THE DUTY OF AMERICA

A big question which the United States is facing is how far we ought to go in undertaking to protect all of North and South America against invasion of possible conquerors from Europe or the Far East. Out of the Pan-American conference now going on at Lima, Peru, may come part of the answer.

This nation is committed under the Monroe Doctrine to prevent the establishment of colonies or governments anywhere in the Americas by any foreign power. We should certainly have to make a demonstration of armed forces if the dictators of Europe or Japan should try to gain a foothold by force in South America.

But the question is whether we are obligated to prevent them from gaining control of great areas or whole nations by "peaceful penetration."

There are more than a million Germans now permanently settled in Brazil. They are a unified group. In one large section of Brazil no language but German is spoken. There is nothing to prevent them from becoming citizens, as many of them have done.

There is another large Italian section of Brazil. New colonists from both those nations are pouring into South America.

What would be the position of the United States if they should gain control of the government of a South American nation and form an alliance with one of the European dictators?

In Latin America control of governments is as often accomplished by revolution as by votes. This country recognizes governments which have gained power by military methods. Suppose one of those South American revolutions should put the friends of Hitler or Mussolini in the seat of power. What would we do about it?

Those are questions for Americans to think about when we hear all the talk that is going around about building up our army and navy so that we can protect both coasts of both North and South America. We don't want to see enemies of democracy ensconced in our back yard, but do we want to go to war to keep them from settling there by peaceful means?

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR 1939

Almost without exception the business prophets and economic soothsayers are predicting that 1939 will be the best year for business that this country has seen since 1929.

Col. Leonard P. Ayres, vice-president of the Cleveland Trust Company, the most famous and the most usually accurate of these forecasters, warns people not to be too eager for a sharp upturn the day after New Year's, but predicts that after the usual seasonal decline in the early months of the new year, business of all kinds will begin to boom.

The signs of the times are all favorable, unless something comes out of this troubled international situation to put the fear of a foreign war into people's minds. The biggest boom is already under way. That is the building boom. The coming year, the prophets say, will see more new homes built than any previous year since the middle 1920's.

Industry is hiring more help. The number of unemployed workers has declined by hundreds of thousands in the past couple months. People are buying more new cars than they were a year ago. The Christmas trade of the stores all over the country has been excellent. There is a new spirit of confidence in the air and in the minds of men of affairs. New capital is coming out of hiding to finance great new enterprises.

There is no promise in all of this that everybody will become prosperous overnight. There is a distinct promise in the business outlook, as the experts see it, that another year will see the nation safely past the "emergency" period.

It is to be hoped that the last few years have not got so many people into the habit of looking to Government for help that they have lost the habit of fending for themselves.

Fourteenth Installment Synopsis

Jocelyn Harlowe, raised in a French convent, at the age of 18 joins her mother, Marcella, in New York. Worried about her safety, because she is unfamiliar with the modern world and has developed into a beautiful woman, her mother's first wish is to get her safely married. Attending her first ball, Jocelyn meets Felix Kent, rich, handsome, and nineteen years older than herself. Encouraged by her mother, she and Felix quickly become engaged. Alone in her apartment one night, a cripple, Nick Sandal, enters by the fire-escape, and confides in her that he is her father and that her real name is Lynda Sandal. Visiting her father in his apartment, Jocelyn meets Jock Ayleward, a gambler. When she mentions the name of Felix Kent, he tells his story of how he was a mining engineer, worked under Kent, and was sent to jail for making what was adjudged a false affidavit. One night Jocelyn goes to a party with her father and Jock. Suddenly, during a dance, Jock rushes her out and says he is going to take her home, thus saving her from seeing Felix there dancing with a gangster's girl. Alone with Jock, he kisses her passionately, when suddenly her father comes in and orders Jock to leave. Her father has a stroke from the excitement, and after sitting with him all night, Jocelyn finally goes to Jock for help. Later Jocelyn asks Felix about Jock and he tells her that he's "no good." Jock, meanwhile has made up things with Nick and tells him that he doesn't love Jocelyn. When asleep one night, Jocelyn's mother wakes her and says that her jewels have been stolen, and Jocelyn suspects Jock or her father. She decided to marry Felix within a week and tells him so. Returning to her home she finds a detective with her mother. He is saying that he has seen Jocelyn going into her father's apartment. She goes to see her father who seems to know nothing of the jewels. She meets Jock there, who kisses her against her will. She tells him that she means nothing to her and that she is going to marry Felix next week.

