Tax refunds, bills reflecting rollback have been sent out

New tax statements and refund checks reflecting the rollback of Scurry County taxes were being received in the mail today, Tax Collector Rona Sikes confirmed. County commissioners on Monday approved the revised 1990 county budget, after paring it down in compliance with a rollback of taxes from 39.80 cents to 34.75 cents per $100 valuation. The revised budget was mandated after a Jan. 20 election, in which a majority of voters in the county voted in favor of the rollback. Sikes said that an estimated 3,000 statements are being mailed out reflecting $532,143 due from oil companies and $192,507 from real estate. The taxes will become delinquent Sept. 6 if not paid. She also noted that her office is also mailing out some 11,500 refund checks amounting to $192,417 to oil companies and $132,889 representing real estate, or a total of $325,306. Refund checks are being mailed to those who paid their taxes based on the 39.80-cent tax rate. The refund checks range in amount from one penny to between $15-$20,000. Chevron, the county's largest tax payer, did not pay on the 39.80-cent tax rate, opting instead to wait until the rollback election was over and (see TAXES, page 8)

House committee oks $450 million school finance bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House is scheduled to take up a $450 million school finance reform bill Thursday, after its Public Education Committee rejected a Senate bill with a $1.2 billion price tag for next school year. The committee substituted its measure for the Senate bill on a 6-1 vote Tuesday, with Rep. Alan Schoolcraft, R-Universal City, voting against it. But a sponsor of the House measure, Rep. Kent Grusendorf, said he voted for it in committee only to get it to the floor, where he plans to introduce his own substitute. "There's too many unknowns" concerning the future cost of the House measure, as it was amended in committee, said Grusendorf, R-Arlington. Another bill sponsor, Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, said the bill provides the equity that the Texas Supreme Court said was needed when it threw out the current system. The bill finally approved by the (see HOUSE, page 8)

Cable messages urge viewers to protest 'protection' rights

On-screen messages used by Snyder Cablevision during the blackout of certain programming are urging local television viewers to complain to their congressmen. "At the demand of KTXS, Snyder Cablevision was forced to delete the programming which is normally shown at this time," states one message which continues by encouraging viewers to complain to U.S. Sens. Loyd Bentsen and Phil Gramm.

gramming restrictions on Channel 11 that had appeared imminent under new FCC regulations. But they were unsuccessful in attempting to avoid restrictions on WFAA and KJTV. Through its Big Spring affiliate, KWAB of Midland had filed a similar request for protection from fellow NBC station Channel 11 in Lubbock, but TCA executives said they persuaded

KWAB to drop its request in return for putting it on a different channel in Big Spring, Channel 9, to coincide with its Midland channel number. TCA executive vice president Fred Nichols said he is extremely disturbed about the FCC regulations and about a new bill that has been reported out of a congressional committee that would (see RIGHTS, page 8)

County residents cautioned tornado season nearly here

Tornado "season" is fast approaching and the National Weather Service is again issuing the call for county residents to be aware of the dangers and how best to avoid them.

The months of April, May and June are the months most conducive to tornado formations, although Scurry County has already been under at least one tornado watch this month.

A tornado watch means that tornado development is possible. Citizens are urged to keep "an eye on the sky" and stay tuned to local radio KSNY or Channel 2 for updates. If a tornado threatens Snyder, the siren warning system will be activated. This means a tornado has been sighted or indicated by weather radar. In this case, all residents are advised to take cover immediately.

There are three designated public shelters in Snyder if a tornado threatens. These are the basement areas of the county courthouse, the police station and Scurry County Museum on the Western Texas College campus.

Residents who cannot reach one of these shelters and do not have access to a private shelter should also take precautions. At home, a basement or cellar offers the greatest safety. If there is no basement, the National Weather Service advises to take cover in the center part of a house, on the lowest floor, and in a small room such as a closet or bathroom, or under sturdy furniture.

Mobile homes and trailers should be evacuated when strong winds or tornadoes are possible. If there is no shelter nearby, residents are advised to leave the trailer and take cover in a ditch or depression.

The NWS also stresses that vehicles are not safe during tornadoes and drivers should not attempt to outrun them. Anyone in a vehicle should leave for the nearest ditch or depression.

Key warning signs of a tornado are severe thunderstorms with (see TORNADO, page 8)

"I think that it would finally say that the quality of education for any school child in the state of Texas is not going to be a function of where they live," said Ms. Glossbrenner, D-Alice, head of the Public Education Committee. Lawmakers are working in special session to answer the Texas Supreme Court's ruling that the school finance system is unconstitutional because of disparities between property-rich and -poor school districts. The $13.5 billion-a-year public school system relies on a combination of state aid, local property taxes and some federal funds.

The bill finally approved by the (see HOUSE, page 8)

Cancer 'kickoff' March 31

The local chapter of the American Cancer Society will kickoff its annual drive 10 a.m. March 31 at the National Guard Armory in Towle Park.

This year's theme is "Great American Food Fight." The emphasis will be on fighting cancer with a good diet. The kickoff will feature a genuine food fight with food donated from local grocers.

Mayor Troy Williamson and Republican state representative candidate John Pennington of Sweetwater are scheduled to speak at the event. Members of Lucky 13 will stage a skit on the proper way to train a door-to-door volunteer. Two television stations, KLBK of Lubbock and KTAB of Abilene, will cover the event.

The public is invited to attend. Door prizes will be given away.

Karon Keller, coordinator for the drive, said there is still a need for volunteers. Anyone interested in volunteering can contact Keller at 573-7525.

Q—Will the scholarship foundation at Western Texas College accept any donations for scholarships or is there a minimum amount?

A—There is a minimum deposit of $2,000 required to establish a new scholarship but there is no minimum required to donate to an existing scholarship.

In Brief

Win elections

NEW YORK (AP) — Voters in special elections broadened New York's congressional delegation to include a veteran Hispanic lawmaker and a young Republican woman who's taking her father's seat.

Susan Molinari, a 31-year-old Republican City Council member, easily prevailed Tuesday to fill the post vacated by her father, Guy Molinari, who resigned to become Staten Island borough president. She had 60 percent of the vote.

Court decides

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today that migrant farm workers injured on the job may sue their employers in federal court after receiving worker-compensation benefits.

By a 9-0 vote in a Florida case, the justices said states do not have the power to ban such suits.

State officials from Texas, California and Massachusetts urged the high court to rule in favor of the migrant workers.

Justice Thurgood Marshall, writing for the court, rejected the U.S. Labor Department's interpretation of a federal law designed to protect the seasonal workers.

