Men To Match Mountains

The need for the public school never changes, but times and conditions may change, or require to be changed, methods and practices of public education. This is inherent with anything that grows, for growth is the result of change.

Our Texas public schools were created 111 years ago. In 1854, the first law was passed establishing the public school.

It is a healthy thing in our democratic way of life to have intelligent understanding of the important functions of our basic institutions. This is especially true of the schools. The initiative and resourcefulness, and the wisdom and leadership that our schools are inculcating in the youth of today, are the answer to the problems of citizenship in the years ahead.

Yes, "bring me men to match mountains." That is the need of our times and must come from the public schools—schools that are strong in virtues required for building strong men and women.

We can be assured of this end, and do our part in understanding and helping the public schools to fulfill their great obligation to our times, by being a participant in the annual Public Schools Week next week, March 1 through March 5.

Schools here will be holding open house. Accept their hospitality. Get a little eraser dust on you. You will enjoy the experience of going back to school... if but for a day.

AT 45TH ANNIVERSARY BARBECUE—

Legion Makes Plans To Salute State CO

A steering committee of nine was named Thursday night to finalize plans and make all arrangements attendant to the visit in Haskell March 11 of Lewis Emerich, of Houston, state commander of the American Legion.

State Commander Emerich will be in Haskell to spearhead the observance of the 45th anniversary of the founding of Rogers-Cox Legion Post 221 here.

Legionnaires from a wide area of Northwest-North Central Texas are expected here for the event and will at the same time honor the state commander of the American Legion, Porter Oakes, commander of the Haskell post, reported.

Oakes named the following Haskell Legionnaires to handle all details for State Commander Emerich's appearance at a 45th anniversary barbecue at the Legion Hall here Thursday evening, March 11: Bob Edwards, area "barbecue king," who will cater the meal; Henry Druesedow, past post commander and present chaplain of the 13th Legion District of Texas; John P. Payne, first commander of the post here when it was organized in 1920, and active in the Legion for 45 years; Fred Boon and Bob Dulaney, both vice commanders of the post here; R. V. Black, immediate past commander; Jim Sampson, adjutant; and Billy Ray Smith, sergeant-at-arms.

Preparations are being made to feed some 300 persons at the anniversary observance at which Emerich, a Houston insurance executive and widely known platform personality, will be the principal speaker.

Haskell's seven delegates to Boys' State last summer, their parents, and past commanders of the post here will be honored guests.

Tickets to the event will go on sale and reservations taken beginning Friday, Feb. 26, with Oakes and Sampson coordinating these activities.

FORMER ENGLAND PHYSICIAN, NOW OF RULE, LIONS SPEAKER

The Doctor-Patient relationship has been broken down in England, since politics entered medicine," Dr. George Orr, who formerly practiced medicine in Edinburg, Scotland, told members of the Haskell Lions Club at the Tuesday noon-day luncheon meeting, in the dining room at Felker's Cafe.

Dr. Orr, along with his wife, moved to Rule about six months ago, where he has established practice.

Dr. Frank Cadenhead introduced the genial, red-haired, well-versed speaker, and following his talk, many questions were fired at Dr. Orr from the floor.

"Approximately 34 per cent of the doctors are leaving England each year, because of socialized medicine," Dr. Orr said.

"The average layman seems to like the socialized medicine system, because he believes he is getting something for nothing, while in reality he is paying for it in added taxation," the guest speaker pointed out.

Dr. Orr's talk centered around the "Influence of States on Medicine," the socialized system in Great Britain.

Rev. Regeon Is Leaving Here For Seymour Pulpit

Rev. L. D. Regeon, pastor of the East Side Baptist Church in Haskell for the past seven years, is leaving to accept a call to the pulpit of the Calvary Baptist Church in Seymour.

Rev. Walter Copeland, long-time Baptist pastor in this area, who recently completed a tenure as interim pastor at the First Baptist Church in Weimert, will serve in a similar capacity at East Side Church here until a new pastor is called.

The pulpit committee of East Side Baptist Church includes Harry Howard, Otis Elmore, Thurmond R. H. O'Konski, Wallace Bird and Jack Jarred.

