Extension of Water System and Improvements Light Plant To Be Made

The water bonds carried by a vote of 46 to 37 and the light plant bonds carried by a vote of 50 to 34 last Friday in the city election. The water bonds were for $14,000, to be paid from revenue only for extension of services of the water system which includes new six inch cast iron pipes to replace the old 2 and 3 inch pipes, and several new fire hydrants, and a new white-way for main street.

The light plant bonds were for $10,000 and the monies will be used for the improvement of the Hardin Municipal Light Plant.

The actual offering of the money for the bonds by the government has not been made yet but a letter from the government officials assured the city manager, Ross Reagan, that the offer was in preparation and would be sent to the regional office in Fort Worth and forwarded to Burkburnett very shortly. The bonds cannot be printed until this is received, as the government sets the maturity date.

Mayor A. R. Hill announced that work would probably start in the next 60 days on the two projects. It takes certain time to advertise the bids, award the contracts and final plans for the work are not quite complete.

District Governor Addresses Lions

Lion Governor of District 2-E, Rupert N. Richardson, of Abilene, attended the last regular meeting of the local club. He spoke to the members brief, outlining Lions' International program and met with the directors at the close of the meeting for a short business session.

John Stapleton, head of Y. M. C. A. work in Wichita Falls, presented a string band of six boys and girls who had received their training at the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Stapleton announced that he intended to carry this work to surrounding communities and he hopes to establish a training school here in Burkburnett for young musicians.

The club sweetheart, Miss Helen Ingle, who has recently returned to take up her duties as a teacher in the local schools, was welcomed back to the club.

One new member was welcomed: Hubert Graag.

Guests were: Deputy District Governor, Frank Cipliver and Lion Gordon Thomas of Wichita Falls and Roy Jackson.

Herman Engelmann and Bill Estes had charge of the program.

Famed Daredevils To Appear Here

Polar Bears Of Fairview Smash Devol Six-Men

The fast stepping Bears of Fairview, led by Tommy West and Glenn Adair, were more than the Devol club could handle Tuesday evening when the two teams met on the Burkburnett gridiron.

On the first play Tommy West received the kick-off on his own 20-yard line and aided by perfect blocking raced 80 yards for a touchdown. The Bears failed for extra point.

Enloe took the ball and ran around end for another touchdown. A pass to Bush was good for a score of 19 to 0.

In the second quarter Tommy West scored again and his kick was good for two points making the score 27 to 0 as the half ended.

BUY WISELY

"Buy things you want and can afford to have." That is the thought expressed in a fine editorial printed recently in the Mansfield, Ohio, News-Journal.

"There's too much inactive money," the editorial says. "There has been postponement of buying clothing, furniture, floor covering, draperies, electrical conveniences of various kinds—as well as numberless other large and small items.

"Construction of new homes, or remodeling of old ones, has been put off

"Out-dated automobiles have been continued in use by motorists who can well afford a new car.

"All of these things have contributed to the general slow-down of industry and business—thus encouraging the reign of fear that has engulfed so much of the nation—

"Money is of no earthly good—except for use!

"Earn, spend, save," is a formula under which individual and national progress is assured.

The man who spends less than his means would normally dictate, is as much of a burden on the country as the man who continually spends more than he can afford. This country possesses an almost limitless market for commodities of all kinds. We need more homes, more cars, more roads, more farm and factory machinery, more clothing, more labor-saving devices in home and industry. It is purchases of things such as these that make new jobs, new purchasing power, higher national income, and greater opportunity for both capital and labor.

Spend wisely and frugally. Keep your budget balanced. Don't get yourself in the hole. But always remember that sound spending is vital to the maintenance of our standard of living, to the advancement of recovery, and to the ultimate attainment of prosperity.

THE CONSUMER'S DOLLAR

A question which is often asked but seldom satisfactorily answered is: "Who gets the money we pay for food?" The farmer complains that he doesn't get enough of the consumer's dollar. The retail grocery and meat market complain that they don't make a fair profit on the fraction left in their hands after they have paid for the goods they sell.

The answer seems to be, according to the most recent study of the facts, that most of the consumer's dollar goes to the middlemen who move food products from the farm to the retail store. That includes, of course, the railroads or trucks, which haul the farmer's produce over each stage of its journey, the costs of warehousing and of processing at various stages, and of all other business transactions required to bring food-stuffs to the place where the consumer finally gets them. This middlemen's spread ranges from 52 cents for meats and 53 cents for dairy products to as high as 76 cents for bread and cereal products and 80 cents for canned goods. That the buyer of canned goods must pay five dollars for every dollar that the farmer gets seems exorbitant.

Retailing and the distribution of goods are so highly competitive that the answer can only be that our complicated system does, after all, meet certain needs, that people will pay to satisfy them, and that, however large may seem the cost of getting goods from the producer to the consumer, that cost is paid primarily for services rendered and not for excessive profits.

The shortest route from producer to consumer, one which eliminates the largest proportion of middlemen's tolls, should be the aim of business and the objective of all legislation affecting prices. The interest of the consumer is, or should be, paramount to all other interests.

Second Installment Synopsis

Jocelyn Harlowe, raised in a French convent, at the age of eighteen years, joins her mother, Marcella, in New York. Worried about her safety, because she is unfamiliar with the modern world and has developed into a beautiful woman, her mother's first wish is to get her safely married. Attending her first ball, Jocelyn meets Felix Kent, rich, handsome and nineteen years older than she whom she had known at the age of twelve and who tells her that he has waited all those years to marry her. Encouraged by her mother, he comes to the apartment often and as the last installment ended he had just kissed her—her first kiss.

"Oh, no," she whispered. "Oh, no . . . no. I can't."

Kent came toward her, not close, for her arms were stretched out to keep him at a distance.

"Darling, I'm so sorry. I beg your pardon. I know I frightened you. Please do forgive me." He felt as though he had been sent back in a dream to play the part of a Victorian lover! "I want you so. I want you to marry me."

After a considerable silence Jocelyn composed herself.

"You won't do that again?"

"Not until you wish it. Please, Jocelyn, give me just the tip of your silly little convent fingers."

She let him take her hand and kiss it. She brushed the other hand across her eyes and smiled.

"Then it's all right?" he asked her.

"I think so. Yes. If my mother . . ."

