declarer felt strongly, after West had pre-empted, that the diamond queen was likely to be held by East. So she won dummy's ace of clubs, played A-K of hearts and then the jack of diamonds from dummy. East played low and the jack won the trick. Then a low diamond from dummy to the ace brought the 10 from

Shatner targeted in palimony suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman who claims she was the companion of "Star Trek" star William Shatner has sued him for $3 million in a "palimony" lawsuit.

Vira Montes claims in her Los Angeles Superior Court lawsuit that she was Shatner's "companion, confidante and homemaker" from September 1984 until early this month.

The lawsuit, filed Wednesday by attorney Marvin Mitchelson, said she gave up a career as a medical assistant in exchange for Shatner's promise of financial support. Mitchelson said Shatner has remained married to Marci Shatner, his second wife, throughout the relationship with Montes. Mitchelson said the actor spent time with each woman.

Snyder cage teams to face Big Spring

Snyder's Tigers, who are sitting tied for the District 4-4A lead with a 7-1 record, take to the hardwood against Big Spring tonight while the Lady Tigers host the Big Spring girls as loop competition continues.

The SHS boys, following Friday's defeat of Pecos to climb into a tie for first place in the circuit, take on a dead-last Steer squad in the basketball matchup.

Big Spring was a 73-69 loser Friday night to Ft. Stockton. The win was the Panthers' first in district play.

The Steers, 1-7 within the circuit and 2-20 overall, fell to Snyder when the two teams met here, 52-39, after being ahead, 25-19 at halftime.

Seniors Tracy Braziel and Lee Hamilton being the Tigers in the contest with 13 and 16 points, respectively.

Big Spring junior Louis Soldan, a 6-4 talent, scored 16 against Snyder earlier in the season.

The Steers other weapons include 6-3 senior Joe Downey, a second team all-district pick from last season's loop championship squad, 6-1 senior Wendel Smith and 6-1 junior Neal Mayfield.

The Lady Tigers are currently tied for third place with a 5-5 district mark with Andrews and Pecos.

Big Spring sports a 7-3 loop slate and is 19-8 in all games played.

The Lady Steers, coming off an embarrassing 45-40 loss to 3-7 Ft. Stockton, beat Snyder in the early part of the campaign, 67-53.

SHS beat Pecos, 49-42, in its last outing as Freida Clay's 13 points and Robbie Braziel's 12 led the Lady Tigers on offense.

Pecos had a seven-point lead at the half, but a third quarter 15-8 run knotted the score at 32-32 before Snyder took control of the contest in the latter part of the fourth quarter.

The Lady Tigers are 12-9 on the season.

Both varsity games begin at 7:30 p.m. at their respective sites. Junior varsity contests begin at 6 p.m.

Super Bowl players will miss Pro Bowl

HONOLULU (AP) — Joe Montana, fresh from a record-setting Super Bowl performance for the San Francisco 49ers, will miss Sunday's Pro Bowl because of an elbow injury, as will losing quarterback John Elway of the Denver Broncos.

"It's an elbow problem," 49ers spokesman Jerry Walker said Monday. "He first injured it at the Pro Bowl a couple of years ago on the hard turf there. We have checkups tomorrow and other than that he's fine. It's a recurring problem and has to be drained now and then."

Montana threw five touchdown passes — the most in Super Bowl history — and set other records in the 49ers' 55-10 rout of the Broncos.

Two other Super Bowl players, linebacker Karl Mecklenburg of the Broncos and wide receiver John Taylor of the 49ers, will miss the game, an NFL spokesman said.

Montana will be replaced by Mark Rypien of the Washington Redskins on the National Football Conference team.

In Denver, KOA radio reported that Elway had injured his right elbow in the Super Bowl, but said the injury was not serious enough to require surgery.

No replacement has been named yet for Elway on the American Football Conference team. Elway was to have been a replacement for Cincinnati's Boomer Esiason, who withdrew earlier.

Neither Elway, who had not mentioned the problem with his elbow previously, nor a spokesman for the Broncos could be reached immediately for comment.

Elway told KOA that his elbow struck the Superdome's artificial turf on a first-half running play.

