Halloween is just around the corner. Glowing jack-o-lanterns and spooky house decorations will be popping up in many neighborhoods in the coming days and are often seen as a great way to usher in the Halloween spirit. While these decorations are fun, have you ever wanted to immerse yourself in the holiday even more? If you have, consider traveling somewhere a little spookier this year. Many of America's most historic cities have their fair share of ghost stories and ghost tours. If you love the idea of truly immersing yourself in the spirit of Halloween, here are four Spooky Locations to visit.

1. St. Augustine, Florida

As the oldest city in America, it makes sense that St. Augustine would be host to many rumors of the supernatural. The Castillo de San Marcos is the subject of many of these tales. The Castillo was built in 1695 by the Spanish to defend Florida and is the oldest and largest masonry fortress in the continental U.S. The national monument draws in supernatural enthusiasts year-round with its many stories of mysterious ghost sightings. People have reported seeing the ghost of a Spanish soldier staring out to sea from the edge of the fort at sunrise and sunset or claimed they felt the touch of cold hands while touring the dungeon. Some visitors even reported a light shining from a fixture in a watchtower that did not have electricity. Walking through the Castillo de San Marcos offers an opportunity to learn more about Florida's history while still enjoying some spooky fun.

Grande Villas at World Golf Village

If you love exploring the supernatural, you may want to spend all night at some of St. Augustine's spookiest locations, but sooner or later, you may find you need a place to stay. If you're looking for somewhere to rest after your ghostly adventures, check out the Grande Villas at World Golf Village by Bluegreen Vacations. This resort features one- and two-bedroom villas and is located near St. Augustine's ghostly landmarks and 43 miles of white-sand beaches! Additionally, the Grande Villas feature two championship 18-hole golf courses. So even when you're not exploring the supernatural, the resort has plenty to offer that can keep you

2. Galena, Illinois While Chicago may be the most visited city in Illinois, there's plenty of fun to be had outside of the windy city, especially for anyone looking to immerse themselves in the Halloween spirit. If you're in search of exciting ghost tours, look no further than Galena, Illinois. This town's first documented ghost sightings date back to the 1800s and harbors many locations the locals have claimed are haunted. Amelia's Galena Ghost Tours is a way to see the most popular spots for seekers of the supernatural

Amelia's offers both a walking and bus tour, guiding guests to many spots in town that are allegedly haunted. In fact, the bus tour provides guests with both documented Galena history and ghost stories. If you would like a quick overview of the haunted history of this town, Amelia's Galena Ghost Tours is a place to start.

WorldMark Galena

Looking for a place to stay in Galena? Check out the WorldMark Galena by Wyndham Resorts. Located on a tree-lined road, the WorldMark offers guests their choice of a one-bedroom, two-bedroom, or studio suite. This resort also boasts both an indoor and heated pool, as well as a hot tub. There's a fitness center as well to help you keep up your routine, even when you're on vacation.

3. New Orleans, Louisiana

Louisiana may be known more for its food and festivities, but it's also home to a host of mystical rumors. In fact, the city has been the backdrop of many horror-themed movies and tv shows, like True Blood and Interview With a Vampire. Aside from its history of voodoo, which you can explore throughout New Orleans, there are several cemetery and ghost tours. Through these tours, guests are given a chance to learn about voodoo, see the many mansions that are allegedly haunted in the city, and learn even more about New Orleans' history. Check out Pere Antoine's Alley if you're a fan of friendly ghosts. The alley was named after a beloved priest who looked after the poor, and visitors say you can still see his spirit there in the early morning hours.

Frenchmen Orleans at 519, Ascend Hotel CollectionIf you want to stay in the heart of New Orleans, check out Frenchmen Orleans at 519. You'll find this resort is just one block from the French Quarter. Jazz and blues clubs surround The Frenchmen at 519, so you can unwind after a busy night of ghost hunting. The resort features a hot tub and outdoor pool, and guests can choose to stay in either a one-or two-bedroom suite. 4. Salem, Massachusetts

Home to the infamous witch trials, Salem, Massachusetts, is considered a hot spot for ghost hunters. Old Burying Point Cemetery is known as one of the most popular spots for fans of paranormal activity because of its long history of ghost sightings. The mysterious Lady in White is one of the most popular local legends tied to the cemetery. If you'd like to see the cemetery for yourself, be sure to check out The Ghosts of Salem Tours. These tours take visitors through many spooky locations, like the Old Burying Point Cemetery and the Witch House. Plus, these tours share plenty of historical facts about the town of Salem along the way. Immerse yourself in the spirit of Halloween, while learning a bit of U.S. history by taking advantage of the Ghosts of Salem Tours.