Jock wet his lips. "You'll let me know when you are going to look into that safe?"

"I will let you know. You'll be here?"

"Yes." He gave her the number and the name of this queer street. She looked about and found herself asking in a changed voice, "Why are you in such a place? Are you hiding from the police?"

"No. I'd quit gambling and paid back some money. I had a job as a mechanic. But I'll pull some sort of game between now and next Wednesday so's I can look after Nick. Wait. I've got a wedding gift for you."

He took from the table drawer and handed to her the picture of his dog.

"I won't want him any more after next Wednesday."

"Why not?"

"Because, by the grace of God, before that day it won't be only Roger but you who will be forced to believe in me even if you are already Mrs. Felix Kent."

She said, looking him in the eyes, "I shall not be forced to believe in you. I've decided to make the search I promised only on one condition . . . that you return the jewels."

"Lynda!"

"I shall be waiting."

"Lord! I haven't got them!"

"You will find them if you will look."

"You made me a promise."

"A promise to a thief!"

"Is still a promise."

"But you—have done something—to me."

"I kissed you."

"You forced your kisses upon my mouth." She had begun to tremble now and her voice shook. "For that I will change my promise to a bargain."

He was driven to a desperate jeering: "So you don't trust your Knave of Diamonds?"

"Absolutely. I don't care really whether I open his safe or not. It would be considerably pleasanter for me not to open it."

Jock faltered nearer, fell on his knees before her, put his arms around her and pressed his head down against her. He said nothing.

She stood there. She did not know that she had bent down her own head until her lips touched his hair. He looked up into her face and rose and let her go. They did not speak again. She had entirely forgotten to change her dress. She had left her parcel in her father's room. It was not until she was in her soft and perfumed room in her bed, smooth and cool, and had her head against her pillow that she began to think again.

Then she sat up straight from her pillow in the darkness and spoke aloud the truth.

"I love him. Why, of course—I love him."

A truth that did not make her situation easier.

"You're giving me everything, Felix," Jocelyn murmured late one evening, the wedding day just sixty-two hours ahead, "except one thing and that is what I want most."

He had been about to say good night.

"Good! Now I am going to hear something worth while. Just ask me for something good and difficult to get."

"It's just—your confidence."

"All right. You shall have it. What do you want to know?"

"Ask me for a secret."

"I can't ask for anything definite of course. But I do feel so outside your real life, Felix, your everyday interests, I mean."

"Oh, you're jealous of Becky Deal again, are you? Is that it?"

"In a way. I truly am. She knows you, the real Felix Kent, better than I do. She understands what you are thinking of all day when I'm not with you. I was ashamed when I was in the office. I didn't even know at first—don't laugh at me—that you were interested in mines. She boasted—yes, she really boasted, Felix—in a careful polite sort of way, that she knew all about your affairs."

"Which she doesn't, not by a long shot."

"She did say you called her your 'other safe.'"

"Well, I've got bigger and better ones whose contents are just as much Greek to Miss Rebecca Deal."

"But she can get into them and find out for herself."

"No, she can't darling. Do you suppose she's got the combination?"

"Oh, hasn't she?"

Jocelyn whispered, "I wish—you will think I am worse than a baby! I—but I do wish I could tell her that I knew that combination."

Felix threw back his head and laughed heartily and tenderly, the laughter of an indulgent elder.

"Little goose! What good would that do you?"

"No good of course. No practical good. But—spiritually—"

"Spiritually? To know the combination of an office safe?"