"Your mother gave me her consent at that same costume ball when I was the Jack of Diamonds. Do you mean this, child? I am in earnest."

"Do you mean that I will marry you . . . you are asking?"

"Yes."

He had given her the choice. But her freedom actually was not greater than that of a caged bird. All about her mind and her life and her will stood the walls of her inexperience, of her mother's silent coercion, of the unfair opportunity that had been given to this older man.

"May I have a piano?" whispered Jocelyn.

The question sounded so like mere childishness that Felix did laugh out, and again, but very carefully, put his arm about her. She came to him but not so softly, so completely, as before.

"You may have a piano, my darling. You may have anything you want in all the world."

"I want a lot," she said.

The piano was a symbol. All the material world was a symbol . . . of some desire, some need, whose very name she did not know. But how was a man as Kent to understand?

"You shall have everything," promised the Jack of Diamonds.

It was an engagement in the old literal sense of that term for marital bargains: an engagement entered upon by one party in the blindest ignorance of the price expected of her.

Early that morning, creeping into her mother's bed where Marcella lay, broad awake—she prayed through nights of fearful sleeplessness—Jocelyn asked her in a quivering undertone:

"Why did I feel like that when Felix kissed me, Mother?"

"Feel like what?"

"Like . . . killing him."

"You are a foolish, wicked child. Go back to bed. Felix will teach you everything you ought to know. It is quite right and natural that you should be frightened by your first kiss."

"I wasn't frightened, Mother."

"Yes, you were. You misinterpret your own emotion. It was not Felix Kent you wished to kill."

"Who then?"

"It was . . . yourself. Something in you that woke. You were frightened, furious, ashamed, at what went through you under his kiss."

Jocelyn dropped her head and presently withdrew it and her soft clinging arms. She groped her way back to her room.

The engagement of Miss Jocelyn Harlowe of New York City to Mr. Felix Kent of Chicago with all possible other details of information was presently in due form announced. And Jocelyn wore upon her third finger a diamond as splendid as a star.

"You shall be married in the spring after a four months' engagement," Marcella promised and added to her chosen son-in-law, alone, "I want her to get used to you, Felix, so that we won't have a runaway bride on our hands. As for her further education, I must leave that to you, to your kindness and patience and wisdom, Felix. For after all, what can I tell her that would help her to be a happy wife?"

This wailing question did not startle Felix. He gave Jocelyn's mother scant attention, being preoccupied with problems of tutelage, and with a vision of the education soon to be given to an unsuspecting golden girl.

There were evenings, however, even now, when his role of restraint was difficult to maintain. On one such evening he left Jocelyn abruptly with a manufactured excuse.

Marcella began during the period of Jocelyn's engagement to attend evening services regularly. So it happened that when Felix left so early Jocelyn was left entirely alone. Even the servant was away.

For a while Jocelyn stayed near the window, leaning against its frame, looking tirelessly at the wonderful great city. A city of Mars. So strange, so bright, so tall.

At last, she went back into the room and sat down by her piano, brooding.

She played her own music as she had not been able to do of late. She played for a long while.

The door from the passage which led back toward the bedrooms opened softly. Jocelyn whirled about, surprised. She could see no one. But the door had moved.

Then she saw him, coming around a great throne of a chair which had interposed between them. The little bent man sidelong, with bright and eager eyes.

Jocelyn would have screamed but he arrested her with speech.

"Don't be frightened, Jocelyn," he said gently in a voice full of pleasantness. "I wouldn't scare—I wouldn't hurt you for the world. You see, you poor little child, I am your father."

And Jocelyn recognized him.

"I'm not afraid of you," she said—a queer first speech from child to father.

She put out her hand.

Nick caught at it and tried to straighten himself to his daughter's level. Rheumatism had him in its clutches and the motion cost him a grimace. But it succeeded and he stood there, side-long still, but at a height even a little taller than her own.

"Thanks," he said dryly. "I'm grateful for small mercies." His eyes ran rapidly about the room.

"I'm glad my daughter is not afraid of me. I thought by this time you'd be made . . . of fear—I used to call you 'Lynda.'"

"Sit here beside me on the sofa. I won't stay long. And you mustn't tell your mother that I've been here. I won't come here again. I saw you at the end of that awning on the night of your first ball. I read of it in the papers and waited there and I caught myself in the stupid mistake of falling in love with you. Then I saw your engagement announced. That scared me somehow. It's so soon. You're only 18 and you can't know anything. I'm ill."

Jocelyn, seated beside him, a strange, warm surge of welcome in her blood, raised his hand gently.

"I'd love to take care of you."

"Couldn't stand a woman's fussing, Lynda. Couldn't ever bear a woman around me now. I came to ask you . . . are you happy?"

"Yes. And thr-r-rilled."

"U-hum. I suppose so. Will you get his picture for me?"

"Felix Kent's?"

"Sure thing. Your young man's."

She laughed. The whole experience began to be an astonishing adventure. This father had a way with him that opened a door in her heart. She hurried to her room to get the picture.

Coming back light-footed she found him returning to his place from some swift furtive investigation of the room. She noticed that it made on her at the time no particular impression.

Nick drew her down beside him and bent over the large, handsome photograph.

"Not bad looking. Well set up. Got a tight mouth and a big eye. Generous chap, Lynda?"

"Oh, isn't he?" she showed her ring.

"That! He'd have to give you that. I mean other presents."

"He's given me a lovely wrist watch. Shall I get it to show to you?"

"No. Sit still. I thought convent girls were always composed.

Did they treat you well?"

"Yes. They were lovely to me. But I can't talk about the nuns now, Father. Really, I was glad to leave them and to come to America. To New York. I wanted to begin . . . to live."

"And now you're . . . living, eh?"

"I soon shall be."

"Poor kid! When will you be married?"

He was listening all the while for the sound of an arrival in the building.

"In two months now, Father."

"U-hum. You'll be a pretty bride. More than pretty. Will your mother deck you out with all her jewels?"

Jocelyn threw back her head and laughed.

"Mother's jewels! Can you imagine it? How you must have forgotten her! She despises the things of this world. She wears dresses of plain black with a cross here like a nun. She would think it a sin to have jewels in her possession. Father. You must really have forgotten her. Do tell me about her and about yourself and what happened to separate you?"