Milwaukee players in pay arbitration

NEW YORK (AP) — The Milwaukee Brewers, who led the majors with 15 players in salary arbitration, are down to 10.

Chuck Crim agreed Monday to a two-year contract for $1.46 million and pitcher Mike Birkbeck agreed to a split contract that will pay him $155,000 in the majors and $144,000 in the minors.

Crim, a right-handed pitcher who made $225,000 last season, will get $600,000 in 1990 and $860,000 in 1991. Crim, 28, appeared in 76 games last season, leading the American League and tying Mitch Williams of the Chicago Cubs for the major-league lead.

Birkbeck, who will be 29 next season, was 0-4 in 1989 with a 5.44 ERA. He hurt his arm during the season.

Among the 109 players left in arbitration are 10 Brewers: Chris Bosio, Glenn Braggs, Tom Filer, Paul Molitor, Juan Nieves, Dan Plesac, Gus Polidor, B.J. Surhoff, Dale Sveum and Robin Yount.

Arbitration hearings begin on Friday, with five cases scheduled: outfielder Bo Jackson of Kansas City, Braggs, outfielder Chris James of Cleveland and first baseman Franklin Stubbs and left-hander Ray Searage, both of Los Angeles.

Cincinnati Reds outfielder Herm Winningham agreed to a two-year contract Monday and five players agreed to one-year deals.

NBA roundup... LA falls minus Magic

by The Associated Press
The San Antonio Spurs were in the wrong place at the right time, again.

Two weeks after taking advantage of a Larry Bird injury to beat the Celtics at Boston Garden, the Spurs showed up at the Forum to play the Los Angeles Lakers.

Without flu-ridden All-Star guard Magic Johnson, the Lakers fared no better than the Celtics, dropping an 86-84 decision Monday night. San Antonio's Willie Anderson said the Lakers looked confused in the final seconds, when Johnson generally runs the show.

"We didn't call a timeout because we saw that they were confused on defense, and that's the best time to get a good shot," said Anderson, who had a crucial blocked shot and two decisive free throws in the final seconds.

Elsewhere, it was Chicago 121, Atlanta 111; Dallas 108, New Jersey 88 and Minnesota 109, Sacramento 91.

With the score tied at 84 and 21 seconds left, Larry Drew of the Lakers rebounded a missed shot by Terry Cummings and drove the length of the court. Anderson blocked Drew's layup and got the ball into a teammate's hands with 16 seconds left.

Without calling a timeout, the Spurs pushed the ball into the forecourt, where Anderson was fouled by Orlando Woolridge on a drive to the basket with six seconds remaining. Anderson made the first free throw, but missed the second.

"I was surprised that Drew didn't pull the ball back out to play for the last shot," Anderson said of the block. "He exposed the ball, so I knew I'd have a chance to block it."

Drew said he recognized the situation before shooting.

"I knew I had a 1-on-1 chance," he said. "There was no second-guessing. He got a piece of the ball and he got a piece of me, too. But it was a call that could have gone either way."

The Lakers called a timeout with five seconds to play. But Michael Cooper's inbound pass, intended for Byron Scott, was intercepted by the Spurs' Frank Brickowski.

He passed to Anderson, who was fouled by Vlade Divac with 1.1 seconds remaining. Anderson hit only one of the free throws, giving the Lakers a final opportunity to tie when they rebounded the second.

But James Worthy was slightly long on a 20-foot shot at the buzzer.

Worthy had 32 points and Scott added 14 for Los Angeles. Cummings had 20 points for San Antonio, David Robinson added 19 and 16 rebounds and Anderson finished with 14 points.

Neither team led by more than three points, there were five lead changes and five ties in the final period.

Bulls 121, Hawks 111
Chicago had a 20-point lead after one period, then cruised behind 20 points by Scottie Pippen and 16 by Michael Jordan.

The victory, to which John Paxson and Horace Grant contributed 16 points apiece, was the fifth in seven games for the Bulls, 18-2 at home this season. It also snapped a three-game winning streak by Atlanta, which got 19 points from Cliff Levingston.

Mavericks 108, Nets 88
Roy Tarpley, making his fourth appearance following a 33-game suspension, scored 23 points to lead Dallas to its sixth straight victory.

