Gins Have Total 2,224 Bales For Season So Far

According to reports from the two local gins, a total of 2,224 bales of cotton have been ginned here since the season opened.

This total is quite a bit under last year's total but is already more than was predicted for this area at the beginning of the season.

Jack Nichols Gets A 99 Year Term

Jack Nichols, negro, was given 99 years in prison for the murder of Fannie Lee Ayers, 19, negro, outside a cafe in the outskirts of Burkburnett Aug. 7, in a verdict returned by a jury before Judge Irvin J. Vogel in 78th district court in Wichita Falls Wednesday morning.

It was the second 99-year term secured by District Attorney Howard Martin and his staff in less than two weeks. Clarence Smith, negro, was given a similar penalty Oct. 22 for the murder of Ernest (Slim) Holmes, Wichita Falls mechanic.

The case was given to the jury about 6 o'clock Tuesday evening. Defense attorneys brought the trial to an abrupt climax when they waived arguments after L. V. Abernathy, assistant district attorney, had opened for the prosecution.

Few defense witnesses were presented by W. Taz Locke and Guy McNeeley, attorneys for Nichols, who sought, largely by cross examination, to show that the negro girl was accidentally struck while the defendant fired at her father. They also tried to prove that the elder Ayers had threatened Nichols.

Nichols, an ex-convict who had served three penitentiary sentences, disarmed Deputy Sheriff Roy Blanscet when that officer attempted to search the negro shortly before the shooting. It was while Blanscet had gone for help that Nichols, using two pistols, opened fire on the Ayers.

Lynn Kincaid Is Elected New Burk City Manager

Assumed New Duties At City Hall Nov. 1st

Lynn Kincaid, resident of Burkburnett for 22 years, was elected city manager at a special meeting of the city council Friday morning at 11:30 o'clock. Kincaid, who assumed his new duties Nov. 1st, succeeds Ross P. Reagan, who recently resigned to accept appointment as manager at Gainesville, Texas.

After two weeks of frequent meetings during which the council sifted the applications of about 30 persons, the announcement of the selection was made by mayor Alvin Hill Friday morning.

Kincaid came to Burkburnett in 1916 to enter business in the Burkburnett Dry Goods store with a brother. Later he was associated with the First National Bank as vice-president for several years. Until his appointment Friday he was assistant manager of the Famous store here.

He is a native of Missouri and graduated from the Southwest State Teachers college at Weatherford, Okla.

Reagan had been city manager of Burkburnett for nine years at the time of his resignation. He assumed his duties as manager in Gainesville November 1st.

Members of the council in the session Friday morning included Mayor Hill, Henry Grace, mayor pro-tem, Frank Kelley, Joe Majors and Wiley Browning. They announced the vote on the motion was unanimous.

Cashion Couple Is Injured In Crash

Mrs. D. S. Smith, resident of the Cashion community, suffered lacerations over one eye, and her husband received a deep gash on the nose and lacerations on one hand when the automobile in which they were riding crashed into a telephone pole at the south edge of Burkburnett shortly after 11 o'clock Saturday morning. The car did not turn over.

An X-ray examination was made at Wichita Falls to determine the extent of Mrs. Smith's injuries. Her husband received emergency treatment.

The couple was taken to the hospital in an ambulance which happened along shortly after the accident.

According to Smith, he and his wife were returning home from a business trip to Burkburnett. Smith said he was driving along and the two right wheels left the pavement. The accident occurred when he jerked quickly to the right just as he drove back on the pavement to avoid hitting another automobile.

The Smiths reside on the A. Dodson farm five miles southeast of Burkburnett.

Jim Pogue Wins Flag Tournament

The Flag Tournament held Sunday on the Burk Municipal Golf Course was highly successful and well attended. Finishing in first place was Jim (Two Iron) Pogue who laid his final shot well up the middle of the fairway of the 20th hole. Crowding him closely for second money, Bob (Steamshovel) Browning who finished in the middle of Gilbert Creek after much blasting and excavating. Third place was barely won by T. H. Holman who finished near the cup on the nineteenth hole. Crowding third place by inches were the flags of such estimable golfers as Cliff Cannon, Roy Holt, Truman Garland, Leo Foster and B. Danforth. Most of the other entries finished on or near the eighteenth green showing that all the competitors were shooting their averages.

Attention of all club members is called to plans being made for a final jamboree to be held in the near future in the way of a "dog eat dog" battle between two teams composed of the members of the Club. This will be a "choosing up" affair so that the competing teams will be equally matched. It will be match play.

Rev. Cowling Is Transferred To Dallas Church

Will Be Succeeded By Rev. C. W. Thomas

Rev. H. M. Cowling, pastor of the First Methodist church of Burkburnett since November, 1936, was transferred by conference officials to Centenary on Second Avenue in Dallas, a church of 625 members.

Rev. Cowling has been one of the most popular pastors the church has ever had. He and his congregation recently presented one of the most satisfactory financial reports to their bishop ever made from this district. All obligations against the church building were cleared this year and the church was formally dedicated on September 25th.

Rev. Cowling will be replaced by Rev. C. W. Thomas, who comes to Burkburnett from Centenary in Dallas, where he has just finished a very successful year. Every department of his church showed progress over the past year. His congregation was very reluctant to have him leave.

Burkburnett is glad to extend a welcome to Rev. Thomas and his family. The members of his church have pledged themselves to do everything they can to make them just as happy in their new pastorate as they were at Centenary.

Rev. and Mrs. Thomas have three children. Their daughter is a senior at S. M. U. Their two sons are in high school and have been enrolled in Forrest High in Dallas.

