

Allison toll: 2 dead, scores homeless

HOUSTON (AP) — Southeast Texas began drying out today from more than a foot of rain dumped by Tropical Storm Allison although scores of people remained out of their homes because of streams and rivers that continued to rage out of their banks.

At least two fatalities were blamed on Allison, which was downgraded to a tropical depression Tuesday morning, then began breaking up over east Texas and western Louisiana.

Harris County Sheriff's Department divers pulled the body of 18-year-old Don Gilliam from rain-swollen Spring Creek late Tuesday. Friends said Gilliam went under while trying to swim across the creek. On Monday, a traffic death in the Beaumont area was blamed on the storm.

But a 7-year-old Houston-area girl miraculously survived a 12-hour overnight ordeal inside a storm sewer when she was rescued by a couple of construction workers.

Patricia Reese suffered only abrasions and mild shock and was hospitalized in good condition after clinging to the inside of the drain. She was expected to return home later today.

Beaumont authorities resumed their search at dawn today for two boys who disappeared Tuesday while playing in a drainage ditch, police spokesman E.R. Pachall.

The boys were identified as Mark Shaw, 15, and James Dunbar, 16. Mark Costilla, 15, told police he was playing in the water with the other two boys when a small rubber raft they were riding on overturned in swift current.

"I went under water, and when I came up the boys were gone," Costilla told police.

Divers conducted an extensive search, but found nothing before darkness delayed the effort, authorities said.

"All we came up with was debris," Beaumont Fire Chief Pete Shelton said.

For many Houston-area residents, the storm marked the second time in six weeks that they were rousted from their homes by floods triggered by more than a foot of rain.

"We thought last time was bad, but this time was worse," said Eleila Cabrera, whose north Harris County home was flooded again.

"We were just about finished with the work (from the May See RAINFALL, page 11

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Convicted murderer Douglas B. "Swede" Dennis, sought since 1979 as he walked away from a job as clerk for the Louisiana Department of Corrections in Baton Rouge while a trusty, has been arrested by the FBI in Houston.

Dennis, 53, was known as Lawrence Hunt in Houston where he was doing odd jobs at a motel when arrested Tuesday, said FBI Special Agent Ed Grimsley.

Oil spill notes

by The Associated Press
Ships scooped up boulder-sized chunks of congealed oil on the Delaware River as a hot sun began to melt the globs from a tanker spill. A seaman at the helm of a second spill refused to testify at an inquiry.

As crews continued efforts to control the spread of pollution from three separate oil spills last week, investigators today were scheduled to hold inquiries into the spills.

In all, an estimated 1 million gallons of oil spilled in the accidents on the Delaware River, Rhode Island Sound and the Houston Ship Channel. Hearings began Tuesday on the Rhode Island and Texas spills.

Delaware officials have criticized the cleanup as being too slow, but cleanup workers on a tugboat tour said continued hot temperatures may only slow the oil recovery.

Sub arrives

OSLO, Norway (AP) — A Soviet nuclear submarine that caught fire when its reactor broke down off the Norwegian coast limped home to its Soviet home port today, Norwegian reports said.

NTB Norwegian news agency reported the Echo II Class submarine arrived at the Soviet North Fleet's base on the Kola Peninsula on its auxiliary diesel power.

It quoted North Fleet Adm. Juri Patruchev as saying in a Soviet television interview that radioactivity aboard was normal and the crew was unharmed.

Guards set to graduate

The third guard class at Western Texas College, with 26 prospective graduates, will be certified Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Fine Arts Theatre with a reception following in the student center.

Allan Polunsky, a TDC board member and practicing attorney based in San Antonio, will be the guest speaker.

The third graduation of correctional officers brings the total to 89 individuals trained for TDC employment through the WTC program. A fourth class is now in the planning stages (see related story).

Prospective graduates of the third class from Snyder are Antonio Aguilar, Richard Lynn Brumley, Danny Kenneth Early, JoeDon Guynes, Randy Todd Lewis, Phillip David Ratliff, Daman Scott Reynolds, Ruben Medrano Ruiz, Jacky Don Simpson, David Leroy Walker and Nuel Arthur Landreth.

Others include David Hernandez and Anthony Martinez of Big Spring; Jack M. Starr and Carroll Glenn Sullivan of Colorado City; Donald O. Ashton and Terry Wayne Kidd of Rotan; Samuel L. Benningfield of Hamlin; and Richard Elton Butts Sr. of Sweetwater.

Also to receive prison guard certification are Bobbie Renetta Collier of Fluvanna; Leonard Monroe Dodgen of Anson; Donald L. Howard of Coleman; Glenn Ernest Jones of Spur; J. Neal McGinnis of Roby; Dennis Milton Mason of Post; and Jimmy Greag Wright of Roscoe.

In addition to his service as a TDC board member, Polunsky currently serves on the board of directors for the San Antonio River Authority. His other TDC-related appointments include serving as a member of the Windham ISD board of trustees and the TDC Board for Lease.

In addition, he is a member of the Joint Anti-Crime Coordinating Committee.

In the past, he has served on the San Antonio Zoning Commission, Industrial Development Authority, Planning Commission and the Capital Improvements Bond Steering Committee.

In 1984, he was named among

Water curb asked to refill Ira tower

Low levels in the Ira water tower have prompted a request for a temporary cutback in usage there.

Staff members who normally monitor the tower were out of town until Sunday due to the medical condition of Ira Water Supply Corp. manager Lewis Helms, who has been in Houston receiving a heart transplant.

Helms had been hospitalized there since Thanksgiving awaiting a donor heart and underwent a transplant operation last week, reported Ira Postmaster Leona Wiggins.

Pam Helms, his daughter-in-law, came by the post office on her way to read meters Wednesday morning and asked Wiggins to relay the consumption cut-back request to news media.

"The water runs out at night or in the late afternoon," the postmaster said. "It was so low when they got back Sunday night and turned on the booster pump that they can't catch up."

If Ira citizens would stop watering their yards in the afternoons and otherwise reduce consumption for a couple of days, she said, the water tower could be completely re-filled and the situation could be restored to normal.

North principal accepts new post

North Elementary Principal Tom Alvis has resigned his post here to accept the position of assistant superintendent for the Muleshoe school district.

He submitted his resignation Tuesday. Also resigning will be Alvis' wife, Geneva, who has served as a math instructor at Snyder High School.

She will be employed by Muleshoe ISD also, as a counselor at the junior high school.

The couple moved to Snyder in July of 1986. Alvis had served the two years prior to moving to Snyder as the superintendent for Coleman public schools.

Snyder ISD is now accepting applications for the post of elementary school principal. The position involves a 213-day contract.

The individual must hold certification in professional mid-management and be a certified appraiser for career ladder selection.

The district is to accept applications for the post through July 15.

Alvis holds a doctor of philosophy degree from Texas A&M University and has been in public education since 1961.

In all, he has served as a superintendent at five school districts: the Mattson district in

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Woman's work that is never done is likely to be that which she asked the kids to do."

The legislature is trying to reach agreement on overhaul of the state's workmen's compensation system. It's a knotty problem with lots of special interest groups pointing the blame at each other.

The problem is put in focus by the testimony of the president of a boat manufacturer, Ernest Schmidt, CEO of Glastron, Inc., testified before a Senate subcommittee in April.

"In 1984, we opened a second facility in Fair Bluff, N.C. Today our two boat facilities are almost a mirror image of each other."

Both plants are 200,000 square feet in size, both make the same products, both employ the same number, and both plants use the same equipment in handling and in the manufacturing process.

In essence, you can say that Glastron offers an ideal comparison of worker's compensation rates, expenses and reserves between the two states. Today, from a budget standpoint, over 93 percent of our total worker's comp expenditures and reserves are set aside for expenses related to the Texas plant.

"Based on an analysis of our costs between July 1, 1987 and Feb. 28, 1989, the average claim in Texas cost $5,998 and $536 in North Carolina.

"Glastron has had to increase its reserves by $248,900 strictly to cover estimated worker's comp expense claims at our Texas plant while at the same time, increasing our reserve by only $2,432 to cover the same number of workers at our North Carolina plant.

Today, for every boat manufactured in Texas, $196.08 of each boat's cost is directly a result of worker's comp expense. For every boat we make in North Carolina, $12.86 is directly related to the same costs.

"The point is, if Glastron made the decision to close our Texas plant and move all our production to North Carolina, our profit would improve by over a quarter of a million dollars, automatically."