Tarpley was reinstated a week ago by the NBA's drug-counseling service. He had been suspended in November after being charged with driving while intoxicated and resisting arrest.

Sam Bowie had 13 points to lead the Nets.

Timberwolves 109, Kings 91
Minnesota broke a nine-game losing streak with Randy Breuer scoring all of his 15 points in the second half.

Frogs capture win over Lumberjacks

By The Associated Press
Craig Sibley scored 11 points in the first half enroute to a 17-point performance to lead the Texas Christian Horned Frogs to victory over a non-conference foe, but the Southern Methodist University Mustangs fell to a weaker team from the Ivy League.

The Southwest Conference finished only .500 against a pair of weaker non-conference foes Monday night. TCU defeated Northern Arizona, 88-69, and SMU lost to Penn, 56-49.

The Frogs went on a 13-0 run over a four-minute stretch of the second half to secure the victory and up their season mark to 10-9 in the process.

The troubled Lumberjacks, who recently lost their head coach and leading scorer in a mid-season reshuffling of the program, slipped to 7-12 with the setback.

After trailing by 17 with a score of 49-32 at the half, the Lumberjacks battled back to trail by just 12 with a 7-0 run between the 14:49 and 13:02 marks of the second half.

Then the Frogs scored the game's next 13 points to blow out to a 73-48 spread before coasting in for the victory.

Tony Edmond finished with 14 for the Frogs, while reserve Rich Antee added 12, Reggie Smith bagged 11, and Michael Strickland totaled 10.

Northern Arizona's Steve Williams, who had a couple of technical fouls in the first half, led all scorers with 22 points in the game.

Jon Oppenheimer and Steve Lizzul scored 11 each for the 'Jacks.

Hassan Duncombe scored 16 points, including the go-ahead basket with 4:02 to play, as Pennsylvania beat Southern Methodist 56-49.

The Quakers (6-9) broke a 46-46 tie by scoring 10 consecutive points, giving the Ivy League team its third win in a row.

Substitute guard Troy Valentino led SMU (7-10) with 19

Orangemen thump Big East opponent

NEW YORK (AP) — Syracuse's two-game losing streak seems like it was a long time ago.

The Orangemen, who held the No. 1 ranking for the first six regular-season polls, lost consecutive games to Connecticut and Providence on Jan. 15 and 20. Things sure have changed for Syracuse and the rest of the Big East.

The seventh-ranked Orangemen beat No. 18 St. John's 70-65 on Monday night for their third straight victory and a great cap to a tough two-game conference road trip.

Syracuse registered its first victory ever at the Capital Centre with a 95-76 triumph over then-No. 3 Georgetown on Saturday.

"We played as great a game Saturday as we could in just about every area," Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim said. "But I told them before the game, the thing about this league is that you can win by 15, 20 points and then lose to someone you should beat by 10."

In other games Monday night, No. 10 Louisville beat Southern Mississippi 105-88 and Iowa defeated No. 11 Illinois 69-67.

After an easy early schedule, with the exception of the Big East-ACC Challenge victory over Duke, Syracuse lost its second conference game at home to Villanova after struggling to a two-point win at Pittsburgh.

There were victories over St. John's and Boston College and then the brief losing streak.

Boeheim inserted freshman point guard Michael Edwards into the starting lineup and the result has been three victories.

"Michael has been playing in games all season but the main reason I started him was because David Johnson wasn't playing well and that was dragging us a little bit," Boeheim said. "If Mike started, I felt we might get the break going faster. Against Georgetown we had 22 points in the first half on fast breaks and no one does that against Georgetown."

There weren't many fast-break points against St. John's because of its slow-tempo style, but the big plays were still made by the players known for those fast breaks.

Billy Owens followed a career-high 36 points against Georgetown with 22 against St. John's to match Stephen Thompson as high scorer.

Usually when the ball goes inside for Syracuse, it ends up in the hands of Derrick Coleman. But Coleman was in foul trouble against St. John's and finished with seven points, only one in the second half.

"I didn't shut down Derrick Coleman. He just had some foul trouble," said St. John's forward Jason Williams, who led the Redmen with 22 points.

