Rockport Depot Undergoes Changes This Week

Rockport's Railway Express Agency is undergoing some slight changes this week, J. F. Jolly, new agent here, declares. The office, now in the center of the building, is being moved to the east room, while the present office space is being converted into the warehouse room. The large west room, used for a warehouse in the past, will be removed entirely except for a small area to be used as a platform, with the top remaining, but with no walls.

The new office, smaller than the old one, will afford much more efficient working space, and the change of the warehouse room comes none too soon, since it has been in need of repair for some time.

It's a Far Cry Back to Pumps or Cisterns As Waterworks Rounds Out 3rd Year

A far cry from the pumps, wells, cisterns, and other out-moded paraphernalia of yesteryear, Rockport's City Water System goes into its fourth year this month, its third anniversary.

Rockport's $15,000 water tower was constructed during the summer of 1938 by Gayle Brothers of Houston, Texas, and today finds all bonds and interest paid in full. In October of its birth year the System made a total monthly collection of $402.05 from its 142 new meters. Today W. B. Friend, City Secretary and his assistant, Miss Eunice Piper, found a total of 239 subscribers, with an expected collection for October, 1941, of $750, the city's best month in some time. Not only is the system paid for—bonds and interest—but there is a "nice balance in the sinking fund," quoting the city secretary.

Last week saw the completion of painting and repairing of the tower by Gus Landrum of Refugio, a $450.00 contract.

With the present rate of construction and progressive business in Rockport, it is believed that the next few years will see Rockport a modern, well-equipped city with as many meters as houses.

Boat Operators Gross $36,000 In Past 60 Days

Shrimpers Receive Average of Approximately 4-Cents Pounds For Record Hauls

Shrimp business hit a new high in Rockport and locality during September and October, the biggest season in its history, when record individual catches coupled with record gross receipts placed the local industry in the front ranks of the coast's fishing industry.

Johnson Fish Company handled 237,000 pounds of shrimp during the month of September, with an expected total of 250,000 pounds for October.

Jackson Seafood Company brought in 134,000 pounds during September and expects to best that figure during October by some 4,600 pounds.

All other local dealers brought in an estimated 50,000 pounds for September, with about 75,000 pounds expected as the total for October.

Shrimpers this season have been paid 3c per pound for bay shrimp and 6c for larger shrimp caught in the Gulf and Corpus Christi Bay. This represents an average of approximately 4c per pound for the shrimp caught, there having been more fishing in the bay than the Gulf. This means the 44 local boatmen had about $16,840 gross to spend in September, and will have about $20,000 gross in October.

Record catches reported by Johnson Fish Company have been made by Somer Smith's "Fanny," Willie Close's "Little Willie," and Ted Atwood's "Stephen." Johnson is working about eighteen boats in all. The high boats of Jackson Seafood, working fourteen boats, are Alvin Brundrett's "Fay," and Joe Garcia's "Elaine." Dealers in Fulton are working about twelve boats among which are seven run by Wm. Johnson, three by Cecil Casterline and two by Lawrence Dietrich.

Due to the fact that shrimping is more profitable, the oyster season will probably be late this year, the boatmen working with shrimps as long as weather conditions will allow and as long as shrimp are plentiful.

Accompanying the couple to Devine were Mrs. John Haynes, Chris Rooke and Wiley Moss.

Capt. Smith and Mr. Michelson arrived here Sunday evening, catching eighteen trout Monday morning. The couple were joined that day by Mohrman and Shuler, but due to unfavorable weather conditions, no fish were caught Tuesday.

The party returned to Gonzales Wednesday morning.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

Shipping Losses and Kearny Incident Have Effect on Neutrality Act Debate; British View Invasion as 'Impossible'; French Assassinate Two Nazi Officers

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

KEARNY:

Starting Things

The fact that the Kearny, U. S. destroyer hit by a Nazi torpedo, had been more than slightly damaged, had suffered the loss of some 11 lives and had several persons badly wounded landed with a jolt in a Washington already jittery in the midst of a debate on the Neutrality act.

The navy refused any information except the broadest facts, pending a fuller report of the commander, and the incident left congress in a welter of excitement.

On top of this had come two further sinkings, those of the Bold Venture, former Danish ship carrying the flag of Panama, and the Lehigh which was flying the Stars and Stripes.

The Lehigh was sunk off the coast of Africa, far from the combat zones.

The impact of these three incidents on a congress which was being asked to permit the arming of merchant ships was terrific. Immediately measures were placed before congress ranging all the way from a complete repeal of the Neutrality act to a resolution asking for a declaration of war.

This last was not actually introduced, but certain isolationist senators said that it would be as a counter measure to the "pressure" being exerted from the White House.

Out of it all emerged the second half of the Neutrality act legislation, the measure to send American ships into combat zones, and this had been reported to have received presidential favor as a matter of present business.

Again, as the administration was meeting severe opposition on one of its measures, fate and the news played into its hands.

RUSSIANS:

Tough Battle

Pressure shifted from one direction to another along the Moscow front with the Russians putting up a desperate fight.

There had been a sudden heavily reinforced attack, however, in the southern, or Orel district, and the Nazis had claimed the capture of Stalino, a city of 450,000 people, and described as "a leading armament center of the Donets basin."

Still later the Nazis had announced gains on the Azov front and the defenders believed the Germans were shifting their attack to the south.

There had been reports of Stalin personally in command at the central front, his headquarters in an armored train. But the capital had been moved to a spot 550 miles southeast of Moscow.

Russian sources had declared the picture at Leningrad to be the brightest of that on any part of the long front, with the defenders of Russia's second city inflicting terrific losses on the attackers, and still holding their defense lines.

INVASION:

'Impossibility'

British sources, following a protracted demand on the part of labor and certain sections of the press for an immediate invasion of the continent, officially declared this plan "still an impossibility."

The R.A.F. it was stated, was still smashing the Reich territory on a 24-hour basis, however.

London authorities were testy over the hint, however, that Britain was not doing all she could to aid Russia, and it was revealed through high officials that shiploads of tanks, airplanes and munitions had been sent, that many already had arrived. Others were en route.

The British declared that fully one-half of the German air force was being compelled to be held in the west because of the daily attacks by bombers, and that the British are doing everything that the Russians themselves have suggested in the way of aid.

50 FOR ONE:

Officers Shot

The killing of Colonel Holtz, the Nazi commander at Nantes, France, by assassination was promptly avenged by General Stueplnagel, occupation commander, by the killing of 50 French hostages.

The commander said: "Cowardly criminals paid by England and Moscow killed the field commandant at Nantes with shots in the back on the morning of October 20. Until now the assassins have not been arrested."

"In expiation of this crime I have ordered, as preliminary measures, that 50 hostages be shot. Considering the gravity of the crime 50 other hostages will be shot if the assassins are not arrested."

The general offered a reward of 15,000,000 francs for the surrender of the guilty parties.

Four members of the gendarmerie at Nantes had been taken into custody, including the prefect of the district. He and the mayor of Nantes issued an appeal for aid in the arrest of the killers.

On that very day, however, in the neighborhood of Nantes, a freight train was derailed, a section of track having been removed.

For other offenses four Frenchmen had been executed, and the total of hostages executed during October was said to have reached 134.

Next day reports told of the killing of another Nazi officer in France. This time, a major.

G. O. P.:

Willkie Policy

At the height of the neutrality debate more than 100 Republicans took part in an appeal for the repeal of the Neutrality act, in the face of the recollection that this action in the last war was shortly followed by American entrance as a full participant.

These were led by Wendell L. Willkie, who said: "Millions upon millions of Republicans are resolved that the ugly smudge of isolationism shall be removed from the face of their party."

"At the same time he criticized the administration for the handling of labor relations, saying "the desire of many in the administration to rewrite our social and economic life under cover of the national effort must be ruled out during the emergency."

WICKARD:

On Prices

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, calling the parallel between the present war and the last one too close for comfort, urged on congress the necessity of immediate price fixing to stave off disastrous inflationary tendencies.

He declared himself in complete agreement with the provisions of the pending price-control bill, and said that the planned price-fixing authority might not be necessary.

The nation's agricultural production next year, he predicted, will be the highest in history, and the increase would be mostly in meats, milk and eggs. He recalled that of the 14,000 banks which failed most were country banks, and said he didn't believe the American economy could stand a second siege like that.

SIBERIA:

Or Thailand?

Watchers of the perilous situation in the Orient were still wondering whether Siberia or Thailand would be the first to feel the touch of Japan's expected military effort.

In spite of unconfirmed reports that the United States and Japan had reached some basis of agreement, the tension continued high. Japanese quarters were pressing on the government to do something first about Thailand.