In Austin, we need to stop pointing fingers, and find solutions.

Fourth guard class in planning stages

Western Texas College will begin accepting applications July 24 for the fourth correctional officer training class offered through the local campus.

The cutoff for applications is set for Aug. 18 and plans are to start the class in mid to late September.

In a departure from the previous three classes, the graduates upon certification will be considered for "relocation training only," according to Mike Thornton, head of the continuing education department at WTC.

This means graduates are likely for TDC employment at other units throughout the state.

Thornton added, however, that TDC has now waived the six months requirement for a duty station transfer. After reporting to their unit, graduates of the class would have the option to request transfer to the Daniel Unit.

"The transfer rule has been waived because TDC needs guards all over the system now," Thornton said.

The decision was made to offer the fourth class since WTC currently has approximately 100 names on a waiting list of applicants for future guard classes.

"These are ongoing classes," Thornton said. "We will train guards as long as there is a demand."

WTC is one of seven colleges in Texas approved by the TDC for guard training.

Restaurant chain pulls commercial

HOUSTON (AP) - Complaints from members of the local American Indian community have prompted a barbecue restaurant chain to stop the use of a television commercial that showed two Indians in war paint, braids and feathers.

Officials of Luther's Bar B Q said Tuesday they will no longer show the commercial after members of the Indian community complained that they were examples of racism.

The Intertribal Council of Houston demanded in letters to Houston television stations and Luther's corporate headquarters that the commercials be pulled off the air immediately and asked for a public apology from stations that aired the commercial.

"We are not really a militant group," said Preston Thompson, a Winnebago Indian and chairman of the council. "But this kind of depiction goes against everything we work for and believe in. It just serves to reinforce prejudicial attitudes by ridiculing the very noble warrior image."

Mike Jolley, president of the Houston-based chain that operates 12 restaurants here and four others in the Southwest, the commercial was prepared by the Gough/Tritico advertising agency and was aimed only at promoting drive-through service at the restaurants.

"We're very proud of our Houston base and feel we've given a lot to the community here," Jolley said. "We certainly had no intention of offending anyone."

Jolley talked to Thompson Tuesday, saying he understood their distress.

One complaint voiced by Thompson was that the Indians said "How" as a form of greeting. He said no Indian, past or present, ever really uttered the word.

One of the Indians was comically fat and the other comically skinny. Each had single feather sticking up behind his head. When the employee at the Luther's takeout window responded to the "how" greeting by launching a monologue on how the barbecue was prepared, the Indian assumes a quizzical expression.

And after an announcer breaks in, the commercial returns to the takeout window where night has fallen, the employee is still rambling and the Indian is sitting cross-legged on the ground, asleep.

"The feathers on their head, the way the Indians are dressed, the war paint on their faces, the stupid look when the employee starts talking, the cross-legged posture, all just reinforce the same stereotype we been trying our best to eradicate," said Thompson.

"And it is allowed to happen in a day and age when stereotypical portrayals of other minorities are no longer tolerated because the Indian has been forgotten," Thompson added.

The U.S. Census Bureau has estimated about 10,000 American Indians live in the Houston area.

DEAR ABBY: I've been reading the letters about grandmothers who are inclined to be more generous to the children of their daughters than to the children of their sons.

Well, I'm one of those grandmothers, and I'd like to explain the reason for my favoritism. I am a widow with a daughter living at one end of the state and a son living at the other end. I'm in the middle.

My son and his wife have six children. They are all adults now, but when they were growing up, I'd send them lovely clothes — always the best. These clothes were soon in rags because the children had never been taught to take care of them. When I visited them, I'd see their clothes on the floor. They would deliberately walk on them — and the dog slept on them! I bought them expensive toys, and they made a game out of who could break them the fastest!

They never said "thank you" for anything. Nor did they write a note of any kind. When they were older and came to visit me, if I asked them to help me with something, they'd ask me how much I was going to pay them.

Now, let me tell you about my daughter's children. They took good care of whatever I gave them. They sent me handmade thank-you notes on which was scribbled, "I love you, Granny," when they were tiny tots. When they were grown, they'd call me just to say, "I'm thinking of you and love you very much." They really made me feel I was loved.

Abby, I love all my grandchildren, but I must be honest. I can't help but favor my daughter's children.

I know there are exceptions in every family, but I have observed that the children of daughters are usually more loving to their grandparents than the children of sons.

Closing arguments given in suit over nuclear plant

DALLAS (AP) — It's time to stop utilities from pushing ratepayers around, Texas' former chief justice John Hill said in closing arguments in the city of Austin's lawsuit against Houston Lighting & Power.

Hill, in a 30-minute argument in state district court Tuesday, said HL&P took advantage of Austin by not keeping city leaders informed of construction and management problems at the South Texas Project nuclear plant near Bay City.

Austin's attorneys contended the utility deceived the city to get and keep Austin as a 16 percent partner in the twin-reactor, 2.5 billion watt plant, costing ratepayers hundreds of millions of dollars.

a good reason why grandchildren are partial to one set of grandparents. I am in a position to know, as I have three sons and two daughters — with a total of 10 grandchildren.

We love all of our grandchildren and have tried not to favor the children of our daughters, but we can't help doing so. Our daughters' children have been raised to be very loving and attentive to us, but I can't say the same for the children of our sons.

Since all three of our sons married local girls, every time they come to town, there is the sharing of time, and the sons' parents are the last to be considered, or so it seems.

A little story helped us to accept the order of things after our eldest son was married. Here's the story: There was a knock on the door. The young son answered the door. The visitor said, "Hello. I'm your Aunt Ellen — on your father's side."

"The little boy replies, 'Well, I can tell you right now, you're on the wrong side.'"

So, whenever we begin to feel left out, one of us will quip, "I can tell you right now, you're on the wrong side!" Immediately, a chuckle replaces any possible resentment.

"It's bad enough that our cities are paying more and more and more in utilities every month," Hill said to the jury. "We're going to see to it that utilities, when they enter into these contracts with our cities, they're going to have to live up to them."

"Folks, there's got to be a line drawn here." The jury, given a 26-page set of instructions from presiding judge Clarence Guittard, was scheduled to begin deliberations this morning to decide whether to award Austin the $419 million the city says it lost because the utility deceived the city into keeping its stake in the power plant.

The South Texas Project was originally forecast to cost under $1 billion and be finished in 1981. By the time it was completed this spring, it cost almost $6 billion.

HL&P attorneys said in their closing arguments that Austin was informed about problems at the plant, but just didn't pay attention. They said Austin utility director R.L. Hancock was informed, and that he was supposed to update City Council.

HL&P lead attorney Roy Minton told the jury he believed Austin would not have pulled out of its commitment to the power plant even if it knew the smallest details about the plant's construction. "I can't imagine that anything in this case shows the people I've been working with for three years have done any lying or cheating," he said.

Schwarzenegger to become father

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor-bodybuilder Arnold Schwarzenegger, whose wife, Maria Shriver, is expecting a baby at the end of the year, says he's ready to take on the responsibilities of fatherhood. "We have love for children, and we have a great relationship," said Schwarzenegger in an interview with ABC's "Good Morning America" scheduled for broadcast Thursday. "I know it will work out great, and I just can't wait for this moment. I mean I'm really excited about it — to see a little Schwarzen-Shriver."

Schwarzenegger, 41, was interviewed in Mexico City where his new film, "Total Recall," is in production. Ms. Shriver, 33, is an anchor for NBC's new prime-time news show, "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow," which debuts in August. In 1848, the Free-Soil Party nominated Martin Van Buren for president at its convention in Buffalo, N.Y.

AUSTIN (AP) — Two gubernatorial aides denied allegations made by a police organization that they influenced the veto of a bill after accepting free trips from a group that opposed the legislation.

The Combined Law Enforcement Associations of Texas on Tuesday called for an investigation of Gov. Bill Clements' aides, Mike Toomey and Cliff Johnson.

And state lawmakers who sponsored the vetoed bill said they would file it again for consideration during the 30-day, special legislative session.

The measure, which was passed during the regular session ending May 29, required law enforcement groups to disclose how much they raise through telephone solicitations.

Ronald DeLord, president of CLEAT, the largest police organization in the state, said the bill would have helped identify suspicious organizations asking for money.

He said some organizations use a huge portion of the solicited donations for purposes other than charities. Others lie about representing police organizations and keep all the money, he said.