St. John's got within 61-59 with 4:05 to play on one of two free throws by Malik Sealy, who

IGNACIO CASTILLO

Ignacio Castillo

Rosary for Ignacio Guillen Castillo, 55, of Route 3, will be said at 8 p.m. Tuesday at Knights of Columbus Hall. Services will be held at 2 p.m. Wednesday at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church with Fr. Joe Augustine officiating. Burial will follow in Snyder Cemetery.

Castillo died at 1 a.m. Monday at Lubbock Methodist Hospital. He did construction work for Wadleigh Construction and E.D. Walton Construction.

Born Feb. 1, 1934, in Zaragosa, Coahuila, Mexico, he married Maria Ramos Jan. 15, 1951, in Mexico. Castillo lived in Snyder since 1954, and was a member of Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church.

Survivors include his wife, Maria, of Snyder; six daughters, Brenda Juarez of Ira, Mary C. Monclova of Coahuila, Mexico, and Rosa C. Sifuentes, Leticia Rios, Sandra Acala, and Norma Verdusco, all of Snyder; and three sons, Ignacio Castillo Jr. of Snyder, Richard Castillo of Canyon, and Hermilo Castillo of San Angelo.

Also surviving are six sisters, Andrea C. Gardea, Ramona C. Rodriguez, Petra C. Sanchez, Paulina C. Barboza, Cruz Castillo, and Guadalupe C. Mendez, all of Coahuila, Mexico; three brothers, Esteban, Isidro, and Eugenio Castillo, all of Coahuila, Mexico; and 24 grandchildren.

Lost skiers burned money to stay alive

KALISPELL, Mont. (AP) — Two lost skiers decided they had money to burn, and the decision may have saved their lives.

Don Wing and Jack Joneson, both 29 and from Calgary, Alberta, strayed out of bounds at The Big Mountain ski resort Saturday afternoon and got lost, Flathead County Sheriff Chuck Rhodes said Monday.

More than 30 searchers set out in waist-deep snow shortly after dark to find them.

The skiers were found about 11:30 p.m., snug and warm beside the campfire they had started eight hours earlier — by burning dollar bills, Rhodes said.

Parolee arrested

A 23-year-old state parolee was arrested on a parole violation warrant Monday at the State Board of Pardons and Paroles office in the Snyder Shopping Center off College Ave.

Henry R. Mendez of 3112 Ave. I was taken into custody at 4:39 p.m. by a city police sergeant and was being held at the city jail pending his return to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Mendez had been paroled from a seven-year sentence he received on a robbery charge in February 1987.

A State Board of Pardons and Paroles officer had brought the "blue" warrant to the sheriff's office on Sunday, and he called for a policeman to pick Mendez up at the Parole Board office after the man went there Monday afternoon.

It was not known on what basis Mendez's parole was being revoked.

Defense department plan to close bases draws fire

By The Associated Press

The Pentagon's plan to close or scale back 72 U.S. military installations has riled officials in large cities and small towns. Targeted communities nationwide are mobilizing to "fight like the dickens" to avoid the cuts.

California would be the hardest hit under Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's proposal, with 10 bases employing more than 35,000 servicemen and 22,000 civilian workers slated for closure or reductions.

But the closings also would hit hard in communities such as Charlestown, Ind., a southern Indiana town of 5,700 where the Defense Department plans to mothball a munitions plant and lay off about 900 workers.

"It's the only place a lot of the people have worked," said Mayor Bob Braswell, who once worked as a security guard at the Indiana Army Ammunitions Plant. "They've worked there all their lives."

In announcing his $292.1 billion fiscal 1991 spending plan Monday, Cheney called for Congress to "have the guts" to make tough decisions about closing military bases.

The response in affected communities came quickly.

Pennsylvania's two Republican U.S. senators, John Heinz and Arlen Specter, showed up outside the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard, pledging to fight the recommendation that the yard be closed.

"The Philadelphia Navy yard is a winner," said Sen. John Heinz, "and we are going to keep it a winner. Anybody who is going to try to make it a loser will find out they are wrong."

Some lawmakers accused the Republican administration of targeting military installations in Democratic districts.

Rep. Glen Browder, D-Ala., sounded a battle cry to save Fort McClellan, which officials said if closed would cost the Anniston area in eastern Alabama 2,700 military positions and 1,500 civilian jobs.