"Well, psychologically then it would give me a feeling of knowing you better, of being in your confidence, of being—" her voice fell, "really your wife. . . ."

(And I am going to be his wife, his faithful wife, who, to make amends for this one act of treachery—or is it an act of trust—must obliterate from her mind all fanciful rebellions. So her writhing conscience justified itself.)

Felix lifted the hair from one of the delicate close-set ears and bending his mouth to it whispered, "Three-eight . . . three turns to the left . . . eight five two . . . two turns to the right. One-one-seven . . . six turns right. Six turns left. Did you get that, my sweet foolish wife?"

"Say it again, Felix."

He repeated it and she, in her brain of a schoolgirl, conned it over and over, sick with her own deception. To lie so in a man's arms and to cajole his secrets from him for what might be—no, she trusted him. "It is to prove my confidence in him. . . . This conscience must be silenced! It is only to prove his honor in such a fashion that he may never know it has been questioned; to rid myself of this—Other . . . this Other . . . forever and forever—and forever."

Next day she wrote a line to Jock:

"I must believe you have not been able to return the jewels. If I succeed in arranging matters as I hope, I'll come to you tonight about eleven o'clock. I shall have to ask your help."

This she mailed with her own hand. Pleading weariness, she asked Felix to stay away that evening and to her relief he decided that he would take advantage of this dismissal for one of his flying business trips.

"I'll take the evening express and get back in time to make all our preparations, darling." He gave her an address to wire or to telephone to if she should need him and kissed her fondly. This was at five o'clock in the afternoon.

At half-past ten Jocelyn got up and locked her door. Outside the night was thick. Fog horns croaked from the river.

She took her disguise from its hiding place and dressed herself. She ran her fingers through her hair. For this one last time she must wear the dangerous semblance of that "conspicuous young woman."

It was nearly eleven o'clock when she reached the foot of the fire escape.

As she stepped briskly out along the street past the awning of the apartment house, she thought that a man emerged from the alley she had just left and walked, not very rapidly, behind her.

She had to wait ten minutes for a vacant taxicab. On the opposite corner a man seemed to be waiting. She signalled and got her cab, climbed into it. Looking back she saw that the other foot passenger was frantically signalling.

She dismissed her driver at the door of Nick's first residence. Another taxi swooped to a stop at the corner of that street and its fare dismounted.

She went into the unlocked door of the tenement, ran up the stairs and entered Nick's room. Jock rose.

"Speak low," said Lynda. "Is Nick here?"

"No. I took him to a hospital for treatment. He'll be able to get out in a few days."

"I'm glad he isn't here. I've been followed. A man's across this alley in a doorway. My mother has engaged a private detective to find out who took her jewels. He must have seen me come out. Jock, what shall we do? If we go out together now we'll both be arrested."

Jock said, "There's another way out."

"Won't they be watching it?"

"Probably. You left a dress here. Why not change?"

"Wouldn't it be better for me to put on some of Nick's clothes? They'll be looking for a woman."

"Good thought. You could wear them pretty well." His eyes impersonally measured her.

He took her into the bedroom, tumbled a suit from the closet to the bed, got a shirt, a tie and a soft hat and left her.

The clothes weren't such a bad fit. The felt hat, because of her thick hair, was a tight squeeze but she pulled it down. When she came out Jock smiled at her appearance.

"You'll do, I guess on a foggy night. Where are we going when we leave here?"

"Have you one of those small search lights, Jock?"

"An electric torch? Sure thing."

"Then take it. We're going to Felix's office downtown."

Three blocks away from the tall narrow tenement they took a taxicab.

She said to herself, "After this ride I shall never be alone with him again. And I love him. And I have never given him a word of kindness. He will remember me only as one of many wounds." And the longing to speak softly to him took possession of her almost irresistibly.

It was more difficult than Jocelyn had foreseen to locate the spot they wanted. But finally they found it.