Rev. and Mrs. Regeon and their children will move to Seymour next Monday. His first sermon at his new church will be March 7.

Haskell Chamber of Commerce went "over the top" on Tuesday morning on its current commitment of $1,000 toward paving of the airstrip here as a community project. President Abe Turner announced at a breakfast session of the chamber board in Felker's Cafe here.

It was the last board meeting for Turner as president, and for five retiring directors, Clay Smith, E. J. Stewart, Mrs. Roy Johnson, Wallace Cox Jr., and Porter Oakes. Turner has served as president two years. New officers and directors will be installed at the Haskell Chamber of Commerce's 25th annual membership banquet Friday night, March 5. Final plans for the event at which Bob Murphree, prominent East Texas attorney and grassroots philosopher, will speak, were made at Tuesday's breakfast. Large delegations from Stamford, Abilene, and other area cities are expected for the occasion.

Chamber Manager Luther Walker announced tickets for the annual membership banquet Friday night, March 5, may be obtained from the C of C office here or from most any director of the organization. The 330 tickets, all that are available, "are going fast," he said here Tuesday.

Turner announced that a total of $1,036 has been contributed during a whirlwind campaign to underwrite the $1,000 currently due from Chamber of Commerce members on the recent $4,000 airport improvement. (See C of C Subscribers, P. 12)

RAY LUSK'S MEN HAVE 7300 ACCIDENT-FREE DAYS—

Miraculous 20-Year Record Reached By Highway Crew

The Texas Highway Department's 15-man maintenance crew based in Haskell "tiptoed to their jobs" Tuesday morning, according to Ray Lusk, foreman, and thus rounded out 20 full years, or 7300 days of work uninterrupted by a single second of time away from the job due to accident or injury.

The phenomenal safety record compiled by the Haskell area highway maintenance crew Tuesday stood as third best in the entire state of Texas. State Highway Engineer D. C. Greer, of Austin, has reported.

Only Foard County, with 10,585, accident-free days, and Young County, with 8,152, both in the Northwest Texas area, as is Haskell, have amassed better records, Greer said.

As of Tuesday, an average of 12 men working 45 hours per week have maintained daily a total of 300 miles of roads in this area. Working 540 hours a week, this crew has turned in 25,080 man hours of effort a year, or more than a half-million hours of work in the last 20 years without a moment's time lost from accidents.

Lusk's "gang" of 15 travels 16,000 to 17,000 miles each and every month in serving as "watchdogs" for area highways at all hours and in all kinds of weather.

The maintenance department here was the recipient of statewide recognition during Texas Highway Week last October 4-10 when the City of Haskell, Chamber of Commerce, and

An area public junior college serving Knox, Stonewall, Haskell and Throckmorton Counties would meet a growing need to help teen-agers make the transition to adulthood and also would be economically feasible with the balanced economy which exists in this territory, a hardy group of citizens was told here Tuesday night.

Interested residents of Haskell, Munday and Rochester, assembled in the renovated City Hall here, heard a high-ranking official of the Texas Education Agency and a Dallas financial consultant conversant with the area economic picture make these declarations. They were B. W. Musgraves, of Austin, assistant commissioner of education, and head of TEA's junior college division, and Sidney Woodridge, who appeared here under the auspices of the Securities Exchange Commission. They were introduced by Mrs. Luther Burkett, of Haskell, chairman of the steering committee of the junior college project.

The 25 area residents who braved bitter cold weather to attend were visibly impressed with a map recently published by Musgraves pin-pointing the 33 public junior colleges and 10 private and church-related junior colleges in Texas.

The area in which the four counties under consideration as a joint public junior college district are the geographic hub, is, with the exception of the southern and western tips of the state, the most sizeable territory in Texas without a junior college. Both Musgraves and Woodridge in separate presentations concurred "if the proper set of circumstances were put together, it appears you are entitled to a public junior college."

Both emphasized that, due to legislative requirements which must be met to set up a district in this sparsely populated area, all four counties would have to "cooperate completely, and if you join hands long enough, you'll make it."

Both Musgraves and Woodridge reminded that standards of living improve through education, and therefore, the presence of a college in this area would enhance the entire economy. A college would create a broader field for business and improve existing business, Woodridge said.