"If they are looking for a political fight, they've come to the right place. We're ready," said the freshman congressman, who defeated Republican John Rice last year in a special election to replace the late Bill Nichols.

California would bear the largest share of the cuts.

did. The main problem we had was, we couldn't see. Visibility was zero."

All seven of the Snyder Fire Department's trucks were used in the emergency, along with two each from Fluvanna and Colorado City.

A department spokesman said most of the pastureland that was burned was believed to belong or be leased by to Edwin Parks and Jess Everett.

Another Monday call was at 6 p.m. to property owned by Freddie Pearce at Ave. Q and Hargrove Ave., where a controlled trash burn had gotten out of hand in the high winds. Firemen returned to the station at 6:18.

No injuries in 3-car wreck

Three motorists escaped injury when their vehicles collided at 3:26 p.m. Monday in the 3700 Block of College Ave.

Police said a 1984 GMC Suburban driven by Susan Blackard of Rt. 1, Hermleigh, was in collision with a 1984 Ford Mustang driven by Jerry Freeman of 908 23rd St. and a 1988 Chevrolet driven by Kenneth Wood of Rt. 2, Colorado City.

In the only other accident investigated by city police Monday, a 1986 Mercury driven by Donna Cates of 3211 Ave. A hit a light pole at 5:36 p.m. in the Furr's Plus parking lot off College.

The car was towed from the scene.

One of the bases that would be closed is the Alameda Naval Air Station, which has 8,300 servicemen and employs 5,100 civilians for a combined annual payroll of $340 million in the island city of 77,000 in the San Francisco Bay area.

"This is really a terrible thing to hear, and we're not going to lay back and let it happen," said Mayor Chuck Corica.

"We're going to fight like the dickens to keep this base open."

The largest possible closure in California would be Fort Ord near Monterey and the Long Beach Naval Shipyard.

Fort Ord is home of the Army's 7th Light Infantry Division,

Lubbock's monthly poll called Bush's barometer

By The Associated Press

Lubbock's city fathers have taken their role as President Bush's national bellwether seriously. Since last March, when Bush told the nation that residents of the South Plains city strongly support his policies, the city has commissioned a monthly opinion survey.

The survey is sent — express mail — to the White House. Bush sometimes reads it on weekend retreats at Camp David, Md.

Lubbock already had a claim to fame as the birthplace of rock 'n' roll legend Buddy Holly. Now, as Bush's barometer, the city's 186,000 residents have gained fame anew.

The president may want to take a closer look at the next "Pulse of America" poll. The poll gauges the public's response to the 1991 federal budget that Bush sent to Congress Monday.

And, he will likely peruse the Lubbock data for reviews on the State of the Union address he is scheduled to deliver to a joint session of Congress on Wednesday.

The poll does back up Bush's assertion that Lubbock residents drink truck collided with a school bus. The bus fell into a water-filled pit killing 21 students.

Moreno's bill also would require bus drivers to be trained on emergency evacuations.

Sen. Eddie Bernice Johnson, D-Dallas, filed legislation to make state district court judges in Texas' nine largest counties run for election from single-member districts.

In November, U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton III of Midland ruled the current at-large system of electing judges in those counties violated the federal Voting Rights Act by diluting the strength of Hispanic and black voters.

Under Ms. Johnson's bill, district court judges in Harris, Dallas, Tarrant and Bexar counties would run from state representative districts. In Travis County, the judges would be elected from justice of the peace precincts and in Jefferson, Lubbock, Ector and Midland counties, they would be elected from commissioner's court districts.

proposed Monday that would affect Texas under Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's belt-tightening plan.

Clements, who served as Deputy Defense Secretary from 1973 to 1977, said state and local officials must make a bipartisan effort to minimize the impact of the Defense Department cuts should they be implemented.

In addition to the reduction there, Cheney proposes to close the Army ammunition plant at Karnack, Chase Field Naval Air Station at Beeville, Bergstrom Air Force Base at Austin, and the Defense Contract Administration regional office in Dallas.

Reductions or realignments also were proposed for Fort Sam Houston and Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio and the Red River Army Depot near Texarkana.