Museum theft

BOSTON (AP) — Two international auction houses agreed to underwrite a $1 million reward — no questions asked — in the theft of a dozen uninsured art treasures from the Gardner Museum.

"Our firm has never done this before, but there has never been such a catastrophic art theft," said Diana D. Brooks, president of the Sotheby's auction house in New York.

The reward in Sunday's heist was offered Tuesday, when the museum remained closed to the public as investigators busted inside.

Sotheby's and Christie's auction houses are underwriting the reward by using their own money and by soliciting funds from art supporters worldwide, museum Director Anne Hawley said.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Life's a mystery. We spend half of it answering life's questions, and the other half questioning life's answers."

After stuffing during most of the holidays, dieting becomes extremely popular for Americans each January. To assist you in exercising without ever leaving home, a company is marketing an "Endless Swimming Pool Machine."

It is said to work like a swimming treadmill. Water is forced to flow in one direction at low pressure, and the swimmer, stroking against the tide, swims in place.

The pool is personal-sized and data says the pool can be installed on any sound, level surface and easily can be filled with a garden hose. It's small, but the price seems to be more of the giant-economy sized variety: $13,800.

It's not what you say, but how you say it that is important. Such was proven by an oilfield crew working near a residential section.

A housewife complained to the service company that the language used on location one particular morning was shocking.

The company investigated and requested that the foreman file a report in writing as to what had happened. His report read:

"Me and Joe were on this job. I was up in the derrick and let a wrench fall, hitting Joe on his arm. Joe looked up at me and said, 'Really, sir, you must be more careful,' or words that that effect."

Sorrells files...

Today final filing day for office to 5 boards

Ray Sorrells, a self-employed water well driller, has filed for Place 3 on the Ira School Board as the deadline to file for office to five boards in the county nears.

Today is the final day to file for office to the Snyder, Ira and Hermleigh school boards, Western Texas College board and Snyder City Council.

Anyone wishing to file for the May 5 elections should do so at the administration office of the entity in which they wish to be a candidate. Filing at the Snyder school administration building is to end at 4 p.m. The other four offices have indicated they will remain open until 5 p.m.

In filing for Place 3 on the Ira board, Sorrells will oppose Carl

Smith. Incumbent Jim Wilson has said he will not seek another term.

The following is a list of board positions coming up for election and those who have filed for them.

Snyder City Council: District 1, incumbent Vernest Tippens; District 2, incumbent Ralph Williamson; District 3, incumbent Joe Coronado; District 4, incumbent Jack K. Greene Jr.

Western Texas College: Place 1, incumbent Bill Wilson Jr.; Place 2, Williams R. Hibbs and Carl Williams.

Snyder ISD: District 1, Glenn Clarady; District 4, incumbent (see BOARDS, page 8)

Auto pollution requirement rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate's rejection of tougher auto pollution controls deals environmentalists a setback on the compromise clean air bill.

"This is the one that we thought was the most significant" of the attempts to strengthen the clean air bill in the Senate, said Richard Ayres, executive director of the Clean Air Coalition. By a 52-46 vote Tuesday night, the Senate defeated a proposal to require tougher tailpipe-emission controls on automobiles, greater use of clean fuels by fleet operators and production of 1 million cars capable of burning alternative fuels. Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, called the defeated amendment a "prescription for deadlock" on the clean air bill.

"Do we want 13 more years of speeches or do we want a bill? Do we want to make statements or do we want to make law?" Mitchell said.

Still unresolved was a proposal to give federal aid to coal miners who would lose their jobs as a result of the clean air measure — a plan described by Senate leaders as a "deal breaker." Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., is seeking $700 million in aid for the miners over four years if they lose their jobs because of tougher acid rain controls at coal-burning powerplants in the Midwest.

The White House contends the assistance is too expensive. Sen. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., said Tuesday that Byrd "appears to have a majority of the votes" for his proposal. However, an aide to Mitchell said it was uncertain whether the amendment would pass if it came to a vote. White House officials and Senate leaders were trying to work out a compromise with Byrd.

Astrograph

March 22, 1990

In the year ahead you are likely to establish more ambitious objectives for yourself than you have in the past. This is all well and good, provided you do not take on more than you can handle. ARIES (March 21-April 19) Action taken upon the advice of a know-it-all could lead you to a dead end street today. Less mistakes are likely if you give credence to your own insights and perceptions. Aries, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Focusing on the frailties of others today could cause them to take a closer look at you. When you're put under the magnifying glass, it might make you squirm with discomfort. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be very selective today regarding friends with whom you socialize. If you link up with someone who likes to impress others, it might spoil your day.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Consider yourself equal to anyone with whom you're involved today, but not superior. Snobbish behavior on your behalf will cause others to lose respect for you. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Guard against inclinations today to think you can perform well when you have only sketches of information with which to work. Self-deception could lead to your downfall.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A well-intentioned friend might tout you onto something today that this person feels will be good for you financially. Before jumping in, you'd better get a few more opinions. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Without even trying, the attention of others will be focused on you today. This is well and good, provided you keep in mind that all who will be watching might not necessarily be your admirers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In managing subordinates today, be neither too harsh nor too wishy-washy. Above all, don't ask them to do things you won't do yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Business matters should be treated differently today. A failure to do everything that's required could turn a potentially profitable venture into a "bummer."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your mettle may be tested in one-to-one relationships today. There is a possibility you might have to contend with individuals you usually make an effort to avoid.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today you might be a much better talker than you will be a producer. In the final tally, it's not what you say you're going to do that counts, but what you actually do.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It's best not to try to mastermind the financial affairs of a friend today unless you truly know what you're doing. If you make an error, it could result in mutual losses.

Authorities plan to question 4 men arrested in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Central Texas authorities are investigating the possibility that four men arrested in Houston following a restaurant robbery may have been involved in a string of 25 restaurant holdups in Austin, San Antonio and Waco.

The arrests came after the men allegedly robbed a restaurant where a reserve sheriff's deputy was having dinner, Houston Police said Tuesday.

Three of the men were from San Antonio and officers have not been able to determine where the fourth lives.

The Houston robbery fit the pattern of the Central Texas robberies as the men hit just before closing. The four men entered Landry's Seafood Restaurant about 10 p.m. Monday and ordered about 40 patrons and employees onto the floor after demanding their wallets and jewelry be placed on tables, Sgt. Bruce Williams of the criminal investigations division of the Harris County Sheriff's Department said.

The men, two of whom wore bandanas over their faces and carried guns, then asked for the on-duty manager and, pointing a gun to his head, forced him to open the restaurant safe, Landry's manager Jim Rich said.

The 40 people were herded into a cooler in the kitchen. The robbers collected the loot and fled. No shots were fired, and there were no injuries.