Rev. Thomas has occupied pulpits at Archer City, Nocona, Grant Street Church in Wichita Falls, Farmersville and in Dallas.

Local Chevrolet Agency Attends Party In Denton

Employees of the Barrow-Grace Chevrolet Company were guests of their sister agency in Denton last Saturday night, at which time the two firms celebrated the 12th anniversary of the organization of Barrow-Grace.

It has long been the policy of these two agencies to hold a contest on car sales from one anniversary to the next; the agency selling the most cars to be entertained by the losers.

Those who went to the banquet in Denton from Burkburnett are as follows: Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Grace and Doris Mae; Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Grace, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Parker and children, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. RAIN BREAKS LONG DROUGHT

Rain! Rain! Rain!
It can rain in Burkburnett. Just as everybody had about come to the conclusion that it could not rain in Burkburnett and Cotton county, Okla., a heavy rain which followed a severe dust storm swept into Burkburnett from the northwest about midnight Wednesday.

This is the first real precipitation since July 26th.

During the month of October the total rain for Burkburnett was but .14 of an inch, the lightest total for the month in many years.

Dick Ayers, district executive, was present at the meeting and made a short address. He stated that the idea of scouting was to train boys to live and do right. He stated that there were different kinds of training needed for different boys. The city boy needed outdoor entertainment and exercises, while the farm boy needed healthful, restful relaxation. The aims and purpose of scouting is to build character and train for citizenship.

Turkey Market Open Here Same As Last Year

Thanksgiving is three weeks away but Burkburnett poultry dealers are busy preparing for the seasonal market which opens today.

Leo Dudley of the Dudley Feed & Produce has purchased 3549 pounds of turkeys, paying the farmers $529, making the price per pound 14c.

Mr. Carver of the Carver Hatchery stated that he would start hauling turkeys Friday and that he expected to buy several hundred by the end of the week. L. D. Holman also has a truck out gathering up the birds and he stated that he expected a bumper crop. The three local buyers buy on the yard. They are all of the opinion that the quality is good, but that the crop is only about 50 per cent ready due to the long dry spell.

Rev. O'Brien Talks To Rotary Club

Volney Hill had charge of the program at the regular weekly Rotary luncheon Tuesday at noon.

He introduced Rev. Miles B. Hays, pastor of the Baptist church, who introduced Rev. P. D. O'Brien, who was the principal speaker. Rev. O'Brien is pastor of the Stamford Baptist church and is conducting a revival at the Baptist church here this week.

Rev. O'Brien's address was full of wit and humor. His subject being "The Fine Art of Enduring An After Dinner Speech."

Miss Connie Evert, who has been the club sweetheart for the past year, resigned last Tuesday. Miss Blanche Butler will succeed her as club sweetheart.

Show Will Open At One O'Clock Free to Everyone

Plans were complete Thursday and preparations were being made for the exhibition of flowers in Burkburnett's third annual Flower Show, being sponsored by the two garden clubs here.

All flowers will be judged in the morning and the exhibit will be open to the public at one o'clock Friday afternoon. Everyone is invited to attend. No admission will be charged.

This has been an unusually bad season for flowers but sponsors believe, even in the face of damage from drouth, high winds and pests, that the show will equal that of last year, at which time enthusiastic flower lovers were impressed with the almost unbelievable display.

Entries were already arriving Thursday afternoon and more tables had been set up in anticipation of Friday's entries.

Chrysanthemums and roses will be featured in the Show with perennials and flower arrangements taking important roles.

Entries may be secured after the show is closed and special precaution will be taken to protect all entries during exhibition.

Fairview Plays Harold Six-Men Thursday Night

The Fairview Bears will leave home Thursday night and invade the Hornets' nest at Harrold.

The Hornets haven't been defeated out of five starts and boast of the fastest backfield of the conference. The Bears will go to Harrold with the expectation of keeping their undefeated and untied record clean.

Both teams are evenly matched and should be one of the best Six Man football games of the state, as these two teams are rated the best six man teams in Texas. Fairview has defeated two Oklahoma teams by big margins which seems to place them as favorites in the game with Harrold.

Bears Defeat Geraldine 45-12
Tommy West and Glenn Adair led the Fairview Bears to a victory over a fighting group of lads from Geraldine.

The Bears were in a slump and couldn't get started until the underdogs gave them a good scare by Little Bobby Williams and Big Thomas Ray who kept the Bear defense on their toes throughout the game.

Billy Bush, right end for the Bears, did good work in tearing up the Geraldine plays; and J.

THE UNSAFE WORLD

In a few days the nation will be celebrating Armistice Day. November 11th will be the twentieth anniversary of the ending of the war which was to end all wars, and make the world safe for democracy.

The ablest political minds of the time drafted a treaty of peace, which, they believed, would effectively safeguard the nations of the world against future aggression. To make assurance doubly sure, they set up an institution for collective security, the League of Nations, which was to "police" the world and by virtue of the moral pressure which its combined membership would exert, shame aggressive nations out of unjustifiable war.

And to further put an end to the causes of war, they divided Europe up into a lot of little nations having like racial and language ties, and took away the colonies of Germany.

Many people thought at the time that the scheme for permanent peace would not work. The United States declined to be a party to it. Time has proved that the efforts of the statesmen who met at Versailles were impractical. The League has been unable to preserve the peace of the world.

Few competent observers believe that the recent meeting between Germany, Italy, France and England has had any more effect on the outlook for permanent peace than to give the democracies, England and France, a breathing spell in which to bring their armaments up to the point where they can hold their own against the dictator powers.