Regardless of which community is the site of a college, all the communities in the territory would benefit, he stressed.

Musgraves traced the history of junior colleges in Texas, and Woodridge gave specific examples of the economic feasibility of an area college, tax-wise and otherwise.

Mr. Quattlebaum, Retired Ginner, Succumbs At 77

Warren W. Quattlebaum, 77, cotton ginner and former professional baseball player who first came to this area 60 years ago, died at 7 p. m. Saturday in Haskell County Hospital. He had entered the hospital Wednesday, but had been in ill health for several months.

Funeral services were held at 10 a. m. Tuesday in East Side Baptist Church here with Rev. Walter Copeland, retired Baptist pastor and Rev. L. D. Regeon, pastor of the East Side Baptist Church officiating. Burial was in Willow Cemetery under direction of Holden Funeral Home.

Born at Corn Hill in Williamson County, 12 miles north of Georgetown on Sept. 6, 1887, Mr. Quattlebaum moved to Taylor County with his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Quattlebaum, in 1905. They established residence in Haskell in 1908.

He and Olive Pauline Roach, of Blue Grove, in Clay County, were married Dec. 20, 1914. Mr. Quattlebaum was employed in the cotton ginning business most of his adult life at Rule, Vera, in Oklahoma and New Mexico, and at Lockney on the South Plains, at which place he retired, returning to Haskell in 1956. He also spent a few years at Woodson, in Throckmorton County, where he was a mail carrier and barber.

In his late teens and early twenties, he established quite a reputation as a baseball player in the Texas Central Trolley League in Dallas and with the Hugo, Oklahoma, pro nine.

Mr. Quattlebaum joined the Baptist Church in 1904 in Williamson County. He was a member of the First Baptist Church in Rule.

Lest We Forget... Our Heritage

Two anniversaries of events which should be retold, and therefore remain fresh in the memories of each new generation of patriotic Americans are observed each February.

The passage of 67 years has dimmed in the minds of most Americans the historic event that took place in Havana Harbor, Cuba, on February 15, 1898. Few Americans alive today can recall the mysterious attack upon the Battleship Maine as it lay at anchor off Havana. On the other hand, many Americans still remember that on February 19, 1945, twenty years ago, the U. S. Marines landed on Iwo Jima, a volcanic island, 660 miles south of Tokyo.

In 1898, the sinking of the Maine with a loss of 266 officers and men awakened the conscience of this Nation, and immediately there arose an insistent demand from millions of Americans that we go to war with Spain. Inevitably, this decision was made, and history records the splendid accomplishments of THE LAST COMPLETELY VOLUNTEER ARMY made up largely of American boys in their teens. More than 6,000 American youths died in action or from deadly tropical diseases.

In 1945, but twenty-six days after they landed, the U. S. Marines had secured the island of Iwo Jima and written an immortal chapter in the story of American heroism. Five thousand, eight hundred and ninety-five Marines died in the writing of this chapter. So did 19,000 Japanese soldiers.

While some historians have seen fit to minimize the Spanish-American War of 1898-1900 itself and its after effects, it is an historic fact that the successful conclusion of this warfare brought untold benefits to America. Victory made possible the Panama Canal, brought ultimate success over the dreaded plague of yellow fever and opened up broad vistas of world commerce.

It can be unequivocally stated that the lessons learned during the Spanish-American conflict laid the foundation for victory in both World Wars. Those Spanish-American war veterans, their ranks now so very thin, and their very own, can take pride and comfort in the fact that they played a vital role in the making of America as we know it today.

This month, wherever Marines are stationed, there will be solemn tributes offered to the courage and sacrifice of the 3rd, 4th and 5th Marine Divisions in the ash and agony of Iwo.

Americans everywhere can take justifiable pride in the courageous, selfless service of all our fighting men from San Juan Hill to the Argonne to Iwo to Korea to Vietnam, symbolically speaking.

And...lest we forget...let us refresh ourselves with this imperishable declaration: Americanism is an unflinching love of country; loyalty to its institutions and its ideas; eagerness to defend it against all enemies; undivided allegiance to the Flag; and a desire to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and posterity. Let us not forget.

