A Message From Haskell Jaycees

Last year the Haskell Jaycees deolded to increase their emphasis on education. The initial step forward was voting the proceeds from their annual carnival for a scholarship to be given to one Haskell County boy chiefly based on need.

Jaycees have found themselves over-run with applicants. "These are not average cases." a spokesman for the Jaycees said, "but persons with above average intelligence and ambition, but below average financial resources."

It is beyond the ability of the Haskell Jaycees to help all these applicants, even though they all need it and Jaycees do not like to turn any of them down,

"Please understand this," the Jaycee spokesman said, "It is hard to hear a young man tell how he plans to educate himself, and contribute to the support of his family, without wanting to help him."

The Haskell Jaycees would like to take this opportunity to offer the mselves to the residents of Haskell county as an agency by which they can help to further the education of our youth.

All (100 %) donations will be put into hands of the needy students under proper supervision. Mail any contributions to the Haskell Jaycees Education Committee, Haskell, Texas.

"STRANGE INCONSISTENCY"

President Johnson recently signed the $1.1 billion aid to Appalachia bill, terming it an example of "creative Federalism." This event brought an interesting comment from The Wall Street Journal.

The paper said, "Yet that same Federalism is impeding possibly more significant developments of private enterprise in the same area. Specifically, a private electric power company in Appalachia is ready to spend $910 million of its own money on two power projects. So far it is being held back from spending a dime by Congress and a Federal agency."

One project involves a $210 million power plant on the Savannah River, but Congress has not given the necessary approval. The other project, in upper South Carolina, carries a $700 million price tag and can be authorized by the Federal Power Commis- of Haskell. sion. But a number of rural electric cooperatives oppose it, and FPC has not acted.

These tremendous developments would provide private, heavily-taxed investments totalling almost as much as the Appalachian bill. Further, as The Journal points out, it is a rule of thumb that for every dollar invested to generate power in an area, three more dollars are invested by industial customers there. To quote the paper again, "Surely it is a strange inconsistency when Federalism. . . which can create nothing without first taxing the rewards of private initiative. , whoops it up for a $1.1 billion handout while it lets creative business, with its own spending program potentially three times as big, go begging."

You'll get good knockdown of weeds and grasses that are less than two inches high ... plus some killing action through the roots of later-germinating weeds. The cost of this treatment, when Caparol is applied in a 10 inch band, can be as little as 85 cents per acre. Compare this with the 12-3 per acre it would cost you for noe hands.

Later on in the season, you can so in and make a layby application

With new Caparol, you'll have no reason to worry about soil resi-due carryover to harm next year's

The Jaycees annual Rice Springs Roundup and rodeo officially gets underway today, Thursday, at 5:00 p. m., when the all-western parade will begin winding its way through the downtown section of Haskell. Immediately following the parade at 6:30 p. m., a big barbecue, catered by Beth's AA catering service, will be held at the Corral building at the rodeo grounds. At 8:00 p. m. sharp, the rodeo will get underway, so it appears that plenty of action will be on "tap" for residents of this area. Rodeo perform-ances will be held also on Fri-day and Saturday nights, with the pig scramble contest as an added attraction. Better head for Haskell early today, to get in on all the activities.

The Jaycees have spent a lot of time and money in staging this year's rodeo, so let's show our appreciation to the livewire young men by purchasing rodeo tickets, even if you can't attend. The new all-steel bucking chutes and new lights cost 'pot" of money, and Jaycees will do good if they break even this year's show. So podner, see you at the rodeo