Most students of the situation believe that the aggressor nations have their eyes on America as well as on the democracies of Europe. A realistic view of the outlook leads to the conclusion that our own safety lies in equipping ourselves to meet force with force, if need be.

The time to enlarge our navy, strengthen our coast defenses, increase our fighting air force and equip our army is now, before the fighting starts.

DER FUEHRER ON PIKES PEAK

An event of historical importance took place on top of Pikes Peak a few days ago. Governor Allred thrust a Texas flag firmly in the snow, while Governor Ammons looked on, and claimed the mountain for the State of Texas; and the Colorado people living nearby have promised to erect a gold plaque on the peak to perpetuate Texas ownership. The ceremony consummated a wager made by the Governors at a football game between Rice and Colorado in Dallas last New Year's Day. Governor Allred bet on Rice then, which was a better time to do so than now, and the stakes were the Big Bend Park against Pikes Peak.

Well, Governor, that was a neat coup, acquiring that territory without an ultimatum or a four-power conference, and without a trick moustache, either. You just backed the right horse—begging your pardon, of course. And while we're on the subject, when TCU gets ready for post-season opposition you might look into the Carlsbad Caverns and Niagra Falls situations. Or entice Pittsburgh down here—Texas could use a good steel industry.

Anyway, Governor, you'd better wangle a game with some Republican State. Those fellows haven't guessed right for years.—Dale Miller, in The Texas Weekly.

AN ANCIENT FESTIVAL

The celebration of Hallowe'en or All Hallows Eve as a festive occasion given over to particular forms of sports, mischief and merriment, goes back a long way in history. As the eve of All Saints Day or Hallowmas, which falls on November 1 in the Christian calendar, the night of October 31 was believed by the inhabitants of ancient Britain to be the one night of all the year when ghosts and witches were most likely to wander abroad.

In that ancient superstition lies the root of the prankish practice, still continued by boys throughout the English-speaking world, of lifting gates from their hinges, upsetting outhouses and indulging in other forms of mischief which might be attributed to supernatural forces.

The lighting of bonfires on Hallowe'en traces back to the practice of the Druid religion of setting fires on November 1, in honor of the Sun God.

Later there were grafted on to the Druidic ceremonies some of the characteristics of the Roman festival held in honor of Pomona, the goddess of fruits. These included roasting nuts and apples and the still popular sport of "ducking" for apples floating in a tub of water.

On Hallowe'en, also, the ancient belief was that a maiden who took a mirror in one hand and a candle in the other and walked down the cellar stairs backward, would see in the mirror the reflection of he face of her future husband.

Probably the jack-o-lantern carved from a pumpkin and set up on a dark lane to frighten passersby comes also from the old belief that ghosts and witches walk abroad on Hallowe'en.

Rapture Beyond

by KATHARINE NEWLIN BURT

Sixth Installment Synopsis

Jocelyn Harlowe, raised in a French convent, at the age of 18 joins her mother, Marcella, in New York. Worried about her safety, because she is unfamiliar with the modern world and has developed into a beautiful woman, her mother's first wish is to get her safely married. Attending her first ball, Jocelyn meets Felix Kent, rich, handsome and nineteen years older than herself. Encouraged by her mother, she and Felix quickly become engaged. Alone in her apartment one night, a cripple, Nick Sandal, enters by the fire-escape, confides in her that he is her father and that her real name is Lynda Sandal. Uncertain about whether she wants to get married so quickly, Jocelyn goes to talk things over with her mysterious father. As Lynda Sandal goes to his house, climbs three flights of stairs and enters a room where he is sitting with several men in the midst of a card game. Later, when both Felix and her mother are away, Jocelyn returns to have a second visit with her father. There she meets Jock Ayleward, a gambler, from whom she seeks information about her father's life. He takes her to a restaurant to talk to her about him, but instead they spend their time talking about each other and dancing together.

She shuddered. "Yes."

"All right." But he looked so queer and hard and dangerous that she found it difficult to let herself be held by him. And he went whiter as they danced.

"Are you feeling ill, Mr. Ayleward?"

"No. Sick of an old passion!"

"What does that mean?"

"Nothing. Don't look at that cheap skate there, Miss Lynda. He thinks you're flirting with him."

Scared, she dropped her eyes. The "cheap skate" was crowding them. Twice Jock's stiffened arm kept him from brushing Lynda. Each time he had tried to peer close into her face. Toni too had become aware of her. There was in fact nothing at all like her in the room. His own full-blown partner in his grip, he circled them with a hawklike persistence, with a hawklike stare.

Lynda sat down on Nick's old sofa in the sitting-room and looked up at her companion with the eyes of a deserted dog.

"Look here, Miss Sandal, do you always take life so hard? Even if you've missed seeing him this trip you know it isn't the Last Day."

Lynda smiled faintly. "It is almost my last day," she allowed herself to tell him.

"Leaving town?"

"Yes. And it will never again be easy. I'm afraid, to see my father."

"That's rotten. He'll take losing you very hard."

"Do you think he will care? Does he like me? Really? Enough to matter?"

"I'm getting jealous of you, that's all. He's more my father than he is yours when it comes to practice. He talks about you so that I'm sick of the sound of your name."

"You're a funny boy!"

"Since when?"

"I mean, you are not very old, are you?"

"I am nearer thirty than twenty. And you are," he was teasing her, "fifteen?"

"Gracious! Eighteen."

"I apologize. I spend my time begging your pardon, don't I?"