Low-Down-on-Low-Bid

Appearing before the Senate defense investigating committee, Sidney Hillman, OPM associate director general, is pictured as he declared that low bid by a CIO contractor for a Michigan housing project was disregarded because its acceptance might result in strikes and open violence involving the entire construction industry in Detroit. The committee was probing charges that OPM shows favoritism to AFL.

LABOR:

Civil Strife

An internal war within the C.I.O. organization was revealed when a strike at a Detroit steel plant was suddenly halted.

The public was treated to the unusual spectacle of a union leader telling his members to go back to work because the army had been ordered to take over the plant "unless," and being roundly hissed.

There were yells of "bring on the soldiers."

The union leader, John Doherty, said:

"The United States army already has received orders to move in. The government has notified our union that this strike will not be tolerated."

The men, who claimed that their own union leaders had "sold them out" in wage negotiations, hissed and catcalled, but they went back to work.

There were hints of sabotage in this strike, and the open charge by Federal Conciliator Dewey that he was looking for a "sinister purpose" in the walkout. Dewey had been in the conference which resulted in this particular steel company signing a contract with the SWOC.

MEXICO:

Releases Aliens

Latin-America and the United States had been puzzled by a report from Mexico stating that close to 600 Nazis and Fascists from the seized Axis ships had been released and returned to their former status of foreigners legally in the country.

American circles could not understand why President Camacho took this action, as it was believed certain to complicate Mexico's espionage problem, already quite complex.

It had been pointed out that, prior to their seizure, these Nazi and Fascist ships had been hotbeds of propaganda, and that one of them, the Orinoco, had maintained a printing plant aboard, and that in addition to flooding the country with material along the Nazi party line, had given many entertainments aboard for Mexicans and had shown many propaganda movies.

BRIGADE:

Of Heroes

The British official reports of the Dunquerque episode were filled with many stories of heroism, but none of them more poignant than the story of the lost brigade of Calais.

This was a group of 3,800 British soldiers who held the French port, vital to the use of Dunquerque as a debarkation point, for all the days while the evacuees were crunched on the beaches, vulnerable to attack, thus permitting their brothers-in-arms to escape.

Of this body, only 47 ever returned to England. The commander was Brigadier C. Nicholson, and after standing heavy bombardment and with the town he was defending in flames, he received this terse command:

"Every hour you continue to exist is of the greatest help to the B.E.F. The government therefore decided that you must continue to fight. We have the greatest possible admiration for your splendid stand."

One spearhead of the German attack was desperately anxious to take Calais and to sweep on to Dunquerque, to fall on the helpless and vulnerable men at that point.

But the riflemen of the Calais brigade held them, despite the bombings by wave after wave of Stukas. Nicholson himself was among the missing. His last radio appeal was:

"Please send us more guns—still holding out."

It was the evening of the fourth day. Calais had been cut long enough. Their work was done.

Rider of Buck River

THE STORY SO FAR: Ellen Carey seems interested in two men, Jeff Brand, a dashing rustler, and Calhoun Terry, ranch manager. Four rustlers had been mysteriously killed and while suspicion fastens on Terry and the big

CHAPTER XXX

Terry and Richards came into Round Top after dark. As they rode along the railroad tracks they became aware of unusual activity in the town. In the shadow of a loading chute they drew up. A man with a rifle in his hands cantered past. He shouted at them, "We aim to get a second troop of the boys off inside of an hour." He did not wait for an answer.

"This town has gone wild," Larry said. "I reckon maybe we'd better scout around here a little before we show ourselves. We're not exactly popular."

Calhoun Terry tapped on the window and Horace Garvey slewed round his parchment-like face.

"Who is it? What you want?" he snapped.

The Diamond Reverse B manager tapped again. He did not want to shout his name aloud. Garvey grunted impatiently. He peered out of the window.

"Don't you know I keep this back door locked with piles of paper in front of it?" he called out. "Who is it anyhow? Go round to the front door."

Calhoun's face came out of the darkness close to the window.

"Goddemighty!" Garvey exploded. "Haven't you got any sense at all?"

He began to haul bundles of paper from in front of the door. Presently he opened to let them in and led the way to a dark corner back of a press.

"What's the idea of coming to Round Top after your friends have pulled such a crazy outrage as this invasion?" he demanded.

Larry told the story of their adventures for the day. Garvey's eyes gleamed. "Good for you," he said. "Since you have broken with Ellison and his crowd it ought to fix you up with your old friends, as soon as I can get the Gazette out with the story. They will be glad to shake hands and make up. But I think you boys had better get out of town as soon as you can. Folks don't yet know your new position."

"We came in to see a cattleman about buying a bull for the new firm of Richards & Terry," said Terry. "Probably he has been waiting for us all day at the Holden House. We wouldn't think of going without a confab with him."

"Well, I'll bring him down here. I'll not have you crossing the courthouse square. Some fool would probably take a crack at you."

Terry discussed the matter of sending telegrams to Washington to induce the President to order troops from Fort Garfield. Garvey admitted that he thought it would be a good idea. Before morning, he told them, four or five hundred armed men would have left town to engage the invaders, and as many more would pour in from the ranch country to join them.

"I'll sign with you," Garvey said. Inside of thirty minutes the appeals for troops were on the way to Washington, and the story was spreading through the town that Calhoun Terry had wired the President to send government troops to fight with the big outfits and their hired Texans against the settlers.

Garvey brought the cattleman to the office from the hotel, and inside of five minutes of his arrival Terry and his new partner were the owners of an imported pedigreed Hereford bull. The editor hovered over them while the bargain was being struck, like an anxious hen with one chick.

"All right," he sputtered. "Now you've made your deal it's time to get out of town, Calhoun."

But they had waited too long. An irruption of angry citizens poured into the office through the front door to ask Garvey what he meant by signing a telegram requesting that troops be sent to help the invaders.

"It had Lane Carey's name on it, too, and that scoundrel Terry's," Lee Hart yelled.

Horace Garvey felt goose pimples run down his back. The Diamond Reverse B men were in the shadowed semi-darkness back of a press. They had slipped out of sight as the first of the group showed in the doorway. But at any moment they might be discovered.

"You're getting this all wrong, Lee," the harassed editor insisted, his voice shrill with excitement. "Maybe you don't know that Cal saved Jeff Brand's life today when these Texans had him lying wounded on the ground."

"Who told you that fairy tale?" demanded a rough, unkempt nester who had a Winchester in his hands.

"Why—ask any of the boys who came down from Black Butte with Jeff."

"Who? Which one? Put a name to him."

Garvey felt the sweat drops standing on his forehead. He did not ranchers, it turns out to have been the work of Jack Turley, a spy for the big ranchers about whom Terry had known nothing. Terry also protested, bringing in an army of Texas ex-peace officers to march upon the rustlers and town who had brought Brand to town.

"I didn't get it direct," he admitted weakly. "But I've heard talk, same as some of you must have done."

"Sure we've heard talk. We've heard these hired killers have rubbed out eight or ten of our friends and that you are trying to get the troops in to side with Ellison's men now they are getting in a jam."

"Not to side with them," Garvey explained desperately. "To stop a war where dozens of you boys will be killed. I'm not throwing you down but trying to stop a terrible slaughter. Can't you see where you are heading for if you don't keep cool? We don't want—"

"Cut it," interrupted Hart harshly. "We don't want any more guff from you. How come you to sign Terry's name on that telegram? Talk, fellow."

The nester with the Winchester in his hands craned a long scrawny neck forward. "Someone hiding in the back of the room," he announced. The rifle leaped to his shoulder. "Come out there with your hands up, whoever you are."

Terry and Richards came out, not with their hands up.

The Diamond Reverse B manager answered the question Hart had put. "My name was on that telegram because I'm the man who sent it," he said quietly.

There was a shift in the half-circle of men who fixed their attention on Terry and Richards. Lee Hart had been in the foreground, crowding the editor with snarling questions. Now he was back of the big nester with the Winchester. Over the shoulder of his shield he flung a triumphant shout at his enemy.

"Got you at last, you damn fool!" Looking round on the grim faces of these men, all armed, most of them ready to start out on a long ride to exterminate their foes, Terry guessed that never in his turbulent life had he been in more deadly peril.

"Larry and Horace are not in this," he said quietly. "Garvey is not thrown you down. He's on your side still. Larry is a hired rider. He is not responsible for what the Diamond Reverse B has done. I'm the manager."

"If Larry Richards claims he's not on your side he keeps mighty bad company," jeered a red-headed rustler.