InnSeason Surfside Resorts

Located outside the town of Salem, the InnSeason Surfside Resorts might be a great home base you can use to make a day trip out to the city. The resort features a private beach across the street where you can enjoy the warm waters of Cape Cod. Aside from the beach, the Surfside Resorts feature both indoor and outdoor pools. Guests can relax in a studio, deluxe studio, or one or two-bedroom reliable volunteers.

"He may be one of our more seasoned volunteers, but there is no doubting his committment. He has shown up all year except when Mother Nature kept him from coming," Hafley said. "When temperatures got to the triple digits we told him to stay home, but other than a few times, he was right there with us no matter where we were cleaning up."

Make a Difference Day is an opportunity for people around the world to those who have stepped up and made a noticeable difference in their communities. KBSB members and other volunteers took a few moments after the Fall Sweep to recognize Young's contributions in a short ceremony.

"Not only is Dale out there cleaning up the community with us, but he created a tool that came in real handy when the wind was blowing," she said. "He created a tool to help us keep the bags open on those windy days, and that has made a big difference for all of us." Young was presented with a gift certificate to Cowboy's Steakhouse for his contribution and in recognition of him making a difference. According to Hafley, Young always finds a way to be the most impactful whether it's picking up trash without a second thought or driving around to help a big group gather the bags of trash as they go. He will drive around putting the bags in his trunk so the other volunteers don't have to carry the bags while picking up trash. He can be found at the monthly meetings or even picking up trash in his own neighborhood, on any given night. "I was joking with him the other night that it wasn't Tuesday, he didn't have to be picking up trash," Hafley said. "He just giggled and told me that it doesn't have to be Tuesday to pick up trash."

Doorbell video shows malnourished Texas twins seeking help

CYPRESS, Texas (AP) — A woman accused of starving and abusing her twin teenagers in Texas had been arrested a decade earlier in Louisiana on a child abuse charge, according to court records. Zaikiya Duncan, 40, remained jailed Friday in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, after two of her children fled their Houston-area home and sought help from neighbors this week. The twins, barefoot and holding handcuffs, were seen on doorbell video as they sought help in a Cypress neighborhood, just outside Houston. The video, obtained by Houston TV station KHOU, showed the teens walking door to door around 5:30 a.m. Tuesday as they sought help.

The boy was shirtless, and the girl was wearing only a plastic grocery bag around her neck as a shirt, according to an affidavit.

The woman who let them inside told Houston TV station KTRK that the teens told her: "We are not here to hurt you." "She was shaking with her handcuffs," the woman, who was not named in the news story, said of the girl. "She was like, 'We are looking for help. We just need help. We just broke out of our handcuffs. Our mom had us handcuffed in the laundry room.'" Duncan was arrested hours later in Louisiana after police issued a missing children alert for five other children. All seven children, including the twins, are now in Child Protective Service custody, authorities said.

In 2012, Duncan was arrested in Baton Rouge on a charge of cruelty to juveniles after one of her children, then 5, was taken to a school clinic with injuries, including burns consistent with being submerged in hot water, court records said. It wasn't immediately known whether that child was one of the

In Texas, the 15-year-old twins were severely malnourished and told police that abuse had been occurring for months, the affidavit said. They told police that Duncan handcuffed them, forced them to drink bleach and other household cleaners, and sprayed oven cleaner in their mouths "if they talked too much," the affidavit said.

The twins also told authorities that they were forced to eat and drink feces and urine, according to the affidavit.

The neighbor, an intensive care unit nurse, said she photographed the teens' injuries and called police. The girl "was complaining that she couldn't even close her hand because her hand just felt so tight and swollen from her trying to tug and pull off the handcuffs," the woman said.

Duncan awaits extradition on charges of aggravated assault. Her live-in boyfriend, 27-year-old Jova Terrell, also faces an assault charge. It wasn't known whether either had an attorney, and they are expected to be extradited to Texas within 30 days, KTRK reported.

Capitol rioter gets prison for attacks on journalist, police and I'm deeply sorry for my actions," the officers fell and landed By MICHAEL KUNZELMAN

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pennsylvania man was sentenced on Friday to nearly three years in prison for assaulting an Associated Press photographer attacking police officers with a stun gun during the U.S. Capitol riot. Alan Byerly apologized to his victims before U.S. District Judge Randolph Moss sentenced him to two years and 10 months in prison followed by three years of supervised release. Byerly will get credit for the more than 15 months he already has served behind bars since his arrest, according to his lawvers. "I didn't go to D.C. to harm anyone,"

Byerly told the judge.