"That is not my fault, I think."

"I am going to get Nick's clothes and mend them," she announced. "There is something that I can do for him. I brought some buttons and my sewing kit. His socks were terrible!"

She came back presently with a dangling armful of masculine oddments and settled herself in Nick's cushioned corner under his light. Jock now at the door stood fascinated, watching her.

"When do you suppose Nick will be back?" she asked.

"His message on the desk says eleven o'clock. What time is it now?"

Lynda looked at her wrist watch. "Nine-thirty."

"Surely you are not going to sit there in that corner and sew until eleven o'clock?"

"Well now, dear, what shall I tell? I knew her only for a short time when she was a girl in her early teens. Her parents died when she was a baby. Marcella was very beautiful, dear. Her uncle adored her."

"Did she live with her uncle here in New York City?"

"Yes, Jocelyn. Yes, she did."

"What sort of a man was my Great-uncle Josiah?"

"Josiah was most indulgent to your mother, dear. Some of us—there were more Harlowes living in those days—thought that he was altogether too indulgent. But of course when your poor mother married—"

"He did not like my father?"

"No. No. He did not. Nicholas Sandal—was, well, in a sense he was an outsider. He came from California, I believe. Your father, my dear, was hardly a stable sort of man. Very brilliant and attractive, I believe, and I remember hearing that he worshipped Marcella. Cousin Josiah did not forgive her for the marriage. The young couple went to the coast at once. Josiah did not see them again until after the divorce. Then he took Marcella back."

"Cousin Sara, tell me, please. Why were they divorced?"

"Incompatibility of temperament, or non-support, something of that kind. I know nothing of their married life at all. I was living abroad at the time. I only know that when I next saw your mother she was living here. Josiah was dead. She was his heiress. And she had greatly changed."

With an effort of her will Jocelyn went again that night to Sandal's lodgings. Ayleward overtook her climbing the stairs.

"Playing in hard luck again, aren't you, Miss Sandal? I have got to go on up. Have some important news for your father. But don't worry—I won't stay long."

"I am not inclined to worry."

She went on then and knocked at Sandal's door.

There was no response. Jock murmured an apology, fitted a key and opened.

"Hi there, Old Nick!" he shouted. Then to Lynda in his usual low rather subdued voice. "He's gone out."

Lynda sat down on Nick's old sofa in the sitting-room and looked up at her companion with the eyes of a deserted dog.

"Look here, Miss Sandal, do you always take life so hard? Even if you've missed seeing him this trip you know it isn't the Last Day."

Lynda smiled faintly. "It is almost my last day," she allowed herself to tell him.

"Leaving town?"

"Yes. And it will never again be easy. I'm afraid, to see my father."

"That's rotten. He'll take losing you very hard."

"Do you think he will care? Does he like me? Really? Enough to matter?"

"I'm getting jealous of you, that's all. He's more my father than he is yours when it comes to practice. He talks about you so that I'm sick of the sound of your name."

"You're a funny boy!"

"Since when?"

"His message on the desk says eleven o'clock. What time is it now?"

Lynda looked at her wrist watch. "Nine-thirty."

"Surely you are not going to sit there in that corner and sew until eleven o'clock?"

"Only one hour and a half! Why not?"

me to such a place at that one."

"I didn't know Toni was going to be there and I didn't know you were one of those convent dames. In fact I rather thought you were out for a time. I'm sorry."

Lynda sat up, opening her eyes. "I will go back with you to that place tonight," she said, reaching for her tam.

"No. It's too early. And you would miss Nick. But I like your grit. You've still got me guessing in lots of ways. You belong, for all your Apache get-up, you belong to a world I've come close to forgetting. Although," his face looked bewildered. "although it hasn't been so long."

"You are a gentleman. I saw that at once."

"What is a gentleman?" he demanded bitterly.

"I have known very few. Felix Kent of course."

Jock sprang away from her with a movement so abrupt and startling that Lynda made an exclamation of alarm.

"What's wrong? Did something hurt you?"

"No. I got a sort of a jolt. I—I thought I heard some one—someone outside call my name."

He returned, tranquil now and smiling. "I beg your pardon. You were giving me the name of a gentleman—"

"No one you have ever known of course, Felix Kent. In one way I suppose you might call him a self-made man. He is the same to every one. And he is not afraid."

"He might be, though. He might be."

"No. He couldn't be. He has a courage cold and hard like a stone."

"The kind you sharpen knives on," muttered Jock. "I'll be back presently. Or would you rather just see Nick alone?"

Lynda wondered at the change that had come over him.

"I'd rather you'd stay with me now and go when Nick gets back. Surely you have no business on hand at this hour." And she added with a quaint air of interest. "Has business been good lately?"

"I am a professional gambler, Miss Sandal," Ayleward announced abruptly. "Does that put me into your criminal class?"

"I don't know," she admitted. "Is it a crime to gamble?"

"Let Nick advise you as to the social and moral status of a gambler."

"Is he one, Mr. Ayleward?"

"No. He's not got the hands for it." Jock was in the doorway. His face suddenly turned gamine and mischievous. "Those are my socks you've been mending," he said and went out with abruptness.

Lynda immediately threw all the socks down on the floor but after a moment she picked them up, neatly folded the pairs she had already mended and finished mending the one she had just begun.

She gathered up her work and took it back into the bedroom. She would be rid of Ayleward's socks at least. She did not like to think that she had sat there meekly moving her needle in his service like some docile wife.

In the mirror she saw the door of the sitting-room had been opened and that a man who was not Nick Sandal stood there quietly in the opening.