"I'm not claiming it, Red," Larry cut in coolly. "My chips are on the table alongside those of Cal."

Shrilly Garvey begged a chance to talk. "For God's sake, don't make a mistake, boys!" he cried. "Listen to me. Calhoun Terry is our friend. Take time to find out—"

"He's your friend, but not ours," Hart interrupted savagely. "We don't need any more time. I say, right now."

A man had walked in the front door and joined the group. He was Sheriff Hart. One sweeping glance was enough for him to size up the situation.

"Don't push on the reins, Lee," he said evenly. "These two men are my prisoners."

"How do you mean your prisoners?" his brother blustered. "Ellison's warriors aren't taking any prisoners. That goes with us too."

The hard, unwinking eyes in the long-jawed, bony face of the sheriff looked almost contemptuously at his older brother. "Come out from back of Houck if you have anything to say, though it won't be important anyhow. I'm the law, and I'm arresting these men. Don't any of you get the wrong idea about that."

Terry knew that the sheriff had no friendliness for him, but he had no doubt that Nate Hart had interfered to prevent him and Larry from being killed.

"What are you arresting us for doing?" he asked. It did not matter what pretext was offered by the officer, but as a matter of form Calhoun made a protest. "We're peaceable citizens going about our lawful business."

"For conspiring to bring about an armed insurrection in the territory," the officer answered.

"Hmp! We came here to buy a registered bull from Mr. Murdoch here," Larry said. "We have done bought it. Now we're ready to leave and go back to the ranch. Looks to me like these gents who were working themselves up to bump us off when you sashayed in are doing the insuring."

"No use littering up the jail with them," Lee Hart urged. "I say hang them to a telegraph pole."

The sheriff drew a revolver. "I know all of you boys," he said quietly. "I'd hate to have to kill any of you, and I don't want to be killed myself. But I'm going to take these men to jail. If anybody interferes there will be trouble."

The cowboy Red threw in the hand for his group. "All right, Nate. If you want these fellows, take 'em. But be sure you don't let 'em go. We'll be hearing from the hills soon as to whether any of our friends have been murdered. And if they have, hell and high water can't keep us from busting into yore calaboose and hanging these birds high as Haman."

Red and his allies followed the arrested men to the jail, to make sure the sheriff did not release them. They posted a guard at both the rear and front doors. The leaders adjourned to the Crystal Palace and the Red Triangle to drum up sentiment in favor of a lynching.

Calhoun put the matter bluntly to the sheriff.

"Getting down to cases, Hart, what is your idea in locking us up?" he asked. "Are you holding us here till your friends are ready to lynch us?"

"I'm holding you here for your own safety. If I turned you loose you would never get out of town alive. You wouldn't get fifty yards from the jail door." Impatiently he added, "Why in hell did you come to town now?"

"Why shouldn't we come?" Terry wanted to know. "We have nothing to do with this crazy invasion Ellison's men attacked us today and almost killed us. We rescued your friend Jeff Brand. The Diamond Reverse B is being cut up into small ranches, of which Larry and I are buying one. What have you against us except that we won't stand for having our stock rustled? The trouble with this town just now is that it is seeing red and can't think straight."

"If I could get Red and some of the other hotheads to go up to the house where Jeff is and talk with him they might get some sense thumped into their heads. But no chance of that now. They figure you are one of those who paid that two thousand dollars to Turley to ambush their friends. You may have been, at that. Even if you have quarreled with Ellison since then, that doesn't prove a thing, and far as that goes they only have your own say-so that you're not hock deep in this invasion." The sheriff slanted a suspicious look at Terry. "Looks like you are, when you get off a telegram to the President asking him to send troops to support the big ranches in this business of killing settlers."

"That's not what I asked him to do," the Diamond Reverse B manager said. "Since the operator was in such a hurry to give out a private message he might at least have done so correctly."

Larry tossed a question at Hart. "Let's know where we're at, sheriff. Is it your intention to ask us to give up our guns and wait in a cell for these galoots outside to break in and send us west? Because we have other views."

Nate Hart was a harassed man. "I didn't get you in this jam, Larry," he said. "You didn't have to come here and drop a match in a barrel of powder. I'm trying to save you, but I'll tell you straight that if any bad news comes to town the boys will attack the jail. It's only a flimsy shack. You know that. I aim to protect you if I can, and if it comes to a showdown I'll give you back your guns to help me stand them off. More than that I can't promise."

He added after a moment, "If I could get a chance to let you slip away I would."

"Since we're not prisoners you'd better let us keep our guns," Larry suggested. "You might be where you couldn't get them back to us when we have to have them."

The sheriff recognized the force of the argument. "All right," he said. "Keep them. I don't need to tell you if you begin shooting you are sunk."

SIN AND ITS CONSEQUENCES

LESSON TEXT—Galatians 6:7, 8; 1 John 1:5-7. GOLDEN TEXT—If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.—1 John 1:9.

Sin is an appalling reality, hideous and horrible in itself, and bearing with it the gravest consequences both in this life and in the life to come. Man does not find it pleasant to face that fact, and so he makes light of sin and even may go so far as to deny its existence. Obviously such an expedient does nothing to solve the difficulty or to meet the gnawing distress of a heart facing and fearing the judgment of God.

Far better to meet the reality of it, admit its awfulness, and seek God's way of full deliverance. Sin, which came into the world when man listened to Satan and disobeyed God in the Garden of Eden, has gone on to mar and to mark all mankind. We note that

I. Sin Brings Corruption (Gal. 6:7, 8).

Seedtime is followed by harvest. This is the law of nature, the law of God. The farmer who sowed wheat in the spring looked for wheat when the harvest time came. The same principle holds in the spiritual realm. Just as the one who sows to the Spirit reaps eternal life, the one who sows to the flesh reaps corruption, and death.

A life of self-indulgence (which is sowing to the flesh) brings moral decay. The weakened will yields to desire, and it "bringeth forth sin; and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death" (James 1:14, 15). This death is spiritual, bringing separation from God, a loss of fellowship and communion with Him. Spiritual death as well as physical death came upon mankind through Adam's sin.

II. Sin Loves Darkness (1 John 1:5-7).

There is not a bit of darkness in God. He is light. When Jesus came into the world, He came as the Light of the World. But "men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil. For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved" (John 3:17-21).

The corollary of that truth is that a man who says he has fellowship with God, but continues to walk in darkness, brands himself a liar (v. 6). Compare Revelation 21:27-28 for what God thinks of liars.

The light still shines, and the one who is walking in darkness has only to step over into the light (v. 7) where he will find fellowship with all God's people and know the cleansing of the blood of the Son of God.

III. Sin Is an Undeniable Fact (1 John 1:8-10).

It seems impossible that a man who knows himself and knows the life he lives would ever deny sin, for it is one of the most evident of all facts. Yet men have denied it, or sought to explain it away, calling it error, or a "fall upward," or a step in man's development, or the evidence of man's self-consciousness and desire to learn.

There is no hope for a man as long as he assumes such an attitude, for he not only lies himself, but he makes God a liar. He denies the truth of God's Word about sin, makes meaningless or wicked God's dealings with sin, and reveals that God's Word is not in him. Those who make such statements declare that they do not belong to God and do not accept His Word. It is evident that they ought never to be permitted to teach such things in the church, or in the name of Christianity.

IV. Sin Calls for a Saviour (1 John 2:1-6).

Christ the propitiation, the mercy-seat covering for our sins, is the only Saviour. He paid the price, and made it possible for God to be just and at the same time a justifier of the ungodly. The sinner needs such a Saviour.

Sin in the life of the believer also calls for a Saviour, one who will cleanse us (1:9) and who will in His own blessed name plead our cause "if we sin." He is our Advocate (2:1) pleading His righteousness in our behalf when we do fall.

This does not mean that we may then become indifferent or careless about sin. If we say we know Him and do not keep His commandments, we lie about our professed relationship to Him. The mark of a true child is a spirit of obedience.

God's children prove their love to Him by keeping His commandments. Talking about our devotion to Him, giving our service for Him, or sacrificing for His cause mean nothing if we do not obey Him. We only pile evidence upon evidence of our untruthfulness by making claims and doing things which are negated by our disobedience.

EDITORIAL

The Rockport band has begun its sixth year of existence. Partly due to changing directors almost every year the band hasn't progressed as rapidly as was generally expected, another reason for the slow progress being the lack of correct instrumentation.

The band this year is much larger than last, though we sorely miss the many good players we lost through graduation. Howard Kinsey and Maisie Mundine are missing from the trumpet section. The brass section seems incomplete without Marshall Hunt on the sousaphone and Joe Morris on the baritone. Burton Wesche depletes the woodwinds and Lena Faye Phagan is missed from among the drums.