Her father stood up, catching at his cane, smothering a cry at the pain all sudden movements cost him.

"I can't tell you, Lynda. Anything I mustn't even see you again. But—here's my address."

He pushed a folded scrap of paper into her hand and bent her fingers over it. "I want you to have that for two reasons. If you ever need me you can send for me or come to me. But I advise you, unless it's a very serious business, to forget me and my whereabouts. The other reason—well, I won't bother you with that. May I kiss you?"

She lifted her face. She was in tears.

"Don't be a fool," he said roughly. "Nothing to cry about. I'm glad you aren't afraid . . . even of fathers."

"You keep me there, hidden, on your heart. But don't let me disturb its nice strong beating. I'm going out the way I came. Down your fire escape. The ladder at the end flies up twice as tall as a man's height from the ground. But, if you throw a weighted rope and pull it down—there you are! See?"

"So if you ever want to run away, Lynda, I'll show you how. But don't forget a rope."

She followed him into the small back room, her own bedroom. Now Sandal got himself painfully out across its sill and Jocelyn watched him climb down swiftly and quietly in spite of his pain and his twisted body.

Jocelyn shut the window, and went back to the lighted front room and paced it rapidly.

She unfolded the little paper he had given her. Nick Sandal—with an address. She carved it into her memory before she watched it burn. Sandal, Sandal. Was that her own right name? Jocelyn Harlowe. Lynda Sandal. Another personality seemed to be taking possession of her, climbing up out of some dark well inside her as the bent twisted figure of this man had climbed up from the darkness into her home, into her life.

Like every other human child, Jocelyn wanted to love and be loved. Loyalty she knew to be the very root of such attachment. During the days that followed her acquisition of a half-guilty secret, therefore, her conscience suffered for loyalty was now divided and her heart left a dark bewilderment.

Said Marcella one morning turning abruptly from the desk at which she sat paying bills, "Why do you look at me like that, Jocelyn, with such great sad eyes?"

"Mother, I don't want to leave you so soon," she said, trembling.

"It is better for you to marry and to go away and begin a life of your own."

"But . . . won't you be lonely?"

"I am used to being alone. It suits me best."

"Don't you love me, mother?"

"I will tell you the truth, Jocelyn. I will not let myself love any one. Human love has never brought me happiness. I have directed my love elsewhere. I care deeply for you. But you must look to your husband for warmth of feeling."

"Here's Felix now to console you, darling."

Jocelyn sprang up, turned her back to the room and swept the tears from her eyes desperately. "Don't tell him, Mother. Mother, please don't tell him," she prayed in a passionate whisper. "Do not tell him I have been crying, please!"

Marcella laughed and when, a few moments later, a man's strong arms turned her about, Jocelyn knew that, by some signal or murmur, her mother leaving them alone had betrayed her confidence.

Department In Answering Due to Work Silent Members

The Volunteer Fire Department in Burk Burnett is a silent member of the state of Texas. Information I hereafter give is in hand-

December day, evening, is closed and the temperature high to keep the wind. In a small residential section she puts the clothes in the wash to boil just for many years. A little gasoline in the clothes; she has done it without any harm. The gas flame is different; the light and the heat rises and goes from the woman. The woman has a flash of flame in the room and she screams "Fire!"

Back to the firemen, who, after zig-zagging through traffic, have arrived at the fire. They put out the small fire and find that the woman has been severely burned on the hands and arms. Then the fire department first-aid crew goes into action and fixes up the wounds. In the meantime other firemen are cleaning up the mess caused by the water.

In 15 or 20 minutes the firemen and the truck return to the station and sign up for having attended the fire. Then they return to their work and the day goes on as before.

The speed of the answering of a fire alarm, which never takes over two minutes at the most, is due to the silent members of the fire department—the young ladies at the telephone switchboard—who handle the main part of these calls. Through the courtesy of the telephone company this extra work is given without cost to anyone. Their assistance is greatly appreciated and acknowledged by the fire department and should be by you.

And we still think that the Burk Burnett fire department is rated with the best. Don't you?

Will Your Town Be The Next One?

Great oaks from little acorns grow—and a conflagration may begin with a spark. Since 1900 there have been one hundred conflagrations in the United States and Canada. Will your city be next in line for complete destruction?

It may be adequate precautions are not taken. But fortunately a conflagration like less serious fires, can be prevented. A certain water supply, an efficient fire department, a reliable fire alarm system, an up-to-date building code—these are fire's most potent enemies. In very small towns and rural areas, similar safeguards may be created through district fire departments strategically located where they may serve a wide surrounding territory, and by telephonic alarm communication.

According to tradition, the great Chicago fire started when Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over a lantern. It is a known fact that the great Berkeley fire started in a vacant lot. Most great fires began from similar apparently unimportant events. Adequate protection can prevent them from spreading.

If the average holds true, there will be two or three conflagrations in the United States and Canada this year. Take care your town isn't on that unhappy list, and that your home and family don't become victims of the Fifth Horseman—uncontrolled fire.

"Burned property cannot be replaced," says Paul B. Sommers, President of the National Board of Fire Underwriters. "It is gone forever, and the nation is poorer by that much in tangible wealth. Fire brings unemployment, loss of time, wages and buying power, sometimes checking the growth of communities and reaching out a detaining hand to dependent or allied industries."

It is high time we got rid of the widespread and completely erroneous idea that fire insurance gives complete protection. Fire insurance is essential to individuals and industry alike—but there are risks which no policy can cover. Cases are on record where the destruction of a factory has brought a sudden stop to a town's progress and caused it to start on the down grade. The factory in the case was undoubtedly covered by insurance, but the ultimate loss to the community was infinitely greater than the mere building and materials destroyed. When fire closes a place of business, permanently or temporarily, it means the purchasing power of employees is reduced or eliminated entirely. Mortgages and rents go unpaid. Stores lose patronage. Taxes are lost. Families move away and search for employment elsewhere. Property values decline and the entire life of the community is affected.

The direct annual fire loss in this country can be tabulated—it amounts to several hundreds of millions of dollars. This is a gigantic sum, but the indirect loss which cannot be put down exactly in figures, is many times as great and perhaps runs into the billions. When we prevent a fire through the simple precautions that eliminate most hazards in homes and places of business, we are safeguarding jobs, savings, earnings, security, thus putting dollars in our pockets.