"There's a reserve deputy sitting in there — that's real fortunate," said Williams. "He did a good job." Stan Crane, a reserve deputy for Harris County, left the cooler and caught a glimpse of the getaway car as it was leaving the parking lot. He used a radio in his car to notify other law officers.

Other deputies arrested the men a few minutes later on Interstate 10 only a few blocks from the restaurant, Williams said.

Williams said the four were then taken to the restaurant where they were identified by patrons and employees.

Officers found a .38-caliber revolver and a 9mm semiautomatic Cobray, or Uzitype weapon, as well as bandanas and ski masks in the car occupied by the men, according to Lt. Rickie Williams of the robbery division.

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT After being treated with radioactive iodine for hyperthyroidism, which caused me to lose 10 pounds, I subsequently went hypoactive and was put on 0.1 milligrams of Synthroid daily. Test results indicated this to be a proper level. Now I've gained 15 pounds, and my doctor doesn't attribute the weight gain to a hypoactive thyroid. Can a lack of the proper amount of hormone set the body's metabolic rate too low and contribute to my weight gain?

DEAR READER: Although hyperthyroidism (an overactive thyroid gland) can cause weight loss, hypothyroidism (an underactive gland) will not significantly affect weight. One of medicine's most popular myths is that obesity is related to hypothyroidism. This is not true.

While an underactive thyroid gland will produce some puffiness and fluid retention, obesity is usually due to too many calories in the diet. Therefore, people who are overweight should look to their diets, not to their glands, for a solution.

If you lost 10 pounds from hyperthyroidism and gained back 15 pounds after treatment, you are — by my calculations — only five pounds heavier than normal. If you want to shed this slight weight gain, you can do so easily by eliminating high-calorie foods — such as sugar, fats and alcohol — from your diet. Continue to follow your doctor's advice about thyroid medicine (Synthroid) and reduce your caloric consumption.

Incidentally, the sequence of events you described is not rare. Radioactive iodine, administered in liquid form, is useful in treating many cases of hyperthyroidism. It works by destroying the cells that manufacture thyroid hormone.

The trick is to give just the right amount; too little will be ineffective, too much will lead to thyroid underactivity. There is no strict rule about how much to give; the quantity depends on the "clinical judgment" of the prescribing doctor, who may administer what seems to be the proper amount, only to discover later this was excessive.

Fortunately, the use of thyroid supplement will easily and cheaply compensate for this treatment-induced hypothyroidism. With medicine and attention to your diet, you should do fine.

To give you additional information, I am sending you free copies of my Health Reports "Calorie-Wise Cooking" and "Weight Control Through Calorie Control." Other readers who would like copies should send $1.25 for each report to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Your column did not mention where to send in questions. You indicate only an address for health reports. Hence, I am sending you this question to that address. Is there another address for questions?

DEAR READER: You can send me questions by addressing them in care of this newspaper, which will forward your correspondence to me. I might add that I welcome comments, corrections, suggestions and criticisms — as well as questions — from readers. Although I cannot personally answer each reader because of the volume of mail, I make a serious effort to answer every suitable question, and most comments, in the column itself.

I view this column as a sort of literary house call, and I urge readers to write. Because I receive many queries, there may be a long interval before a specific question is answered. Therefore, please be patient. I'll get to it. In fact, I need the material readers send.

Unlike other medical columnists, I neither make up questions nor use a "ghostwriter." Each question I use in this column comes from a real reader, like you. Thank you for writing.

Music stars nix idea

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music stars Emmylou Harris and Ricky Skaggs say a bill that would require warning labels on music encouraging sex, suicide or violence would have a chilling effect on songwriters. "You might succeed in eliminating some of this trash out there ... but it also is going to have to inhibit the good stuff," Ms. Harris, head of the Country Music Foundation, told the state Senate Judiciary Committee Tuesday. "I think we'd be paying a really terrible price."

Salvation Army may find work in Eastern Europe, according to group's leader

DALLAS (AP) — With the Cold War rapidly being put in the deep freeze, the Salvation Army is adding Eastern Europe to its battle plan.

Gen. Eva Burrows, the head of the International Salvation Army, says her group is facing opportunities in communist countries that it hasn't had since being expelled from most of them decades ago.

"It caught us very much by surprise," said Ms. Burrows of the rapidly changing political shift toward democratic reforms. "Everyone is working a little bit in the dark."

Ms. Burrows, who is Australian, said she had been trying to figure out last year how to return the group to service in Eastern Europe. She had hoped to negotiate first with Hungary, intending to use the liberalizing of that nation as a foothold. But events overtook her dreams.

Plans for services to be offered across newly opened borders are still sketchy, but Ms. Burrows, said she has a few ideas.

"One thing the Russians wouldn't mind is help with their alcoholism problem," she said.

The Salvation Army also should find new opportunities to expand the Christian aspect of its mission, she said. "People will be more open to the Christian faith, as well," Ms. Burrows told The Dallas Morning News.

Wearing a military-styled blazer with an "S" on each lapel, Ms. Burrows also discussed how the organization has tried to cope with a number of crises worldwide, including the re-examination of apartheid in South Africa and the AIDS epidemic in Central Africa.

Ms. Burrows, who was in Dallas to address the 100th annual meeting of the Dallas County Salvation Army Advisory Board, is the spiritual and secular head of the international charitable organization.

"I'm like the pope," she explained Tuesday after arriving in Dallas. "I'm the head of the Salvation Army family around the world."

Ms. Burrows said she has recently discussed morality with the president of Zimbabwe; chatted with Mother Teresa in India about taking their respective ministries into Eastern Europe; and spent time in Great Britain where a management consultant recently recommended changes to bring the organization "into the 21st Century."

But she says she takes the great amount of travel in stride.

"Wherever the general goes, the Salvationists feel they belong," she said.

High drama

By James Jacoby

Here is a deal from a rubber bridge game in Italy many years ago. Declarer was Camillo Pabis Ticci, a member of the famous Blue Team that won numerous world team championships in the 1960s. As you can see from the bidding, club bridge was just as emotional as Italian opera. And none can deny that there is high drama in the play of a doubled and redoubled slam contract.

It was not hard for Pabis Ticci to determine that East's double was based on spade length behind the North hand. So he went to work. He won dummy's ace of spades and cashed dummy's trump king. Then he ruffed a club, played ace and ruffed a diamond, ruffed the jack of clubs and ruffed his last diamond. The stage was now set. The king of clubs was played from dummy and declarer discarded a spade. West won the ace of clubs and was stymied, with nothing left but minor-suit cards. Pabis Ticci ruffed the return in dummy and shed his last losing spade to make the slam.