"You must wait here Jock. I know just where the safe stands. I have memorized the combination. Let me have your torch."

"I must go up with you. You don't think that I'd let you take this chance alone?"

"You have to. If I am caught I'm only to let them know who I am in order to be released. But if you are found in there . . ."

She took the light from him and felt the ice of his fingers.

"Keep the light low, Lynda. Be careful."

"I will. You'll watch down here. If—if I should find any papers I'll throw them down to you and as soon as you get them, go. Don't wait for me. I may not come down this way."

"I may wait and tell the night watchman that I had a wagersome silly society girl's explanation. That would give you more time. If I find no papers, as of course I won't, I will come down and join you."

She had started her dizzy climb. She found the window open. It moved up silently and she let herself down upon the office floor. The electric torch, as she pressed it, gave out a round white spot which startled her with its precise revelation of the glittering knob of the safe.

She repeated to herself: "Three-eight . . . three turns to the left. Eight-five-two. Two turns to the right. One-one-seven. Six turns right. Six turns left." The thick door opened noiselessly.

The small compartments were labelled, not with letters or numbers, but with hieroglyphics which meant nothing. She took out bundles of papers after bundle, examined them. Bundle after bundle, with names and titles utterly unknown, contracts, letters, signed papers she took them out, returned them.

"Algernon Talley, Lost Valley Mine."

She thought she had imagined the words but her eyes had really picked them off a folded stiff sheet. She began now to shake.

"I agree to give your engineer the kind of look-in you suggest, provided you come across with the million." Her sick eyes ran across the page. She saw his name, "Jock Ayleward." Another letter: "I've got him where we want him. It wasn't such easy going either. He's such a shrewd chap and knows his job. But I kept him away from the shaft and let him go over—"

It was true. Felix Kent had made that murderous bargain. Felix Kent had baited a trap for an unsuspecting friend, a boy he had played with. Felix Kent had paid a million dollars for a worthless mine in order to sell that same mine to his townspeople for two million. Felix Kent had sent his scapegoat, an innocent man, to prison. The proof lay in her two cold hands.

It would mean, for Kent, destruction. By her treachery. And he had chosen her to be his wife. She must either put the papers back and be silent for all her life, loyal to a knave, or she must stand up now and go over to that window and then down to the honorable man who waited at the bottom of the wall.

Rabbit Creek

December 26, 1938

Christmas has come and also Old Santa Claus. It has been very, very good to everyone, big and small. I for one, Hawkeye, am glad to see Old Santa Claus and the nice things which he brought. Our Friendly Little Burdett, when he stopped over starting across the river entering Oklahoma. Hawkeye does want to see many friends over in the morning calling Santa Claus' for bringing such nice things to him and his family. Also Winnie June and Margaret Martin thank old Santa for so many nice dolls and everything else that he brought them both. They wish he would come every day in the week. So does Hawkeye.

The first moisture came since November 2nd over in this neck of the woods Christmas day, Sunday, and it commenced to rain very slow at 11:45 and continued up till about 3:25 about 20 hundredths of an inch fell. About all the good it done was on the wheat that was already up. Not enough rain fell to enable the farmers to plow up their land for a 1939 crop at this writing at 11:05 a. m. Monday one of those blue northers has just struck the Rabbit Creek neighborhood and Hawkeye and family is hugging their big wood heater, and are enjoying it.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Martin and their little daughter, Margaret, departed from the Owens family home Monday morning for their home in Hobbs, New Mexico. They left at 6:10 a. m. and will arrive back home about 3:30 p. m. Tuesday. W. H. took back a big truck load of corn and hegarri fodder.

Late Saturday afternoon the good news came up from the Wichita Falls hospital by a Mr. Will Gamble and a Mr. Ezell, both business men of Our Friendly Little City, to the effect that Mr. Henry Babers was better than he was the day previous. Bro. Henry is dangerously ill. He is one amongst the oldest settlers in the Big Rabbit Creek neighborhood. It is hoped and wished by his great number of friends that he will have a speedy recovery and will soon be able to come back home to his family and loved ones. Mrs. Babers, his wife, has been with him ever since he was taken to the hospital over 10 days past. It is stated that he has pneumonia and heart trouble combined. Mr. Gamble and Mr. Ezell called on Bro. Henry from the City Saturday.