Be Your Own Fire Preventer

Every business is periodically inspected for fire hazards, by men fully conversant with what to look for and what to do when dangers are discovered. You can easily do the same thing for your own home—and no rigorous course of training is necessary to fit you for it.

The great bulk of home fires originate from the simplest and most obvious hazards. Here are a few of them: Accumulations of old papers, clothing and other junk; improper storage of gasoline and other inflammable liquids; defects in heating plants and electrical appliances; uncleaned or faulty flues and furnaces; amateur repairs of electric cords and fuse boxes.

It takes no expert to quickly and effectively eliminate such hazards as these. Clean out the attic and give the junk to the junkman, storing what is left neatly in trunks and boxes. Keep paint, varnish and inflammable liquids in covered metal or glass containers—and store them well away from heat and fire. And if heating or other household appliances give trouble, local experts will be glad to repair them inexpensively.

Fire prevention isn't much of a job—a few minutes each week or so is sufficient to accomplish it. And that little effort may save your home from destruction—or even your family and yourself from a horrible death. Fire prevention shouldn't be regarded as a bothersome task—it is a duty, which pays tremendous dividends. And never forget that it's better to prevent a fire than to stand around and hope the fire department will be able to extinguish the blaze before everything you possess is destroyed.

Big Rabbit Creek

October 2, 1938

This Sabbath afternoon, October 2, is a very hot afternoon at 2:45 p. m. The temperature reads 98 1-2 in the house. Yesterday, Saturday, the reading was 100 at 2 p. m. It's mighty hot and dry for October.

Hawkeye went over Sunday morning to Our Friendly Little City on a pleasant trip, arriving at 11:45 a. m. Hawkeye spent about 35 minutes in the big Oil City.

Say, folks, have any of you given it a thought just how hot it is for the month of October? Well, it's almost 100 in the shade; the ground is awfully hard and dry. A good big rain is needed very bad in order for the small grain raisers to break and get their land ready to sow their fall grain.

Mr. Dewey Austin, one of the Bird Creek community's prosperous farmers and stock raisers, called on the Owens family Sunday morning and spent an hour or so visiting with the family.

The first and part of the second pulling of cotton in this part of the neighborhood is in full blast. By the last of next week the first and second pulling will be over with.

All of the farmers who got their cotton pulled out the first going over are now gathering out their corn. Corn over on this side is making an average of 45 bushels per acre.

When Hawkeye was over in Our Friendly Little City Saturday he dropped in to the L. D. Holman Cream Station to see how his friend, L. D., was getting along. One amongst the best produce stations in the state is owned and operated by L. D. L. D. asked Hawkeye if he had any way to get home besides hitchhiking. Hawkeye said "No."

L. D. says, well, old boy, you come around right after the big drawing and we will fly home in the big Ford V-8. Well, after the drawing, Hawkeye took his groceries over to the produce station and in a few seconds they left the curb. The first lap of the trip Hawkeye found himself over at the north end of the Burk bridge making 65 miles per hour. Before he even thought of it, he was right in his yard. The last lap was made at the rate of 85 miles per hour. That was the first imitation air-ship ride that Hawkeye ever took. Anyhow, he greatly enjoyed the short and fast ride. Through the Rabbit Creek news Hawkeye wishes to thank L. D. very much for his kindness in taking Hawkeye home.

Thousands of people were in Our Friendly Little City, Burk Burnett, Texas, Saturday. The stores were all packed with shoppers, especially Little Henry and Bud Hicks' big grocery and market. They had put on three extra grocery boys to carry out big bills of groceries to the parked cars. Some cars were parked 8 to 10 blocks away from the boys' big store. The carry boys were making these long trips with smiles on their faces a foot long. That's the way that all business is catered to the public when you trade in Burk Burnett, Texas. "Hawkeye" Owens

Burkburnett Movie Patrons Pay $1,600 61 Different Taxes

The 61 direct and hidden taxes included in the price of the average movie ticket drain more than $1,600 annually from Burk Burnett's 650 movie-going families, states the National Consumers Tax Commission.

"More than 16 per cent of the price of the average admission ticket is due to the imposition of 41 federal and 20 state and local tax levies," the commission adds, basing its conclusions on carefully compiled attendance figures.

"This non-profit, non-partisan commission has added the above data to its comprehensive survey of taxes 'which penalize the consumer' in its sweeping, nationwide fight against all such levies.

Local units of the commission are springing up in community after community throughout the country, declared Mrs. Volney W. Traylor, of Brownsville, Texas, representative on the commission's national committee, issuing a statement from its Chicago headquarters.

"Even in the enjoyment of their leisure, the American family cannot throw off the stifling pressure of their enormous 'tax load,'" Mrs. Traylor said. "The cost of food, clothing, rent, automobiles and cosmetics, is likewise drastically increased by direct and hidden taxes. And these levies are already equal to 23.6 per cent of the national income."

With 85 percent of the families in the southwestern states spending a yearly average of $15 each for the enjoyment of attending motion pictures, Mrs. Traylor said, the same movie tax load prevails in all communities in this area.

Fire insurance was invented in London in 1666. No corresponding data is available covering fire sales, but it is no sooner than early 1667.

THE GOULDING RULE

To prevent sunstroke when the temperature soared over 100 degrees Director Edmund Goulding ruled that no member of the "Dawn Patrol" could remove his sun-helmet at any time while on location.

Two Garden Clubs Making Ready For Annual Show

Everyone Asked To Display Flowers

Preparations are being made by the two local Garden Clubs for the third annual Flower Show for this community, which will be presented November 4th.

Everyone who has flowers is urged to make preparations for displays on that date.

The success of the impressive show last year has inspired the sponsors to hope for an even better show this year. The season has been fairly good and if we have a rain within a few days, roses and chrysanthemums should be plentiful by the time for the show.

The first show was a private showing for invited guests of the Burk Burnett Garden club at the home of Mrs. R. P. Reagan. Interest was stimulated to the extent that it was decided to make the affair annual and to open the show to all who wish to display.

The show last year was so impressive and attracted such unusual attention that the sponsors themselves were somewhat astounded.

In seasonable years this affair should become one of the biggest attractions in this area.