The Time Is NOW

While public junior college presidents were battling for added state support last Monday in a hearing of the Senate Finance Subcommittee, the other money group in the Texas Legislature—the House Appropriations Committee—released its version of a 1966-67 budget bill in which the presidents seem to have won their battle.

These public junior college administrators typify what one day soon it is hoped we will have directing the destiny of an area college serving Stonewall, Knox, Haskell and Throckmorton Counties.

In their presentation to the State Senators last week, and to the House Committee the week previous, the junior college administrators asked the state to pay instructional costs for junior colleges, so the local districts, such as we are endeavoring to set up in our four-county area, will have enough money to provide classrooms and pay for administration.

These college leaders said major problems of paying junior college teachers on a par with senior college instructors and meeting mushrooming student enrollment requirements, can only be met if the state antes up funds in the same manner they are allocated to four-year schools.

This would mean that the state would pay $450 for each full time student from within a junior college district and $550 for each student from outside the district.

Dr. Anthony Hunt, president of Howard County Junior College in Big Spring, who recently tangibly demonstrated his interest in helping citizens of this area establish a junior college district, was one of the dynamic spokesmen in Austin for increased state aid to junior colleges.

By every conceivable yardstick, it appears certain at this time these junior college presidents are going to be successful in obtaining legislative support for their programs. The entire tenor of the situation in Austin, accenting to the utmost education beyond the high school, paints the most encouraging picture possible in support of an all-out effort by folks in our four counties to petition for a junior college district.

We can qualify for this desperately needed area college, which not only would provide the most economical education, but stimulate the entire economy as well, by pulling together, all four counties, as one cohesive unit, in the effort. We CANNOT qualify for the district, and thus would lose this once-in-a-lifetime golden opportunity, without THAT JOINT impetus.

AND THE TIME IS NOW, in gridiron parlance, "to make our move."

Wallace Wooten's self-appointed campaign at his service station to furnish hay for "the horses under your hood"—story about which appears elsewhere in this issue—brings to mind what we might aptly call "The Tale of The Tiger." And, 1964 well may go down in advertising history as "The Year Of The Tiger."

Seems to us this tale of the tiger is one of the most potent examples extant of the power of well-directed, well-planned advertising in catching and holding the American mind and fancy. A few examples, some of which we picked up ourselves, and some of which came from a survey conducted by that well-known gasoline producer which started the tale of the tiger in the first place, appear hereinafter:

When the rare albino Bengal tiger at the Washington, D. C., zoo was "expecting" recently, the zoo director's answer to the frequent question was, "Noth-

Before the national elections last fall, political pollsters in a certain city checking automobiles found more bumper stickers with "I've got a tiger in my tank" than those supporting either presidential candidate. Motorists ranging from dragstripers to elderly grandmothers drive happily along with toy tiger tails fluttering from their gasoline tank caps. The whole country seems to have a tiger by the tail...and to be enjoying it immensely.

A critic covering a Metropolitan Opera performance of "Samson and Delilah," wrote that the leading tenor failed to sing as though he had a tiger in his tank. Viewing the American League pennant race, a New York baseball columnist conjectured: "There's a Tiger in the tank of Yogi Berra's (Whitey) Ford again, so the long uphill climb may not be too much for the Yankees after all."

A nationally syndicated editorial cartoonist had a tiger glaring from an Army tank labeled "Vietnam War Effort." Standing by, one U. S. soldier exclaims to another, "Egad, we have a tiger in our tank."

In the good-natured jungle warfare to attract customers, competing service stations have advertised, "We filter tiger fuff from your carburetor." But there's no holding that tiger to gasoline retelling alone. The sure-footed feline has helped sell perfume, breakfast cereal, automobiles, women's shoes, men's hair dressings, vitamins, tires, and oil well drilling equipment—not to mention hit songs with tiger lyrics all through 'em. The average hunter wouldn't cross paths with so many tigers in a lifetime of safaris.

On an early morning farm roundup broadcast this week, we caught the report that the skunk population in this area is increasing, and that there is a high incidence of rabies. Most folks who are rabid on certain subjects are considered skunks by those who take issue with them.