Cheney also proposed a contract cut for the V-22 Osprey tiltrotor aircraft being developed for the Marine Corps by Bell Helicopter in Fort Worth.

The Sherman Antitrust Act was passed in 1890.

which helped invade Panama last month. The base has 15,000 soldiers and 3,000 civilian employees with a combined payroll of $732 million and an estimated impact on the local economy of more than $885 million a year.

The shipyard in Long Beach, one of the port city's largest employers, could take up to $100 million a year out of the local economy, said Long Beach Area Chamber of Commerce President Bob Creighton.

"Naturally, we oppose it. Naturally, we'll do whatever we can to make sure that it doesn't become reality," said Assistant City Manager John Shirey.

overwhelmingly approve of his policies of more than 90 percent.

The city's residents have thrown a few surprises, however. In a conservative city with 150 churches, Lubbock's citizens strongly opposed Bush's anti-abortion stance, with 63 percent of those polled saying the decision should be left entirely to a woman and her doctor.

"I've been somewhat startled because I assumed that Lubbock is so much more conservative than the rest of the country," said Ken Towery, an Austin political consultant and Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist who helps compile the survey. "But we've found that's just not so."

Investigators check messages from plane

MELVILLE, N.Y. (AP) —

Federal officials defended regional air traffic controllers who never explicitly told local controllers that Avianca Flight 52 was short on fuel before it crashed, killing 73 of 159 people aboard.

The Colombian jetliner's cockpit crew told regional, high-altitude controllers about the fuel shortage 45 minutes before Thursday night's crash, but did not make clear the severity of the situation, Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Fred Farrar said Monday.

The pilot requested only "priority" clearance to land, and that word "has no particular meaning in air traffic control," Farrar said. "If there is an emergency, you use the word 'emergency.'"

The FAA, whose duties include overseeing the nation's air traffic controllers, released a partial transcript of taped conversations among the crew and controllers as the National Transportation Safety Board today neared the end of its on-site investigation.

The transcripts showed that in a telephone conversation, the regional controllers told counterparts responsible for landings at Kennedy International Airport that the Colombian jetliner couldn't remain in a holding pattern south of the airport for more than five minutes.

But the regional controllers did not explicitly mention the fuel shortage, the transcripts show.

The flight was cleared for landing at Kennedy 37 minutes later, but that attempt was aborted, apparently because of bad weather. Less than 10 minutes later, the Boeing 707 fell powerless into a wooded hillside in the secluded Long Island village of Cove Neck.

The cockpit crew were among those killed. More than 20 survivors remained hospitalized in critical condition.

FAA rules for flight emergencies spell out instructions for pilots, including those with foreign airlines, landing at U.S. airports.

"If, at any time, the remaining usable fuel supply suggests the need for traffic priority to ensure a safe landing, the pilot should declare an emergency and report fuel remaining in minutes," the instructions say.

Investigators are considering the possibility that the Colombian pilot interchanged the words "priority" and "emergency" by mistake. They also planned to talk with Avianca officials about what instructions are given to pilots when they have fuel problems.

The FAA and NTSB, as well as the National Air Traffic Controllers Association, stressed Monday that the plane's message was not urgent and did not use the word "emergency," which would have brought the plane to a quick landing at Kennedy.

SOUTH AFRICA

South Africa's recent national parliamentary elections have sent out some very mixed signals. The ruling National Party — whose policy has been to slowly chip away at portions of apartheid — continues its majority. Its new leader, F.W. de Klerk, is now South Africa's president.

Though the National Party still controls the 164-seat parliament, it does so by only 10 seats. De Klerk's party lost ground to both the left and right. The liberal Democratic Party — which believes apartheid should be ended and blacks given citizenship — gained 13 seats. Meanwhile, the Conservative Party — which believes in strict separation of races — also gained several seats.

The election itself was held amid turmoil. Many so-called "coloreds" — Asians and Indians — boycotted balloting for their separate "advisory" parliament. Blacks, prohibited from participating in the election, protested by organizing labor strikes. More than 25 were killed when police and troops broke up demonstrations.

What seems clear from the election results is that the political middle is growing smaller. De Klerk — elected with the narrowest majority of any South African head of state in 40 years — will be under constant pressure from both conservatives and liberals.