We have many younger students filling in these places and they have been working hard all summer. Some new students from other high schools who have come to us are: Lorna Bludworth, librarian, and Berle Collin and Earl Ward on the clarinet.

Making fun of the band is very common throughout this school. The student body has no reason to make fun of us, as we rank as high as any other band in this section. In fact we won first place at the district meet at Alice last year for all the bands of our size. We may not be maestros, but we don't think it would hurt any of you to act like you thought we were, just to give us a little confidence and the knowledge that the school is still backing us.

Editor Pirate Log:

Our school has at last achieved a school newspaper. It is a worthwhile project that will benefit the entire school. A school newspaper will cause more interest among the pupils in school activities. It will bring a closer relationship between the parents and the school because they will know what is going on in the school. The students will study more to secure places on your efficient staff.

I would like for you and your staff to know that the entire student body is ready and willing to cooperate with you in the publishing of the school newspaper. I also wish the best of success to you and your staff on this year's newspaper.

Yours truly,
Lena Faye Phagan

Shop Class Now Under Way

The Shop I class of the Rockport High School is now successfully underway. The instructor, Mr. Mobley, has appointed the following assistants to help him: Arthur Lee Roberts, shop foreman; Earl Ward, tool checker; and Quentin Drunzer, secretary.

Students in Shop I are not eligible to use power tools, so they have been assigned to make an end lap joint, a cross joint, and a door stop, with hand tools. Few have completed their first six weeks' assignment but all of the students are improving in skill in the use of tools.

Q. What can I do to help my son who is just entered military service?

A. Your boy must be clothed, fed, and supplied with the latest equipment. This requires money. Buy Defense Savings Bond and help the Government equip your son.

Rockport Pirates Tounce Mathis Pirates 20 to 0 At Mathis Friday Night

Mathis Unable to Score As Rockport Turns Screws With Ingleside in View

The Rockport Pirates played the Mathis Pirates Friday night on the Mathis gridiron. The field was slightly damp from a past rain, making the preparation - covered suits of both teams dirtier. The Rockport Pirates ran 7 first downs, threw 11 passes and completed 5, and substituted 4 times. The Mathis Pirates ran 7 first downs, threw 6 passes and completed 1, and substituted 12 times.

In the first quarter the two teams played close all around until the first part of the second quarter when Mathis had a punt blocked on their 15 yard line. Then Johnson passed to Bracht for the first score. Bracht then converted for the extra point.

In the third quarter Mathis kicked off to Rockport and Bracht picked up the ball on his 20 yard line and ran it 61 yards to Mathis' 19. On the following play Johnson fumbled and Mathis recovered. Toward the end of the quarter Johnson threw a pass to Solis good for 40 yards. Johnson passed to Bracht for 7 yards and then Roe plunged center for the score. Bracht kicked the extra point.

In the fourth quarter Johnson threw a pass from his 40 yard line to Schuster on the Mathis 16. Johnson then skirted end for 5 yards, and then threw a pass to Roe for the score. Bracht failed to make the point.

Five hundred students of the Georgia university came to the capitol in Atlanta to protest to Governor Talmage because their school had been dropped from the Southern university conference. Governor Talmage was not in town at the time of the demonstration. Note students mounting bust of Talmage on capitol grounds.

Miss Johnson Adds Two Pairs of Shoes To Collection

Miss Ellen Johnson, principal of the Elementary School, received two pairs of shoes to add to her collection. One pair is from Iceland. They are made of skin with gray fur on the outside. Inside they are lined with a pale lavender and orange knitted lining. The second is a pair of slides from Hawaii. The bottom of the sole is made from a special type of rubber, the top of woven straw. The straps are green and white velvet. They were sent by Electrician Mate Alphonso Morgan, a former Rockport boy now on the U. S. S. Heywood.

Miss Johnson has a great number of shoes in her collection. She also received two pairs of shoes from Alphonso at the beginning of his enlistment in the Navy.

Lena Faye Phagan Wins Second Place In Fair Again

Lovely young Lena Faye Phagan, 1941 graduate of Rockport High School, has taken away honors from the State Fair at Dallas for the third consecutive time with her beautiful and unique fish scale flowers, placing second in the Hobby Show.

A hobby both rare and intriguing, it has also proven very profitable, brings her quite an income from orders from all over the United States for the flower wreaths, necklaces, clips, corsages, bracelets and cut flowers made from various-sized scales from many different kinds of fish. Miss Phagan uses the scales from the drum and red fish and tints them with "an artist's eye for color combinations," quoting a major newspaper of South Texas. For vase flowers, mantle and wall wreaths, she uses tarpon scales.

Auburn-haired young Miss Phagan says, "I started making fish-scale flowers three years ago when an elderly lady was visiting in our home. She made flowers from fish scales for a past-time. I began to help her and after a lot of

School Adds New Equipment

Have you noticed the new equipment which has recently been added to the assets of the school? Some of the useful additions are: a new power lawn mower, which has caused the grassburrs and weeds to diminish rapidly; three new typewriters for the commercial department, and a weekly newspaper of the world that has been placed in the library. This map is especially important to the American Government class. The Homemaking class has some new silverware and linens which will aid them very much in their work this year.

practice I succeeded in making the flowers.

"The making of flowers started out as a hobby but is now a paying business. I send fish-scale articles to all parts of the United States. The corsages, bracelets and pins sell for 50c; vase flowers, wreaths and necklaces sell for $1.00 each. I sell the smaller hair clips and corsages for 25c.

"I have received several prizes on my fish-scale work, and had publicity in nearly every state of the United States. I graduated from High School last year at the age of sixteen years."

JUST PATTY

—Jean Webster

Patty and Priscilla were entering their senior year at St. Ursula's and were having a hard time getting prepared for their last year in school.

There were new roommates, and Patty and Priscilla were both dissatisfied with them. The new students were unaccustomed to Patty's way of doing things, therefore Patty took advantage of them many times.

One of the many funny incidents was the predicament Patty and Connie got themselves into by dressing themselves as gypsies. The school had a costume party, and as everyone was dressing like historical characters, the two girls decided to be different.

They cleaned their rooms for weeks with the old dresses they were going to wear so as to be sure that they were very dirty. They greased their hair, cut up a pair of old shoes, etc. They were going to be original and realistic.

After the party they went down town to have a picture made of all the girls in costume.

Patty and Connie were standing in town and had a very difficult time getting back into school. Everyone thought they were real gypsies. Of course Patty, who is very full of mischief, was delighted, but poor conservative Connie was horrified at having to walk around town in her dirty clothing.

They have many humorous experiences which make up a very interesting book.

"WHEN PATTY WENT TO COLLEGE"

—By Jean Webster

Jean Webster's "When Patty Went to College" is a sequel to "Just Patty." In this story Patty is in college, and it tells of her many humorous experiences while there. The book is written for the benefit of young girls and for the entertainment.

The people in this story are practically all girls who are Patty's friends and teachers. Patty's roommate, Priscilla, is a very nice girl who constantly tries to talk Patty out of mischief. Patty is the sort of girl who is very honest and seldom lies, except about little things.

One of her most interesting experiences is when she went to the hospital to escape a test, and while there, studied for it. When she went back to take it, she told the teacher the exact truth. And of course she was never punished very severely because she always told the truth to her superiors.

This book is very good, and I like it very much.

To watch the waves throw up their spray;
And as I walked, alone and very sad,
I wondered why the waves seemed Mad.

Fire Chief Francis Smith Interviewed

During Fire Prevention Week, Frances Smith, Chief of the Rockport Fire Department, was interviewed. He stated that there are twenty-one men in Rockport's vicinity who have volunteered their time to fighting fires that may occur anytime.

The present fire marshal is Lyle Dietrich, who was elected by the members of the fire department. They hold their meeting each Tuesday night at seven-thirty. At these meetings they carry on their business and plan for socials.

After the business, they run through some fire drills. They have about six socials a year counting the Firemen's Ball, which they have annually. At the present time they have three equipped trucks for fighting in the city limits and out of the city limits.

If you were to go and ask each member if he enjoyed his job I believe he would say "yes." The last fire was a car on the Fulton highway, damage estimated at fifty dollars. —Jerald Brundrett

County Treasurer D. R. Scrivner Interviewed

The first white child born in Rockport—David Rockport Scrivner—was 73 years old last February 2. He has been treasurer of Aransas County since 1898.