Walker Hatcher will move his family and all of his farm implements the first of the year to their new home 9 miles southwest of Iowa Park, Texas.

Mrs. Jess Kinnaird and her two sons accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Martin and little daughter, motored over to Our Friendly City Saturday to attend the big Trades Day event and to finish their Christmas shopping.

Folks, what do you think? As Old Santa came through Kansas City, he stopped off in the big city long enough to bring Hawkeye and family and baby June Martin a fine present for each one of them.

Hawkeye estimated the mass of people that attended the big trades day event and Christmas shoppers to be 8,000 people that were in the City. Each business place doing a big volume of business. Each business place had from 6 to 8 extra clerks of both sexes.

the road of romance would be pretty tough traveling, don't you think?

This New Year of Mine
This New Year of mine offers me 365 priceless days, Each day bringing twenty-four golden hours, each Hour sixty precious minutes; each minute sixty Fleeting, but equally precious seconds. What shall I do with these treasures, each one a bit of eternity Sent me from the hand of my Heavenly Father? Shall I let them slip by me unused? Shall I send them back to eternity empty, Or shall they return heavily laden with Love and courage with the work and the joy of a busy, happy life?

My New Year is here. Hand in hand we have already Set out upon our journey. To all my questioning thoughts Concerning the joys and successes, the failures and sorrows That await me, there comes the all-assuring, all sufficient Answer: "The Lord is my shepherd. I shall not want."

To The Burkburnett Star and Its Whole Staff

Hawkeye sends his New Year Greetings by wishing each and everyone of the staff a happy and most prosperous New Year that you have ever lived through and that each one of you and your families will have the very best of health and the utmost of prosperity all through the year of 1939.

Yours as ever,
"Hawkeye" Owens.

Burkburnett Woman Dies At Parents' Home

Mrs. Dick Blythe, 45, resident of Burkburnett 15 years, died at 4:20 o'clock Wednesday morning in Wichita Falls at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Chapman, 1403 Twenty-first. She had been ill several months.

Funeral services will be held from the Owens and Brumley funeral chapel here this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock with burial in the Burkburnett cemetery.

Survivors include her husband and three daughters, Mrs. E. A. Dieterman of San Angelo, Miss Jackie Jackson of San Angelo, and Miss Juanita Blythe of Wichita Falls; a brother, W. A. Chapman of Nocona; and two sisters, Mrs. C. C. Holcomb and Mrs. Ralph Spencer of Wichita Falls.

Boyd Bros. Entertain Force

Boyd Bros. entertained their employees with a Christmas banquet recently. The Odd Fellows Hall, in which the banquet was held, was beautifully decorated in the holiday motif, as were the banquet tables. A delicious turkey dinner with all the trimmings was served, after which a most entertaining program was enjoyed as follows:

Xmas Greeting—By Mary Frances Boyd.

Response—W. S. Boyd.

Song—Laura Todd, Erma Spray, Helen Grady, Virginia Coats and Marginell Chambers, accompanied by Tom Boyd.

Song—Tom Boyd, J. C. Peyton, Dick Chambers, Cecil Todd and Wilburn Spray, accompanied by Tom Boyd.

Song—"Silent Night," Dorothy Ellen Boyd, Carolyn Rose Boyd and Billy Edward Boyd, accompanied by Tom Boyd.

Xmas Reading—Billy Edward Boyd.

Xmas Dialogue—Carolyn Rose Boyd and Dorothy Ellen Boyd.

After the last number on the program an exchange of gifts was made from the Christmas tree.

Xmas Program Given By Fairview P-T A

The Christmas theme furnished inspiration for a most interesting and well received program presented for the Fairview P-T A December 19th in the school auditorium.

