BOOMING SUMMER PROSPECT FOR ROCKPORT A. C. GLASS HEADS NEW RED CROSS CHAPTER

We Americans can win this war. We can win it by making weapons fast enough to turn the tide against the Axis. And we are making them, faster and faster every day, for more and more plants are being changed to war work.

In many communities all the factories in the town have pooled their machines to manufacture weapons. They're small plants-too small to handle a war contract alone. But they can handle parts of contracts, and if they all work together they can do the job. Today they are working together on an increasing scale. The whole community is rallying around and everybody is cooperating to lick our enemies. * * *

To lick them quickly we must keep on cooperating. Production of weapons isn't just a job that happens inside a single factory. In many ways it depends on all of us on the men who work in the plant and on the understanding they and the rest of us have of the enormous production difficulties that industry is overcoming. Realizing that, one company called the people of the town together and told them the diary of its war plant. It told them how the plant was being changed from peapce to war work, how employees were being ter is received, it is hoped that a trained for ne wjobs. It even conducted tours through certain parts of the plant so that the people of the town could see forthemselves how fast the work was going.

For the work is going fast, not only in that plant, but in factories all over the country. In many cases censorship prevents us from learning just how rapidly plants are rning out weapons. But this much we do know: they are picking treasurer. These members will apup speed. They're busy writing their own war production diaries, busy making the weapons that will win this war.

Life - Long Resident Of Short Illness

Funeral services for Allyn M Roberts, 53, were read today by the Rev. Herbert McGloin and Rev. J. H. Kelly, in the Sacred Heart Church here. Roberts died of pneu- cruiser the "Saltaire" belonging monia at his home early Wednes- to the American Liberty Oil Co. day, following a brief illness during which he had been confined to bed only three days.

At the time of his death he was engaged in the automobile business. He was a member of the Rockport, at all times interested in community affairs and civic progress. Roberts saw nearly two years of service in the first World War, remaining in Germany with the Army of Occupation.

Surviving are his wife; two sons, Aviation Cadet Allyn M. Roberts, Jr., stationed at Cimarron Field. Okla., and David Roberts of Rockport; a brother, Raymond Roberts of Rockport; six sisters, Mrs. A. J. Adolphus, Mrs. Bertha Lassiter, Mrs. A. R. Curry, all of Rockport, Mrs. B. F. Spaulding of Corpus Christi, Mrs. G. S. Spinney of Aransas Pass, and Mrs G. A. Davenport of San Antonio, all of whom were present today. Pallbearers were Flem Bullard, John Sorenson, and Dudley Bracht of Rockport; William Snyder and May Keepers, Aransas Pass, and M. K. Shepherd, Corpus Christi. His many devoted friends were named as honorary pall bearers.

Relatives and friends from Corpus Christi, Aransas Pass, Port Aransas, Three Rivers, Tilden and Callihan came to share in the last rites with a host of local citizens. Cage Funeral Home was in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. A L. Bracht had as her guests Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Janecek and children of Corpus Christi.

Lockridge was aboard the cruiser Monday afternoon about 3:30 and again at 7 o'clock, at which time he tied it up for the night. Dr. C. F. Cron is credited with first noticing the flames as he returned from a late call. The fire was probably caused by defective wiring, Mr. Lassiter believes.

Sunday morning at 4:30 the Fire Department answered a rural call about three miles northwest of town, to the Bert Johnson place. A chicken house containing around 100 baby chicks was burning. The chickens belonged to the Hoal family, who were living on the place.

The loss of the chicks was estimated at $20.00. The grown chickens were gotten out of the burning house. The fire may have been caused by the explosion of the brooder which burned kerosene. A strong wind blowing away from the house saved the family's home, according to firemen.

Racing Against Time-And Tide

Time and tide wait for no man, we're told. So the Zebulon Pike, new freighter, was launched at five in the morning because the next tide would be at 5 p. m. That would have meant a 12-hour delay in laying the keel for the next ship, and in this war, time is important. The launching was made at the California Shipbuilding yard, Les Angeles.

Treasury Asks 71/2 Billion Tax Boost To Carry Out U.S. 'Victory Program'; Sweeping Soviet Advances Continue As New Assaults Puncture Nazi Lines

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau as he presented a new 7 billion 610 million dollar tax program to congress. If approved by This would be an average of slightly more than $175 for every man, woman and child in the nation.