DeLord said a grand jury should investigate Toomey, the governor's chief of staff, and Johnson, the governor's legislative liaison. DeLord said the aides told Clements to veto the bill.

"I know two people got a bill vetoed and two people went on trips and something stinks," DeLord said.

According to published reports, Toomey and Johnson said they went on a ski trip to Utah in December as guests of the Texas State Troopers Association and two other groups.

The troopers' association, which is not connected to the Texas Department of Public Safety, uses telephone solicitation to collect donations, DeLord said.

The troopers' association opposed the bill, sponsored by Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, and Rep. Keith Oakley, D-Terrell.

Clements said neither Toomey nor Johnson influenced him to veto the bill, which he previously said lacked "substantive changes" to the current law.

"I think this police association (CLEAT) ... is doing a very good job of using their pistol to shoot themselves in the foot," Clements said. He declined to comment further.

Toomey and Johnson denied the allegations. "Obviously this is nothing but sour grapes," Toomey said.

Johnson said, "This is a fight between several statewide organizations representing law enforcement and we're just kind of caught in the middle of it."

He said he wanted the Public Integrity Unit of the Travis County district attorney's office to investigate whether Toomey and Johnson violated laws on bribing public officials. Toomey said, "I don't have anything to hide."

Sen. Edwards said he was more interested in getting the bill passed again and having the governor sign it than in pursuing an investigation of Toomey and Johnson.

Religion comes before business

NEW YORK (AP) — Domino's Pizza founder Thomas Monaghan says he puts religion before business because "that's what I care about most."

In an interview in the July issue of Gentlemen's Quarterly, Monaghan — who also owns the Detroit Tigers baseball team and a leading collection of Frank Lloyd Wright designs — said that "the most flattering thing anybody can say about me is that I'm a good Catholic."

cided that the play for grand slam would be good if partner had K-Q of hearts. For his bid to be sensible, he also needed the spade jack. Still, according to instructions, South bid seven hearts, and he now had to give himself his best chance to make it.

In fact there was no realistic play for seven, since setting up the spade suit by ruffing would still leave declarer short one trick. But declarer did see a slim chance. If either of the defenders held both minor-suit kings as well as four or more spades, the contract could be made. So declarer won the ace of hearts and cashed both minor-suit aces. Then he ran his trump tricks, throwing small minor-suit cards from dummy and keeping the A-K-Q-5-2 of spades intact. When the last trump was cashed, East had to come down to five cards. To keep both minor kings, he would have to throw a spade, and that suit would run for the rest of the tricks. But what if he threw away a king? Then declarer would cash the queen of that suit, and East would be squeezed once again.

Although a trump lead is considered best against a confidently bid grand slam, in this instance a spade lead would have scuttled the communication needed for this unusual progressive squeeze.

DR. GOTT

PETER GOTT, M.D.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: In the past you carried a column on the potential side effects of Inderal. You mentioned an alternative that would be less likely to cause male sexual dysfunction. Would you repeat this for me?

DEAR READER: Inderal and other beta-blocking drugs are excellent medicines for controlling hypertension and angina, as well as other cardiovascular disorders. Although not all men experience impotence from beta-blockers, some — unhappily — do. Under these circumstances, a change in medication is appropriate.

Calcium-channel blockers are not related to beta-blockers and do not ordinarily produce male sexual dysfunction. Therefore, depending on your condition, your doctor might be willing to make a change. I've found that when major side effects, such as impotence, are present, patients tend to be so unhappy that they may inappropriately stop or reduce the medicine. In such cases, another equivalent drug — without the side effects — is much-welcomed and better tolerated. Ask your doctor to consider switching you to verapamil or diltiazem.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What can be done for psoriasis? I've tried every cream available as well as prednisone. My doctor says that it has too many side effects. Please help.

DEAR READER: Prednisone, purified cortisone, is too hazardous to be used routinely in the treatment of psoriasis. When taken in pill form, the drug causes many side effects, including susceptibility to infection and diabetes.

In creams, applied topically, cortisone drugs are safer and less effective.

Additional therapy for psoriasis includes the following:

- Anthralin is applied as a hard paste, combined with coal-tar baths and ultraviolet light. The treatment is commonly administered by professionals in psoriasis day-care centers.
- Selective ultraviolet phototherapy can clear psoriasis without the use of medication. It is administered under the supervision of a dermatologist.

- Some patients respond well to psoralen and ultraviolet light (PUVA). The medicine is given in pill form, then the patient is then exposed to UV light in a walk-in chamber.
- Methotrexate, an anti-cancer drug, often produces significant relief of symptoms. It is given as a weekly oral dose but must be used cautiously because of liver toxicity.

- Etretnate (Tegison), an analogue of vitamin A, when given in daily doses, will usually improve the condition within eight to 16 weeks. Because it is toxic to the liver, it should be reserved for patients who do not respond to traditional forms of treatment.

Ask your dermatologist whether any — or a combination — of these methods would be suitable for you. To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Eczema and Psoriasis." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. TU Electric seeks 10% increase WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — TU Electric will ask for a rate increase of about $415 million later this year that will cost the average North Texas residential customer about $70 per year, a spokesman for the utility says.

Dick Ramsey of Dallas, the utility's public relations director, said Tuesday the rate increase will be sought in the fall.

"We have committed ourselves to a 10-percent rate increase," Ramsey said.

The utility had revenues from electrical customers in 1988 of about $4.15 billion.

Ramsey said part of the increase will be to fund operations of the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant, he said, and the remainder will be for general expenses.

Comanche Peak Unit No. 1 is set to start loading fuel in the fall, and "probably not long after that" TU will file the rate increase request, Ramsey said.

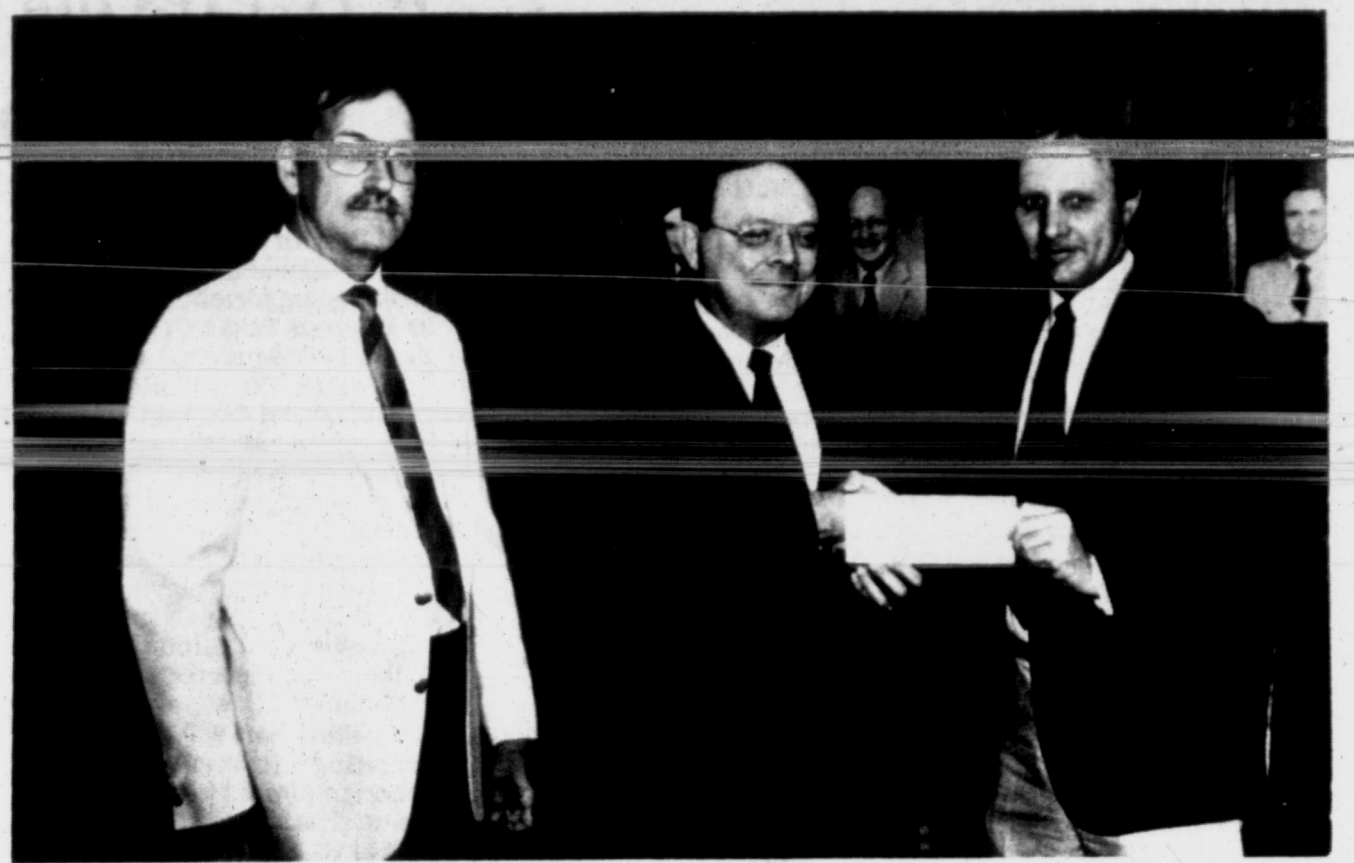

State Sen. Steve Carriker, D-Roby, told the Wichita Falls Times Tuesday that the increase appears to be too much.