Although declarer might have made the contract without East's rash double, it's also possible that he might try a different tack. For example, he might duck a spade, hoping that West held three spades with the ace of clubs. If that were the layout, after ducking a spade and ruffing out his diamond losers, declarer could run his trumps and squeeze West out of either the club ace or a spade trick.

Patrols planned

DALLAS (AP) — A gay advocacy group plans to form its own unarmed security patrols in a Dallas neighborhood with a high number of gay businesses and bars because it claims police aren't dealing with the area's violent crime.

The Dallas Gay Alliance's board of directors voted Monday to spend $2,500 to equip 20 volunteers with two-way radios for the citizens' patrols through the Oak Lawn area, which lies just north of downtown Dallas.

Victims return to shooting scene for TV re-enactment

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Ida Holguin's hair has just begun to grow back, she has relearned how to walk, three bullets remain in her body and she is haunted by the faces of two gunmen.

Mrs. Holguin is one of three people who survived last month's brutal bowling alley shootings that left four people, including three children, dead.

She returned to the scene of the shootings, Las Cruces Bowl lanes, on Tuesday to tell her story for a re-enactment of the crime, which will be aired this season on NBC-TV's "Unsolved Mysteries." It was the first time she spoke publicly about the slayings.

On Thursday, doctors plan to remove a bullet from Mrs. Holguin's arm. The one in her shoulder and half of one in her brain will remain. Doctors say it would be more dangerous to remove them.

"I can't understand why they (the gunmen) had to shoot," she said. "They already had the money. Why did they shoot?"

According to police, two men herded the victims into an office, forced them to lay down and shot them in the back of the head. They started a fire to cover up the crime and fled with $5,000.

Steve Teran, 26, his step-daughter Paula Holguin, 6, daughter Valerie Teran, 2, and Amy Houser, 13, were killed. Also wounded were the owner's daughter, Stephanie Senec, 24, and her daughter Melissa, 12.

Police, stumped in the case, turned to "Unsolved Mysteries," in hopes that one of the show's 30 million viewers in the United States and Canada might know the identity of the gunmen.

Teran's widow, Audrey, also went to the bowling alley Tuesday, but broke down soon after she arrived.

Police now believe Teran and his two children walked into the bowling alley while the crime was in progress.

Mrs. Holguin said she had already been shot when Teran, who also worked at the bowling alley, entered with his two daughters.

"He said, 'Oh my God! No!' I recognized his voice," Mrs. Holguin said.

Even though she had been shot she was still conscious, she said.

"I was coming and going, coming and going. I felt myself drowning. I was drowning in my own blood, drowning in my own blood," she said.

"After the second bullet, I just started praying. I prayed hard," she said.

Mrs. Holguin said she realized she would die as the gunmen shot the other victims.

"I heard Melissa scream. I started getting really scared. I started thinking those guys are going to kill us. I don't think they're just going to take the money."

Rotten sneaker contest slated

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP)

— It takes a lot of hard work for teen-agers to get their entries just right for the annual Rotten Sneaker Contest.

"I've run them through barbed wire, dragged them on the pavement while I was riding my bike, wore them without socks, and wore them when I was with my uncle who's a plumber," said 14-year-old Russell McDonald, of Toronto.

His sneakers were among more than 30 varieties of athletic shoes entered in the 15th annual contest Tuesday.

Attention to detail is important because the judges set high standards.

"We look for the most miserable looking, broken down, horrible smelling, beat up things imaginable," said Dr. Herbert Lapidus, a contest judge.

Snyder faces 'Cats in baseball action

The Snyder Tigers will host the San Angelo Central Bobcats in a non-district baseball game Thursday at 2 p.m. at Moffett Field in Towle Park.

Snyder is fresh off last weekend's championship of its own tournament.

The Tigers did away with Lamesa, 13-4, Vernon, 16-6, Levelland, 11-1, and Brownfield, 6-1, en route to the tourney title.

Jamey Morton struck out 18 Brownfield batters in Saturday's title game earning the win for the Tigers.

The Tigers, 8-2 on the season, are hitting at a .336 clip as a team.

Willie Garcia leads the Snyder crew with a .478 average and a home run.

Randy Morris, relegated to DH duty following a leg injury, is hitting .458 with a pair of round trippers to his credit.

Mark King is hitting .433 followed by Justin House at .429 and Jason West at .407.

Snyder will begin District 4-4A competition Friday as Pecos visits Moffett.

Pecos and Snyder were two of the loop's tri-champions last season.

The Eagles won the consolation championship at Snyder's tournament, defeating Lamesa 9-0.

Rangers set to start

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The baseball lockout is over and fans are flocking to the ticket windows at Arlington Stadium, eagerly waiting for the Texas Rangers to begin regular season play.

Players, beginning full workouts today at a shortened spring training camp in Port Charlotte, Fla., are equally relieved. Team owners and the union, after striking out on an agreement for 32 days, finally hit a home run.

"Nobody cares what the details are," Rangers manager Bobby Valentine said of fans' interest in the pact. "I don't even care. They just want to see us play baseball. Me, too."

After the agreement was reached Sunday, Rangers' general partner George W. Bush had said, "Finally, there is joy in Mudville."

Arlington Stadium director Jay Miller agreed, saying the Rangers already have sold 7,600 season tickets, 400 more than last year, with more sales expected after the ticket office was deluged on Monday and Tuesday.

"I think the fans, like pretty much all of us, wanted the thing to get resolved," he said.

Although not yet officially set by the American League, the Rangers' home opener will probably be April 17 against Milwaukee, said Miller.

"If you look at what the fans are buying, that seems to be the consensus," Miller said.

Mike Stone, Rangers president, said the ordeal had been worth it because now there is no threat of a mid-season strike.

"I do feel badly for our fans, who have been confused and hurt," he said.

But Rangers' general manager Tom Grieve wasn't so sure of the lockout's value.

"... A heavy price has already been paid. There is mass confusion in baseball," said Grieve. "We will start the season and play without interruption, but I wouldn't try to tell a fan ... that it was worth it."

The team probably will open the season April 10 in Toronto, but an open date on April 9 means a makeup game could be scheduled.

Astros begin work

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros first baseman Glenn Davis is getting ready to report to spring training but he thinks more time is needed before the start of the season.

"We need at least a month," Davis said from his home in Columbus, Ga.

Davis said he hoped to be at the Astros training site by Thursday, although Manager Art Howe planned the first full-scale workout for today.

After work begins, Davis said he'd be concerned about the Astros pitchers.

"I'm concerned about the pitchers," Davis said. "I don't think their arms will be ready. I'm concerned about injuries."