George Washington's being pictured astride his horse singlefisting along the countryside singing, "Bury Me Not On the Lone Prairie" on the Jonathan Winters Show Monday night reminded us of an experience of ours in World War II. We were in the Midlands, or Potteries District, of England, where they make Wedgwood and Spode china. We were in a town called Stoke-on-Trent, and walking down the street when we had to give way to a platoon of His Majesty's Scotch kiln-attired Royal Grenadiers, who were marching, sashaying, rather, down the cobblestones, lustily singing, bellowing, rather, "I'm An Ol' Cowhand From the Rio Grande" in perfectly "dressed" cadence in the "daggumdest" Cockney accent one ever heard!

Do you know what they call a new competitive sport now being pursued avidly by backhoe, or excavating machine operators? Its "hoo-dee." And "they say" it's as thrilling to watch as a hockey game. Don't know what they struggle for possession of, like a puck or a ball. Pikes Peak, maybe?

Heard Roundin' The Square: "It was one of those parties you say you wouldn't be caught dead at—then die if you don't get invited."

A brochure on publication management has come across our desk, listing about a dozen subjects discussed on how to better achieve peak performance. They list two, saved for the last as a climax, we are sure, in this order: "How to Communicate With Your Boss," and "Every Little Bit Helps."

World understanding, one of the principal aims and objects of Rotary International, was the subject of a panel discussion by a trio of talented students from Haskell High School before the Rotary Club of Haskell at its Thursday noon meeting in Felker's Cafe here.

All members of a speech class taught by Mrs. Terry Diggs, faculty member at Haskell High School, the students were presented to the Rotary audience by R. W. (Bob) Herren, who commended their diligent preparation for communicating the challenging issues.

Robert Speer, narrator, set the stage for the commentaries by two fellow students on the status of the world today. Two stimulating addresses were delivered. One was by Dianne Summers, who placed high in UIL contests last spring as a persuasive speaker, on the world situation as seen by the eyes and heard by the ears of Moscow. The other was by Hollis Callaway, who summed up the United States' credits and debits on the ledger of world understanding.

Roy Johnson, president of the Rotary Club here, announced the agenda for the annual district conference of the Northwest-North Central Rotary District 579, to be held in Abilene, March 19-20, at the Windsor Hotel there. Ed Hester, chairman of the Haskell club's "On To Abilene" committee, announced Rotarians here are out to preserve their record of having the most representative attendance of any club in the 41-club Rotary district. Haskell Rotary has enjoyed this distinction throughout the seven years of its existence.

NO ROOM FOR MEDIOCRITY—SECOND OF A SERIES JUNIOR, COMMUNITY COLLEGE HAS NUMEROUS ROLES TO FILL

(Editor's Note: The problems of higher education are vital and immediate. A project which now is being placed squarely before the people of Haskell, Throckmorton, Stonewall, and Knox counties also is vital and immediate. Harley Pershing, FORT WORTH STAR-TELEGRAM, recently wrote a series of articles, 13 in all, on junior colleges. The series is entitled "No Room for Mediocrity." We requested and received from THE STAR-TELEGRAM, with its blessing, the series in toto. Knowing of the vital interest in this subject at this time, it is our aim to reproduce the articles of this series, one, sometimes two, per week, to give our readers the complete perspective on junior colleges. The Free Press feels that a citizenship well-informed on the importance of the project will be able to better comprehend its bearing on the welfare, well-being, and future of this territory.)

The junior college has many roles to fill and problems to solve in meeting the needs of the community it serves.

And service to the community, its citizens, its business, its industry, its commerce, its professions should be the primary concern of the institution.

In fact, the college shouldn't carry the tag "junior" at all, a misnomer, a stigma on development of the institution. Instead it should be known as a community or city college.

These are the words of one of the top experts on the subject, Dr. C. C. Colvert, a University of Texas professor who specializes in his teachings at the College of Education in the junior college program.

Dr. Colvert's facts come from experience. He learned them the hard way.

He is the former president of a junior college at Monroe, La., a school he helped organize in 1931.