"The amount they are asking for, in my judgment, exceeds what they are due," Carriker said. He said he suspects the amount the utility plans to ask for would replace funds lost by TU through mismanagement and said if that is so, that's against state law.

It will be up to the Texas Public Utility Commission to determine how much of a raise the utility can get, Carriker pointed out.

"Unless the PUC requires that executives of a monopoly exert good management judgment, then any problems just get worse," Carriker said. "A utility should not simply be automatically granted a rate increase just because costs go up. If their executives are guilty of mismanagement that should be considered."

TU Electric was formed in January 1984 with the merger of Texas Electric Service Co. and two Dallas-Fort Worth utilities.

SCHOLARSHIP DONATION — A $3,000 scholarship has been presented to Western Texas College by the Panhandle-South Plains Fair Association. In Snyder, to make the presentation Monday was Don Hufstедler, president of the association. Pictured at the presentation on the WTC campus are Dr. Harry Krenek, college president, Hufstедler and Bob Doty, assistant professor of agriculture at WTC. (SDN Staff Photo)

WTC receives ag scholarships

The Panhandle-South Plains Fair Association has announced the award of $3,000 to Western Texas College for use in agricultural scholarships.

Bob Doty, WTC agriculture instructor, accepted the scholarship check from Don Hufstедler, president of the Fair Association, in a brief ceremony Monday morning. Doty and Dr. Harry Krenek, college president, expressed the appreciation of the college for the funds.

The Panhandle-South Plains Fair is a non-profit organization started in 1914 and chartered by the state in 1920. Its purpose is to promote agriculture and livestock education, to support the education of youth and to provide and entertainment medium for the people of West Texas.

Since 1972, the Fair Association has made contributions exceeding $200,000 for agriculture scholarships and education.

"The directors of the Fair Association are proud to be able to continue giving financial support to the agriculture department and Western Texas College and to recognize the excellent job being done by the college in providing high quality educational opportunities to youth in our section of the state," Hufstедler commented.

Teacher stress levels high

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — More than half the teachers surveyed by Texas A&M University say they are under such stress that they would not choose the profession again.

Stress, almost 90 percent of which is based on paperwork, has already burned out half of their colleagues, according to Dr. Rutha Leffel, who surveyed almost 400 elementary, middle school and high school teachers in 15 small, medium and large districts.

Ms. Leffel, coordinator of psychological services in special education with the Round Rock school district near Austin, said stress and burnout is unconnected to number of years on the job. "Beginning teachers are reporting the same stress levels as experienced teachers," said Ms. Leffel. "The burnout is not from the years of experience; it's the workplace that's causing stress and burnout."

Her doctoral advisor, Dr. Walter F. Stenning of the Texas A&M Curriculum Research Laboratory, said the report is the first in-depth stress study of several school districts of all sizes and of teachers on all levels.

"All the teachers know at least one colleague who was burned out due to stress," said Stenning. "One-third of the teachers say seven out of 10 of their colleagues are burned out."

Snakebite kills small child

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A 3-year-old Angleton girl has died after she was bitten by a diamond-back rattlesnake while on a camping outing with her family, authorities say.

Dr. Gonzalo Trillos, a Corpus Christi pediatrician, said Anna Marie McKelvy died late Monday, more than 24 hours after she was bitten on the leg while on an outing with her family Sunday near Lake Corpus Christi.

"She was playing close to the bushes and that's where the snake was," said Dr. Trillos. "Sometimes a child can rouse a snake, they think it's a toy and try to get close to it."

The doctor said it was the first death by snake bite he had seen during 10 years of practice here.

The girl was treated with anti-venom for the bite, but did not respond well to the treatment, he said.

"The case was so severe, she had cardiorespiratory arrest," meaning that her heartbeat and breathing stopped, he said. "It was a very sad case."

Linda Sargent, co-owner of the Lake Corpus Christi KOA campgrounds, said the snake, a 3-foot-long rattler, was caught and killed after the incident.

"It had probably been raining and the snake was moving to some drier area," she said. "We've owned the campground for six years, and I've never even seen a rattlesnake here. That was just a real unfortunate thing to have happened."

The 'Beams were credited with no hits.

Also hitting for the Diamonds were Monica Blume, a double, and Laurie Kerley, Amber Lyle and Crystal Porter, one single apiece.

Christine Ervin cracked three singles for the Hurricanes. Cece Valdez rapped two singles and Laura Lewis added one. Amy Arrendale also had a triple.

Keith Hawkins' recent decision to sign with Hawaii Pacific College in Honolulu closed the books on out-going members of the 1988-89 Western Texas College men's basketball team.

Hawkins, Terry Whitcher, Bobby Spear and Chawn Cummings have indicated they will all participate in basketball at a four-year college or university next season.

Two other WTC exes will sit out a season before playing again. Jerry Joyce has signed with Angelo State and Bernard Williams is expected to transfer to Midland College.

Hawkins set WTC history by breaking former Juco All-American Paul Pressey's record for assists in a single season. Hawkins finished the 1988-89 season with 216, setting a school record. Pressey, who went on to star with the Tulsa Hurricane and now plays for the Milwaukee Bucks of the NBA, had posted 199 in the 1979-80 season.

Hawkins, a 6-0 point guard from Morton, also led the team in steals with 110. His 216 assists led the Western Junior College Athletic Conference.

"I think this is an excellent school for Keith," said WTC coach Tony Mauldin of Hawkins and Hawaii Pacific. "They needed a true point guard and Keith definitely fits that mold. I think anyone that leads this conference in assists and steals can definitely play on this level (NAIA). It will also be a great chance for Keith to travel.

"I just hope he has us over for a visit," laughed Mauldin.

Hawkins average 6.7 points a game for WTC.

Spear, all-conference selection and Western's leading scorer with a 21.1 point-average, will be attending the University of Maryland Eastern Shore in Princess Anne, Md.

The 6-5 talent from Albuquerque, N.M. scored 20 or more points in 20 games, scoring a high of 32 against Southwest Christian. He shot 50.4 from the field and 75.5 from the free throw line and averaged 6.9 rebounds.

"I believe this is an excellent choice for Bobby because they really wanted him and he gets a chance to come in and play right away," said Mauldin. "Bobby has the talent to go to a bigger Division I school and play, but everyone is always afraid that he can't do it in Division I what he did here. I think he will show that he can play on that level.

"We really are going to miss Bobby, but wish him the best out on the east coast. Bobby likes the east, and should have a chance to prove himself," added the coach.

Joyce has signed with Angelo State University in San Angelo. He averaged 9.9 points and 4.2 rebounds for Western Texas. A solid shooter, he hit 54.1 from the field and 85.7 from the stripe.

"Jerry is going to sit out a year and play for ASU," said Mauldin of the 6-4 player from Morton. "He needed to graduate in order to go play right away.

"I think this will help Jerry because he will have a chance to work on his degree for three years," noted Mauldin. "Angelo is on top of the conference right now so that should really pay off in the long run."

Cummings signed with Howard Payne University in Brownwood. An honors student, Cummings was recipient of a major scholarship to the Douglas MacArthur Academy of Freedom Program.

"He will really fit in at HPU because of his strong academics and his chance to go through the Douglas MacArthur Academy of Freedom Program as well as being a good Division III basketball school," said the coach. "Chawn has an excellent future because he is such a fine young man and we will really miss him."