Byerly, 55, pleaded guilty in July to assaulting AP photographer John Minchillo and then activating a stun gun as he charged at police officers who were trying to hold off the mob that formed outside the Capitol on Jan. 6, 2021. Byerly said he was an "antagonistic jerk" when he confronted the officers. He also said he assaulted Minchillo after hearing a voice say, "That's antifa. Get him out of here."

Minchillo was wearing a lanyard with AP lettering when Byerly and other rioters attacked him on the Capitol's Lower West Terrace, according to a court filing accompanying Byerly's guilty plea. Byerly grabbed Minchillo, pushed him backward and dragged him toward a crowd, the filing says. Another AP photographer captured the assault on video.

"I should have never gotten involved,

Byerly said. Prosecutors sought a sentence of at least three years and 10 months of imprisonment, followed by three years of supervised release. Defense lawyers requested a sentence below an estimated guidelines range of 37 to 46 months in prison. Moss said he believed Byerly is genuinely remorseful for his role in the mob's "assault on democracy." The judge said it was clear that Byerly couldn't have injured anybody with the inexpensive stun gun that he brought to the Capitol, but the officers couldn't have known that given the sound that it made. "They were clearly frightened by it,"

Moss said. "It undoubtedly added to the fear the officers felt that day." Minchillo "must have been extremely frightened, as well," the judge added. None of Byerly's victims attended sentencing hearing.

Byerly bought the stun gun before traveling from his home in Fleetwood, Pennsylvania, to Washington, D.C., for the "Stop the Steal" rally on Jan. 6. Leaving the rally before then-President Donald Trump finished speaking, Byerly went to the west side of the Capitol and joined other rioters in using a metal Trump billboard as a battering ram against police, prosecutors

Later, Byerly approached police officers behind bike racks and deployed his stun gun. After officers grabbed the stun gun from Byerly's hands, he charged at them, struck and pushed them and grabbed an officer's baton, prosecutors said. One of while trying to restrain Byerly. Defense attorneys said the model of stun gun that Byerly purchased for $24.99 was considered to be "junk" by engineering experts. "Furthermore, shortly after purchasing the device, Mr. Byerly had accidentally activated it on himself and thus knew that it could not cause injury or even pain," the defense lawyers wrote in a court filing. Other rioters helped him elude capture that day, but Byerly was arrested in July 2021. He told FBI agents that he did just "one stupid thing down there and that's all it was," according to prosecutors. "This was a reference to how he handled the reporter and nothing more," they wrote in a court filing. Byerly, a carpenter by trade and father of four children, has remained in custody since his arrest more than 15 months ago. Approximately 900 people have been charged with federal crimes for their conduct on Jan. 6. More than 420 of them have pleaded guilty, mostly to misdemeanor offenses. Nearly 300 have been sentenced, with roughly half of them getting terms of imprisonment ranging from seven days to 10 years, according to an AP review of court records.

More than 100 police officers were injured during the Jan. 6 riot. Over 270 defendants have been charged with assaulting, resisting or impeding officers or employees at the Capitol, according to the Justice Department. Byerly is one of several defendants charged with assaulting members of the news media or destroying their equipment at the Capitol.

Praise to your name that you have shown us a way through all evil, a way that is blessed. Amen.

A One Man Movie Show

I met Mike Robertson at a restored theater in Spur, where I did my new one-man show "Outrageous Texas Women Of Character."

 ${f T}$ UMBLEWEED

Before the show started I saw this man in the audience who looked a lot like Santa Claus. He had a white beard and jolly eyes and when I visited with him for just a few minutes I was convinced that he is genuinely as friendly as the real thing. He does Santa Claus stuff around the end of the year. I found out later that he

SMITH is a speaker, does magic, creates music, sings and is a Baylor grad. That's what really bonded us. During the pandemic Mike went around the state taking pictures of old theaters. Some of them were in poor condition while others had been restored. He put his photos on his website and people seemed interested in the old movie houses. Some suggested he needed to do a coffee table book but that proved too costly. He took thousands of photos and selected 256 of them and developed a one-man show titled "The Show Must Go On." It was presented at the 157-seat AFS Cinema, 6259 Middle Fiskville Road in Austin at 7 p.m., Tuesday, October 18. "I had a lot of friends ask if I was going to record it or stream it live," says Mike. "I told them no, that I was not going to do that. We are losing the importance of going out and doing things. Not just movies but music, restaurants and other stuff. It's so easy to stay home and order food or watch a movie or listen to music on your laptop or phone. We've lost the fun and the joy and the community of going out and being with other people. I think it shows in our society. We've gotten too sedentary as a nation. So I tell people the only chance to see this is to be there in a seat."

Mike has used a few of his many talents in putting the show together.