During his 13 years as head of this thriving little college, Dr. Colvert resisted effort after effort to convert the school into a four-year college, a trend now followed in many quarters in Texas.

He always stilled his opponents with two argumentative attacks:

- 1. To convert the junior college to four-year senior status would destroy the purpose of the school.
2. Instead of being a good junior college, the institution would become a mediocre senior college, existing on backdoor handouts from the educational, intellectual and financial tables.

This leads Dr. Colvert to explain his views on what is a junior college and what role it should perform in the community and in the framework of higher education.

First, says Dr. Colvert, the junior college should be an institution to serve the community—whatever be its needs, educationally or intellectually.

It should give to the community what the community needs and wants now and in the future.

The program of instruction should not be tailored along a pattern cut years ago but changed to meet the challenges of the present or the excitement of the future.

Dr. Colvert, who has worked as a consultant in junior college work, instruction and implementation in Florida and California, believes that a community college should have four functions.

First, it should be geared to train technicians and experts needed to work with professionals in certain highly technical fields.

Examples are laboratory technicians to assist the doctor, the scientist and the chemist; draftsmen for engineers and architects; technicians for communications and data processing machines, and hundreds of other highly technical jobs.

Secondly, the college should offer training in the vocational trades, such as auto mechanics, welding, plumbing, electrical work, paint contracting, restaurant operation, carpentry, etc.

A third role for the college: A regular two-year academic program offering courses in pre-law, pre-medicine, pre-chemistry, pre-education and other fields found at four-year institutions.

The fourth, and all-important role, is the adult education and community service program.

While the third function is important and one that can be of great help to the four-year college program, it is far overshadowed, says Dr. Colvert, by the other three.

If a junior college falls short or fails in any one of these programs, it then has failed its entire mission to serve the community, he said.

With each day bringing new and startling developments in the fields of science, chemistry, engineering and communications, the need for training workers and technicians grows hourly, adds Dr. Colvert.

And he is supported by Gov. John Connally, long an advocate of unsurpassed excellence in education.

The governor is not unmindful of the importance to industry and the technological revolution sweeping the country that education and improved community college work play.

He cites facts and figures to show that much of the nation's defense contracts, those calling for long-range research and technical and technological stu-

4 Area Youths On Honor Roll At UT Pharmacy School

Four area youths, one each from Haskell, Rule, Stamford, and Aspermont, are on the honor roll in the University of Texas' College of Pharmacy for the semester just ended, according to information received here Monday from the UT news service.

In addition, of equal area interest, have gone to states with the best education system.

And invariably, those states—New York, California and Florida—have top grade junior or community college programs.

(Next: A Gap to be Filled.)

terest was listing on the honor roll "with highest honors," of Leslie H. Muenzler, of Victoria, who was a mid-term graduate of the College of Pharmacy and compiled a perfect 3.0, or all-"A" grade average, last semester. Muenzler, 40, who entered college at the age of 37, is the uncle of Don Muenzler, Haskell pharmacist and drug store owner and operator, and also president-elect of the Chamber of Commerce here.

Listed on the honor roll "with high honors" is Jimmy D. Riggins, of Rule. Making the select list "with honors" were Phillip R. Bowers, of Haskell; James R. Johnson, Aspermont, and Roger D. Tipton, Stamford.

Young Bowers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Bowers, of Haskell, was an honor graduate of Haskell High School in 1963.

He had a little side wager that eight out of ten customers who stopped at his station would inquire about the two hales of hay he had prominently stacked in front of his office.

While making my usual weekly calls I was out at Gilmore Implement Company and asked Mrs. Gilmore if she knew anything new... to which she replied, "No, I just got through reading the Haskell Free Press, and I still don't know anything." Oh, well, they say there will be days like that.

Drizzling Out Loud: Wigwam Drive-In makes delicious pies, just like mother used to make... in fact, come to think about it, they are even better.

Quote: Flowers leave some of their fragrance in the hand that bestows them—Chinese Prov.

Gene Long and this scribe were discussing cars the other day, and he remarked that when he was growing up, out in the Kermit and Monahans area, he always took along a pal or two to help push his flyver whenever it conked out on him. In fact, Gene said he pushed that old car of his more miles than he drove it.