"Our Christmas Story" presented by the music classes from the fourth to the seventh grades was directed by Miss Johnston. As several scenes from the old, old story were presented on the stage, a chorus of boys and girls, dressed in white surplices and carrying lighted tapers, sang Christmas carols. Readers on each side of the stage told the story in verses taken from the Bible. The readers were Dickie Welsh and Billy Estes. Jack Knock, Art Williams and Charles Goins were the shepherds. Rene Miles, Gene Donehoo and James McDonald were the wise men. The part of Joseph was played by Wayne Key, while George Ann Spencer played the part of Mary.

The Rhythm Band, conducted by Miss Mauldin and accompanied by Miss Johnston, played three numbers, "Ringle, Tingle, Jing," "Rock-a-Bye Baby," and "Silent Night."

Miss Mauldin's room closed the program by wishing everyone a Merry Christmas.

Y. C. Paschall, superintendent of schools, presented moving pictures he had made of local scenes and people.

Ruth Class Had Xmas Party At Pinkston Home

Miss Hazel Pinkston was hostess to members of the Ruth class of the First Baptist church and their invited guests on the evening of December 20, at 8 o'clock.

Christmas carols were sung by the group and games were played. Refreshments were served to the following: Bob Mowery, Gordon Kent, Louise Kent, Vera Mae Johnson, Lela Mae Pinkston, Grady L. Wigham, Doris Lee, Margaret Russell, Gladys Pinkston, Thelma Lawrence, Raymond Teal, Marshall Giesler, E. H. Carver, Myrl Giesler, Mrs. E. H. Carver, Mrs. Maude L. Collins, Jack Hansard of Wichita Falls, Mrs. Martha Pinkston and Hazel Pinkston.

Friends Gather At Home of B. F. Hewell For Xmas Party

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Hewell entertained friends with a Christmas Eve party Saturday night. The house was beautiful with Christmas decorations, featuring a Christmas tree filled with gifts.

The evening was spent in singing Christmas carols and hearing readings by Myrta Mae White and Walter Lee Hewell. Myrta Mae White as Santa presented gifts to those present.

Popcorn, fruit and nuts were served to the following: Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Keith, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hinnant and daughter, Rosemary, Mr. and Mrs. Murphy Dean and daughter, Myrta Mae; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Parker of Randlett, Okla., and the host and hostess and son, Walter Lee.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR BY USING CITY ELECTRICITY

It will be another happy year for Chanute, Kansas, as it has already enjoyed eight years as a taxless town. It is a taxless town now because 27 years it has operated its own utilities. It is estimated that the electric light and power plant there will supply $56,300.00 for its government during the next year.

Junk Car Races Postponed From Xmas Day, Jan. 1

The Junk Car races scheduled for Christmas Day were cancelled because of the rain. Arrangements have been made to hold the races on New Year's day at 3 p. m. at Preston Field. Spectators will get plenty of thrills and will see the champions of Oklahoma and of Texas perform.

The races are open to anyone who has a car to enter. No car will be barred. Competition is encouraged. Large cash prizes are being offered.

Three races besides the exhibition to be staged by champions Burt Jones and Corky Benson, have been planned.

Jones and Benson are veterans in this sort of racing and guarantee a real show. They have met with much favor wherever they have held exhibitions. For the past 16 weeks they have alternated between Wichita Falls and Lawton with the shows.

Awards Presented Decorated Yard Contests Here

Mrs. R. C. Tevis and Mrs. Carl Morrison won first and second prizes in the contest held by city officials and the chamber of commerce for the most attractively decorated yard at Christmas time.

Mrs. Tevis featured a clever and striking arrangement of colored lights and had a fire-place set up in the yard and Santa Claus coming down the chimney.

Mrs. Morrison featured the Three Wise Men following their guiding star. A clever system of indirect lights threw the whole arrangement into relief.

Many others who entered the contests received much favorable comment on their efforts.