"I thought well I'm a speaker so I should do something where I get to talk. I also design cool slide presentations so should do some kind of cool slide presentation. I created an original song that will be part of the presentation. I'm excited and terrified because I've never rented out a theater and been completely responsible for selling the tickets. I've been actively working on the show for 3 months but like this mooning I spent 3 hours on one slide. It's got to do some pretty important things and convey a lot of information. It'll be on the screen for about 50 seconds. It's filled with some good stuff. And there's a little bit of comedy in the show, too. It'll be a real surprise.

When you think of slide shows you think of dull, boring events where the speaker reads words that are projected on a screen. Forget that. His slide presentations are works of video art. He'll grab a letter from the screen and place it somewhere else. It looks like magic. Other speakers have asked him to help with their slide presentations.

His show, "The Show Must Go On," is just over an hour. There will be popcorn, a full concession stand and bar. Tickets are $20 and are available at his website mytexaspictureshows.com.

Γop horror villains rated Special to the Herald

With the spooky season nearly upon us, Halloween in the Film and TV world kicks into overdrive. Hundreds of horror villains have graced our screens over the years, but which Halloween baddie has caused the most fear? The team at Claims.co.uk used jump-scare, kill-rate and runtime data from 162 horror movies to establish, once and for all, which Halloween villain is the most effective.

To the delight of horror fans, data reveals that Michael Myers tops our list of the most terrifying Halloween villains. With a score of 8.71 out of 10, he earns this score through his infectious desire for murder, killing on average a horrifying 18 people per film. Not only that, but he also causes jump scares an average of 11 times per Halloween film, keeping the audience on the edge of their seat. In second is the Werewolf from the horror series

"An American Werewolf in London" and its sequel "An American Werewolf in Paris". Whilst yielding a similar amount of jump scares to the Halloween film series, the kill count is down at only 10 per film, considerably lower than the 18 people per film murdered by Michael Myers. This results in a score of 7.74 out of 10. In third place is cult classic The Grudge (1 and 2), the US-Japanese horror's main villain Kayako earning a score of 7.58 out of 10. The infamous death rattle preceding danger still horrifies to the day, the series landing a death rate of 8 people per film and a huge 13 jump scares per movie.

Remarkably, the villain Bo in the slasher movie House of Wax takes the dubious accolade of being horror's most effective killer -in the space of a 113 minute film, Bo eliminates 154 people, which is a huge proportion of film fatalities.

Michael Myers cumulatively musters 106 kills, a full 48 behind House of Wax, although traditionally Michael Myers prefers to attack singular isolated people as opposed to groups. Surprisingly low on the list is the Xenomorph from Alien, with only 19 deaths attributed to the main beast throughout the series, although the spawn of the Xenomorph certainly adds to the list of fatalities. Claims.co.uk conducted this research to identify the most effective horror movie killers. The study analysed death counts, along with jump scares, for a sample of 162 horror movies featured on the sources below. sites listofdeaths Leading entertainment and wherethejump were scraped to curate

a dataset containing death counts and jump scares respectively for the 162 movies where full appropriate data was available. The dataset was subsequently filtered to those with a minimum of 10 jump scares, for maximum horror accuracy. The list of movies were cut down to 52 movies covering 32 movie franchises where it was possible to identify a specific killer as the main villain. Deaths attributed to the villain, and jump scares attributed to the villain were identified.

The Idle American

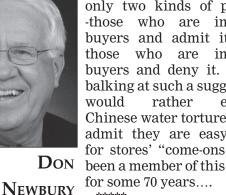

Points About Purchasing

sucker of the first order. I've ignored pleas of loved ones and friends warning me about buying items at greatly reduced prices.

I want to do better, but can't help it if adrenaline jumps into overdrive upon my noticing signs like 'drastically reduced"

-those who are impulse buyers and admit it, and those who are impulse buyers and deny it. Those balking at such a suggestion would rather endure Chinese water tortures than admit they are easy prey for stores' "come-ons." I've been a member of this group for some 70 years....

Again, I apologize for citing personal experiences, but they're the only kind I've had. Persons gray of head and/or long of tooth remember that in the early 50s, a movie about Davy Crockett ("King of the Wild Frontier") was a box office sensation. Crockett items soon were finishing second only to hot cake sales. I'd seen the Crockett coonskin caps, but balked at plunking down $1.98 for one. I didn't know the Crockett mystique was soon to ebb, and during a visit to Fort Worth, found them on sale for 11 cents each at Leonard's Department Store. I "closed them out," greatly denting a $5 bill for the three dozen caps in stock. My mind flooded with dollar marks as I thought of dozens of friends I figured would jump at the chance to purchase these items for 50 cents each. Why I'd have a profit of around $15, and bragging rights at Early High School. Alas, news of the Crockett bubble bursting reached our community before I returned from the city. I made zero sales, and during an attic-clearing session a few years ago, found a box full of coonskin caps. There were 35, but I really did enjoy wearing that 11-cent cap for a weekend....