Overheard at M&F Pharmacy: "Well, no, I wouldn't say that he's conceited, but he's absolutely convinced that if he hadn't been born, people would want to know why not."

I heard a fellow say the other day there is absolutely no difficulty in the world that cannot be overcome. Wonder if he ever tried putting a squashed egg back into its shell!

One windy day here recently I overheard this remark at the courthouse: "Boy, I sure would hate to be walking down Polk Street in Amarillo today!"

I noticed this sign on Tommy Ballard's desk at United Industries: "MONEY—Just a little of that stuff will restore that get-up-and-go feeling."

And, as the bear said when he sat down on the frozen lake: "My Tale is Told."

While the Missus and I were driving from Paducah to Childress recently, we were cruising along at around 70 miles per hour, when a car zoomed by making us look like we were standing still. As the car roared by, I was able to catch a glimpse of the large lettering on the door of the vehicle which read "Highway Safety Department." "Must have been making close to 100 miles an hour. There was not much safety in that department which passed us."

To put the world in order, we must first put the nation in order; to put the nation in order, we must put our family in order; to put the family in order, we must cultivate our personal life, and to cultivate our personal life, we must first set our hearts right—Confucius.

Numbers of members of Congress, confronted with $100 billion budget, are worrying about where the money is to come from. They also could profitably worry about what the money will be worth.

There is more and more talk about possible new waves of inflation. If this happens, the lower income families, who are supposed to be helped by new and expanded federal programs, will be hardest hit.

The government can have no greater duty than to protect what is left of the dollar's value. All programs, all appropriations, should be considered with that end always in view.

The world is vastly the richer because Sir Winston Churchill lived in it; the world is poorer because he is gone.

He was many men, was Winston Churchill. He could be arrogant, opinionated, difficult. And he could be gentle, generous, humorous and responsive. But he was one thing always—the defender of human freedom who would never, desperately as the situation of the moment might be, consider the thought of capitulation or compromise. The cause must be fought through to the finish, whatever the price and the ultimate payment. And his words were weapons.

He was certainly one of the greatest Englishmen of all time. His place in history is a towering one and will always remain so. And the character of Churchill was perhaps best expressed when he said in Commons, after a disastrous British defeat: "We shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, we shall fight in the hills; we shall never surrender, and

The City of Haskell paid $2,000 on the project. Haskell Jaycees furnished $320 for caliche used as base. A final $1,000 is due Strain from the Chamber of Commerce in February, 1966, to complete payment for materials he obtained "below cost."

The Chamber of Commerce president here commended the following civic leaders for their efforts in subscribing funds needed: Mrs. Alvin Sherman, Mrs. Viars Felker, Dr. Frank Cadenhead, Jr., Mrs. Opal Adkins, Harold Spain, Mrs. Barney Frazier, Wallace Cox, Jr., Jack McAdoo, Don Muenzler, E. J. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Clay Smith, Desmond Dulaney, J. E. Walling Jr., and Jim Alvis.

Haskell County Barracks 1816, Veterans of World War I, and its Ladies' Auxiliary, will meet next Monday night at 6:30 o'clock in the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Pitman, 1111 North Fifth Street.

Commander A. R. Lee and Auxiliary President Mrs. Martin Rueffer, and the host and hostess have issued a warm invitation for all members to attend.

Teenagers, their problems, and dreams, will set the mood for the hilarious comedy, "Head In The Clouds," when the curtain goes up on the Rule High School Senior Class play at 7:30 p. m. Friday in the school auditorium. It should be well worth the nominal admission price.

Former England

"In 1948 all hospitals were taken over by the States in England, and the doctors are paid by the states. General practitioners average only about $10,000 in salary per year in Great Britain," Dr. Orr said. "Since the doctors in England are paid by the state, they do not look for work, as each one has some 3,500 patients to care for, and the British doctor must make 20 or 30 house calls during the day, plus all the other work in his office."