A 6-0 native of Richardson, Cummings played a back-up role for the Westerners.

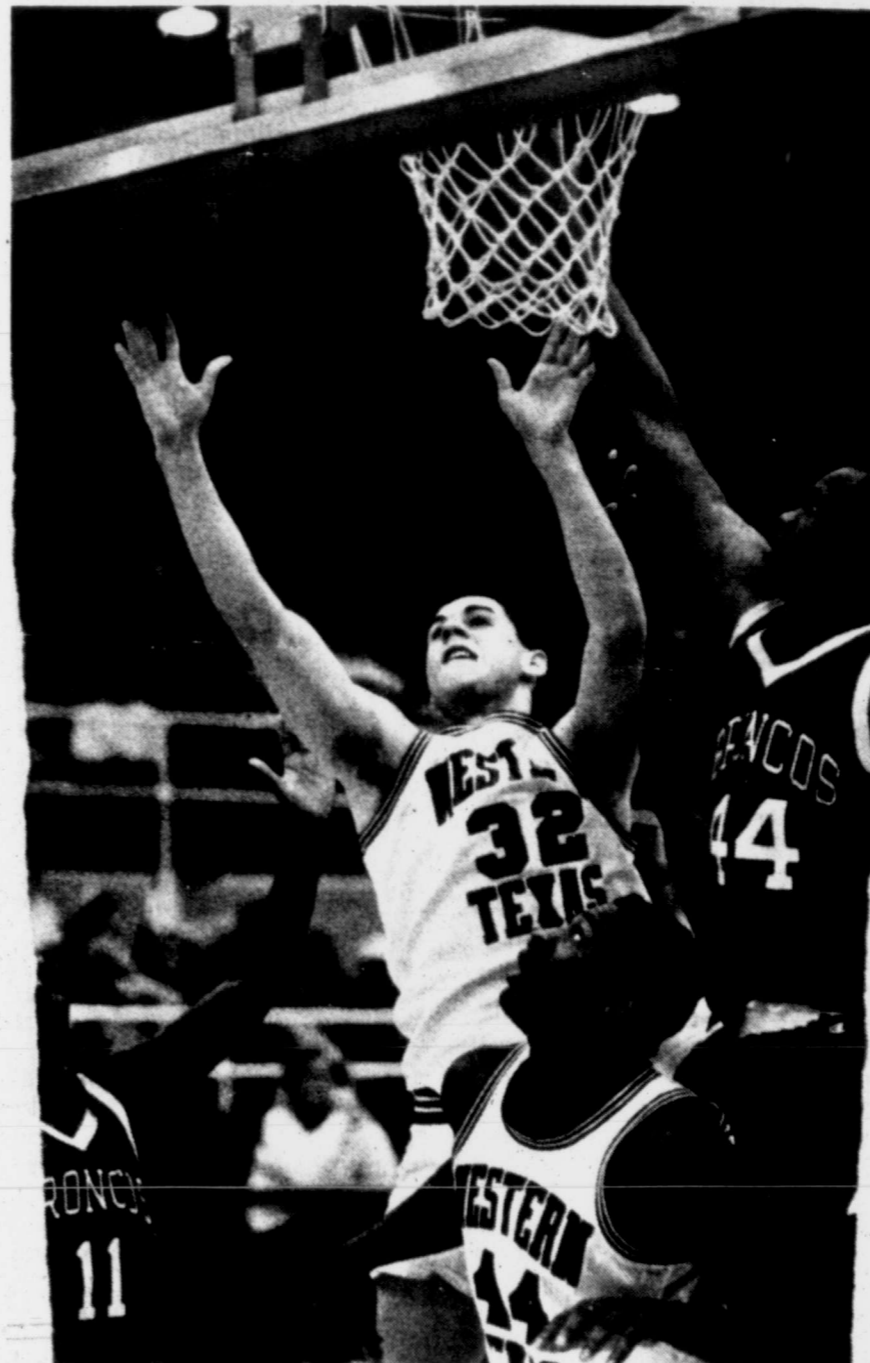

Whitcher, a 6-4 shooter from Borger, has inked with Lubbock Christian University. A transfer who played just one season at Western, Whitcher was hampered with injuries and played sparingly. He averaged 5.1 points and 2.6 rebounds while shooting 45.7 from the floor and 72.7 from the free throw line. He also hit 40 percent from 3-point range.

"Terry really fits into the mold of excellent perimeter shooters that LCU has had these past years," said Mauldin. "Terry also was looking at LCU because of the strong pre-ental program they have. I think they have gotten a great young man in Terry."

Whitcher had an impressive 3.9 grade point average at Western.

Williams plans to sit out a year, then attend Midland College in order to be near family, according to Coach Mauldin. A 6-1 standout from Andrews, Williams averaged 17 points, 2.3 rebounds and 2.5 assists a game for WTC. He hit 85.2 from the free throw line and 40.5 from 3-point range. He scored a high of 38 points against Pratt JC this past season.

"I think this could really benefit Bernard in the long run because he can work on his degree and improve his chances to go on to a Division I school," said Mauldin. "He is one of the finest shooters I have ever coached."

PLAYERS SIGNED - Western Texas exes have been signing with four-year schools in recent weeks. Above, Bobby Spear has inked with the University of Maryland (Eastern Shore). Keith Hawkins, Terry Whitcher, Chawn Cummings, Jerry Joyce and Bernard Williams have also made plans for next season. See related article, this page. (SDN Staff Photo)

Sacramento makes Ellison top pick in pro cage draft

NEW YORK (AP) - On his chest, Pervis Ellison will wear No. 42, but for one night at least, he was No. 1. And finally, the secret is out.

Ellison's selection Tuesday night ended a month of speculation over how Sacramento would use its No. 1 pick in the NBA draft.

"It's hard for me to say how I feel, how happy I am," said Ellison, a second team All-American from Louisville.

All-American Danny Ferry, who led Duke to the Final Four this year for the third time in four seasons, was the second pick, taken by the Los Angeles Clippers. Another All-American, Sean Elliott of Arizona, went third to the San Antonio Spurs. Either could have been No. 1.

Five of the first six players taken were big men, the exception being long-shooting Glen Rice of the national champion Michigan Wolverines, taken No. 4 by the Miami Heat. North Carolina forward J.R. Reid went next, staying in the same state when he was picked by Charlotte. Stacey King, Oklahoma's All-American center, went sixth to the Chicago Bulls.

Athletes need physicals soon

Snyder public schools students needing an athletic physical will need to make an appointment with a local designated doctor.

The school will pay for physicals taken prior to Aug. 15. Steve Krueger, SHS trainer, has urged students to schedule appointments as early as possible.

Those requiring physicals are seventh and ninth grade students

The first point guard taken in the draft was George McCloud of Florida State, who averaged 22.8 points and 4.2 assists, taken seventh by the Indiana Pacers. Eleven of the 27 first-round picks were used for backcourt players.

Sherman Douglas, the All-American guard from Syracuse, did not go until Miami made him (see NBA, page 7) who plan to participate in athletics and all athletes new to the Snyder school system. Others required to have physicals are students who have not previously participated in athletics but plan to do so.

Athletes need physicals soon

Athletes not needing a physical are still required to turn in a medical history and UIL rules acknowledgment form by Aug. 15. Forms are available at the athletic director's office or the field house.

Appointments for physicals may be made with Drs. Nelson Brice, Jim Burleson, Bid Cooper, Bill Pierce or Paul Thompson.

'Unlikely pair' lead Texas to 5-1 victory over Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) - The Texas Rangers managed a win without much help from their big guns, as a pair of unlikely heroes rode to the rescue.

Rookie pitcher Kevin Brown and utility infielder Jeff Kunkel teamed up to lead Texas past the Chicago White Sox 5-1 Tuesday night.

Brown, 7-4, gave up six hits and one run in 8 1-3 innings, walking one and striking out three. He came within two outs of pitching his first career shutout.

"He's starting to believe in himself," Rangers manager Bobby Valentine said of Brown. "He's got about 100 innings under his belt and he's been through both divisions. He knows his stuff is tough to hit as long as he gets it over."

Kunkel went 2-for-4 with two

RBI's to pace the Rangers' attack. The 27-year-old reserve infielder is 6-for-16, a .375 average, since replacing the injured Scott Fletcher at shortstop five games ago.

The victory was Brown's second over the White Sox this season. He gave up three hits and one run in 8 2-3 innings of a 3-1 win back on June 6.