The Astros will have five practice sessions before they begin the exhibition schedule Monday against the New York Mets.

They'll have 14 exhibition games to prepare for their season opener April 9 in the Astrodome against the Cincinnati Reds.

"I imagine we'll spend the first few days trying to evaluate what kind of shape everyone is in," Howe said. "I'm sure we'll concentrate on who's able to pitch in a game, who's been throwing a lot and who hasn't."

With half the time to get ready for the regular season, Howe expects to see workouts in fast-motion.

"You'll see guys hustling around, trying to get all the work in we can," Howe said. "Everybody will want to get going. But that's something else we'll need to watch. We'll have to make sure no one extends themselves too quickly."

Catcher Craig Biggio was among the early arrivals at training camp. With one year, 99 days of major league service, he would have benefited from arbitration after two years.

Biggio doesn't care.

"I've never even thought that I'd be one of guys who can go," Biggio said. "I'm happy with what they paid me this year. I hope I'll be happy with what they pay me next year."

Seven veteran players participated in workouts on Tuesday and more were expected today.

NBA roundup...

Robinson gets 39 in Seattle

While Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was having his number retired in Los Angeles, David Robinson was putting on a Hall of Fame performance in Seattle.

Robinson scored 39 points, 20 in the fourth quarter, and had 10 rebounds and seven blocked shots as the San Antonio Spurs routed the SuperSonics 128-106 Tuesday night.

It was the second victory in two nights for the Spurs, and Robinson scored 73 points in the wins over Phoenix, and Seattle. Against the Sonics, he made 13 of 17 shots and all 13 free throws.

"The people of Phoenix and Seattle got a real treat," San Antonio coach Larry Brown said. "Playing against good athletic teams like these brings out the best in him."

Robinson used his quickness to offset the physical defense the Sonics used against him.

"Seattle tried to bump me, but I used my intelligence and quickness to get better position," Robinson said.

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was the Los Angeles Lakers 109, Charlotte 97 in a game in which Abdul-Jabbar's No. 33 was retired at halftime; Orlando 121, New York 118; Indiana 112, Miami 98; Chicago 122, Washington 97; Detroit 117, Milwaukee 96; Portland 120, Houston 110; Denver 119, the Los Angeles Clippers 112 and Golden State 105, Minnesota 101.

Willie Anderson had 18 points and Sean Elliott 17 as the Spurs won their third straight game. Shawn Kemp had 20 and Sedale Threatt 19 for Seattle.

Tar Heel player hurt

Madden out of tournament with bad knee

DALLAS (AP) — The Sweet 16 has turned sour for North Carolina.

The Tar Heels' Kevin Madden, who hit all 10 of his field goal attempts in the NCAA basketball tournament subregionals in Austin, Texas, injured a knee in practice and is out for the rest of the tournament.

North Carolina (21-12) is making its 10th straight appearance in the Round of 16 and faces Arkansas (28-4) in Thursday's NCAA Midwest Regional semifinal opener at Reunion Arena. Texas (23-8) meets Xavier of Ohio (28-4) in the second game.

Madden, a 6-foot-6 senior from Staunton, Va., tore the anterior cruciate in his right knee while driving past another player on a one-on-one drill.

Madden, averaging 10.1 points and 4.7 rebounds, scored 12 points against Southwest Missouri State and 14 against Oklahoma.

North Carolina coach Dean Smith said the loss of Madden will change the Tar Heels' look.

"Of course, we're extremely disappointed that Kevin will be out," Smith said. "We've been using Kevin as a big guard-small forward. That means Rick Fox ... will be at small forward, and then (Henrik) Rodl will give Fox some rest."

"Then Rodl, Hubert Davis and Jeff Denny will see more action in Kevin's spot," Smith added.

"It changes the look of our team a great deal."

Madden will accompany the team to Dallas, Smith said.

"I think we're all just under a shock right now. Kevin's handled it well ... He wants to be with us," the coach said.

"They put a form of a cast on so he can't hurt himself anymore and they'll operate as soon as our season is over because he wanted to be with the team."

Clemson coach Cliff Ellis said the Tar Heels' loss of Madden will "takes away some team chemistry."

"I think it will affect them from a chemistry standpoint, but they play a lot of people anyway," said Ellis, whose Tigers face Connecticut in the East Regional.

To add to North Carolina's woes, it'll be like a home game for the Arkansas Razorbacks, and North Carolina knows it.

Reunion officials estimate that 65 percent of the 17,007 tickets sold for Thursday's semifinals have been purchased by Razorbacks' fans, who prefer watching their Hogs play at home in Barnhill Arena but are more than happy to travel to Dallas.

Even with Texas in the other regional semifinal, Arkansas fans were able to purchase the majority of tickets.

North Carolina upset the Sooners 79-77 in Austin to make it to Dallas.

Serial killer receives death sentence for three slayings

CONROE, Texas (AP) — Serial killer Daniel Lee Corwin was sentenced to death by injection for the 1987 slayings of three women.

Montgomery County jurors in State District Judge James Keeshan's court deliberated just 35 minutes Tuesday before deciding on the death penalty for Corwin, who already is serving 99 years for the 1988 attempted capital murder of a Texas A&M student.

Corwin was convicted Friday under a new state law that allows capital prosecution for slayings committed at different times and locations, but which follow the same pattern.

His death sentence faces automatic appeal.

A year ago, Corwin, 31, confessed to a Huntsville detective that he was involved in the slayings of Alice Martin, 72, of Nor- mancee; Debra Ewing, 27, of Grangerland; and Mary Risinger, 36, of Huntsville.

All three women were attacked in public places. Ms. Martin was abducted while taking a walk near her home on Feb. 13, then tied, strangled and stabbed four times in the back.

Ms. Ewing was abducted at gunpoint from a Huntsville optical shop where she worked on July 10 and then was raped and stabbed twice in the chest at Lake Conroe.

Ms. Risinger was stabbed in the throat at a Huntsville car wash on Halloween as her 3-year-old daughter looked on.

During the punishment phase of the trial Monday, three rape victims described chilling details of their attacks by Corwin.

One rape victim told jurors she was a Temple High School student when Corwin, also a student, abducted her at knife-point from the school parking lot in May 1975. The woman, now 31, said Corwin drove her to an abandoned gravel pit in her car, raped her, stabbed her, cut her twice in the throat and tried to grind his knife into her heart before leaving her buried in trash. She was able to stumble to a roadway and flag down a car.