My wife has given me the stern look, reinforced with "when -are- you -ever- going -to- learn"

Okay, I confess. I am--as many retailers know--a mutterings. After 56 years of marriage, she is convinced that it will never happen in my lifetime. I lean on the "I-just-can't-help-myself" excuse, realizing that it is a mere "bleep" in a world where many stronger sounds abound.

I will spare you details of dozens of other lousy purchasing decisions. One made this very day, though, is worth mentioning, since I came out on top! Upon entering our Sam's store, a huge display within 20 feet of the entrance beckoned. Thereon were stacks of machines with suggested retail prices of $49.95 each, but for one day only, were offered for $12.95. The guy in front of me bought six.

I didn't want to make him look like a piker, so I bought just four. Not until arrival at home did I read the fine print about the magical machines. About all I knew was what I'd heard, something about the machines being worth the price if only for the "white noise" that helps many of us sleep...

I wasn't really prepared when Brenda asked, "What are these?"

Stammering, I mentioned how throngs at Sam's bragged about the magical machine. She wasn't buying that, proceeding to dismember me by reading the small print loud enough that passers by could easily hear. She said that we already have four white sound machines. The literature claimed the light rays greatly enhance yoga exercises. That was all I needed to hear. I returned to Sam's, explaining that I don't do yoga, and wasn't interested in a contraption whose white noise feature might be trumped by yogaenhancing lights....

Sam's purchasing agent must be catching "what for." He (she?) may have bought a train load of these machines, never thinking that white sound for sleeping and fancy lights for yoga exercises might be a lousy combination.

I suspect he (she?) may be named Walton, or once Whatever, I'm going to try to do better....

Steers looking to punch their ticket back to the UIL State Cross Country Meet

By PATRICK GONZALES

Herald Sports Writer

Last week the Steers and Lady Steers XC teams dominated in their district meet. The Lady Steers finished second overall as a team with district rival Levelland edging them out by just 8 points. Freshman runners Bergan Pinkley and Luna Jimenez captured the top two individual spots with Pinkley claiming the individual district title in a time of 12:51.34 and Jimenez right behind her in second with a time of 13:19.83.

Overall the Lady Steers placed all of its seven runners in the top 25 at the district meet. Heading into regionals, the young Lady Steers team will look to be competitive. Per head coach Brandon Clemmons the Lady Steers have really come around this season and the future is looking bright in the coming years.

"We're a really young team and have been competing well all season. I think heading into regionals we'll be very competitive." Clemmons said. "The good thing is that we are a really young team this year so we have an opportunity to build a pretty good team on the girls side." Clemmons added.

On the boy's side, the Steers successfully repeated as the district champions as they placed all their runners in the top 20 and placing their top five in the top 10. Leading the way for the Steers was Adrian Solis who captured the individual district title completing the 5K race in 16:31.85. Following behind Solis was Isaac Gonzales who finished second with a time of 16:54.11.

Last year the Steers finished third as a team at the regional meet which qualified them to the UIL State meet where they finished fourth overall. This season the Steers have been ranked in the top three in the state for Class 4A all season long and have been projected to be serious contenders for the state title.

The Steers will look to once again qualify for the state cross country meet Monday morning where they will compete in the UIL Region I meet in Lubbock. The Steers will have to contend with No.1 Canyon and No. 4 San Elizario at the meet who are also looking to return to the state meet.

Per coach Clemmons, the regional meet will be tough but is confident that the Steers can qualify again to the state meet. "Our region is really tough probably one of the toughest in the state, but if the boys go out and compete at the level I know they can then I have no doubt that we can qualify for the state

The Lady Steers will run first Monday morning at 9 a.m. followed by the Steers at 9:30 a.m. at Mae Simmons Park in Lubbock. Good luck to both the Lady Steers and Steers XC teams at regionals!!

BSJH seventh grade volleyball action against Levelland

Special to the Herald

7th Grade A Team:

The Lady Steers hosted Levelland last night. Both 7th Grade games were nail-biters! The A Team lost the first set, but rallied back in the second set to force the third (19-25, 25-18, 2325). All girls played extremely well. Zayleigh Solis was the outstanding server of the game by serving many aces consistently. Laura Noble, Bella Sykes, and Analie Compean were standouts on defense. The all around outstanding player of the game was Aubry Lopez.