The Rangers got all the runs they needed in the third off rookie Greg Hibbard, 0-2.

An error by shortstop Ozzie Guillen started Texas' three-run third inning in which Kunkel, Sammy Sosa and Karaiel Palmeiro hit RBI singles.

Kunkel had a run-scoring double in the fourth and pinch hitter Thad Bosley singled home a run in the eighth.

The White Sox spoiled Brown's shutout in the ninth when Steve Lyons led off with a single and Ivan Calderon and Dan Pasqua singled with one out.

At Wimbledon...

McEnroe sweats out victory

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Trust John Patrick McEnroe.

On a day when everything before and after him was predictable and dull, the world's most charismatic tennis player lit up the world's most famous tennis court with the comeback of his 14-year career.

"I don't ever remember coming back from two sets down before," the mercurial McEnroe said after his 4-6, 4-6, 6-2, 6-3, 8-6 first-round victory over Darren Cahill of Australia on Wimbledon's Centre Court on Tuesday. "It's great to come back and win the match," he said. "Let's face it, I could easily be out of the tournament."

Technically, the match may not have been of the highest quality. Both players struggled with their first serves. But it transcended tennis. It was pure theater.

"I never really got my game in total gear," McEnroe said after the 3½-hour battle that started in sunshine and finished in evening gloom with a standing ovation for both players. "I don't think it's the greatest match he's ever played either. But for excitement ..."

For excitement, it beat the rest of the day's matches put together. They included straight-set victories for defending women's champion Steffi Graf and her three main rivals, Martina Navratilova, Chris Evert and Gabriela Sabatini.

Graf, playing her first match since losing the French Open final to 17-year-old Arantxa Sanchez, gave up only eight points on serve as she swamped Julie Salmon of Britain 6-1, 6-2. Navratilova opened her bid for a record ninth women's singles title with a 6-3, 6-2 victory over Jill Hetherington of Canada.

Evert, recovered from an ear infection, downed Peanut Harper 6-1, 6-1, while Sabatini conceded fewer games than any of the main contenders by trouncing Diane Balestrat 6-1, 6-0.

Allegations against Rose still continue to broaden

CINCINNATI (AP) - Pete Rose conferred with other baseball managers before he decided whether to bet on their teams and tried to get involved in cocaine deals, according to a former associate who claims to have run bets for him.

Paul Janszen made the accusations in February when he talked to major-league baseball investigators looking into Rose's alleged gambling. The statements are part of the 225-page report by chief investigator John M. Dowd and eight accompanying volumes of evidence.

The Cincinnati Reds' manager could be banned from the game for life if it is found he bet on his own team.

His lawyers intended to ask an Ohio appeals court today to preserve a temporary restraining order that keeps Rose's case out of the hands of baseball Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti. The commissioner's lawyers are trying to get the order revoked so Giamatti can decide whether Rose bet on his own team.

Janszen, a bodybuilder who recently completed a four-month stay in a halfway house for failing to report income from the sale of steroids on his taxes, said Rose tried to get involved in the cocaine deals of his other associates.

the first pick of the second round, 28th overall. The Big Ten player of the year, guard Jay Edwards of Indiana, was the Clipper's second-round selection, No. 33. The Big East player of the year, guard Charles Smith of Georgetown, was not drafted at all, probably because he only weighs 165 pounds.

Reid, who just completed his junior year at North Carolina, was the first underclassman taken, and Oklahoma had the first doubleheader. After King was selected by Chicago, the New Jersey Nets took guard Mookie Blaylock of the Sooners with the 12th pick.

Flag-burning ruling...

House wants to deal 'calmly' with issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House will not rush to nullify a Supreme Court decision on flag-burning, says House Speaker Thomas Foley, who contends the issue should not be used for "crass political purposes."

Moving Tuesday to slow down a possible stampede for constitutional change, Foley announced that hearings will be held in July on setting aside the court ruling that threw out flag desecration laws in 48 states.

He acted only hours after President Bush joined a chorus of lawmakers in proclaiming that a constitutional amendment — a process used only 26 times in the nation's history — is the only solution to change the 5-4 ruling.

Foley, D-Wash., said the House Judiciary Committee hearings "are not going to be rushed but they will not be obstructive." They will "be conducted calmly in the spirit of deliberation and care ... we are not seeking to inflame this issue," he told reporters.

With senators already home for their July 4 break, Foley gave House members outraged by last week's ruling a chance to vent their feelings. He scheduled an immediate vote on a non-binding resolution expressing "profound concern" over the decision, and the House passed it, 411-5.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., said Tuesday he favors seeking to nullify the ruling by passing legislation to prohibit burning the flag. A law can be ruled unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

Foley told reporters he will vigorously fight any attempt by conservative Republicans to use the flag issue against Democrats. President Bush scored points against Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis last year by criticizing the Massachusetts governor's veto of legislation that would have required the state's public school teachers to lead daily pledges of allegiance to the flag.

"I am sure there will be people trying to play politics with it," Foley said. "Anybody who suggests that there is a party difference in respect for the American flag is using this deep affection of Americans, twisting it, manipulating it, using it for the most base and crass political purposes. It would be reprehensible and disgusting. I am condemning those who are doing it."

But Bush said earlier Tuesday at a news conference, "I think respect for the flag transcends political party and I think what I've said here is American. It isn't Republican or Democrat, it isn't liberal or conservative."

Debate on the resolution, sponsored by House Judiciary Committee Chairman Jack Brooks, D-Texas, was often emotional despite the non-binding nature of the language.

Plan to save Treaty Oak underway

AUSTIN (AP) — Someone tied a yellow ribbon around the centuries-old Treaty Oak, a bright reminder of people's concern as workers hustled to implement a plan by experts to help the historic tree survive a poisonous attack.

"If there's power in prayer, this tree's going to be a real survivor," said Jack Siebenthaler, executive director of the American Society of Consulting Arborists in Florida.

Visitors continued to leave get-well messages in front of a roped-off area that limits access to the tree.

Meanwhile, the Austin American-Statesman, quoting anonymous sources, today reported that a man suspected in the poisoning may have done it as part of an occult ritual. The newspaper quoted the sources as saying the suspect may have been trying to use the tree to cast a spell to protect a woman or because of a rivalry over a woman.

Police Sgt. John Jones said they are looking at one suspect, who has not been arrested. Jones has said several callers to police had identified the same suspect.

Siebenthaler was among state and national experts who developed a plan to help the tree in its struggle against the effects of the powerful herbicide Velpar, which was poured around its base.

The plan could be in place by the end of the week, said James Houser, who heads the experts' task force and is chairman of the Austin Urban Forestry Board.

A sprinkler system will mist the tree's foliage with water to control its temperature, thus reducing stress from heat, and an irrigation system will be set up, Houser said.

Rep. Carroll Hubbard Jr., D-Ky., asked those who burn the flag to "consider moving to Iran, China or Cuba, where burning the flag ... is encouraged."

But Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., said the court acted correctly to preserve freedom of speech, adding, "I exult in the decision ... because the Supreme Court has validated once again the Constitution and the Bill of Rights."

Saying he personally deplored desecration of the flag, Weiss cautioned members against "reckless tampering with the Constitution."

Voting along with Weiss against the resolution were Reps. Gus Savage, D-Ill.; Ronald Dellums, D-Calif.; William Clay, D-Mo., and George W. Crockett Jr., D-Mich.

The House hearings could be held by the full Judiciary Committee, but Brooks could assign them to the civil rights subcommittee headed by Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., a strong supporter of the court decision.

Edwards pledged Tuesday he will "not try by any trick to bury" a proposed constitutional amendment, but added that he hopes people will "think about the risk they are taking for freedom of speech."

Bush, declaring the American flag a "unique national symbol," said Tuesday, "As president, I will uphold our precious right to dissent, but burning the flag goes too far, and I want to see that matter remedied."

A constitutional amendment is ratified after a two-thirds vote by both houses of Congress and approval by legislatures of 38 states.

If additional soil samples taken Tuesday show the herbicide remains in the ground despite efforts to remove it, an underground drainage system could be constructed to flush it out.

"What we're trying to do is keep the tree functioning as well as it can," said Houser.

Arthur Costonis, also a consultant with the arborist society, and Siebenthaler said they are hopeful for the tree's chances.

"I'm very optimistic, based on what I'm seeing for new growth," said Costonis. The tree, in reaction to the poison, has been dropping leaves and putting out new sets.