Corwin was sentenced to 40 years in prison for that attack, but was paroled after nine years. He was still on parole when he abducted a 21-year-old Texas A&M student at knife-point from a school parking lot. She, too, was raped, tied to a tree, stabbed and had her throat slashed. A passer-by found her and her life was saved.

Tornado

frequent lightning, heavy rain and strong winds; power failure; hail; a roaring noise; and the presence of a funnel cloud.

Texas and Scurry County are in the so-called "Tornado Alley."

The alley is on the lee side of the north-south oriented Rocky Mountains, which is a preferred area for the development of low pressure systems as westerly upper level winds blow across the mountain range. The Rocky Mountains also wring out much of the moisture from the upper level westerly winds. The counter-clockwise motion of air around the low pressure system pulls warm, moist air at the surface northward from the nearby Gulf of Mexico. Cool air to the north can move southward with no geographic restrictions, creating strong temperature contrasts with the warm air to the south. These factors all create a favorable environment for severe thunderstorms to develop.

The average number of tornadoes in Texas each year is 119 with an average of 11 Texans killed each year. Tornadoes can occur at anytime of the day, but are most frequent in Texas between 3 p.m. and 6 p.m.

Since 1950, there have been more than 4,700 tornadoes in Texas. Some 1,103 people in Texas have been killed by tornadoes since 1916.

House

House likely will end up in a conference committee with the Senate measure, so lawmakers can try to work out differences.

"If everything goes right, we could pass an education bill" to Gov. Bill Clements before the special session ends at midnight March 28, House Speaker Gib Lewis said.

If a tax increase is required to pay for the measure, Lewis said, "We'll have to be back here week after next, and take that issue up." That would require a second special session, which only the governor has the authority to call.

Clements, who has promised to veto any new taxes for court-ordered public school finance reform, said of Lewis' statement, "I never heard of such a thing. I think that's mostly just conversation."

A bill spending no more than about $250 million in the 1990-91 school year would be acceptable, Clements said, because that amount wouldn't require a tax increase.

Taxes

new statements were mailed. Chevron's new statement indicates $458,565.24 to be paid in county taxes, or some $66,000 less than it would have been required to pay before taxes were rolled back.

"There are literally hundreds of penny checks," said Sikes, who pointed out that "most of the checks are being mailed out of town" to oil interests.

The county has received a number of requests from residents wanting the county to keep individual refund checks, but the county by law must mail out all of them. However, anyone wanting their refund be kept by the county may endorse the check and send it to either the tax assessor's office or the county treasurer's office.

Expenses for the rollback, to include statements, checks and postage, computer programing and the election, amounted to $18,161.55.

Doghouse fire

Snyder firemen responded to a fire at 4115 Eastridge on Tuesday and discovered that the blaze — confined to a doghouse adjacent to the residence — had been extinguished.

There was no damage to the house, owned by J.D. Henderson and occupied by Lisa Bryant. Firemen reported back to the station at 1:30 p.m.

place even more restrictions on the cable television industry.

Nichols said his displeasure is reflected in another on-screen message Snyder Cablevision has begun using:

"Congress is considering legislation that will give the FCC total and absolute control over everything you watch on cable TV. This rule shows the FCC doesn't care what you think."

Nathan Geick of Conroe, vice president of Snyder Cablevision and owner TCA Cable TV, was here with Nichols of Tyler recently, and stated that a series of messages critical of the KTXS and the FCC will be alternated on the screen during times when programs have to be deleted.

KTXS has been able to restrict Snyder's programming because its transmitter is located near Trent, which puts it within the FCC's 35-mile limit.

"It may not look like it, and it's close, but we're there. We have spent a lot of money and have gone to our Washington attorney, and we have to do what they say," said Geick.

End in sight for federal control of prisons in Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — A federal monitor of the Texas prison system told the criminal justice board that dramatic reforms in the state's prisons have allowed him to end his nine-year, court-ordered surveillance.

Special master Vincent Nathan, an attorney from Toledo, Ohio, was appointed by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice in 1981 to oversee the state's compliance with Justice's mandates for improving prisons.

Nathan said that the department of corrections now "is an altogether different operation" than it was in 1981.

"I can tell you that the problems in Texas in 1981 were incredibly severe, and that combined with the size of the system and condition of the system, it certainly was as difficult a process as any I've ever seen," he said.

Justice's oversight of the state prison system began in December 1980 when he ruled in favor of inmate David Ruiz and other prisoners who claimed that confinement in the Texas prison system constitutes cruel and unusual punishment.

Texas now is one of 36 states whose prison systems are subject to federal courts.

Justice agreed March 6 to close the special master's office on March 31.

"What that order, in my opinion, suggests is that the court has reached the conclusion that the agency has demonstrated its ability, its willingness, its commitment to achieving compliance with constitutional standards and compliance with its orders," Nathan said at Tuesday's meeting of the Texas Board of Criminal Justice.

But he said that despite the progress, the state must continue to better several of its services, such as psychiatric and mental health care.

"There are remaining problems," he said. "The litigation is not going away overnight. There are improvements that need to be made."

Charles Terrell, chairman of the Texas Board of Criminal Justice, said the closure of the master's office could mark the beginning of state autonomy in prisons.

"There is daylight," he said. "Not only is the monitor ending, but there can be a future when we have accomplished so much that there is no outside intervention at all."

Terrell said the state must try to reduce the number of prisoners in isolation and curb recidivism by improving drug rehabilitation programs.

"If we fail to do so, this trust given us by the court won't last," he said. "Now, we must monitor ourselves."

The next step in concluding the court's intervention, Terrell said, will be for attorneys on both sides of the lawsuit to set a timetable for resolution of the suit.

"I don't want to jump out there and say this is in the near future until we have a chance to meet with the plaintiff attorneys," he said.

But Terrell said the state's situation today is "a significant change from three years ago," when the state faced nearly $24 million in contempt fines monthly because of lingering prison problems.

Also at Tuesday's prison board meeting, board members approved more than $800,000 in construction projects and voted to continue appointing defense lawyers for inmates who commit crimes in prison.

The approach has been challenged in court by prisoners who object to being defended by a lawyer for the state. One such case now is being appealed.

Terrell also asked board members to begin studying the feasibility of administering exit tests to inmates to measure the effectiveness of prison education programs.

Mattox foes say extradition was 'politically motivated'

AUSTIN (AP) — An unemployed computer salesman and father of two has become the first person extradited to Texas to face charges that he has failed to make court-ordered child support payments, triggering charges that the legal action was politically motivated.

Neil Edmund Fritsch, 31, of Sacramento, Calif., was returned to Texas Tuesday in handcuff to face charges in Caldwell County that he failed to make nearly $18,000 in court-ordered child support payments.