TAXES:

War Not Cheap

The job of digging $23,000,000,000 in tax money out of the pockets of the people of the United States had been placed squarely before Secretary Morgenthau of the treasury, and he had placed a plan before the congress to accomplish this.

He had prefaced his announcement of the plan with the statement that it was a "victory program" and that "war was not cheap, but a million times cheaper to win than to

The plan had called for a general doubling of income taxes between the bottom limit and $10,000, increases of corporate taxes, increase of excise taxes, and a raising of the social security payment rates.

One innovation was the secretary's suggestion that at least a portion of the tax be raised at the source, employers withholding weekly amounts from their workers' pay

Secretary Morgenthau admitted would reduce the burden the following March, and also would prevent taxpayers from spending in inflationary avenues to purchase goods that could not be produced, in sufficient quantity to meet the demand.

The first reactions of congressmen in general had been favorable. It was doubtful if the eventual tax bill would emerge in exactly the form as presented by Secretary Morgenthau, but that something substantially like it would be adopted was considered certain.

Samples of the Morgenthau schedules called for single persons making a net of $2,000, now paying $117, to pay $230; for married persons making $2,200 with no dependents, now paying $61, to pay $118; for married persons with two dependents (average family) making a net of $2,700, to pay $64 instead of the present $29.

RUSSIANS:

Increase Pace

It had been expected that as the spring thaws began to set in the Russians would find the going more difficult, especially as Hitler made ready for his "spring offensive."

Some wonder had been caused when the Germans began issuing bulletins telling of enormous numbers of Red troops being shoved up toward the front, reports which were more or less confirmed from Red

There were two possible solutions to this-either the Germans were preparing their people for the expected report of the loss of the Sixteenth field army, which had been trapped in the Staraya Russa district, or they were trying to convince the United States and Britain that Russia did not need and could not use additional lease-lend aid.

However this might be, observers had considered it more likely that Stalin, having placed a large group of generals in the background posts of training new armies, was putting these into the fight in order to halt the "spring offensive" before it could get going. To the westward the Russian army has captured large quantities of war materials.

It recalled statements of Napoleon and of the Germans themselves during the last war, that conquering the Russians was impossible because of their tremendous manpower, for countless thousands of new troops always appeared on all fronts, just | billions of dollars, had issued a docuwhen one thought them well beaten.

congress, the new taxes proposed by the treasury, added to the present total, would yield approximately 23 billion 487 million dollars in 1942.

JAVA:

New Psychology The word "offensive" had become

eral Marshall had struck the keynote, and when the Japs came into Java, and General Wavell was rier with 18 bombers in two flights shunted off to India, leaving Dutch Gen. Ter Poorten in charge, almost the first order to the men was to make an offensive out of the defense of the island.

The troops, which included some Americans, British and Australians, but which largely were Dutch and natives, had hurled themselves at the enemy with considerably more force than had been evidenced by the British in either Malaya or Burma, and early successes were reported. However, the estimated 85,-000 Japanese troops were able to turn the tide of battle against approximately 50,000 Allied soldiers.

The Japs had landed at three points, the estimate being that 140 warships and transports had been used. One landing was on the Suthe third just west of Sourabaya.

Though most observers felt from the first that the battle for Java could have only one end, and though the Dutch, at the outset, were bitter against the United Nations for not having sent sufficient aid, the battle was the first test of the new psychology, to be "on the offensive" instead of the defensive at all times.

The battle for Java marked the closing phase of the beginning of the Southwest Pacific war. Japanese successes in that area, won at a huge cost of man power, were largely the result of overwhelming air superiority.

RIOM:

'Inside Story'

More of the "inside story" of the fall of France and the reasons for it had been aired by outspoken Eduard Daladier, ex-premier who had been placed on trial.

At the same time ex-Generalissimo Maurice Gamelin had stood stiffly at attention, refusing to answer a single question hurled at him by Pierre Caius, the prosecutor.

But Daladier, giving still more import to the reports of dissension and

A large squadron of heavy bombers, meeting considerable anti-aircraft fire, had flown over the city and suburbs all day and far into the night, dropping deadly loads in the neighborhood of the Renault, Citroen, Hispano-Suiza, Potz and Regnier motor works.