Senior News

Coy Miller returned home Saturday evening and is rapidly recovering. We have ordered books for our Senior play and will begin practice soon. A hayride is to be given Friday the seventh, by the Seniors in honor of the faculty.

Junior News

The Social Calendar says Oct. the twenty-first is Junior night. So we plan to make it a night that will last long in the memories of our other classmates. (In more ways than one.) Tallewe'en is just around the corner and spooks and goblins always "Will git you if ye don't watch out."

A Sophomore Tonguetwister

Tell me this: Does a doctor doctor a doctor according to the doctored doctor's doctrine of doctoring, or does the doctor doing the doctoring doctor the other doctor according to his own doctoring doctrine?

Freshman News

The Freshman class is looking forward to a party at the home of Jimmie Williams, Oct. 14th. Further plans will be made later.

The Primary Grades

We are very proud of our new books. We have twelve books added to our library.

3rd and 4th Grades

Quite a number of pupils have been absent in our room due to illness. Among those who were absent are: Dale Chapman, Bertie Sue Wetzel, Peggy Harris and Roy Miller.

Our new library books are both pretty and interesting. We enjoy them very much.

The boys have been practicing acrobatics during physical education period. They like to try out the stunts they have been practicing.

5th and 6th Grades

Betty Williams, who broke her left arm before school started is able to have it out of the sling. None of the boys in room six like peanuts—neither do they like back seats.

James Ed Cozby has been absent from school for a week. He is picking cotton. We have our new library books. We enjoy them so much.

7th Grade News

The 7th grade English class organized a Citizenship club and the officers are: President—James Pearson. Vice-President—Edgar Wetzel. Secretary—Marguerite Elliott. Program Chairman—Raymond Johnston.

The Trailer

Well, things have certainly assumed a complicated air, first a brown car was always seen in front of the home of Frances Ramming and now it's always green. I can't figure it out. Oh well, he could have painted his car. Oh yeah?

The little boy on crutches is still hobbling around, and much to the sorrow of a little brunet Junior, he can't drive a car yet!

It seems to me a certain Junior girl, brunet, just can't seem to get over her old "Polar Bear" friend. Even though he has moved, his name often appears on the tip of her tongue at the most embarrassing moments!

Frances you didn't deny going to the show Sunday, but you did deny the fact that you went with some one, or did you?

Say, Imogene, where is that ring you have been wearing? Have you broken your first engagement, or are you letting him wear it for awhile?

Johnny Pounds, we are sorry she wouldn't wear your bracelet. Better luck next time.

John do you really write to an ex-senior of Clara, at Lubbock?

Is it true that Claude really loves Marilyn? What's this I hear about Billie Starnes having an Electra boy friend? Betcha that Burk boy doesn't know it.

Bulldogs Whip Ancient Foes In Conference Tilt

Fred Brown Was Spark Plug In 14-6 Victory Over Eagles of Chillicothe

Ending up in what liked to have been a free-for-all fist fight but proved only to be a battle of words, brought most of the 2,000 fans in the stadium into the football field, the Chillicothe Eagles and the Burk Burnett Bulldogs staged one of the hardest fought battles witnessed on the local field since the Bulldogs engaged Stamford last year.

Fred Brown, quarterback of the Dogs, was the star of the game in which the Bulldogs were victorious by the score of 14 to 6.

The regional champions from Burk Burnett had the better of the argument all the way, rolling up 16 first downs to seven for Chillicothe, but the Dogs were nipped time after time just short of the scoring line in the opening half.

Brown set up the first score in the third quarter after Chillicothe had kicked to the Chillicothe 45. After one pass had failed, Brown spun over center, cut to his left and galloped 40 yards before J. Morrison knocked him out of bounds in the Chillicothe 5-yard strip. J. Brock dropped Brown for a yard less than Willett picked up the yard.

Brown then spun over center and plunged to the goal line for the touchdown. Harry Elliott's kick for extra point was perfect.

Midway in the final quarter Burk Burnett scored again. Landis fell on a Chillicothe fumble on the Chillicothe 27-yard line. From this point, Brown and Willett alternated the ball carrying and Brown carried it wide around end to score from the 5-yard line. Harry Elliott again kicked the extra point to give Burk a 14 to 0 lead.

Chillicothe opened a last minute, desperate passing attack that clicked for one touchdown. Chillicothe took the kick-off after the last Burk Burnett score and ran it back to the Chillicothe 41-yard line. After two incomplete passes, G. Morrison passed to H. Brock, who then lateralled to J. Morrison for a 16-yard gain.

G. Morrison then connected with H. Brock for a 10-yard gain, Hopkins fumbled and was downed back on the 35, but G. Morrison found H. Brock in the open on the next play and connected for another pass to complete the 61-yard passing drive for a touchdown. H. Brock's kick for extra point was wide.

J. Brock was the outstanding defensive man on the field for the Eagles with George Morrison their greatest offensive star. The Chillicothe line played a great game in holding the Burk Dogs time after time when they had marched into the shadow of the goal.

Willett and Brown were outstanding in the Burk Burnett backfield with the entire line smearing the Eagles' offensive attempts most of the night.

"Doc" Sims Still Golf Champion

Louis "Doc" Sims is again champion of the Municipal Golf club. This is the third win for Doc. The matches ended last week-end as follows:
Sims—Club championships.
Beldon—Runner-up.
Second Flight—Jack Brumley.
1st: J. M. Pogue, runner-up.
Third Flight—Tex Willis, 1st; T. H. Holman, runner-up.
Carl Morrison won the consolation match for First Flight.

The best matches were played in the second flight where players were about evenly matched. All members are practicing for the Handicap Tournament to begin this week-end. Par players have some hope of "getting somewhere" in this tourney since Sims has been handicapped at 0.

Vern Blanscet Is In Hospital At Ingleside

Word was received here Tuesday that Vern Blanscet of Ingleside, Texas, is in the Humble hospital there recuperating from injuries received in a highway accident.

Vern is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Blanscet and has been living in Ingleside for several months. The extent of his injuries was not ascertained.

Local Boy Ranks High As Fresh

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Adams received word this week from the authorities at the Military Institute at Roswell, New Mexico, where their son, J. C., Jr., is enrolled, that he ranked second in the official entrance test given all freshmen who enter that institution.

235 points constitute 100 per cent. One student made 220; young Adams came second with 165 and the nearest score to him was 120.