She knew instantly that he was ignorant of her presence in the inner room.

He looked like a big china doll in ill-cut flashy evening clothes, with a small round head, pink cheeks and curly yellow hair. His moustache was a scrap of fuzz above his small pink mouth. He was not, however, an amiable or honest-looking doll. From one end of him to the other, the flat splay patent-leather feet, he looked mean, furtive, evil. He was there only too apparently because he thought the place was empty. He moved without any sound to the battered desk and squatted in front of its locked drawer.

Lynda remembered the bundles of money that she had seen stored there. They must of course have been removed but there might be other valuables. She turned from the mirror and came quickly out into the room.

"Who is it?" she asked politely.

"Pardon me," said he in a voice that was glabrous and unaccented. "I did not know any one was in. I'm looking for Nick Sandal. Did he leave a message for me? For Morton Quayle?"

"No, Mr. Quayle, he did not. I must have missed the sound of your knock."

Rabbit Creek

October 31, 1938
It's still dry and for this time of the year one-fourth of the wheat has already been harvested. The wheat that's come up; the wheat that's in the ground. Even if it does rain now it will be some time before the wheat has rot-have to haul water for the house use and for their cattle. Quite a few have started to haul water from Big Rabbit Creek.

J. R. Wood who is farming the Tom Lee farm for the past year or so is finishing gathering his big corn crop.

This item for the Star is written by Hawkeye just as he saw it:

Regarding that awful football game which was supposed to be played at Burk Burnett Friday night: Hawkeye was invited by several of the leading Burk Burnett business men in Our Friendly Little City to attend that game. They sent a car for Hawkeye, also his good friends brought Hawkeye back home after the game. Well, anyhow, after the great defeat that the Bulldogs of Our Friendly Little City got from the Crowell football team, 71 points to 0, Hawkeye expected nothing else but a bad beat for the simple reason that as soon as they came out in the field, Hawkeye said to a friend of his, "Say, what's the matter with them fellows? They walk and run like they have lumbago or rheumatism in their bones." The way they were moving around on the field before the game started—the way Hawkeye saw the game—was just like this: first, their paws just wasn't big enough to hold the ball when they did catch it, and that was far between times, by the way, and second, the way they moved around they reminded Hawkeye of the Slow Train Through Arkansas. Hawkeye rode on this slow train one time; it just took that train one full day and night to take its passengers 8 miles distance. The rotten game played, or tried to play Friday night against the Crowells, it would take the same time to even win one point as it took the Slow Train in Arkansas to make those eight miles. They were skunked so bad that Hawkeye even smelled them after he got out of his friend's car 9 miles away at his home.

There were two old ladies setting next to Hawkeye who had come all the way from Dallas to see this big football game, and before the game hardly started, one of the ladies says to her friend, "Rachael, I am going to take a little nap and just as soon as the Bulldogs make a point, just wake me up." So, when Hawkeye was leaving his seat to go home, he looked around to the ladies and Rachael was shaking Sallie to get her awake so she could go home. The only thing that kept the 3,200 people who attended this game to stay and see it over, were the two pep teams: one on each side. They were well trained and did their part just fine.

You know, folks, the bulldog is supposed to be one of the most vicious animals we have. Everybody thought that those Bulldogs would soon get a hold of them Crowells and when they did they would never turn loose, but the trouble was the Bulldogs never could get up steam enough to even get started with the ball to make a touchdown.

Folks, the game was so rotten that it just stunk. At least, that is the way Hawkeye sees it. It left a dark circle around Our Friendly Little City for a long time to come in the football line.

Yours very truly,
"Hawkeye" Owens.

Using Up The Feed Crop

By T. C. RICHARDSON, Secretary
Breeder-Feeder Association

Someone has described a well-managed industry as a sort of perpetual motion, in which the processes of production are continuous throughout the year. The factory which runs only a few months and stops its machinery, closes its doors, and lays off its labor for weeks or months at a time has to make higher profits for its operating time or go out of business. The farm which loafers between crop seasons is in the same boat of inefficiency.

With the exception of the subtropical portions of the Southwest, where marketable crops may be harvested the year round, there is only one way of providing profitable use for the available farm labor and keeping the farm factory running twelve months in the year, and that is by keeping livestock and poultry in connection with crop production. Livestock and poultry grow while the farmer sleeps, and use much that would be lost without them, while crops await the season. The only perpetual motion farm therefore is a balanced farm, where plants and animals work together in their natural relation, each supporting the other.

With a surplus of feed on hand above normal needs, a good many will have to decide the best use to make of it. There are plenty of pitfalls for anyone who undertakes a new enterprise without previous experience, and this is particularly true in "going into" the livestock or poultry business on a commercial scale right out of a cotton patch.

Notice that we said "going into," not "growing into" the business, for there is a vast difference. We Americans like to do things in a big way, and the temptation is great to start with a big herd of dairy cows, a large flock of sheep, a carload of beef cattle or hogs. Those who go in with a bang too often go out the same way, and then say the business is a failure.

would have cost to hold it by supplementing maintenance ration sufficiently to keep the animals gaining slightly.

If there is a great amount of grain to be sold the preference should go to fattening for slaughter, or feeding for heavy milk production or eggs. On the average farm, however, under average conditions, stock cattle or sheep are safer for the beginner than buying feeders and finishing them for the killing market. Bred ewes and heifers, fed and cared for through one winter, begin to pay off within less time and less technical knowledge of feeding than slaughter animals.