Fritsch was accompanied by a Caldwell County deputy and an investigator from the Texas attorney general's office.

Fritsch said he will plead innocent when he faces a district judge in Lockhart today for arraignment on a felony charge of criminal non-support.

Attorney General Jim Mattox, who is in the Democratic runoff for governor, has made child support enforcement a priority and has garnered widespread media attention with his crackdown on parents delinquent in their payments.

Monte Williams, a spokesman for state Treasurer Ann Richards, Mattox's runoff opponent, criticized Mattox's child enforcement efforts and charged that the timing of Fritsch's extradition was "clearly political in nature."

"He is trying to prop up what is known far and wide as a failing program. The federal government has threatened to withhold funds if the program does not improve its collection record," Williams said.

A Mattox aide denied that the extradition was politically motivated, noting that the arrest warrant was issued last October. A subsequent warrant, required for extradition, was signed by Gov. Bill Clements and sent to California Gov. George Deukmejian a week before the March 13 primary.

"Ann Richards would have us believe that the Caldwell County district attorney, the Republican governor of Texas, the Republican governor of California and the California courts all conspired to participate in a publicity stunt for Jim Mattox," Kelly Fero, Mattox's campaign spokesman, said.

Fritsch, the father of two children in Luling, denied that he owed any money. He said he was never legally married to the mother of the children, aged 7 and 8.

Officials say Fritsch was married and has repeatedly refused to pay child support since his divorce in December, 1984. The payments have accumulated at the rate of $320 per month.

Court records show that since the divorce, Fritsch has made only one payment, in June 1987 for $2,480.

Bill Burton, director of special enforcement for the attorney general's office, said that Fritsch moved to California and on three occasions he was ordered by California judges to make the payments through payroll deductions.

"But as soon as they caught up with him and the wage assignment order took effect, he would simply quit his job and get another one," Burton said. "It

University of Texas computer system not damaged by intruder

AUSTIN (AP) — An intruder that infiltrated dozens of computer systems nationwide has been detected at the University of Texas, but officials say the only damage was a possible theft of passwords.

Charles Warlick, director of UT's Computation Center, said Tuesday that nobody at the university has reported harm to their files or programs. "If they did report that, I would be concerned," he said.

The computation center oversees thousands of terminals tied to UT's main academic computer. A separate system serves UT administrators.

Investigators late last week traced an intruder on the Internet computer network. The network links corporations, universities, non-classified military installations and government laboratories nationwide.

Computer systems invaded by the intruder include those at Texas, Harvard, Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico, Digital Equipment Corp. and Boston University.

The New York Times reported that the intruder's program systematically tried to steal computer files that contained passwords to Internet. Some of the intrusions were traced to Texas and New Mexico before investigators lost the trail.

But Warlick said he saw no evidence that a rogue program tried to obtain passwords. Instead, he said he suspects a computer hacker tried single-handedly to enter computers at the institutions.

Warlick said UT officials notified the Computer Emergency Response Team at Carnegie-Mellon University's Software Engineering Institute when they detected the intrusion.

The response team is a federally funded organization that gathers information about computer break-ins.

Terry McGillen, a spokesman for the Computer Emergency Response Team in Pittsburgh, said that there wasn't any indication that the recent computer intruder was a rogue program.

He said his organization alerted Internet members that a number of computers in the system had been invaded. McGillen said several dozen attempts to steal passwords from the system had been made Thursday and Friday.

"We don't have any evidence of damage," he said. "We just have evidence of people intruding."

Los Alamos spokesman John Webster said Monday that its unclassified computer system was rid of the intruder.

Internet was thrown into chaos in November 1988 when it was jammed by a program written by Robert Tappan Morris, a graduate student at Cornell University.

The new program is not the same as one that Morris used. That program, called a worm, copied itself from computer to computer, as a computer virus does.

'The Thin Blue Line' figure writing book, keeping busy

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Randall Dale Adams, whose release from a Texas prison one year ago today attracted nationwide publicity, says he plans to do his celebrating in private.

The former death row inmate, who now lives with his mother in a trailer in suburban Grove City, was released March 21, 1989, after a Texas court overturned his 1977 conviction of killing a Dallas policeman, saying prosecutors suppressed evidence and relied on testimony from two witnesses who lied.

His case was chronicled in "The Thin Blue Line," a 1988 documentary in which filmmaker Errol Morris questioned testimony that led to his conviction.

"When I got out of jail and came home, I really thought, give it two weeks and I'll be old news," Adams said in an interview Tuesday. "I didn't expect the interest that has come about."

He said he plans to spend the day with his family.

Adams, 41, now makes his living on the speaker's circuit. He's also writing a book about his time on death row, where he was once three days away from being executed. His sentence was commuted to life imprisonment in 1980.

These days, he spends so much of his time on the road between speaking engagements and television appearances, that he has little time for his personal life.

He recently broke off a relationship with a woman he had dated and has had difficulty getting together with friends who are busy with work and their families.

"I take it one step at a time," he said. "I have some low moments, not because of what I've been through, but because of the fact there's a big gap in my life. I see my friends — they're all married, they have kids. Sometimes I sit down and I realize what I've lost."

"I can't recoup that and I honestly wouldn't want to. I think if I tried, it would ruin my future. To do anything else would negate what I am."

When Adams is at home he catches up on interview requests and correspondence, much of it from prisoners throughout the country who contend they, like Adams, were victims of the judicial system.

David Harris, the state's primary witness in Adams' trial, is scheduled to die by lethal injection April 3 for his conviction in an unrelated slaying. Harris in 1988 recanted his testimony naming Adams as the killer of police officer Robert Wood. Adams picked up Harris, then a teenager hitchhiking through the city, on the day Wood was killed.

Adams said his book, "House of Sorrow, House of Pain," will tell his side of the case. The title refers to death row and the Texas Department of Corrections prison unit where he was held.

He waged a court battle against Morris last year to win the right to tell his own story. Adams said he still considers Morris "a member of my family," even though the two have not spoken since the dispute.

Adams said he hopes to complete the book by early next year.

"If anything, it allows my family and myself to tell each other what we've been through," he said. "It allows me to tell, I guess, the world what it's been like. I have to keep speaking out about my case. If not, I think I'd go crazy."

Two days after his release, a thin, pale, and very nervous Adams returned home to a crowd of 100 people at Port Columbus International Airport. In the crowd was his mother, Mildred, who waved yellow ribbons and cheered as Adams made his way through the airport.

Now Adams is tan, relaxed, has grown a mustache and let his hair grow longer.

"I'm feeling good. Things are looking very good, and the future's opening up for me," he said. "I'm busier than I ever thought I'd be, but I like it this way."