Change in South Africa unlikely to be rapid despite rising hopes

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President F.W. de Klerk has ignited hope that the white government is finally ready to dismantle apartheid and sit down with black leaders to find a solution to South Africa's problems.

AP analysis

But there is little sign that de Klerk is about to surrender power or that white rule is in any danger of collapsing even though the president's stated aim is to end apartheid. There are still no signs that the government will accept full democracy — the main demand of all anti-apartheid groups.

De Klerk is expected to outline his plans in a speech Friday at the opening of Parliament. Many South Africans are hoping the speech will be the signal for historic reform, despite official warnings not to expect too much.

Some political observers say the quest for peace in South Africa is more like the confrontations in Northern Ireland or the Middle East. There is little chance, they say, that white rule will come crashing down overnight like the Berlin Wall and the Communist regimes of Eastern Europe.

The government is in full control of the country, unrest is minimal and the African National Congress, the main black opposition group, admits its military campaign against the government poses little threat at this point.

De Klerk, who says he wants a "new dispensation" that will give South African blacks a role in the country's affairs, still rejects any suggestion of majority rule.

There also are few signs that many white South Africans are ready to share their schools, hospitals and other public facilities with non-whites or share power and opportunity on an equal basis with non-whites.

Many observers say de Klerk lacks a definite plan and is feeling his way, playing for time with limited reforms in the hope of finding a solution that will avoid major confrontation and still preserve a special role for whites.

De Klerk has given no specific signs of what he wants for South Africa's future beyond stressing that whites must have veto power in any future state.

Black leaders say de Klerk must meet a number of basic expectations to clear the way for talks with the African National Congress, including lifting the state of emergency; releasing ANC leader Nelson Mandela; removing the ban on the ANC and other outlawed opposition groups; and allowing exiled black leaders to return to South Africa.

Soft drink firm uses bus maker

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — The soft drink company whose truck was involved in the worst school bus accident in Texas history is blaming the bus manufacturer for the deaths of 21 students.

McAllen-based Valley Coca-Cola Bottling Co. Inc., which is defending itself against potentially millions of dollars in lawsuits from the Sept. 21 accident, alleges that the bus was "a defective and unreasonably dangerous product."

Valley Coca-Cola filed a lawsuit Monday against Blue Bird Body Co. of Fort Valley, Ga., contending that if the students had been able to escape the bus, they would have survived.

The bus was knocked into a water-filled pit in the South Texas town of Alton, after a Dr Pepper truck from Valley Coca-Cola failed to stop at a stop sign.

According to Valley Coca-Cola's lawsuit, the soft drink truck "was suddenly and unexpectedly struck by a school bus ... Many of the individuals who were riding inside the school bus, which was manufactured by Blue Bird, were unable to escape from the bus in sufficient time to escape serious injury or death."

Soft drink truck driver Ruben Perez, 25, of Mission, faces trial in March on 21 counts of involuntary manslaughter.

Another 59 students on the bus suffered various injuries, but survived.

Dana Kirk, an attorney representing Valley Coca-Cola, said specific defects in the bus include windows too small to provide escape and the lack of an emergency exit in the roof.

Valley Coca-Cola filed suit against the bus manufacturer Monday in 275th District Court in Edinburg. The soft drink company's suit names Blue Bird as a third-party defendant in the case, which would share liability.

How far he goes towards meeting these conditions Friday will be a good indication of how much reform the government wants. Even if de Klerk meets all the conditions, it will only be the start of what promises to be a very long and difficult search for peace.

Skeptics point out that de Klerk as leader of the National Party is head of South Africa's Afrikaners, whites of Dutch descent who dominate the government and who have been sustained by a belief in their superiority for three centuries.

Because of deeply ingrained beliefs of white superiority and rule, neither de Klerk nor his people can give up power and accept equality with the blacks, Asians and others they have dominated for so long, these observers say.

That leaves the question of what de Klerk and the government hope to achieve through a more moderate stance and why they have begun to remove parts of the apartheid system.

The government has contained, but not removed black opposition by using the security forces and harsh restrictions. De Klerk apparently wants to defuse the racial confrontation with political means rather than face what he warned would be "80 years" of war.