Siebenthaler said, "I'm encouraged ... This third flush (of leaves) looks very encouraging."

It will be 1991 before experts will know if the tree will survive because of the potential for "delayed stress," Siebenthaler said.

The tree's odds are improved by the treatment it is getting to reduce the effects of a hot Texas summer, he said.

Siebenthaler estimated the tree's value before being poisoned at $29,392.69. He arrived at that figure through a formula that takes into account such items as size, condition and historical value.

An earlier estimate put the value at $47,000, but Siebenthaler said the difference is due to a slight miscalculation in the diameter of the tree, which is 50.5 inches. The tree is about 50 feet tall.

His estimate still would allow the case to be pursued as a second-degree felony criminal mischief, said Sgt. Dusty Hesskev.

Legend says Stephen F. Austin, the father of Texas, signed a treaty with the Indians under the tree's branches. The Handbook of Texas, however, says there is little foundation for the story.

U.S. Congress seeks to plug 'loophole'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is trying to block the route which former Reagan administration aide Lyn Nofziger used to win a reversal of his conviction for illegal lobbying.

Rep. Barney Frank said Tuesday the House Judiciary Committee will consider amending the Ethics in Government Act to revise provisions Nofziger used successfully in appealing his 1988 conviction.

"We saw it as a potential loophole," said Frank, a Massachusetts Democrat.

In a 2-1 decision Tuesday, the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Nofziger's conviction must be set aside because it wasn't based on a finding that he had knowledge of each element of the offense.

He was convicted Feb. 11, 1988, of three counts of illegally lobbying top presidential aides on behalf of private clients after he left the White House one year into the Reagan administration. The clients were scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp., a maritime engineers union and the manufacturer of the Air Force's

A-10 anti-tank plane.

The appeals court said Tuesday that in order for a conviction to be valid, the prosecution must demonstrate that Nofziger knew the matters on which he lobbied were already of "direct and substantial interest" to the White House.

The proposed amendment would eliminate the provision requiring knowledge of each element of the offense, said Frank, chairman of the House subcommittee on administrative law. Congress passed a similar measure last year but it was vetoed by President Reagan.

Independent counsel James McKay, who prosecuted Nofziger, said he will consider appealing. He could seek a review by the federal appeals court in Washington or by the Supreme Court.

A five-year statute of limitations could make it impossible to bring revised criminal charges.

His conviction was reversed in a decision written by U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Judge James Buckley, joined by Judge Stephen Williams, both Reagan appointees. The third member of the panel and lone dissenter was Judge Harry Edwards, a Carter administration appointee.

Nofziger, the White House political director in 1981, began lobbying his former colleagues within months of leaving the government. He said he was trying to stimulate their interest in various matters, which would not be a violation of the one-year ban on lobbying an ex-employee's former government agency.

The case against Nofziger was the first major test of the revolving-door provisions of the Ethics in Government Act.

"I don't think I am part of any revolving-door syndrome," said Nofziger. "People lobby in this town; the main industry in this town besides government is lobbying."

Asked whether he thought he got off on a legal technicality, Nofziger said, "Absolutely no ... I think they came after me on a technicality."

Nofziger said he was pleased by the decision. "I think I was innocent from the beginning; I still think I am innocent," he said.

The court ruling won praise from President Bush.

Bush, asked about the ruling at a state dinner Tuesday night honoring Australian Prime Minister Robert Hawke, smiled broadly and said only, "I'm always glad when somebody is found not guilty of something."

Nofziger had been sentenced to 90 days in prison and fined $30,000. He said that defending himself cost over $1.5 million in legal fees and possibly more than that in lost income.

In 1967, motorists in Sweden began driving on the right-hand side of the road, instead of the left.

The unemployment rate for Latin America in 1987 was 11.2 percent, according to the Inter-American Development Bank. The figures ranged from 3.7 percent in Brazil and 4.1 percent in Mexico, to 14 percent in Panama and 21.5 percent in Bolivia.

New law on crime victim identification creates furor

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A new state law that allows police to withhold the names of crime victims went into effect quietly earlier this month but is creating an uproar.

The law, which amends the Texas Open Records Act, allows government agencies to keep confidential the identities of victims of felonies, including homicide.

Police also can withhold information that could lead to victims' identification, such as addresses. The bill went into effect June 14.

Generally, the news media voluntarily withholds the names of victims of sex crimes.

One of the sponsors, Rep. Fred Blair, said the bill was aimed at protecting crime victims from harassment, whether by reporters' questions or from other sources, such as security companies. He said victims or their families could release the information, but it otherwise would not be public unless it reached the courts.

"A lot of crimes go unreported because the victims just don't want to go through it," Blair said. "I was thinking about the victims. I wasn't thinking about anybody else."

"I think the law is outrageous and I hope law enforcement agencies will choose to ignore it until this serious challenge to freedom of information can be corrected," Jack Loftis, editor and vice president of the Houston Chronicle, said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

The Chronicle waged a lengthy court battle in recent years to obtain records from the Houston Police Department.

In Amarillo, reporters and editors said that authorities would not release the names of people involved in a fatal car accident last weekend because of the law.

"If I hadn't been familiar with the case already, I would have been out of luck," said John Hagerty of KFDA-TV. "It really ties our hands."

Dennis Spies, managing editor of the Amarillo Daily News, said his reporters encountered similar problems with police, who refused to give the name of the woman killed in the accident because a suspected drunken driver was charged with involuntary manslaughter, a felony.

The paper finally got the names of the woman and her critically injured husband from a funeral home, Spies said.

Spies also said police refused to disclose the names of five people injured in a knife fight at an Amarillo nightclub Monday. Blair said he believes some law enforcement agencies are misinterpreting the law's intent and that authorities should be more liberal in releasing such information.

Blair said that, under the House counsel's interpretation, the names of the crash victims should have been released by authorities.

The Texas Department of Public Safety, which asked for a state attorney general's interpretation of the law, told troopers to withhold the names of people killed or injured in drunken-driving accidents, said spokesman Mike Cox.

Ira Perry, regional director of the Society of Professional Journalists, said he expected several media groups to fight the measure.

Gov. Bill Clements said Tuesday that if asked, he'll consider putting the issue on the agenda of the special legislative session that began last week.

"Certainly, (Clements) realized what he was signing, but ... there was no opposition voiced" during the bill's journey through the House and Senate, said Rossanna Salazar, the governor's deputy press secretary.

Seven-years-old...

Girl is rescued after spending more than 8 hours in storm drain

HOUSTON (AP) — Hours after 7-year-old Latricia Reese was sucked into a storm culvert and disappeared into an underground drainage system, police divers gave up plans to search in the fast-moving water and her mother had abandoned hope.

But Latricia, dazed and battered after being swept 30 feet below ground, clung to the cracks in the storm sewer lining while the flood waters from tropical storm Allison swirled around her.

"I just held on to the crack in the cement," Latricia said, complaining of mosquitos and ants that bothered her throughout her ordeal.

"It was a horrible night and a terrible storm, but we found a rainbow at the end," her mother said after two construction workers lifted manhole covers and called the child's name until they heard an answer.

"I gave up most hope and everybody kept telling me not to give it up, but I did," Karen Reese said Tuesday, while Latricia rested in a hospital bed and watched cartoons.

Latricia was playing in a flooded ditch near her south Houston home around 7:30 p.m. Monday when her cousin saw her lose her footing and vanish into an 18-inch, round concrete culvert that had gone undetected by the children.

"She spent the entire night in the city's major sewer system with all that flood water coming in on her, and hardly had a scratch," said Fire Department spokesman Mike Warnke. "It's just a miracle that she could still be alive."

The water was pouring so quickly into the drain where Latricia disappeared that authorities were unable to reach her, or even conduct a proper search Monday, Warnke said.

When the police diving team was called out, the water was still flowing at a rate they believed too hazardous to risk entering the unfamiliar storm sewage system.

"They thought that at that point, because the water was moving so fast, that she would have been swept down to the place where the sewer system empties into the bayou," Warnke said.

"The diving team told me they can't do any more, it's too dangerous for them. They told my friend they thought they should get me a pastor because I would need it and it didn't look too good," Mrs. Reese said. She and a sister, fearing the worst, walked around a nearby bayou in search of the girl at daylight Tuesday.

"I guess after the diving team told me they were quitting, that led me to believe that they couldn't do any more and they were just waiting for her body to float up," she said.