Parents of Scrivner, D. D. Scrivner and Helen Brown Scrivner, originally were from Mississippi, coming to this coast section in 1867, the year Rockport was founded. David Rockport Scrivner was born in 1868. After he had been in school here for several years, the family moved to Victoria, where he continued his studies in the public school. In 1880, the family moved again, this time to Cuern, where for four years he went to a private school.

In 1880 the Scrivner family returned to Rockport and in 1894 David Rockport went to Port Lavaca as manager of a co-operative fish and oyster business, staying there three years. He returned to Rockport and has been here since.

Scrivner became identified with City affairs here by serving as an alderman and as president of the school board. In November 1898 he was elected Aransas County treasurer. This fall will round out 43 years of efficient service rendered Aransas County in that position by Rockport's first white child.

Band Concert Given Last Thursday Night

The concert given last Thursday night, October 23, was the first of a series to be given to stimulate interest in the Rockport band and to encourage new members to join. There were quite a number of parents at the entertainment to hear the school band and also the town band which was directed by Gene Reader.

Representatives of the Graves Music Company of Corpus Christi made talks and demonstrated instruments.

William McGrath, director of the school band, expressed the hope that this and other concerts would bear fruit in the shape of a large organized band.

Pirates to Play Woodsboro Here Friday Night

Rockport Pirates Slated To Win Game

The Rockport Pirates will clash with the Woodsboro Eagles Friday night on the local gridiron. The Past Friday the Pirates defeated the Mathis eleven 20 to 0. The Woodsboro Eagles lost to the Bishop Badgers 12 to 7, therefore the Eagles will be out to improve their conference standing at the expense of the Pirates. The Pirates in turn will fight to keep their standing in the race.

Since this will be the last clash on the local gridiron before the final game of the season with the traditional rivals from Ingleside on November 14, a large attendance is expected.

Annual Hallow'een Carnival Slated For 7:30

Carnival This Year Will Be Best In Years, P. T. A. Committee Reports

Teachers In Charge

Booths to be Same as Last Year's, But With New Surprise Additions

The annual P. T. A. Halloween Carnival is to be held Saturday night, November 1. Mrs. W. C. Christensen, the chairman for the entire carnival, has appointed members of the P. T. A. to take charge of the selling of various kinds of food. High School students have been asked to donate candy for the sale.

R. E. Black, superintendent of the schools, met with the faculty Thursday of last week to decide which teachers would have the different booths, consisting of a bingo table, a fish pond, fortune teller's booth, and several other concessions. This year there will be a number of new booths but they are to be a surprise.

The carnival will begin at 7:30 with the school auditorium as the starting point. There will be a musical program of seven hilarious acts, directed by Wm. McGrath, these numbers given by town and school people "and we promise you a bag full of laughs," McGrath said.

The various booths will be stationed at convenient places in the court behind the high school building.

Come and bring your whole family and your pocketbooks!

The eighth grade was in charge of the assembly program, presenting a Major Bowes' Original Amateur hour. The program was opened with the singing of America, led by Gladys Griffin and Sally Leavens, accompanied by Mrs. Norvell Jackson at the piano.

Bill Buchanan, as Major Bowes, presented the following program: David Herring, Elmer McLester, Roy McLester and Gordon Kring in a Negro Act; Patsy Davis and Alice Davis doing a tap dance; a solo "When the Dew is on the Rose" by James Bracht accompanied by the pianist, Mrs. Jackson; Lucy Delgado and Petra Falcon singing "Rancho Grande"; Sally Leavens playing "Whispering Hope" on a Hawaiian guitar; June Hunt, and Alice Davis in Negro costume singing "My Life Story." The program was concluded by Jackie Dietrich reciting a poem.

At the close of the program the class decided to have a "dumb luncheon" on the Friday of Hallow'een at their class period.

New Yorkers Are Talking About:

Babe Ruth's price ($25,000) for his services in the Gehrig film, which Goldwyn screams is too much. He will probably pay it, though, as Ruth is a "must" in any biography of Gehrig. . . . Jimmy Walker, the former Mayor, who is being considered as the head of a new racetrack to be built in N. Y. The backers being very wealthy French refugees, wondering where to invest their coin. . . . MGM's planned film version of the town's big hit, "Best Foot Forward". . . . For Mickey and Judy. . . . The Nice-Work Dep't: One of Life's editors who was ordered to spend at least two weeks with Ginger Rogers—for a profile piece. . . . The way ex-Warden Lawes has added twenty pounds since "getting out" of Sing Sing Prison.

The way the British radio pounds away at Italy's slipping morale with eight daily broadcasts urging the country to unlash itself from Berlin. . . . Rome's reply probably is: "Why speak to us? Take it up with the Warden!" . . . The several society lads, on the verge of being drafted, who flew to California, shifting residences there at the same time. So that when their numbers come up they'll go to a camp in sunny Cal. . . . Dumb, huh? . . . The new bootlegging racket in England, where more bootlegging goes on in the clothing field than in food. And in men's attire!

The book, "I Paid Hitler," by Fritz Thyssen, the industrialist who first helped the Nazis in Germany. . . . Jimmy Wong Howe, the Chinese cameraman, and Rabbi Edgar Mag-nin, who made speeches for a short to raise funds for Irish Relief. . . . The depressing news about Hendrik Willem Van Loon, whose docs have ordered him to stop all activity for the next six months. . . . The Rev. Jardine, who came to the aid of Wally and the Duke. His letters are now ignored.

The way some of the pro-Nazis over here outsmarted themselves. The coin they saved on postage by having their hymns of hate franked through the mails doesn't begin to cover the costs of lawyers and bail. . . . Jimmy Dorsey's check for $40,000 from Decca, as his royalties for the first half of 1941. In short, he hit the Jukepot.

Notes of an Innocent Bystander:

The Story Tellers: Clifton Fad-man will have you know that he's a book-reviewer, not a literary critic. He points out the big difference in "The Reviewing Business," in Harper's. "Literary criticism is an art," he says, "like the writing of tragedies or the making of love and, similarly, does not pay. Book reviewing is a device for earning a living". . . . Charles Poore also takes a box-office slant at the prose racket in The Times mag, in his definition of the Pulitzer Prize. The value of the prize, he says, is "a thousand dollars in cash to those who accept it and ten thousand dollars in publicity for those who refuse it".

The Front Pages: An editorial in the Herald Tribune epigrams the spot the Bolo armies have put the Hun in. "The Russians," the daily points out, "have only to survive somehow in order to win; Hitler has to win in order to survive". . . . "You can spot the Fascists' weariness for the war in their weakening propaganda bragging. Recently they claimed only to have damaged the British plane carrier, Ark Royal. In all previous naval scraps, both the Heines and the Fascists have begun with the sinking of that vessel."

Broadway Is Like This:

Broadway is where after you've reached the top—at least a dozen acquaintances claim having played a big part in it. . . . But when you fail—everybody blames you. . . . And you blame the "breaks" instead of looking for a job where your talent will be respected—such as waiting on tables or being president of a bank. . . . No matter how nice you are there will always be others who will knock you—through sheer force of habit. . . . A fellow who is considered more important than Roosevelt or Willkie is one who can pick at least one winner out of seven races. . . . If you don't talk about yourself—then you run the risk of being bored stiff listening to others gab about themselves. . . . The Broadway lights have done more to make the street famous than any of the famed folk on it.

Broadway is still the zippiest street of them all. . . . Remember when some people wrote articles alleging it was dead a few years back? . . . Many visitors come to The Big Town to see the shows when the best show is New York itself. . . . The Bowery, where many people are starving, is full of restaurants. . . . The best way to disillusion your daughter who is stage-struck is to point out the chorus girls staggering into subway kiosks. . . . No playboys or sables—just yawns and smelly subway stations, sister.

My Week
by Eleanor Roosevelt

UNITED WOMEN
One night, Mayor LaGuardia flew down to Washington, had dinner with us, and spoke before a meeting of the United Women's Organizations in the District of Columbia. This group of women's organizations is composed today of 57 women's groups, ranging from labor groups to political organizations.

They started with a meeting of 12 and stated that they would come together in a united organization to work for civilian defense. I think this is a fine achievement and hope there will be co-ordination and unity all over the country at this time in the interests of greater efficiency in community defense work.

The next morning, Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt arrived in time to have breakfast with me at eight o'clock on the south portico. Then I met my daughter and son-in-law on their arrival from Seattle, Wash. It gives a lift to my spirits just to see these two young people, even though I am so busy that I think most of our talking will be done in the middle of the night!