Vichy did not reveal the amount of the damage, but said there "were civilian casualties. London had been terse about the affair, simply stating that the Renault auto factory, to France what Ford is to this country, had "be come the symbol of French col laboration with Germany."

The company, said London, "is known to have been engaged in the making and repairing of transport vehicles, tanks and airplane engines for Germany.'

ACE:

Made in a Ddy

From the Pacific theater had come the story of a determined attempt by Japanese heavy bombers, evidently operating from an island base, to put one of our largest aircraft carriers out of action.

The vessel, thanks to the vigorous defense of the pursuit personnel, escaped "without a scratch" the navy had reported.

Out of it emerged Lieut. Edward O'Hare of St. Louis, Mo., as the war's first "ace in a day."

The Japs came against the car-of nine each. Only two got away. Yet the attackers came in with such ferocity that one of them attempted a "suicide crash" with his load of bombs on the deck of the ship.

"So close was it" the navy had reported, "that he was shot down by point-blank anti-aircraft fire when less than 100 yards from his objec-

O'Hare got six of the enemy planes all by himself. The other pursuit fliers got the other ten. Two returned to the Jap base unscathed, apparently. Two American planes had been shot down, but the pilot of one was rescued.

It was a dramatic affair and one which showed the American pilots were being tried in combat and not found wanting, also that the Jap losses, if they continued at five to one or better, soon were bound to be reflected in a loss of momentum for their drive.

STRATEGY:

Decided Upon

While there had been little question that the Atlantic Charter and a possible spring offensive on the European front, plus the keeping of supply lines open to Britain and Russia were the primary American military objectives, a significant terest of several strategy had been decided upon in the Pacific theater.

This strategy called for the use of Australia as a basing-ground and a hop-off point for the eventual winning offensive against the Japanese.

There had been numbers of "token" bombing raids on Port Darwin and other points of importance to Australia, and the Aussies believed that these were laying the groundwork for an eventual all-out assault.

But it was with the offensive, not the defensive thought in mind that Australia was planning with the United States for supplies, men and munitions with which to make the continent a springboard for attack rather than defense.

MISCELLANY:

Puerto Rico: American soil on the Atlantic side had felt the impact of ment called Directive No. 2 which German shells. The tiny island of Mona off Puerto Rico which houses a CCC camp, had been shelled by a submarine

New York: The Vatican radio had announced that food supplies, sent by the Pope to starving Greece, had arrived there safely and were being distributed.

She and Tonga Dick or Richard Wayne, a member of the Wayne family which has been in control of the property since her grandfather's disappearance find they are in love but they quarrel over Karen's claim to the island. Karen and her lawyer, John Colt, who is also in love with her, decide to leave Alakoa. But when their ship's captain, Ramey, asks for a man to pilot them through the dangerous reefs in Alakoa's trarbor, Dick refuses him.

Now continue with the story.

"By Gar, then," Ramey jabbered, "I'll pilot her out myself! I'll run your damn channel! I'll run your damn shoals! There's no coral in the Pacific that can stop me.

"You won't pilot this," Dick told him. "The tide has changed on you, Ramey; you'll never find the way without someone to tell you where you are. Go ahead and pile up your boat; when you've piled her up I'll take your people off. But the Seal will never get out of this bay to-

"I'll get a Kanaka pilot off the beach!"

'You've already tried that-or you wouldn't be coming to me."

A storm of blasphemous vituperation from Ramey's boat assured Dick that what he had guessed was true; Ramey had already failed to find a pilot ashore. Weary of argument, weary of Ramey, very much tired out with everything that was going on around him, Dick left the rail and went to the other side of his ship. For a little while the shouted imprecations of the Seal's skipper still disrupted the night. But, since he answered no more, even these at last died away; and the bay of Alakoa was silent except for the clink and thug of oarlocks as the Seal's boat went home.

Dick grinned sardonically at the anchor lights of the Seal; but it was not the boat he was thinking about. "At least," he said aloud, "I know exactly where she is; and where she will stay, this one night more."

CHAPTER XIII

Presently Dr. Shimazu came on deck and talked to Dick Wayne. "I think she's all right now," he said. "You go look for yourself."

"The knife wound-?" Dick asked. "The wound isn't going to amount to anything, I hope. But you come with me and look, so I can go home.'