7th Grade B Team:

The 7th Grade B Team battled in some very intense sets! Sadly even though the battle was strong they fell in two sets that both went into extra points (26-28, 26-28). Players of the game included Jaylin Reyes, Fayth Oseibounsu, Makayla King, Aliah Lyles, Addison Marquez, Liah Garza, Lilliana Garcia, and Pailey Olivarez for their consistency and commitment to the team and the game! They never once quit and gave 100% the entire game!

If you haven't seen your Lady Steers play, you will have one more chance. Their final game of the 2022 season is at home on Monday, October 24, 2022 beginning at 5:00pm.

Stocks rise on Wall Street, remain on track for winning week 500 and other major indexes are all still on track reminder that stubbornly high prices remain a

AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks rose in midday trading on Wall Street Friday, keeping major indexes on track for weekly gains after several days of up-and-The S&P 500 rose 1% as of 11:48 a.m. Eastern. The

Dow Jones Industrial Average rose 351 points, or

1.2%, to 30,693 and the Nasdaq rose 0.7%. Technology and health care companies has some of the strongest gains. Oracle rose 4.3% and Pfizer

Social media companies were broadly lower after

Snapchat's parent company issued a weak forecast

and the Washington Post reported that Elon Musk

plans to slash about three-quarters of the payroll at Twitter after he buys the company. Snap slumped 30.1% and Twitter shed 4.7%. The yield on the 10-year Treasury note, which affects mortgage rates, held steady at 4.24% from late Thursday. The yield on the two-year Treasury, which tends to track investors' expectations for Federal Reserve action on interest rates, fell to 4.51% from 4.61%. Markets have been unsettled in recent days. Stocks lurched from sharp gains early in the week to losses later in the week. The benchmark S&P for weekly gains in what has been an encouraging October so far. Investors have shifted their focus, for now, to the latest round of corporate earnings as they look for more clues about how hot inflation and rising interest rates are shaping the economy. Reports from airlines, banks, railroad operators and others have so far provided mixed financial results and American Express fell 6.1% after setting aside hundreds of millions of dollars to cover potential losses as the economy continues to deteriorate. Railroad CSX fell rose 0.7% after reporting solid financial results. Investors remain concerned about inflation and the Federal Reserve's attempt to cool hot prices on everything from food to clothing by raising interest rates aggressively. Higher interest rates tend to discourage borrowing and investments, slowing economic activity. That could tip economies into "The concern is still that bond yields are heading higher and the Fed is not signaling a pivot," said Ross Mayfield, investment strategist at Baird. "Until there is a meaningful pivot driven by a drop in inflation, it's a huge headwind to the market." The latest inflation data from Japan is another global problem. Japan's core consumer prices rose 3.0% in September from a year earlier, according to government data released Friday. That was the highest increase in eight years.

Central banks around the world have mostly been raising interest rates to fight inflation and much of the focus has been on the Fed. It has raised its key interest rate to a range of 3% to 3.25%. A little more than six months ago, that rate was near zero.

The Fed is expected to raise interest rates another three-quarters of a percentage point at its upcoming meeting in November. Markets have been unsettled partly because investors have been hoping that any sign of inflation easing or economic growth slowing could signal that the Fed will ease up on its rate increases.

The interest rate increases have yet to show any signs of significantly impacting inflation, but the policy has a delayed impact. The Wall Street Journal reported that some Fed officials are signaling more caution and suggesting a slowdown in rate increases soon to see how the fight against inflation is going and avoid going too far with aggressive rate increases.

"The risk is that the market is trying to price in these pivots before the Fed signals that's going to happen," Mayfield said.

Deficit figures set up competing visions from Biden and GOP

By JOSH BOAK

Associated Press

This fiscal year's budget deficit shrunk in half from last year, but the red ink soared on a monthly basis in September largely because of President Joe Biden's plans to forgive student debt, as three decades' worth of costs were compressed into a single month. The budget figures released Friday by the Treasury Department reveal dueling visions about what it means to be financially responsible: Biden can rightly claim that the budget deficit for fiscal 2022 plunged $1.4 trillion from the prior year; critics can use the same report to say that forgiving education loans pushed up the federal debt by roughly $400 billion as the government booked the full expense. Buried in the numbers is a deeper battle between Democrats and Republicans about what it means to be good financial stewards. The federal budget deficit totaled $1.38 trillion this year. That's down from $2.78 trillion in fiscal 2021 —and it's a message that Biden wants to sell to voters going into the midterm "Today we have further proof that we're rebuilding the economy in a responsible way," Biden said in remarks at the White House. "Republicans in Congress are doubling down on a commitment to explode the deficit again." The annual deficit roughly halved in size because of the end of spending tied to coronavirus pandemic relief and higher tax revenues as more Americans found jobs — an improvement that Biden credits to his policies. Republicans counter that Biden's $1.9 trillion coronavirus relief plan that helped fuel those job gains also helped to trigger high inflation, a key concern of voters going into the midterms. They also want to reverse his recent 15% minimum tax on corporations and expanded funding for the IRS, even though both could reduce forecasted deficits. The government will likely need to raise its legal capacity to borrow and