One of the questions asked Dr. Orr from the floor was: "Do you think medicine will be socialized in the U. S.?" to which the guest speaker replied, "I definitely think so... but if it does, this country will get its fingers burned as Great Britain has done." Other than the speaker, Dr. Robert Colbert, was noted as a guest at Tuesday's meeting. Jim Sampson, vice-president, presided over the meeting in the absence of "Prexy" Frank Martin who recently underwent surgery.

Merlin The Great
The magician show, "Merlin The Great," held last Friday and Saturday nights in the Elementary school auditorium, certainly lived-up to advance publicity and captivated the audience, both young and old. Proceeds of the show was $269.00, with the Lions Club receiving $134.50. Harold Spain, secretary, reported.

Miraculous . . .

Lusk had hardly taken over his duties as foreman, after 15 years, since 1930, in the "gang" when an employe had a hip broken in a caliche pit cave-in. "Something like that right off will impress you," recalls Lusk. It must have, if the safety-consciousness of his men he instilled from that day forward is any barometer.

And the men who come in for a full measure of credit, along with District Engineer Jake Roberts and Foreman Lusk, for this phenomenal record, are James O. Adkins, Alvis Bird, Leslie Collins, Burt Darnell, Aubrey Green, Arvin Jones, Woodrow Jones, Floy Karr, Clarence Meier, John Rousseau, C. V. Schwartz, D. L. Speer, Melvin Turnbow, George Turner and Orbie Collins.

There was no band out playing when Lusk "upped" the number of accident-free days to 7300 on the sign in front of the maintenance building on State Highway 24 here Tuesday morning. But one would have been in order.

Unique Marathon

(Continued from Page 1) will compete in the 500-bird each open pigeon-popping spectacle, with no classes or divisions of skill. All 7500 clay pigeons will be released from two traps, and all shotgun slingers will blast away from the 16-yard line. "Such a setup will give no particular shooter an advantage over the other," Wooten pointed out.

With each of the entrants firing at 500 pigeons, the competition is expected to continue from eight to 10 hours at the traps just north of Haskell near the Haskell County Golf Course. Spectators are invited to the rare exhibition, which starts at 9:30 a. m.

Bound for the barrage of disc-disintegrating will be many renowned shooters, including Larry Gravestock and Jimmy Cullum, both of Wichita Falls; Wooten, of Haskell; John Guitler III, and Mrs. John Guitler III, of Abilene; Dan Grindstaff, Hurst; W. M. Hayter, both of Megargel; Marvin Sprain, Abilene; Curtis Gollahan, Brownwood; J. W. and Troy Boykin, both of Childress; Charles Smith, of New Orleans, La.; Richard Winstead, of Seymour; and Mrs. I. P. Mose, of Anchorage, Alaska.

Rev. Regeon . . .

(Continued from Page 1) During his seven years as pastor of the church here, Rev. Regeon has directed an impressive expansion in both membership and church physical plant. He has baptized 121, received 181 by letter, increased the average membership by more than 100 to its current 430 members, and has seen Sunday School enrollment boosted proportionately to an average Sunday attendance of near 300.

Rev. Regeon also has stimulated refurbishing of the church sanctuary, tiling and re-carpeting of its floors and the addition of 1587 square feet of space to the educational building. To that building have been added nursery, beginners' and primary departments, and a church office, plus a new kitchen, rewiring improvements, and a speaker system. The educational building also has been repainted throughout.

All improvements in the educational plant have been paid for in full. A new church parsonage also has been obtained during the Regeons' pastorate here, and the indebtedness on it substantially reduced. Rev. Regeon, who will observe his 26th anniversary as a pastor on June 23, will be serving his eleventh church when he begins his tenure at Calvary Baptist Church in Seymour. Fifteen of his nearly 25 years have been spent at two churches in Abilene and East Side here in Haskell.

Floydadans . . .

(Continued from Page 1) The new owner of the Fieldan, Sawyer, formerly owned and operated the Floydada Implement Company in Floydada for many years until he sold it last June. The Sawyers have two married sons, Gerry, of Canyon, and Stanley, of Fort Worth. They also have one grandson, 3 months old. They are members of the Church of Christ.

Mr. and Mrs. Field Monday expressed their "deep gratitude to Haskell citizens and all area residents for your splendid patronage and attentive courtesies as fellow citizens."