Dick went below with Dr. Shimazu, little stateroom in the stern where he usually slept.

Hokano was stretched out face down upon the bunk beside Lilua, his face upon his arms; and Lilua had turned a little so that she could hide her face in Hokano's shoulder. When Dick had stood there for a moment, Lilua lifted her head, and looked at Dick without expression.

At first he thought that she was unable to see him; but in a few moments he decided that she did. She was simply looking at him with complete impersonality, like a cat; or perhaps simply like a girl looking at someone who doesn't mean anything to her any more. Soon Lilua lowered her head again, returning her face to Hokano's shoulder; and it was perfectly evident that Dick was instantly gone from her mind.

"I guess you were right," Dr. Shimazu said. "It takes a Kanaka to fix a Kanaka-providing they don't kill each other first."

"Of course I was right," Dick said. "Can she be moved ashore now?"

"I think so; yes." "Inyashi! See that the girl is moved ashore—carefully—and taken

"Yes, Tonga." "Maybe," Dr. Shimazu suggested,

"I can go home now?" "Your night is only starting,"

Dick answered; "I've got other work for you now.'

Dick called away the shoreboat again, and, with Shimazu, went aboard the Sarah.

Garrett Waterson's cabin, as they entered it now, was a strange mess. It differed from all other cabins in that it was full of more charts than most people have ever seen. There were charts all over the wall, overlapping each other in reefs and pads -and a great number of these had been drafted by Dick Wayne. There was even a chart nailed to the bottom of the deck above Garrett Waterson's bunk, where he could read it as he lay in bed. Hardly anyone ever got into this room; certainly, since Garrett Waterson had first taken possession, no one had ever cleaned it up. Old shoes, and sea boots, and miscellaneous clothing were piled about, or hung upon nails. But all this litter could mean nothing in this room-the charts were everything here.

Everything, that is, except the man. The ancient figure in the bunk had been a man of huge frame, once. Fever had carved his face very close to the bone, taking away much of his substance. Yet neither old age nor wasting fever could ever make this man appear ascetic-he simply never had been made on ascetic lines. Everything about him had been built in the beginning to

"So that's the way the wind sets," Garrett Waterson said at last. 'Well, I guess that's the worst of all."

thing arresting, even terrible, about | "took after" this gnarled and huge this big frame which had been built to a vitality for which the fuel was now gone.

And there was no doubt about the fuel being gone. A faint surprise showed in the eyes of Dr. Shimazu as he perceived that Garrett Waterson was still definitely alive. Little but the body structure of the frame itself now remained to show what Garrett Waterson had been. First inspection found no sign of life in the face, or in the big skeletonized form under the blankets.

After a minute, though, they saw the gleam of the living eyes. In Garrett Waterson's eyes still lived the embattled flame which had driven this man always to wild, extravagant, and uncompromising things.

Garrett Waterson spoke huskily to Tonga Dick. "You're a knockout, you little squirt, you are," he said. 'What's the idea?"

seas had ever been able to dominate Tonga Dick as Garrett Waterson could. Shimazu was amazed to hear Dick speak hesitatingly.

"Well," Dick said, without much likes of her!" effect, "I thought I ought to come back here."

Garrett Waterson's voice roared hollowly. "What the hell else should we do but come back? Do you have to duck out with our only fast ship?"

"Didn't know you meant to come." This time the effect was galvanic. The old skeleton form that had old trouble?" seemed dead whipped up on one elbow with a dreadful, inappropriate and hesitantly made his way into the energy. Garrett Waterson's voice came like the ghostly shell of a roar that once would have blown a mains'l down.

> "Who are you, you insufferable pup, to say what we are going to do?

As Garrett Waterson raised himself, Shimazu made a quick, instinctive movement, as if he wished to stop an effort which obviously was more than that ancient and wasted frame could stand. But Dick halted Shimazu with a gesture so casual that it carried an implication of utter fatality. He knew, if Shimazu did not, that only one thing would ever stop Garrett Waterson from any unwisdom whatever.

"Sorry, sir." "Damn your sorriness," Garrett Waterson said in a diminished voice. He eased himself back until he lay as lifeless as before. "And damn you." he added.

"Okay," Dick said. "Damn me. What then?"

"Where is this girl?" Waterson demanded. "Well," Dick began, "the fact

"What's she like?" Garrett hurried him.