Adams has been on network talk shows and news programs, and he has been to Italy and France to speak about his life. He's scheduled to leave for Belgium in a week to speak on television there.

He wouldn't discuss how much money he makes.

"I'm not getting rich doing this," he said. "But I can pay my bills. As long as I can support myself and continue talking about the case, I intend to keep on doing that. When I can't support myself, then I'll have to do that nine-to-five thing."

Floating restaurant seized due to unpaid school taxes

INGLESIDE, Texas (AP) — It's not known if the Ingleside Independent School District is going into the restaurant business, but they're off to a good start with the tax seizure of a floating restaurant in Redfish Bay.

The district Tuesday seized the Wayward Lady in an attempt to collect about $34,000 in back taxes.

School officials said they had considered seizing the ship before Tuesday because they were concerned it wouldn't stay in the area long enough for them to collect the $17,823.68 in taxes, penalties and interest owed for 1989 and for the $16,352 in taxes that is expected to be assessed for 1990.

Officials said their interest in the restaurant was aroused last week when they saw a photograph of it in the Corpus Christi Caller-Times along with a news story that Neil Miller, president of Hasslocher Enterprises, which owns the ship, said the Wayward Lady was for sale and that an out-of-state broker was handling the deal. School officials decided to move more quickly.

"We knew it was there, but we hadn't followed through on it," said Bob Spaulding, tax assessor-collector for the Ingleside school district. "Then after I saw the picture, I called the lawyers."

Long-lost relative of both humans & apes found in remote forest

NEW YORK (AP) — A field biologist who trudged through a soggy, leech-infested forest in search of a long-lost relative of humans and apes returned with malaria, blood poisoning and the first photographs of an animal no scientist had ever seen alive.

"For a week, I couldn't move," Bernhard Meier of Ruhr University in Bochum, West Germany, said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

But he recovered, and his sighting of the hairy-eared dwarf lemur in Madagascar has been described as one of the most important rediscoveries of a mammal in the last decade.

"I went three times to that forest to find that animal, although I already knew it was there," he said.

An old man in a nearby village had told him about it.

To get to the forest, near Mananara in northern Madagascar, an island country off the east coast of Africa, "you need to hike three days, long and strong," Meier said. "Nothing is dry after a few kilometers because you need to cross many big rivers and creeks" containing leeches.

"The leeches are not dangerous. Most people say, 'Oh, leeches, I don't want these plum-sized, ugly, satisfied leeches on me.' ... But the mosquitoes are dangerous. They transmit malaria."

Five preserved specimens, the first collected 115 years ago, are held in museums. But until Meier's discovery, researchers had no idea whether the creature still existed.

The first complete description of the animal, known to scientists as Allocebus trichotis, will be published shortly in Folia Primatologica, a scientific journal. Meier made the discovery last April, but it is only now being reported.

The rediscovery of the lemur (pronounced LEE-mur) is important because it is the only surviving species of an entire genus of lemurs that have disappeared, said Russell Mittermeier, president of Conservation International in Washington, D.C., and a primate specialist.

"If you lose a species, there are close relatives around," he said. "If you lose a genus, that's worse." The discovery of the hairy-eared dwarf lemur is "one of the two most important rediscoveries of mammals in a decade," Mittermeier said.

The other was the rediscovery of the soft-spined porcupine in Brazil in 1986, he said.

The lemur is brown and shaped like a mouse, with a body 5 inches long and a 7-inch, furry tail. It weighs no more than 3½ ounces.

"Allocebus is the smallest primate species in existence, except during the dry season when the mouse lemur is not fat and is smaller," Meier said.

The lemurs of Madagascar are scientifically important because they are a group of primates that evolved in isolation during the millions of years that the other primates — monkeys, apes and humans — were evolving elsewhere.

"In effect, Madagascar is a giant experiment in alternative evolution," the New Scientist, an English journal, has said.

Meier has an enviable record as a lemur hunter. Within the last few years he discovered and described a lemur new to science, the golden bamboo lemur, in collaboration with Patricia Wright of Duke University in North Carolina. He also rediscovered the greater bamboo lemur, which biologists feared had become extinct.

Daughter-in-Law's Open House Is Suddenly Closed to Mother

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1990 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have two married sons who move frequently in their work. Recently they both moved to the same city about 2,000 miles from us. As both sons had been asking us to visit them, we thought this would be a good time.

We called our sons before getting our tickets and were told they'd be waiting. Five minutes after I called the younger son, he called back to say his wife had told him that I wasn't welcome in their home! I was shocked. They've been married for 15 years and I had been in their home many times. (Once she had insisted that we stay two weeks when we'd planned to stay only one.)

I called and asked her what I had done to her. She said that 12 years ago, when they were visiting us, we had a family picture taken and she hadn't been asked to be in it. Abby, I always thought a family picture included the mother, father and the children they had raised.

At first we decided not to go because we didn't want to cause any trouble between our son and his wife, but the older son insisted we come anyway, so we went. He and his wife were wonderful, showing us the sights, great meals, etc. Our younger son took two days off work to be with us, brought the grandchildren out, and even took us to see his lovely new home one day when his wife was gone. (She's intelligent, college-educated and has good manners.)

When we got home, I wrote her a letter, apologizing for excluding her from the family pictures and telling her how proud I had always been of her, and hoped we could put this misunderstanding behind us. Well, my letter was returned marked "Refused."

Abby, what could I have done that I didn't do? I feel terrible and don't know what to do.

HEARTSICK

DEAR HEARTSICK: Consider this: Intelligent, college-educated people with good manners are not immune to physical and mental disorders.

Your daughter-in-law's sudden, hostile personality change could be a symptom of some kind of disorder. Tell your son that his wife should be examined physically and psychiatrically. It would be a kindness.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from "Danny's Mom" in Knoxville, Tenn. It seems her son, Danny, had gone back to college at the age of 36 and, after seven years, he was graduating with honors at the age of 43. Danny said he owed it all to you because he read a letter in your column from a man who was debating about whether he should return to college for his degree. The man had written, "In seven years, I will be 45 years old." Your reply: "So how old will you be in seven years if you don't go back?"

Well, I can top Danny. After 14 years of working days and going to school nights — taking one or two courses at a time — on June 3, 1990, I will graduate magna cum laude from Elmira College with a degree in psychology.

I expect to have four grandchildren in my audience, and will be celebrating my 57th birthday in August.

Abby, keep right on telling people it's never too late to learn.

PATRICIA GOODRIDGE, ELMIRA, N.Y.

DEAR PATRICIA: Congratulations. If anybody can top you, I'm sure I'll hear about it.