His grade was considered especially noteworthy and he was placed in class A English as a result of the tests. He is also a member of a Freshman troop which has won high honors in several events.

Annex of Park Hotel Burns Sun.

Wichita Firemen Go To Aid of Neighbors

Flames of unknown origin swept the annex of the Park hotel at Iowa Park Sunday night causing damage unofficially estimated at about $2,000. The annex was recently completed and belonged to W. F. George of Iowa Park. Several persons had recently moved into the eight-room building.

The flames were noticed by residents at the hotel who were sitting in the front of the building. The entire frame structure seemed to be suddenly enveloped.

The Iowa Park volunteer fire department fought the flames to prevent the adjoining brick hotel from catching fire. Three members of the Wichita Falls department, from the No. 3 station at Seventeenth and Holliday, rushed to aid the Iowa Park firemen.

All instruction in the schools of Guam by native teachers is carried on in English, but as school is out the children chatter in their native tongue.

Julius J. Engelmann, age 42, of 1500 Tenth street, Wichita Falls, died shortly before noon Friday, Sept. 30, at a Veterans' hospital in Fort Bayard, New Mexico, following an illness of about six months.

Funeral services were held Sunday, Oct. 2, from the First Methodist church, Burk Burnett, with Rev. C. M. Beyer, pastor of the Lutheran church in Wichita Falls, officiating. Interment was in the Clara cemetery under the direction of the Owens & Brumley Funeral home.

Mr. Engelmann was a World War veteran and the members of the local Legion post attended the services in a body. Pallbearers were: D. W. Power, Geo. Anderson, Herbert Hausler, of Wichita Falls, and Al Lohofener, Erwin Schwieger and Dave McNeill of Burk Burnett.

Engelmann left Wichita Falls last July after resigning as secretary-treasurer of the Fritz Motor company. He had been a resident of Wichita Falls since Oct., 1926. He moved there from Burk Burnett to accept a position with the Allred-Lambert and Nichols accounting firm. Later he established a firm there.

Prominent Family
Engelmann was a member of one of the most prominent families in North Wichita county.

He was born in Ulm, Ark., and moved to the Clara community with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Engelmann, in 1909. He completed his education in the Burk Burnett High school and a business school in Dallas.

In 1915 he became city clerk at Burk Burnett. During the World War he became a sergeant major in the army. Returning to Burk Burnett after the war, Engelmann was elected city manager in 1924, and served in that office until he moved to Wichita Falls.

While a resident of Clara he was an active member of the Clara Lutheran church where he served as president of the Walthers league for several terms.

Survivors include the parents, the widow, a son, Charles, 5, and a daughter, Marcella, 15; two brothers, Herman Engelmann, manager of the Burk Burnett Chamber of Commerce, and A. A. Engelmann, Perryton, Texas; three sisters, Mrs. Robert Klinkermann, Wichita Falls; Mrs. Walter Klinkermann and Mrs. Walter Kaspar of Clara.

Europe—Disturbances
It is hard for most Americans to figure out what lies back of the disturbances in Europe. There is no simple, single answer but a great deal of friction between nations on the Continent traces back to ancient racial hatreds. We think that we have a lot of racial friction in America, but we manage to live in peace with each other because we all speak the same language, wear the same clothes, eat the same food and drive the same cars. On the whole, we are all on pretty much the same economic level; and we have learned, in 300 years of living together, to respect each other's rights and tolerate each other's racial eccentricities.

In Europe there is a much greater number of races, and each race tries to dominate the country in which most of its people live, and keep all other races from having any say in public affairs. The minority races insist upon their civic rights, and that is where much of the trouble begins.

There is no racial stock anywhere which is not represented among the European peoples, and the struggle for racial supremacy has been going on for thousands of years. It takes only a spark to start a conflagration when racial interests clash.

Mixture—Purity
In no European country are the people all of one race, except, perhaps, in the Scandinavian countries bordering the Baltic Sea. Italians vary from the pure blond types of northern Italy to the dark Sicilians and Neapolitans of the South, Asia and the cold countries of the German north have mingled their blood with that of the Lombards, Venetians, Tuscans, Etruscans and other primitive racial strains to produce the modern Italian.

France has a dozen or more racial strains imperfectly mingled, from the blond Normans to the dark Gascons. The people of Spain are even more sharply differentiated, including the mysterious race of Basques on the shore of the Bay of Biscay, and the ancient Catalans of Barcelona. There is a large admixture of African blood, since the Moors occupied Spain for nearly 700 years.

Germany is a quite modern grouping of many small nations, most of them racially different from the others. The Prussians, who are Wends, are quite distinct from the Saxons, the Bavarians, the Westphalians or the Pomeranians, which makes all of Hitler's talk about "racial purity" sound fantastic.

Oriental—Hatreds
Throughout Eastern Europe the peoples have a strong admixture of Oriental blood, as is quite natural where the borders of Europe and Asia touch and border for thousands of years. People have been crossing the border for thousands of years. The Hungarians are Mongols, of the same stock as the Chinese. So are the Finns. There are at least 150 different racial strains in Russia, most of them Asiatic. The Rumanians claim to be descendants of the ancient Romans and speak a language much like Latin. The Czechs of the old kingdom of Bohemia are perhaps the oldest of all purely European races. The Serbs, Croats and Slovenes of Jugoslavia are of similar stock.

It never surprises me when a racial war breaks out in Europe, with so many nations of differing backgrounds, ideals, traditions and customs living next door to each other and all filled with ancient racial hatreds.

Unity—Antagonism
We like to think of America as the great "melting pot" in which the peoples of all the world are being assimilated into a great, unified nation. When I look at the situation of Europe today I have my doubts about the "melting pot" idea. If Europeans, after two or three thousand years of living much more closely together than Americans have ever lived, have not been able to cancel out their racial antagonisms, what reason have we to expect that we can do a better job of it?

It seems more probable to me that we are heading for the same sort of trouble Europe is facing unless we take more effective steps than we have taken so far to prevent the concentration of racial groups in particular localities where they may eventually grow large enough and powerful enough to dominate a state or a whole group of states, and begin to demand "rights" to which they have no claim except that of their racial unity, which is what is happening now in Europe.

America's safety lies in our common language and common laws, and in constant vigilance to see that justice is administered equally to everybody, so that there will never be grounds for any minority group, racial or otherwise, to complain of not getting a square deal.