The girl was retrieved around 8 a.m. Tuesday by two construction workers who removed manhole covers near the spot where she disappeared and found her clinging onto some cracks in the brick lining of the sewer.

"We used a flashlight and saw a little figure about 30 feet under the street," said Timothy Gabrysch, who went into the drain Tuesday morning. "It was pitch dark and she couldn't see anything. When she saw us, she ran to us."

"It's an experience I guess you can't explain. I have no idea how she stayed there. It's pretty nasty down there. There's all kinds of debris down there."

Latricia, her hands white and wrinkled and her body covered with scrapes and bruises, was suffering mild shock Tuesday but was reported in good condition at Humana Hospital-Southmore, said spokeswoman Ramona Branch.

Officer kills man in W. Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — A police officer fatally shot a man in West Dallas after the man, his hand in his shirt, approached two other officers who were searching for an auto-theft suspect, police said.

The unidentified man was shot about 11:30 p.m. Tuesday by Officer P.W. Lemaire after two other officers stopped a pickup truck they suspected had been stolen. They arrested two occupants, but a third fled.

Police still had not identified the man this morning, and had not determined whether the man was in the truck, Sgt. Jim Chandler said. Police declined to say whether the man, who was Hispanic, was armed, saying the shooting was under investigation.

While several officers searched fields near the intersection where the truck was stopped, the shooting victim walked up to two officers who tried to question him about the truck, according to police.

A police helicopter hovering overhead relayed information to police on the ground that the man had his hand in his shirt and was holding something, police said.

Lemaire, who was walking toward the man and the two officers, fired two shots, deputy police chief Ray Hawkins said. He added that officers did not know whether the man was involved in the suspected auto theft, or whether he had been in the pickup.

A police report said the unidentified man refused to show his hands despite police orders to do so and lunged at Lemaire.

A youth who witnessed the incident said the victim was not involved in the chase. Derrick Leffell, 16, said he saw two people in the pickup truck while police were chasing it. He said the helicopter was circling.

"They were just shining their light all over the place and police were out running around, shining lights and telling people to go home," he said.

The shooting scene was packed with officers and reporters were kept about 100 yards away. It was not clear whether the man was shot in the street and ran into the field, or whether he was shot in the field.

Police shootings continue to be controversial in Dallas with critics saying the force is too quick to shoot. The force also has hours that ended early Tuesday, according to National Weather Service figures. In Pasadena and Deer Park, southeastern suburbs of Houston, more than 16 inches of rain was recorded in the past four days. Allison alone was responsible for 12 to 14 inches of rain in Liberty County, east of Houston. Huffman, like Spring, also had 14 inches.

For the year, the nearly 39 inches of rain so far in Houston is 17 over normal. The slow-moving storm on Monday became the first named storm of the 1989 Atlantic hurricane season when its sustained winds reached 39 mph. It came ashore in Brazoria County and then inched its way at about 5 mph through southeast Texas.

Many side roads, particularly in the eastern part of the city and Harris County, however, remained flooded today.

In its final statement on the progress of the storm, the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables, Fla., said the center of what was once Allison was breaking up about 20 miles southeast of Lufkin and it was unlikely the center would emerge back over the Gulf of Mexico and regain strength.

Although heavy rain and flooding is not unusual for Houston, the severity of the freeway problems rivaled Hurricane Alicia, which hit in 1983, and Tropical Storm Claudette, which dumped more than 20 inches of rain in 24 hours in 1979, including a national single-day record 43 inches in nearby Alvin.

The situation was similar in the Beaumont area, about 85 miles east of Houston, where flash flood warnings had been in effect for Orange, Jasper and Newton counties. Many major streets, underpasses and drainage ditches in the Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange area were flooded.

Flag issue sends Bush back on campaign trail

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the Supreme Court upheld flag burning as a protected form of free speech, George Bush heard fire bells and was back on the campaign trail once more.

As Bush has been fond of saying (quoting baseball philosopher Yogi Berra), it seemed like "deja vu all over again."

Bush used the flag — in particular, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis' veto of a state pledge-of-allegiance bill — to great political effect in 1988.

Now, he's mounting yet another campaign in defense of the flag — one to amend the Constitution to set aside last week's 5-4 Supreme Court decision and forbid flag-desecration at the federal level.

Amending the Constitution is extremely difficult. In the 200-year history of the document, thousands of amendments have been advanced but only 26 ratified.

However difficult the process, the call for a pro-flag amendment

Changes noted in laws for U. S. veterans

Public Law 99-272, passed by Congress in 1986, made several changes in veterans' eligibility for VA health care. E.H. (Dan) Dever, Jr., Scurry County Veterans Service Officer, notes.

"The intent of the law is to ensure VA hospital care is provided to service-connected veterans and to lower income veterans," Dever points out. "Those veterans with higher incomes will be provided with VA health care on a space-available basis and may be charged a deductible for their care based on their level of income."

Three categories of eligibility for VA health care were established. Within these categories, the law also established new eligibility assessment procedures, based on income levels, for determining whether non-service-connected veterans are eligible for cost-free VA health care.

These income levels will be adjusted on Jan. 1 of each year by the percentage that VA improved pension benefits are increased.

Details about the Veterans' Health Care Program are available in Dever's office in the Western Texas College Administration Building. The office is open Monday through Thursday on the summer schedule and can be reached by telephone at 573-8511.

West too busy to see 'Batman'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Adam West, the Batman of television fame, says he's been too busy to see the new Batman movie and he's content to leave the crime fighting to Michael Keaton's new version of the fictional character.

"I guess if anyone should see it, I should," he said Tuesday while in town for a return of his 1966 Batman movie. "I've been too busy. But I'm very curious."

politically an easy one. It doesn't increase the federal deficit, doesn't affect federal services, doesn't cost the president political support, doesn't alienate most special interests. And it once again puts Democrats on the defensive.

It was a safe campaign tactic for Bush a year ago, and a safe presidential pronouncement for him now.

Many Democrats, still smarting from Bush's 1988 attack on Dukakis on the flag issue and their own failure to respond quickly enough, joined congressional Republicans in denouncing the court's decision last week. But they were treading with extreme wariness on Bush's proposal.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., balked when reporters suggested that Democratic failure to endorse Bush's call for a constitutional amendment could give Republicans a partisan issue.

"I'm sure people will play politics with any emotional issue ... playing the most cynical politics ... for the most base and crass political purposes," Foley said.

Such partisanship would be "reprehensible and disgusting," Foley continued, as if he hadn't gotten the point across. "I'm condemning those who are doing it."

Just who might that be? Foley didn't say.

Bush was asked about his own partisan use of the flag issue at a hastily called news conference on Tuesday, held a day after he told the New York Times in an interview he was undecided on how best to respond to last week's court order and had asked aides to study the issue for him.

Given his "renewed concern" about proper reverence for the flag, Bush was asked, did he think it helped the situation for him, or any other politician, to make the flag "an instrument of partisan politics as it was in your campaign?"

"I don't view that as partisanship," Bush responded. "I think respect for the flag transcends political party and I think what I've said here is American, it isn't Republican or Democrat, it isn't liberal or conservative."

Transit board votes to approve proposals

DALLAS (AP) — The chairman of the Dallas Area Rapid Transit board put on his hardhat after members approved two controversial proposals in the construction plan.

David McCall, board chairman, had urged members to be decisive and vote on the entire plan as scheduled. The board voted 20-5 late Tuesday for the plan to place street-level rail lines in downtown Dallas.

Members also voted 21-4 to use the Santa Fe Railway corridor in DART's route from Dallas to suburban Garland.

A move surfaced earlier to delay votes on both proposals. McCall was pleased with the board action.

McCall at a news conference. Construction could begin within a year, officials said. The City Council must still take action on the scheme.

"It happens every time," said McCall. "Every time there's a major decision, some board members say, 'Let's look at this' or 'Let's look at that.' I think the board needs to vote so it can show that it has made a decision after 12 months of study."

The DART board also voted 22-2 for a mitigation task force to urge the council to delay its vote on the Santa Fe track plan.

Some observers considered the two proposals to be among the agency's most volatile transit schemes.

Board member Tom Taylor said earlier this week he would introduce a resolution Tuesday to delay a vote on placing street-level rail on Pacific Avenue.

"Where we go from here is we start issuing contracts to build the system. We put our hardhats on because it's time for DART and the dirt to start flying," said