No conceivable farm legislation and no predictable set of circumstances promises to make cash crop farming profitable again. Wise farmers are acting accordingly, to set up some combination of crop and livestock suitable to their particular circumstances, which will utilize their land and labor to a better advantage and greater profit.

"Perpetual motion" on the farm is more easily attainable than in the factory for life goes on without artificial power. The natural cycle of plant and animal life is the answer—"God's plan," as an East Texas negro farmer calls it.

The Fords Tell Their Plans for 1939

Henry and Edsel Ford, on the occasion of the 35th anniversary of the founding of the Ford Motor Company, June 16, 1938

WE KNOW anything better we could do for the country than make good motor cars, we do it.

Every one doing his best in the job he is most useful, this country is going to regain its momentum. We have tried to do our best in every business we have ever had.

Our business was suddenly halted in its recovery more than a year ago, we determined that we will keep going anyway, if not at full-volume car production, then at getting ready for motor car values that would help future production.

PLANNING FOR THE FUTURE

We began to build 34 million dollars' worth of plants and equipment. We felt that if we could employ all our men building motor cars, we could employ as many as we could building production facilities.

We were told, of course, that this was no time for expansion, that a wiser business policy would be to "hold everything"—which means, stop everything. But no one ever got anywhere by stopping.

But, we are not defeatists. We do not believe this country has seen its best days. We believe this is yet in the infancy of its growth. We believe that every atom of faith invested in our country and our People will be amply justified by the future. We believe America is just beginning, and yet have our People seen real Prosperity. We have seen adequate Production. We shall see it! That is the assurance in our new built.

Prosperity is not just coming back. It will have to be brought back. That is now becoming well understood in this country; for that reason 1939 is a co-operative year. Manufacturers, sellers and buyers will co-operate to bring back the business that is waiting to be brought back.

Our construction program is almost completed. Increased activity and payrolls in a number of industries. It has given us better facilities for building better cars and trucks, and fully our new tractor which is being perfected.

THIS MEANS MORE VALUE

Our present program has provided a new tire which will turn out a part of our tire requirements—a new tool and die plant that will help reduce the cost of dies... and a steel-press plant to enable us to make more of our own automobiles. These are in addition to the plants we have had for producing glass, iron, steel, and many other things.

We don't supply all our own needs, of course, but we expect to. The Ford engine is one thing that no one's hand touches but ours. Of nearly everything else we use we build some quantity ourselves, to find, if possible, better and more economical ways of doing it. The experience and knowledge we gain are freely shared with our suppliers, and with other industries.

We take no profit on anything we make for ourselves and sell to ourselves. Every operation, from the Ford ships which first bring iron ore to the Rouge, is figured at accurate cost. The only profit is on the finished result—the car or truck as it comes off the line. Some years, there is no profit for us. But we see to it that our customers always profit. A basic article of our business creed is that no sale is economically constructive unless it profits the buyer as much as or more than the seller.

Our new plants have helped us build more value into all our cars for 1939. That means more profit on the purchase to the purchaser.

We have not cut quality to reduce costs. We simply will not build anything inferior.

NEW TESTING EQUIPMENT

While we were putting up new plants to produce cars, we constructed new equipment to test them. The first weather tunnel of its kind ever built for automobile research went into operation at our laboratories this year.

It makes any kind of weather to order. The weather it delivers every day would take months to find in Nature. Our cars are weather-tested to give you good service in any climate anywhere.

In other tests, every part of the car is punished unmercifully. Then our engineers tear it down to see if they can find abnormal wear or any sign of weakness.

The money we spend on tests saves you money on repairs. And your family car is safer and more dependable when we put it in your hands.

THE NEW CARS

We have two new Ford cars for 1939—better cars and better looking—but we also have an entirely new car.

It's called the Mercury 8. It fits into our line between the De Luxe Ford and the Lincoln-Zephyr. It is larger than the Ford, with 116-inch wheelbase, hydraulic brakes, and a new 95-horsepower V-type 8-cylinder engine.

We know that our 1939 cars are cars of good quality. We think they're fine values in their price classes.

With new cars, new plants, new equipment, the whole Ford organization is geared to go forward.

Junior News
 We Juniors, of much experience, feel very sorry for the Freshmen who have entered high school this year for the first time. So we shall endeavor, in this issue to give them a word of advice. First, get in bed by 7:30. Second, study every extra hour. Third, always offer to carry an upperclassman's books. Fourth, Always rise and smile when an upper-classman enters.

Senior News
 The hour of spooks approached. Mental capacities are filled with black cats and hobgoblins. On the death moment when haggard witches float across the red moon and rub fuzzy-tailed mousers the wrong way, then will the students of Clara venture forth. Clowns, spooks, skeletons and witches are privileged characters for evil spirits roam the earth. However, all broken flower pots, hidden chairs, torn off screens and such misdemeanors are blamed on Freshes, Sophs and Juniors, for we Seniors are good little boys and girls.

Home Economics News
 We are looking anxiously forward for next Friday when our group one entertains group two, of our Jolly Workers Club.

Volley Ball
 The volley ball squad has been getting a taste of what strenuous work outs are like the past week. The girls have been threatening to write an ad in the want ad section, reading as follows: Wanted—six volley ball girls that can stand Coach Cooper's strenuous work outs.

Who's Who in Clara
 We should like to take this opportunity to introduce to you, Mr. Ralph Davis, our Superintendent.

No doubt you will remember him as the dark six foot and four

ELECTRIC BILLS SAY "IN YOUR OWN AT HOME"

The average net monthly bill for 100 Killowatt in the states of Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma costs an electrical consumer $5.44. A similar bill in Burkburnett costs a citizen $4.14.