English—Democracy
The common language of America is that of the nation which has made the most conspicuous success in all history in bringing people of a great number of races into a unified social system and a common law. Celts, Picts, Scots, Romans, Danes, Norsemen, Germans, French, Italians, and many other races mingled to make the modern English people.

It took two thousand years to develop the principle, first established in England, that all political power derives from the people, not from a king. What did more than anything else to establish democracy was the general acceptance of every man's right to live his own life in his own way and to have and to hold whatever property he might acquire by lawful means. That tolerance of the other man's point of view and the recognition of his individual right to do as he pleases so long as he does not interfere with anyone else's equal rights is the true Liberalism which is the only safe foundation on which democracy can rest.

Sunday School Lesson

REV. CHARLES E. DUNN

Spiritual Worship.
Lesson for October 9th: John 4:19-24.
Golden Text: John 4:24.

The second Commandment reads, "You shall not carve any idols for yourselves." This prohibition of idolatry was necessary for the age of Moses when the worshipping of images was very common. To be sure, it served as a severe check on the development of art amongst the Hebrews but, as Dr. H. S. Coffin reminds us, "it is better that life should be artistically impoverished than religiously degraded."

It may fairly be asked however, if this Commandment has not outlived its usefulness. Christians everywhere are happily emancipating themselves from our Puritan legacy of ugliness. We now gladly agree that art is one of God's most treasured handmaidens. We can all join hands with William Blake in saying, "There are three powers in man of conversing with Paradise—Poetry, Painting and Music." We do not therefore object to the Roman Catholic habit of using the Crucifix or to the decoration of our churches with suitable paintings and symbolic objects.

Nevertheless we must guard ourselves carefully against the subtle dangers of the aesthetic emphasis. It is no accident that the Hebrew people, who developed the loftiest, noblest religion in history, were, unlike the Greeks, deficient in the plastic arts. For as Symonds, the brilliant English critic, well says, "Our deepest thoughts about the world and God are incapable of personification by any aesthetic process."

It is a striking fact that while Jesus was intensely interested in the revelation of God in nature and man, he apparently cared little or nothing for art. It would be unwise to argue from this that he was suspicious of art. But it seems clear that he did not feel the need of sensuous stimulation in his practice of God's presence. But of course true religion places no embargo on art. And our Commandment is not a prohibition of art for adornment, but only of the adoration of images. Our Golden Text, with its tidings of God as Spirit expresses well the Commandment's implication.

The old-fashioned man who went after the business has been replaced by the soapbox politician who goes after business.

From the European news, we were wrong in supposing that one could not be at a cross-roads and on a brink at the same time.

THE DOCTOR Tells the Story

by W.E. AUGHINBAUGH MD

Ready Surgery
The sailormen who went down to the sea in tall masted graceful ships and put a girdle around the world, were fortunate indeed to have an ally in the shape of Providence, sitting aloft to keep watch on poor Jack and prevent him from death, danger and disease.

Fifty or more years ago, when sailing vessels were carrying the commerce of the world, their voyages, always dependent upon wind and weather, might either be long or short, and those of the crew who met with accidents or became ill, were treated by the captain. Surgeons were to be found only on men-of-war and in the larger sailing ships carrying passengers.

On cargo carriers the sailors fortunately were not weaklings and were accustomed to hard knocks. It is amazing to read the logs of these wind jammers and ascertain just how the captains or mates administered treatment to those who fell ill or were hurt. It has been my privilege to read the log of the American barkentine Cromwell, on a voyage from New York to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. One of the hands before the mast slipped on the deck during a storm and ruptured himself. The captain was summoned and after looking at the sailor ordered him brought into his cabin. This done he examined the patient and made the proper diagnosis. Let me now quote from the log, showing exactly the treatment used. "I sent for the first mate, a man six feet four inches high, and hailing from Portland, Maine. We both tried to push the swelling into the man's abdomen but could not do so. The mate then grabbed the man by his ankles and draped him head down on his back as a sack of meal, and shook him like a terrier does a rat. The man yells 'I'm all right now' and he is put down on deck and the swelling is gone. I then took two skeins of woolen yarn and tied them together making a big knot in the center. This knot I placed over the place where the swelling was and wrapped the rest of the yarn very tight about the man's body. It acted as a stopper and the next day the man went to work as usual, but he kept that bandage on until we returned to New York." Is it any wonder that sailors in those days needed a special Providence to guard them?

by GARDNER BOTSFORD

A Vanishing American
I noticed in the papers the other day that the bartender's union and the W.C.T.U. had unfortunately chosen the same week and the same San Francisco hotel for their respective national conventions. An intolerable situation almost developed, but the bartenders proved gentlemen to a man and gracefully postponed their engagement.

I consider this move of the barkeepers very generous. Certainly if both the unions had held their fisheries at the same time there would inevitably be a considerable amount of blight casting and pall throwing going on, if not worse.

And great as is my respect for the W.C.T.U., I still think there is nobody who can take the place of the bartender, a patient soul and one of infinite variety. He listens to more palaver a day than any other living being. He listens to bad jokes by the score and is master of the hollow laugh. He knows all about baseball, politics, and the habits of the bull weevil.

This generous gesture of the bartenders in San Francisco is just one more example of the gradual decline of the profession, a decline attributable without question to the influx of women into the drinking business.

In the first place they don't know what to do with their feet, being totally incapable of negotiating that brass rail which is such a necessary adjunct to every potato depot. Draping the pedal extremity over the footrail is a prerogative of man's alone, and has reached its present form of polished technique from generations of careful stepping over door sills when in a jingled condition. A woman leaning on a bar looks like a spavined camel who, in a preoccupied moment, has stepped into the great Tar Pit of Utah. No profession can operate under conditions like this. Furthermore women in bars eat all the peanuts and order drinks like Pink Ladies and sloop Ella Booles. Instead of engaging in standard conversation about the technicalities of the infield fly or the wonders of the human foot, they gibber among themselves of a girde sale at the department store and how to train their husbands. For that matter, a woman in a bar solemnly believes that every man in the place has evil designs on her and is contemplating a daring abduction on a milk-white horse. If they don't believe it, they hope it.