"Well," Dick began again, "she weighs about one hundred and twenty pounds, with kind of blue eyes, and-"

"Blonde and sallow," Garrett Waterson said bitterly. "By God, I knew it! Self-righteous, holier-thanthou. Preaching half the time. Wears starchy clothes. Oh, I knew it!"

The outburst winded the old man, and the silence that followed gave Dick time to consider. He supposed that Garrett Waterson was assigning to Karen the attributes he had chosen to recognize in the family into which his son had married. Or, perhaps, the old man's resentment had been inspired by something even more unhappy than that. "No," Dick said. "She isn't like that. There isn't anything like that about her at all."

Garrett Waterson rolled questioning eyes upon Dick and waited.

"She has blue eyes, like I said, but she has black hair; and she's the color of a gardenia, and she doesn't ever tan at all. There's no preaching about her-for all I know there isn't even any morality. And she's more alive than anything you ever set eyes on yet."

There was a silence again. "So that's the way the wind sets," Garrett Waterson said at last. "Well, I guess that's the worst of all." "Doesn't anything ever please you?" "From what you say," Garrett Waterson said, 'the girl takes after he could see the Seal's lights movhave than that, I'd like to know?" There was something ridiculous in be big and vital. There was some- the suggestion that Karen Waterson

The old man seemed to rest for a moment, and Dr. Shimazu took the opportunity to attempt a counting of Waterson's pulse. Waterson made an irascible resistance. "Get this Jap's hands off of me! Who do you think-"

"You'll either let him examine you," Dick said, "or I'll walk out spirit has never failed our people. on you altogether, and you'll proba- It was in the gun-pits at Gettysbly never so much as set eyes on burg, it was in the trenches in this girl!"

sulted with Dick in whispers. "I'll take his temperature as soon as we're sure he's asleep." Shimazu tell you, this is a very weak man. He should have been in a hospital have tried to come here now. We're going to find out there's more than one kind of fever in this case. Blackwater certainly; and maybe something worse."

"Do you think he's in danger this time?"

Shimazu permitted himself a with so much wrong with him, there's no reason why he should be alive at all. His heart is very irregular, weak, and slow. My advice is if you want anything from can guarantee, he may never talk lucidly again."

"It's as bad as that, is it?" Shimazu shrugged. "This is a worn out machine. Yes," he added, returning to the understatement that he favored, "this man is sick."

They stood silent for the space of more than a minute, looking at the figure in the bunk. A huge flying cockroach, with a body bigger than and check back on his record. Lots a mouse, flew blunderingly across the cabin, and hit the bulkhead with in America's interest. You don't a metallic clatter; it recovered itself immediately, and ran behind a large chart of Rotoava Anchorage.

"I've got to get up," Garrett Waterson mumbled. "I've got to see James Wayne."

They ignored this, and the mumbling ceased. There were a few moments of complete silence.

Suddenly the still figure spoke in a surprisingly strong voice, a voice that seemed wrung from it by an unexplainable emotion. "I would have given my whole life-my whole life, and a lease on my soul in hell, just to see her-just to look at her one time!"

For some unknown reason Shimazu looked appalled.

"By God," Dick said, "then you shall!" He turned to the ladder. "It's no good," Shimazu said. "By the time you get her here, he'll never know her. Tomorrow maybe, if he is still alive-"

"Then she'll be here tomorrow, too," Dick promised. He went up the ladder like the jump of a marlin. Then, as he came out of the checked. Now that he was on the open deck he could hear, across the quiet waters of the bay, the clatter of the Seal's loose jointed Diesel, and tain Ramey had weighed his anchor, and was putting to sea. (TO BE CONTINUED)

One striking phenomenon in England is what might be called equality of sacrifice."

I went to the civilian defense rally one night at Greenbelt, Md., the housing community which Mr. Rex Tugwell had the vision to promote. The meeting was in the schoolhouse, for they have there a real conception of community activity and work. Their Greenbelt Community band gave a very good concert. Main Faults

"What are the main faults among average golfers? The first starts with tension. The average golfer has no swing he can trust, he is trying to think about too many things, so he tightens up from feet to neck. "The first result is usually a hurried backswing. This in turn leads to a hurried, jerky downswing and to head lifting. This will rarely happen with a smooth, even backswing where the hands are in control.