By this saving of 40c each month? Because a municipal light plant is saving that for Burkburnett citizens. Rates are low when municipal plants are established in a community, for the interests of the customers are primary consideration rather than those of all centers.

Chevrolet Takes Big Strides Ahead for 1939

New Aero-stream styled bodies combine with major mechanical improvements to provide new beauty, safety, comfort and operating ease, in the 1939 Chevrolets, presented October 22, and featured at the big auto shows this month. The new models are offered on two chassis, the Master De Luxe and the Master 85, both of which are powered with Chevrolet's famous six-cylinder valve-in-head engine.

A new vacuum gear shift mechanism with steering column control, optional on all models at small extra cost, does 80 per cent of the work of shifting gears. The Master De Luxe series features a new riding system, in which a brand new Chevrolet Knee-Action mechanism is scientifically co-ordinated with new ride stabilizer and double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers to furnish a smooth, soft ride.

Textiles—History
The history of civilization could be written in terms of the different kinds of materials which people have used for clothing.

As mankind spread from the tropical regions in which human life probably began, and felt the need for something besides their own skins to keep them warm, they began to make clothes.

First of all garments were probably the raw skins of animals. Man learned very early how to treat skins to preserve them, and how to sew them with bone needles and animal tendons for thread, as the Eskimos still do. Furs still make the most expensive garments.

The next step was probably the discovery that the hair or wool of animals could be made into felt, by beating and wetting it. Millions of people, the half-savage tribes of Mongolia, literally live in felt houses, great tents called "yurts" which are made of thick felt. Civilized people consume great quantities of felt for making hats and for warm boots for outdoor work in cold climates.

How many millions of years elapsed before man learned to spin wool into threads, and to weave the threads into cloth, nobody knows.

It was a good deal later before vegetable fibers were spun and woven. Flax was probably the first; people wore linen for thousands of years before they began to wear cotton. Silk is perhaps the most modern of natural fibers used for textiles. The Chinese discovered the value of the fine threads of the silk-worm cocoon more than five thousand years ago.

Wool Shrinking

For warmth and durability fabrics woven of wool have always been the most highly prized. So long as soap was unknown and hot water seldom available for washing, wool was practically unshrinkable. About four hundred years ago soap was invented, and people began to discover that woolen garments washed in hot water with soap would shrink badly.

Long before that they had found that wool absorbs grease from the hair and skins of people who wear it. The custom of wearing linen collars and cuffs grew from the necessity of keeping the woolen garments free from absorbed grease.

Not until the discovery of the grease-dissolving properties of benzene and gasoline and the very modern introduction of "dry cleaning" did collars and cuffs begin to be unnecessary.

Now a new invention removes the remaining disadvantage of wool. Three young chemists employed in the War Department have invented and patented a process which makes wool absolutely unshrinkable, even when boiled with soap.

It consists of the immersion of woolen fabrics in a chemical solution of a chlorine compound, at a certain temperature for a fixed time. After such treatment the non-shrinkable quality of the fabric lasts as long as the garment does. The Government is giving the right to use the new process free of charge for Army and Navy uniforms and blankets.

Chemistry — Silk
The latest step in human progress in the matter of clothing has been taken by the chemists. "Revolutionary" is not too strong a word to use about the discovery by chemists that fibers suitable for spinning and weaving can be made without using any of the natural sources upon which the world has so long depended.

Everybody is familiar with the artificial silk known under the general name of rayon. It has already taken the place of both silk and cotton goods to a great extent. Now the newest development, not yet ready for the market, is a process of making fiber from castor oil and coal which is superior to even real silk.

The disadvantage of rayon has been that when stretched out of shape it does not spring back, as silk does. The new fabric, it is promised, will be even more elastic than silk.

Some years ago in Italy I saw a wool-like fabric which was made by artificial means. Now it has been placed on the market, to the consternation of wool-growers. It is made from casein, which is a milk product. Those who have studied it tell me that it has every good quality of real wool and none of the bad ones—and can be produced at less than half the cost of real wool.

Nobody has yet invented a method of making artificial fur, though the humble rabbit masquerades under a dozen different names.

Salt—Pouring

Salt and water are two substances without which no one can live. Since life emerged from the sea, however, land animals, including humans, have to take their salt and their water separately; we can't live on salt water. But we must have salt not only to make food palatable but to keep well.

Salt has such an affinity for water that it absorbs it from the atmosphere. In rainy weather or damp climates it is impossible to keep salt from "caking" and clogging the saltshaker.

Nothing in every day domestic life is more annoying than not to be able to shake out salt in just the quantity needed. But a newly-patented invention promises to solve that problem permanently.

The trick is to pass a current of electricity through the salt so that every grain will be "charged" with the same kind of electricity as every other grain. When two objects are both negatively charged they repel each other; or if both are positively charged the same thing happens.

By giving a quantity of salt a shock of 20,000 volts of either positive or negative electricity the tendency of the particles is to fly apart, and all the moisture in the world won't make them stick together. That sounds like a boon to housewives.

Jack London will be honored during "Valley of the Moon Day" at the 1939 World's Fair of the West next August.

A question box will be provided at the dental exhibit at the 1939 California World's Fair, and dental problems will be answered without charge.

Sunday School Lesson

REV. CHARLES E. DUNN

Honesty in All Things.
Lesson for This Week: Matthew 19:16-22.