At 10 o'clock, I was at the Office of Civilian Defense, and returned before lunch in time for two appointments at the White House. Then, three representatives of the American Women's Volunteer and some of our Civilian Defense Office staff, came to lunch. We talked over the co-operation between the American Women's Volunteer association workers already in the field, and the Civilian Defense people, working through our voluntary information and placement bureaus.

I hope this will develop in every part of the country and am anxious that we should use all the work that has been done. We must keep in mind the objectives before all of us, which are to do good work to meet emergency situations and to improve the communities in which we live.

PLANNING AHEAD

One afternoon I again had the pleasure of meeting with the regional directors of the social security board. This time I heard them discuss some of the problems which are facing them, not only today, but in the future. Very wisely, they are thinking not only of such things as they may have to meet now, but of what may come when the present emergency is at an end and another period of readjustment is before us.

It is a great satisfaction to me to find so many groups looking forward and planning ahead, so that we shall not be caught unawares. I find this one of the most encouraging signs, for it shows that some of us, at least, are able to profit by experiences in the past.

POSTCARD REQUESTS

I have received several post cards which interested me very much. Suddenly people seem to have the urge to put their innermost secrets on post cards! One person asks me kindly to arrest three other people, asserting that they are guilty of slander. It never seems to occur to the gentleman that the power of arrest lies in the hands of certain special individuals, authorized by the government, and if I started usurping their rights, they might be somewhat indignant.

I also have a post card which directs that I shall bring certain practices of a local draft board to the attention of the President, and to no one else. The writers are apparently not at all interested in asking the proper people at the head of the draft service in their difficulties. In fact, they tell me, that if the President, himself, can not take a hand in this matter, under no circumstances am I to give the post card to anyone else!

However, these two cards show a confidence in the fact that the White House will take an interest in private matters which are brought to its attention. I think this is very flattering and am very grateful to both of these writers, though I am afraid I can not do anything about either request which meets their desires.

FREEDOM'S PEOPLE

On another night, Dr. John Studebaker and Dr. Ambrose Caliver, and several of their assistants, brought over the transcription of their radio program, "Freedom's People." The secretary of the treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau, and Lord and Lady Mountbatten were with us. We all sat and listened with great pleasure to this program, which will be followed by others, all of which I hope will be equally interesting and well carried out.

These programs should bring before the whole people, the contribution of the Negro race to the nation. After we listened to this program, Lord Mountbatten brought in the records of two songs by Noel Coward, which have been a great success in London lately. One is called "London Pride," and is charming. The other has to be approached with a sense of humor. It was written to stimulate the British government to giving proper consideration and equipment to the Home Guard. It is fairly satirical, but they tell me it achieved its object.

MINERAL AND VITAMIN RICHES FOR HEALTH
(See Recipes Below)

YOUR DEFENSE: HEALTH

Help yourself to your share of health by giving your meals plenty of health-giving foods and ward off the lack of resistance to disease that comes from not getting enough of properly balanced foods.

Economy and health will be the key words this season and throughout the country you homemakers will have to take your part and build the backbone of the country by feeding your families food that builds strong bodies, steady nerves and high morale.

Fortunately, good, health-building food is not just achieved through more buying power, but through wise buying. You can use canned vegetables, cheaper cuts of meat, milk and canned fruits.

You've been hearing lots about vitamins, so check yourself on them: Vitamin A is for resistance to infection, for growth and general well-being. You'll need it for your eyes, too, for poor vision and night blindness are common symptoms of the body's lack of this vitamin. You'll find it aplenty in milk, butter, vegetables green and yellow, fruits and eggs. It's also the one vitamin which you can store in the body.

Vitamin B1, sometimes called thiamin, is for appetite and good digestion. This vitamin's for good morale. If you're lazy, grouchy or nervous look into the matter. The chances are that you've been neglecting pork, liver, meat, enriched cereals and enriched bread and flour, and peab.

Vitamin B2 is sometimes called vitamin G also and also goes under the name riboflavin. If your nails have been brittle and grow slowly and break off easily or your hair and skin are generally in poor condition, add some of these good sources of vitamin B2 to your diet: milk, liver, eggs, cheese, lean meats and leafy vegetables.

Gums bleeding? Teeth decay easily? Perhaps you're missing out on vitamin C, for this is the vitamin that goes right into your system and helps you have good teeth and bones. If your diet contains plenty of citrus fruits (lemons, oranges, grapefruit), tomatoes, fresh fruits and vegetables, you won't have trouble with teeth, bones, or wounds not healing.

Vitamin D boosts vitamin C and calcium into action, makes them utilize the other vitamins and minerals. Vitamin D isn't easy to find in foods, although eggs, salmon, sardines and herring contain some of it. Milk can be fortified with this vitamin and then it is called "irradiated." Most common way of getting the vitamin is either through milk of this type or by taking cod liver oil in winter, sunbaths in the summer, for it is formed in the skin

LYNN SAYS:

Here's your guide for meal planning for health:
Milk: 1/4 to 1 quart a day for each child and nursing mothers. 1 pint a day for everyone else.
Vegetables: 1 or more servings a day of the leafy green or yellow vegetables; 1 serving of potatoes or sweet potatoes.
Fruits: 1 serving of tomatoes, grapefruit, or oranges a day; 1 serving of another fruit.
Eggs: 1 a day or 4 to 5 a week.
Lean meat, fish, poultry: 1 or more servings a day. About 3/4 of a pound of meat or fish is the day's quota.
Cereals: 1 serving daily of enriched cereal.
Bread and Butter: At every meal.
Sweets: some sweets occasionally to satisfy the appetite. This may be included in the dessert or an occasional piece of candy.

by the ultraviolet rays of the sun.

That's the round-up of vitamins. Now, how about minerals?

You've probably heard that you need calcium to build good bones and teeth, but did you know that you need it to help your blood to clot when you have a wound and that you need it also to regulate your muscle contraction? No food keeps people from getting old indefinitely but if you've good calcium deposits, you'll at least postpone old age for awhile. Milk and green vegetables burst with calcium so use them every day. Don't forget the salads: carrots, cabbage, and celery aren't too expensive in winter and they're calcium-rich.

Phosphorus works together with calcium in building bones and nerves. Milk, cereals, meat, cheese, eggs, nuts—all these have a good phosphorus content.

Iron's a marvelous pep-uppper. Not only does it guard against lagging energy but also digestive disturbances and general irritability.

Iron goes to work and makes red, red blood cells that are just about the hardest working cells you'll ever find. The red blood cell shuttles between your lungs and your 7,000-mile-long circulatory system dropping off the oxygen and carrying out the carbon dioxide.

You need lots of iron so don't miss a day on iron foods. That means you'll be eating plenty of liver, molasses, oatmeal, dried apricots, eggs, whole wheat, lean beef, cabbage, oysters and raisins from now on.

Iron by itself is apt to be a bit lazy. It needs copper to make it get to work, so be sure to have prunes often, whole-grain cereals, oatmeal, dried fruits, liver and oysters at some one of your three meals.

Iodine spells power. It is released to your system by the thyroid gland which is near the Adam's apple. Sluggishness, mental and physical, are the result of lack of iodine or thyroid deficiency.

Seafood contains iodine as well as garden vegetables. Salt has been iodized to help out general deficiency, and cranberries if raised in low-lying lands near the sea are a popular source of iodine.

Magnesium balances calcium, and as you're getting your milk you'll be getting magnesium, too. Other sources are green leafy vegetables.

That's the line-up. You'll notice that many foods contain both or several kinds of essential minerals and vitamins. Of course that should make the job you have to do easier.

FARMER PRICE VICTORY
Louis J. Taber, National Grange president, and other farm leaders didn't come away empty-handed from their conference with the President on price control.

While he would not agree to their proposal that wages be included in the price control bill drafted by Price Administrator Leon Henderson, Roosevelt did make one important concession. He said he would have no objection to a "parity averages formula" being put in the bill to limit the dumping of government-owned wheat and cotton when the prices of these commodities threaten to soar out of bounds.

Under this formula, to insure farmers an average parity price for the full crop year, restrictions would be placed on the amount of wheat and cotton that could be sold. Also, the dumping could not begin until prices reach certain above-parity levels, to be worked out by Henderson and the department of agriculture.

Taber and his colleagues had to do some fast talking to sell the President on this plan. At first he seemed in no mood to accept any changes in the bill and told his callers that if they had come to debate the question of controlling farm prices they were wasting their time.

"We have simply got to head off inflationary trends," the President declared grimly, "or face the worst depression the country has ever known after this emergency is over."

The farm leaders finally won him over to their plan with the assurance that they would not oppose Henderson's system of selective price controls, providing the parity gains won at this session were not lost.