When I consider all these things, I feel very badly about the future of the barkeep. I am overcome by nostalgia, and I think I'll go out for a small beer to weep into. There are also a couple of things about the Japanese beetle I want to talk over with somebody.

Within an hour ... someone will be burned to death!

America's annual sacrifice to fire is almost three hundred million dollars' worth of property... and 10,000 human beings! Loss of life averages 27 people per day... more than one an hour.

Hence, Fire Prevention Week, which this year is October 9-15.

Fire Prevention Week October 9-15

Fire Prevention Week is here. What are you going to do about it?

If you are short-sighted, you will do nothing. If you have any interest in protecting your property and your family's lives, you will use Fire Prevention Week as an occasion for taking the simple, essential measures that usually suffice to make homes and places of business safe from the most common and dangerous fire hazards.

Fire Prevention Week is not designed to sell anything. It is designed to serve—to conserve—to protect. During the Week insurance companies, civic bodies, fire experts and public officials will use the radio, newspapers, displays and printed literature in an effort to make you think and to make you act.

In the average home grave hazards exist of which the owner knows nothing. Ignorance, as well as carelessness, is a prolific source of destructive fire.

The simplest and most easily corrected causes are responsible for the great bulk of fires in dwellings. A slight fault in a heating plant may devastate a home. Accumulation of papers, clothes, furniture and other odds and ends require only a spark to burst into flame. Improperly stored fluids such as gasoline, benzine and kerosene are a constant menace. Amateur repairs of electric appliances and light cords cause millions of dollars' loss annually. Paint or oil-soaked rags are often the cause of spontaneous combustion. An improperly protected hot electric iron, or cigarette ashes invite fires.

It costs you nothing to eliminate these hazards, and takes little time. That small effort may save you thousands of dollars—and infinitely more important, save a life. Fire Prevention Week was inaugurated to serve you. Make the most of it.

"Regrets" crowd the sidelines at every fire!

Fly-by-night agents with handsomely decorated policies cause many regrets. The old-line reliable insurance companies have weathered the storms of time because they always give the most coverage and protection at the lowest possible cost. Let us examine your policies and advise you without cost or obligation.

SECOND guesses never count. It's so easy for all of us to know the importance of full insurance protection after fire damage has been done. The sensible householder is forehanded; he takes all possible precaution to avoid fire hazards. And then he makes doubly sure of his protection with adequate fire insurance.

When? last winter and you couldn't find another—and so established the current by putting a penny behind the old fuse? Thousands of fires, many of which have destroyed lives, have been caused by this highly dangerous practice.

Remember when the cord of your reading lamp wore through and you repaired it yourself, with the aid of a kitchen knife, some automobile tape and considerable to modern construction, firefighting efficiency and care in prevention, it is not likely that you will witness any such great catastrophe as the Chicago fire of Oct. 9 to 11, 1871, at a loss of $121,000,000.

That great fire which inspired our present Fire Week, the date to include October 9, each year. Industrial loss each year still reaches stupendous figures. To safeguard your savings and investments you should bank with the profanity? The list of fires resulting from amateur electrical repairs would fill a big book.

Remember that cold morning when the fire was balky and, in a fit of anger, you turned to kerosene to get it going? That practice has burned down thousands of homes—and provided many a man with an abrupt passage to the hereafter.

Remember when you noticed that your furnace doors were no longer tight, that the flues looked to be in a sad state of repair, that the chimney shot sparks—and you decided to have those matters attended to another day? Sometimes the other day never comes.

Remember when you awakened and found the room full of smoke from the smoldering cigar butt that had fallen onto the bed or carpet? The insurance records are full of cases where the smoker in question never did wake up again in this world.

The list of careless actions that may cause fire could be prolonged indefinitely. You may take a chance a thousand times and get away with it—and on the thousand and first time it may get away with you. The man who lights his cigarette with a twenty-dollar bill is not as wasteful or reckless as the man who takes a chance on fire.

"DON'TS"

1. Don't permit rubbish or waste paper to accumulate; burn it, but not near any building.
2. Don't keep matches where young children can get at them.
3. Don't be careless with cigarette or cigar stubs — or matches.
4. Don't leave oily rags or mops in corners where they may start a fire. Keep them in closed metal containers, or wash and hang out to dry.
5. Don't use worn electric cord, or leave electrical appliances connected when finished using them.
6. Don't store gasoline in your house or use it there for cleaning.
7. Don't use kerosene to start fire.
8. Don't use leaky gas hose or connections.
9. Don't fail to place sheet metal under stoves and on woodwork nearby.
10. Don't neglect cleaning and repairing flues and chimneys.
11. Don't put ashes into wooden boxes or cartons. Keep in metal can.
12. Don't fail to protect open lights and to screen open fire-places.
13. Don't thaw frozen pipes with open flame; use only rags wet with hot water.
14. Don't look in clothes closets with lighted matches.

After the bananas are picked the West Indian natives cut the plant down and from its fibrous bark make mats and rope.

From 1925 to 1931 the railroads spent on an average of $1,300,000,000 a year for materials and supplies.

Diplomats at the Munich conference were reported to be speaking in three tongues. Including what the American Indian called the double tongue.

14 Felony Charges Voted By Grand Jury Wednesday

Jury No-Bills Roger King In Connection With Fatal Shooting

Roger King of Wichita Falls was no-billed Wednesday by the Wichita county grand jury in connection with the fatal shooting of Alva Jones in front of the Tip Top night club two weeks ago after an alleged altercation between the two men.

Fourteen felony indictments were voted against 12 defendants, however, according to the report, submitted to Judge Ernest M. Robertson in the 89th district court shortly before noon. Foreman Guy Willis of Burk Burnett, in a brief statement to the court, expressed appreciation of the "good work done by members of the grand jury."

In connection with the complaint filed against King after the shooting of Jones, King told officers at that time that he fired after Jones had struck him, cursed him, and shoved a pistol against King's side.

Raymond Chambers, arrested Monday evening at Electra, was indicted for burglary of a private residence at night. Other indictments are: Betty Barrett, possession of heroin; Raymond Chambers, burglary of a private residence at night; H. B. Jenkins, driving while intoxicated; Fred Holmes, two cases of chicken theft; R. D. Hunt, driving while intoxicated; Bill Weems, theft over $50; J. R. Morton, theft over $50; D. L.