House Republican leader Kevin McCarthy has signaled that he would push for spending cuts if the GOP gains a majority. "You can't just continue down the path to keep spending and adding to the debt," McCarthy said in an interview this week with Punchbowl News. "There comes a point in time where, okay, we'll provide you more money, but you got to change your current behavior. We're not just going to keep lifting your credit card limit, right?"

Biden interpreted those comments as a threat to hold U.S. government funding hostage and possibly make it impossible for the government to repay its debt. "They will crash the economy next year by threatening the full faith and credit of the United States, for the first time in our history putting the United States in default unless unless we yield to their demand to cut Social Security, Medicare," Biden said. Administration officials have argued that the forgiveness of student debt will allow borrowers to achieve life milestones such as buying a home and starting a family. Republican lawmakers counter that the forgiveness is a giveaway that disadvantages blue collar workers and those who did not attend college. The monthly report added to those tensions, as much of the cost of debt forgiveness was booked in September, even though the repayment of the loans would have likely occurred over several years. Biden in August announced $10,000 in federal student debt cancellation for those with incomes below $125,000 a year, or households that make less than $250,000 a year. Those who received federal Pell Grants to attend college are eligible for an additional $10,000 in forgiveness. Biden's plan makes 20 million people eligible to get their federal student debt erased entirely.

States and groups affiliated with Republicans have filed lawsuits to try to block the forgiveness. A federal judge on Thursday dismissed a suit from six GOP-led states, saying the states lacked legal standing, a decision that the states intend to appeal.

Federal finances improved over the past 12 months as the unemployment rate dropped to 3.5% from 4.7% in September 2021. The job gains enabled tax revenues to jump 21% from a year ago, while overall spending fell 8% as the government's coronavirus-related aid has faded. In May, the Congressional Budget Office expected the federal deficit to fall in 2023 and then start to rise in the years ahead to $2.25 trillion a decade from

Pfizer says COVID-19 vaccine will cost $110-$130 per dose insurers to cover many been used to fight COVID-19 in the U.S. vaccines

By TOM MURPHY AP Health Writer

Pfizer will charge $110 to $130 for a dose of its COVID-19 vaccine once the U.S. government stops buying the shots, but the drugmaker says it expects many people will continue receiving it for free. Pfizer executives said the commercial pricing for adult doses could start early next year, depending on when the government phases out its program of buying and distributing the shots.

The drugmaker said it expects that people with private health insurance or coverage through public programs like Medicare or Medicaid will pay nothing. The Affordable Care Act requires Date: October 14, 2022 recommended without charging any outof-pocket expenses. A spokesman said the company also has an income-based assistance program that helps eligible U.S. residents with no insurance to get the shots. A Pfizer executive said Thursday that the price thresholds "for what would be considered a highly effective vaccine." Pfizer's two-shot vaccine debuted in late 2020 and is easily the most common preventive shot that has

More than 375 million doses of the original vaccine, which Pfizer developed with the German drugmaker BioNTech, have been distributed in the U.S., according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

That doesn't count another 12 million doses of an updated booster that was approved earlier this

The vaccine brought in $36.78 billion in revenue last year for Pfizer and was the drugmaker's topselling product. Analysts predict that it will rack up another $32 billion this year, according to FactSet. But they also expect sales to fall rapidly after that. More than 90% of the adult U.S. population has already received at least one dose of COVID-19 vaccine, according to the CDC. But only about half that population has also received a booster dose.

An unambitious twenty-two-yearold, Darren lives in a Bed-Stuy brownstone with his mother, in "Black Buck" (F ASK M) by Mateo Askaripour. She wants nothing more than to see him live up to his potential as the valedictorian of Bronx Science. But Darren is content working at Starbucks in the lobby of a Midtown office building, hanging out with his girlfriend, Soraya, and eating his mother's home-cooked meals. All that changes when a chance encounter with Rhett Daniels, the silver-tongued CEO of Sumwun, NYC's hottest tech startup, results in an exclusive invitation for Darren to join an elite sales team on the thirty-sixth floor. After enduring a "hell week" of training, Darren, the only Black person in the company, reimagines himself as "Buck," a ruthless salesman unrecognizable to his friends and family. But when things turn tragic at home and Buck feels he's hit rock bottom, he begins to hatch a plan to help young people of color infiltrate America's sales force, setting off a chain of events that forever changes the game.