Taber pointed out that though the prices of wheat and cotton are now only slightly below parity, and livestock above it, farmers get only 43 per cent of the consumer's dollar spent for farm products, as against 60 per cent in 1917, when defense production was geared to the peak it has reached today.

NEW LABOR HEADACHE

Strikes are still a serious problem, but the big labor headache currently harrying defense chiefs is the complex and mounting difficulty of employment dislocations.

Almost every day brings new reports of workers let out due to lack of materials, forced curtailment of production or other defense causes. Official estimates of such dismissals put the number at between one and two million.

And the end is not in sight. Some experts anticipate that in the auto industry alone 200,000 workers will lose their jobs.

Aware of the serious economic consequences of such dislocations, OPM heads are making strenuous efforts to overcome them. So far only partial answers have been found.

Originally, OPM tried to handle such dismissals by local absorption. This worked all right in towns with industries engaged in defense work. They could use the displaced hands and gladly took them on. But in communities where this condition did not exist, other solutions had to be found.

Various methods have been used. In some instances defense orders have been granted to reopen shut-down plants. In other cases, where conversion of a plant wasn't possible, an entire new defense plant has been erected in town. In still other instances, workers have been given "retraining" instruction and moved to places where labor was needed.

Defense chiefs count on Floyd Odum's reorganized subcontracting division to take up most of the slack on defense dislocations.

The American Association for Economic Freedom has reprinted an address made more than 10 years ago by Federal Judge Robert N. Wilkin of Cleveland on "A New Social Order" in which he advocated a union of the English-speaking countries to resist the totalitarian aggressors.

Heavyweight champ Joe Louis soon to be drafted, is tackling what he describes as "the biggest fight of my career." He has sent a circular letter to every member of congress asking them for help to raise a fund for a movement to improve the economic condition of Negroes.

JANE WYMAN and Regis Toomey have teamed to shatter all records for the screen's longest kiss—it lasted three minutes and five seconds, and you'll see it in Warner Bros.' "You're in the Army Now." The former record was held by Ann Sheridan and George Brent. Jane and Regis, seated on a hard piano bench, were told just to keep on kissing till told to stop, while Donald McBride, playing Jane's father (as well as an army colonel), discussed military problems. First thing they knew, they'd set a new record.

Old-timers may remember "Hummoresque," which was filmed way back in 1920 with Alma Rubens, Vera Gordon and Gaston Glass. It's coming back to the screen, this time probably with John Garfield in the Gaston Glass role, that of a violinist whose career is cut short by military conscription.

Fred MacMurray was too young for the last war, so he didn't know what it feels like to crawl through barbed wire entanglements till just the other day. He had to plunge through chicken wire for a scene in "The Lady Is Willing," the new Columbia comedy he's making with Marlene Dietrich. The wire merely surrounded some rabbits, but when he got out he felt as if he'd been through several wars.

Margaret Hayes isn't wearing backless evening gowns just now; probably won't for some time. As the female spy in "The Lady Has Plans" she had to have the design of a radio-controlled torpedo drawn on her back. Theoretically, according to the script, the ink is removed with a chemical which makes the plans invisible till another chemical agent causes them to reappear. Margaret was told by the prop man that she needn't worry, but she has no faith in trick chemicals.

Of course you'll want to see "Mr. Bug Goes to Town," the feature-length cartoon on which Dave Fleisher and his staff of 700 animators and artists have been working for the past 10 months. Here's some inside information on it. Fleisher figures that an entire painting of a scene or character must be made for every one twenty-fourth of a second the feature is being projected on the screen. Breaking down his budget of $1,000,000 in terms of running time, that comes to $9 per frame, or picture. "Mr. Bug Goes to Town" is a drama of insect life.

Incidentally, Miss Dietrich would like to make it very clear that the jewelry she wears in that picture doesn't belong to her. The $500,000 worth of gems were shipped from New York, and half an hour after they were sent from a jewelry store to the studio the shop was robbed. So the glamorous Marlene hired a couple of body guards and let it be known that when it's not before the cameras it's in a bank.

Radio's Fibber McGee and Molly are about to lose their privacy. As Mr. and Mrs. J. Jordan they haven't got a single rise out of an autograph hound. But with millions of screen fans seeing them on the screen in "Look Who's Laughing," along with Edgar Bergen and Lucille Ball, they're sure to be recognized wherever they go.

Critics of dramatic schools say that they're no place to learn to act. Paramount's "Gun for Hire" has three answers to that. They are (1) Veronica Lake, (2) Robert Preston, (3) Alan Ladd. All three went to dramatic schools.

It isn't advertised, but the army now has a regular military air service across both the North and South Atlantic, operating on schedule, just as punctually as any commercial airway in the U.S.A.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—the risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Kathleen Norris Says:

Moral Code Result of Long Struggle

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

Some women never cease getting into romantic mischief. They go on into wrinkles and gray hair, still looking for conquests, still secretly proud because men continue to be selfishly attentive to them.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

TWO words that used to play an enormous part in American family life are "duty" and "morality." These terms went out of fashion a long while ago; our younger generation wouldn't know how to apply them to general behavior.

Duty, they think, means doing certain disagreeable things whether you want to or not. And what a nerve anyone has to tell you what you should or shouldn't do!

Morality means not lying, not talking scandal, keeping your word, keeping your thoughts and your actions pure, conquering in your soul, as much as you can, feelings of hate, revenge, jealousy, lust, anger. Not being interperate. Not being proud. Not being selfish.

"Isn't it comfortable to be good?" one of the wisest women I know said one day.

Secret of Married Bliss.
So that when an old wife talks to a younger one, and advises her to make humility and patience, forgiveness and understanding a part of her wedding outfit, she is not advocating a course that leads to martyrdom. She is giving the bride the secret of married happiness. She is telling her that she will be happier in the long run, will indeed be one of the truly successful and contented women of the world, if she goes into matrimony armed with a sense of duty and a strong determination to keep the moral law. Once that law is accepted firmly nothing else matters.

Here is a letter from a woman whose experience unfortunately is somewhat typical today. It is just possible that if some good mother, 20 years ago, had given her a sound respect for morality and duty her story might have been different.

"Twelve years ago I was madly in love with a doctor I will call Bill," she writes me. "He loved me, too, but he didn't want to get married. It hurt my pride to be the one most in love, but there was no help for it, and even though I knew he wasn't any paragon, I was weak enough to give him everything he asked.

First Love Renewed.
"After awhile he went away, and I formed a deep affection for another man, Frank. Frank was the one in love now, but I liked him so much that eventually we were married, had a nice home, and a son and daughter. Five years ago we lost our boy, a grief that caused me a serious illness. In this illness my doctor was Bill, who had come back to town, and soon the old infatuation took possession of us both, with Bill the more ardent this time. He was married now and had two little girls.

"Frank discovered our affair and was heartbroken, as I was also, for he had always been the kindest and best of husbands, and had never known of my affair with Bill. We were divorced, and Bill was divorced by his wife, and he and I were married. Wretchedly unsuited to each other, this union was doomed from the first; Bill was always talking about his first wife and how wonderful she was, and I soon discovered that he was taking his daughters to lunch once a week and that often she joined them.

A WORD TO THE WISE

What a pity we are so reluctant to heed good advice! Children don't like to hear about such disagreeable things as "duty" and "morality." And when an older woman tells a younger one that the way to insure the happiness of her marriage is by patience, tolerance and forgiveness, the younger woman is likely to say something about not wanting to be a martyr. But the prevalence of this attitude does not alter the fact that only through obeying the rules of morality can we achieve that larger freedom which is so different from mere willfulness and which is the only real basis for a lasting happiness. Let Kathleen Norris tell you why she might have helped the Georgianna of this letter if she had known her mother twenty years ago.

"I went to Reno, and feeling lonely and blue, associated there with a group of very rich people who thought of only good times. Among them was an attractive man of 50 who devoted himself to me. I confess that my mood was one of recklessness and irresponsibility. I made several trips with him to San Francisco and let him make me some very handsome gifts.

"But all the while my heart was steadily turning back to Frank, and the security and happiness we had known in our home, with our beautiful little girl. I longed for them both, and for my husband's advice and understanding. When I received a letter from him saying that he felt the same way, and that Tanya needed her mother, my heart was filled with joy for the first time in years. But 'the Squire,' as I call my Reno friend, also wants me to marry him. He has been three times divorced, but in two cases it has been to free his wife for a marriage she desired. The first time it was from a woman 28 years his senior; he was but 27 then.