The Eighth Commandment, which is our Golden Text, reads, "Thou shalt not steal." Here the sanctity of possessions is emphasized. The modern stress on the priority of human rights over property rights is sound, but we must not forget that property is sacred and must be protected from damage inflicted as the result of carelessness, or deliberate vandalism.

Communist experiments have been launched again and again. The first Christian disciples pooled all of their belongings into a common store, and Soviet Russia today is built on the principles expounded in the Communist Manifesto of Marx and Engels. It cannot be said, however, that any of these ventures have been really successful.

The Bible and history teach that a man must have a certain amount of private property in order to serve God and his fellows aright. The Hebrew migration from Egypt, one of the most significant results of which was the formulation of the Ten Com-

MODERN WOMEN

A woman sheriff who doesn't approve, generally speaking, of women sheriffs, is Mrs. Eugenia Simmons, who fills this office for Okeechobee County, Florida. Even without a pistol she has had no trouble in administering her office, but she does admit that men are harder customers than women. Mrs. Simmons had worked along with her late husband when he was sheriff for five years, then she fell heir to the job.

Her "Secrets of the Chinese Drama" is said to be the only comprehensive book in English about the Chinese Theatre.
 Salt Lake City has a woman citizen who has done remarkable things in boosting her adopted home town, for Mrs. Winifred Ralls, convention manager of the city's chamber of commerce, has lived there only nine years. She is thought to be the only woman to hold such a position in the United States. Since she took up her new duties there have been 648 conventions held in the city with an approximate attendance of 230,000 people, and they have had a monetary value to the city of close to ten million dollars. Besides being active in Salt Lake's civic organizations, she founded the Salt Lake Women's Safety Council and has been president of the Business and Professional Women's Club.

HOUSE and HOME

For some time we've been hearing that the men-folk are drinking more tea. Perhaps they observed their English cousins who always stop work for tea and who seem to be getting along despite the fact that Great Britain has had her full share of the world's troubles. In any event it is a wise person who takes time out for a cup of hot, fragrant tea.
 Women as well as men need relaxation when things pile up for them. Housecleaning time is strenuous and you will last longer and do a better job in the end if you rest at the zero hour of the afternoon. Sit down in a comfortable chair in a pleasant place—kitchen, living room, porch or dining room—have your tea leisurely and you will find that you can finish the work, whatever it may be, with renewed vigor and be a gracious hostess at the family dinner table even at the end of a hard day.

THE DOCTOR Tells the Story
 by W.E. AUGHINBAUGH M.D.

Microbes
 The records of prehistoric ages show that disease is older than the first man, and this fact is proven by decayed teeth, spongy bones, rheumatic joints, and abscessed bones—one of which recently exhumed was large enough to hold more than a quart of pus—which have been found and which belonged to creatures living in the reptilian age.
 Of course when men had merged from their primitive status and for many centuries thereafter it was commonly believed that disease was caused by evil spirits.
 With the discovery of the microscope, medical men were quick to learn that the causes of most diseases were bacteria, and then there stepped into the picture the master minds of such scientists as Pasteur, Lister and Koch, who ascertained that there was another world of which little was known and that it was peopled by a population invisible to the naked eye—a truly dangerous and "murderous population," Dr. Howard Haggard calls them.
 In addition there were also found various bacteria which were silently working in the interest of mankind—genuine benefactors of humanity.
 How long can bacteria live is a question that has puzzled scientists. Do they live weeks, or months, years or centuries? Within recent years it has been absolutely demonstrated that bacteria remain viable for long periods of time.
 In fact one may with propriety say that they live almost indefinitely, provided of course, that conditions are favorable for their survival.
 For example, Dr. C. R. Lippman of the University of California has shown that living bacteria exist in coal taken from deep mines in Wales and also from Pennsylvania. In addition to this he learned that soil which has been sealed and kept immune from outside interferences for periods varying from twenty-five to sixty-five years, all contained living bacteria.
 Adobe bricks—that is bricks made from clay and water and dried in the hot California sun—and used to build one of the old Jesuit mission churches in southern California, were obtained, broken up and examined. From cultures made from the material in the center of these bricks, living bacteria were found, and it is positively known that these bricks were more than one hundred and fifty years old.
 So despite the strenuous work on the part of scientific men, it has not yet been determined definitely, how long bacteria can survive, but the indications are that given the proper conditions, they can exist for more than 2,500 years and yet remain viable.
 The massive Elephant Towers flanking the main entrance to the 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition will be finished in gold and crimson colors.

 and the winners shall be decided by points. The losing team will pay for the barbecue and fixings to be served on the Course at completion of play. No doubt, this will cause a lot of secret practicing on the part of a large number of golfing gentry who frequently infest the lairs and labyrinth of Gilbert Creek.
 It is urgently requested that all members take part in this team play, date to be given later, because not only will it be good sporting competition, but promises a good time socially as well.

Local Oil Man
Receives National Safety Award
 At the National Safety Council Congress held in Chicago last month, the Panhandle Refining Co. of Wichita Falls, with distributing offices here, was awarded two bronze trophies and three engraved certificates for their splendid work in the nation-wide safety work being carried on by the council.
 The Panhandle Co. is one of the oldest independent oil companies in the southwest and was among the first to subscribe to National Safety Work.

J. H. Cecil, local wholesale distributor and the Cecil Service Station, local retail distributor, and O. D. Bernethy, local truck driver, played a big part in compiling this record. They are considered as a big asset to Burkburnett and it is their desire to further safety work from all angles.

Mr. Cecil recently received his 3-year safety badge. He has driven his truck for three years without an accident.