Helen's idyllic life—handsome architect husband, gorgeous Victorian house, and cherished baby on the way (after years of trying)—begins to change the day she attends her first prenatal class and meets Rachel, an unpredictable single mother-to-be in "Greenwich Park" (F FAU K) by Katherine Faulkner. Rachel doesn't seem very maternal: she smokes, drinks, and professes little interest in parenthood. Still, Helen is drawn to her. Maybe Rachel just needs a friend. And to be honest, Helen's a bit lonely herself. At least Rachel is fun to be with. She makes Helen laugh, invites her confidences, and distracts her from her fears. But her increasingly erratic behavior is unsettling. And Helen's not the only one who's noticed. Her friends and family begin to suspect that her strange new friend may be linked to their shared history in unexpected ways. When Rachel threatens to expose a past crime that could destroy all of their lives, it becomes clear that there are more than a few secrets laying beneath the broadleaved trees and warm lamplight of Greenwich Park.

In a town where nothing ever changes, suddenly everything does in "One Two Three" (F FRA L) by Laurie Frankel. Everyone knows everyone in the tiny town of Bourne, but the Mitchell triplets are especially beloved. Mirabel is the smartest person anyone knows, and no one doubts it just because she can't speak. Monday is the town's purveyor of books now that the library's closed tell her the book you think you want, and she'll pull the one you actually do from the microwave or her sock drawer. Mab's job is hardest of all: get good grades, get into college, get out of Bourne. For a few national news when its water turned green. The girls have come of age watching their mother's endless fight for justice. But just when it seems life might go on the same forever. the first moving truck anyone's seen in years pulls up and unloads new residents and old secrets. Soon, the Mitchell sisters are taking on a system stacked against them and uncovering mysteries buried longer than they've been alive. Because it's hard to let go of the past when the past won't let go of you.

It's December 23, 1971, and heavy weather is forecast for Chicago in "Crossroads" (F FRA J) by Jonathan Franzen. Russ Hildebrandt, the associate pastor of a liberal suburban church, is on the brink of breaking free of a marriage he finds joylessunless his wife, Marion, who has her own secret life, beats him to it. Their eldest child, Clem, is coming home from college on fire with moral absolutism, having taken an action that will shatter his father. Clem's sister, Becky, long the social queen of her high-school class, has sharply veered into the counterculture, while their brilliant younger brother Perry, who's been selling drugs to seventh

Leit. Dead End! Turnaround, try again. Fall brings many people to farms across the country to have some fun in the corn maze! This uniquely American agricultural entertainment is not only an autumn tradition for many, but a major source of income for farms that grow corn mazes. To begin, the idea of mazes are not new as they date back to ancient times. The ancient Egyptians and Greeks built labyrinths-courses with a single path to follow- for spiritual purposes. The most famous of these is probably the labyrinth in Knossos on the island of Crete which housed the terrifying bull-headed Minotaur in the Greek Myth of Theseus. Labyrinths are depicted in Roman artwork and were built out of mosaics on the floors of Roman homes to be used as a kind of party game. Later European cultures used labyrinths for religious and ceremonial uses as well.

Beginning in the late 17th century garden mazes became popular in parts of Europe. Royalty, nobility, and other aristocrats grew extensive hedge mazes on their estates as way to entertain guests. The goal was often to find the center of the maze. The oldest known hedge maze is the Hampton Court Maze in London which dates back to the 1690s.

The idea to make a maze out of a cornfield did not come about until the 1990s, however.

The first corn maze in the United States was built in 1993 by Don Frantz and Adrian Fisher. Frantz had worked as a creative director and producer in other spheres putting on events ranging from Broadway shows to the Superbowl Halftime show. According to sources the idea for a corn maze came to him while looking down on the contours of farmland while on a flight. The maze was built at Lebanon Valley College in Annville, PA. The 3-acre field was dubbed "The Amazing Maize Maze" and was cut into the shape of a dinosaur named 'Cornelius the Cobasaurus.'

maze attracted all kinds of inter-

this start other farms began growing them. The first maze used a gridsystem to plot the design and pulled stalks by hand to create the design. While some mazes still use a grid system today, others take a more hightech approach using computer generated designs and GPS guided mowers that cut the shapes into the field. Tothere more than 500 corn mazes across the United States, and some in the United Kingdom as well.

Each year they feature myriad of different and detailed designs. The largest corn maze is located at Stoney Brook Farms, Inc. Foley, MN. It covers 110 acres and includes 32 miles of pathways.

Corn mazes offer not just a source income for some agritourist farms, but an introduction to agriculture for many people who may not live near a farm or know much about agriculture.