Seeks True Happiness.
"Can you help me find my way to true happiness through this mesh of mistakes? I know I am a fool, weak woman, although I have never consciously done anything that could hurt anyone but myself. But I do want to be happy even though I am 32 now and don't expect the raptures of young love again. The Squire has little money, but he lives in New York and knows everyone worth knowing. To go back to Frank, on the other hand, means my old environment, my old friends, and my little girl. Which way lies wisdom?"

Georgianna, who writes this letter, includes a picture of herself, a pardonable bit of vanity, for she is a beautiful woman. Slim, well-dressed, with a smart hat sweeping off her face and her hands in the pockets of a magnificent fur coat, she looks capable of getting into a lot more mischief before she is through. Such women, in truth, never get through. They go on into wrinkles and crimps and gray hair still looking for conquests.
I have no advice for her. She wouldn't take it anyway. But if I had known her mother 20 years ago I might have been able to say something that would have been helpful. Something about morality and duty.

THIS matter of expecting even the stronger football teams to win all of their games or most of their games is a point all of joint—if a point can have a joint. Even the Yankees and Dodgers, good enough to carry off a pair of pennants, won only two-thirds of their starts, and football should be judged in much the same manner.

There are too many strong teams in the field today for old grads to keep expecting one victory after another. Many have now even reached the point of tossing out teams that happen to have lost a single game.

On this basis where would the Dodgers have been last spring when even the Giants beat them three straight to open the season? As Bob Zuppke once said, "Out in that Big Ten I can lose every game and still look good." And that might be true.

Accidents, tough breaks, injuries and other details can often make a difference of two or three touchdowns in a game. The psychological setup has wide ranges.

The main answer is that any team playing a first-class schedule can look back on a good season if it can win a majority of its starts. Last season, for example, Minnesota won every game—yet Minnesota had the closest possible calls against Michigan, Northwestern and Ohio State, with whom just a slender flop in luck the other way might have brought the gallant Gophers three setbacks.

That's the way football is. One or two breaks, especially in the passing game, can raise an abnormal amount of old-fashioned Cain. It has been that way every season, and this should be no exception.

The 'Next Year' Job

Messrs. MacPhail and Durocher of Brooklyn's Dodgers are not thinking at the moment of any revenge on the Yankees next fall. Their first move will be to stall off the Cardinal charge.

Sam Breadon and Branch Rickey both believe that said Cardinals will be much harder to hold in check next spring and summer with so many crack young pitchers on hand. Against this Wyatt, Davis and Fitzsimmons of the Dodgers have a combined total of 107 years—or 108 years by 1942.

"You might also add that we can't be expected to have another such run of terrible luck," Rickey said. "That will make a terrific difference."

The 1941 World series is now back with the dust-gathering archives, but they are still talking about Joe Gordon, the Oregon Flash.

Gordon did something more than bat .500 in the series and reach first 14 times in five games. He killed infield drives that would have whistled safely through Dodger defenses, and this makes a major difference to any pitcher.

The Yankees slipped at least four hits to the right of second that Gordon would have been waiting for—or at least would have handled without breaking his neck.

The Yankee star is remarkably quick starting in either direction, and he is even quicker with his hands. As a freshman at Oregon he was the most promising-looking young football player the West coast had seen in years, but abandoned the gridiron for a diamond career. Joe McCarthy wants none of his athletes playing football.

Gordon has less tension on big days than any other ball player in the game. There is no situation that can tighten him up. And the game can't show you a finer sportsman.

A Call for Help

"Now that the World series is over," writes a fan, "how about helping out a few of us duffers? Some time back you wrote something about 'live hands' in golf. How do you get live hands?"

Dead hands and dead wrists are usually the result of leg and body tension. This tension tightens up both hands and wrists, and leaves nothing left but a shoulder or a body lunge.

British Open Drive to Recruit Over Hundred Thousand Girls For Service

LONDON — A big new War Office campaign aiming to bring 100,000 girls into the A. T. S. by the end of the year has begun by Gen. Sir Ronald Adam, Adjutant-General to the Forces. He has announced that his aim is to increase fourfold the present numbers in the Auxiliary Territorial Service.

At present, the rate of recruiting is more than 2,000 a week, and this will be pushed up to 3,000 and probably 4,000. Extra training depots are to be opened throughout the country in order to cope with the forthcoming flood of recruits.

Girls who join are being assured there is no "waiting list," and they will begin work immediately. Officers are being promoted more rapidly. At present, 200 of them are being trained at a time. This number will be increased to 800.

Progress Found For Salvaging Alloy Steels

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—A new process of reclaiming hundreds of tons of stainless steel and alloys of other vital defense metals now wasted as scrap is reported by Dr. John Wulff of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The process converts stainless steel, tungsten, chromium, nickel and magnesium scrap into powder and they then are molded into new objects.

Dr. Wulff already has discussed the reclamation process with representatives of government arsenals and navy yards and with defense industry officials at a Tech-metallurgy conference.

It is estimated the process will reclaim more than 5 per cent of the 100,000 tons of stainless steel annually discarded as waste because there has been no economical method of salvaging it.

Dr. Wulff says his process is limited primarily to powder and shavings from boring and cutting the metal. The process consists of heating the scrap enough to allow addition of materials which separate impurities from the good metal.

700 Thousand Fires Yearly Occur In United States

Fire losses in the United States within the last twenty-five years have amounted to nearly $10,000,000,000, the annual average being about $400,000,000.

Since 1900 about 400,000 Americans have lost their lives by fire. During the last twenty-five years more persons were burned to death in the United States than fell in both the World War and the Civil War. It is estimated that there occur about 700,000 fires a year in the United States, of which about 400,000 are in homes. A home fire takes place somewhere in the United States every minute and a half and about every fifty minutes some person is burned to death by fire.

Fire Prevention Week is the normal period for the home owner to make a careful inspection of his residence with a view to eliminating fire hazards. Attics and basements are two conspicuous storage places for dangerous accumulations of waste paper and debris of all kinds which facilitate the spread of fire and make it difficult for firemen to carry out their duties. These accumulations frequently are the cause of fire. Heating plants should be inspected for defects. All furnace pipes should be a safe distance from flammable material or should be properly insulated. Chimneys should be examined and cleaned during Fire Prevention week. Electric wiring should be inspected for defects. Light cords should not be suspended on nails, pipes or other metals. Electric fuses should be examined to make sure they are in good condition.

Self-inspection blanks for homes are readily obtainable and they provide an easy medium for checking on hazards in the home. In addition self-inspection blanks for mercantile establishments are readily available to aid in eliminating fire hazards in industrial plants and factories.

If You Have a Child Film Star--Mother Advises How to Guide Little Tot

NEW YORK — Mothers of everyday kids who sympathize with the parents of movie children on the ground that the limelight spoils tiny tots and upsets their adult lives, should be careful. In these days a mother never can tell when a movie scout will make an offer for the most immature member of her brood.

That's just what happened to Mrs. Evelyn Copp, formerschool teacher and housewife of Martin Ferry, Ohio. Holly beckoned her little daughter, Carolyn, veritably out of the Copp backyard. And today Mrs. Copp is satisfied that the theory of non-Hollywood mothers is wrong. In fact, after slightly over two years of watching her daughter work before cameras, Mrs. Copp feels that a youngster acting in Hollywood has advantages, other than merely financial, which the average kids have to wait years to attain.

"Once a child goes to Hollywood, it's the parents who have to keep their feet on the ground," opined Mrs. Copp while on a visit here with her daughter, seven-year-old Carolyn Lee, and the child's special tutor, Mrs. Edward Horch of Wheeling, West Va. Little Carolyn, incidentally, could not read a word last July when the private teacher was retained as a traveling companion. The teacher was Carolyn has a better knowledge of the use of words than the average adult. Today, thanks to intensive study at an unusual memory which enabled her to remember several hundred lines of dialogue during production of her latest picture, "Birth of the Blues" starring Bing Crosby, Carolyn can read as well as the child who has been to school for an entire year.

A tip to that other mother who may be the next in 10,000 to have a Hollywood scout ring her doorbell is gladly handed down by Mrs. Copp, thusly:

"1. Keep your child close to you. Always give her the benefit of your advice. And don't forget that your husband is also the child's father. Keep him apprised of every development, even if it means putting in a call out of Hollywood for home every night.

"2. Movie children can't spoil. The minute they show signs of spoiling the director shakes his head warningly. If they don't take the warning they're through with movies. Carolyn and I always regard each picture as our last. That makes us both try as hard as we can—and when I say 'we' I mean 'we' because we think and act together.

"3. I always remind Carolyn that she will see the same people coming down that she sees going up; that it's senseless to let this movie business change you because it may drop you any day."