"There must, of course, be a firm left hand and a firm left arm. But that doesn't mean a tightened, straight left arm."

Golf is a two-handed game, but to most people it is strictly a one-handed game, with the stronger right hand in control. But the left hand must do its full share with the right.

"We all realize now that the golf swing and golf instruction must be simplified. The golfer must be given only one or two fundamental things to think about. Forget Past Mistakes and Go Forward

(Bell Syndicate-WNU Service.)

A co-executor of my husband's estate, who loved my stepdaughter's mother, appears afraid that I am not going to discharge my duties regarding little Doris. He questions her before me as to her comfort and happiness.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

O SAY that a woman has "character" is always to pay her a compliment. All sorts of good things are wrapped up in that one word.

One thing all women of character have in common, Jones' apartment at the Shoreham | whether they are old or young, rich or poor, famous or obscure. They have learned to go ahead from the present

"I am a college graduate," writes Kathryn. "I come of a good family and ought to be able to boast an average intelligence. But I am in real trouble now, and don't know just how to get myself out of it. I've made a series of mistakes, but surely there is some way back to happiness for me, a quiet little home and the company of my little son

"I was married at 20, 13 years ago, to a man whose temperament was utterly unsuited to mine. We had a boy and a girl, tried again and again to get along because of the children, and finally were divorced six years ago. I was living with my husband's mother, a fine good woman, at the time, and stayed on with her when Tony married his stenographer and went to Mexico to act as superintendent in a mine. Little Tony and Mary-Lou went to school across the street.

Married Her Doctor.

"Three years ago my doctor, a widower with a daughter, eight years old, asked me to marry him. Paul was in every way a fine man and after a talk with my mother-inlaw it was arranged that for the present my children should stay with her, as Paul's offices and home were in one apartment, and to move to larger quarters would have injured his business. His little girl, Doris, lived with us from the first. She is a nice child, now 11, but not particularly responsive or affectionate.

"Paul and I had had less than two years of perfect happiness when But you don't have to think about two grounds: (1) heavy demands he was killed last summer. He left me a modest income, between $1,400 and $1,500 a year, and he left me been devastated by the Nazis; (2) Doris. She has no one else in the world. Naturally she is too young to appreciate the constant responsibility and sacrifice that the care of her, and the careful managing I have to do, mean to me.

She takes it all for granted; comes and goes cheerfully in our two-room apartment; helps a little sential their activities are to the war with dishes and dusting; already effort. My coexecutor of Paul's estate is a man who loved Doris' mother and appears always to be afraid that I hand, and waiting to be ground, am not going to discharge my full more sugar-cane than it is allowed duties regarding Doris. He questions her before me as to her comta set by the agriculture depart- fort and happiness. Does she get enough to eat? She has blankets enough? He then tells me about my predecessor, her mother.

"Meanwhile my first husband's mother has moved to a sister's house in a town about 50 miles away Once again my children are safe am welcome to see them whenever I care to, but the truth is that I way fare, taxi fares, and for the little gifts I want to take them. and effort on regret and selfrecrimination? That won't bring back lost opportunity. You can do nothing about changing the past, but your attitude toward it may have a lot to do with determining your future. Here is a letter from a woman in a particularly trying position, forced to devote her life to another woman's child, while her own two children grow up without a mother. To meet and solve a problem like that, says Kathleen Norris, takes "character," that certain something that enables a woman to forget the past and go ahead from the present moment.

own adored small son and daughter are growing up without their mother.

Worries Over Mistakes.

"Paul, of course, had no premonition that he would die so young. Normally, he would have expected to be with me until Doris reached young womanhood. But this is the situation, and I don't know what to do. I worry over my own mistakes and the dreadful 'might-have-beens' until I am a nervous wreck, and I simply cannot and will not see myself spending the next 10 or 12 years acting as nurse, cook resident governess and guard to a little girl that really, in my heart, I don't like. Please offer me any suggestions, no matter how unflattering, that occur to you."

Well, Kathryn, the first thing to do is determine to go ahead and not backward, from now on. Whatever mistakes you have made are made. and whatever conditions you have created actually exist, and there's no use crying about them. Tomorrow, and not yesterday, ought to be the object of your planning, for nothing will change yesterday. But tomorrow anything may happen!

I don't know all the circumstances, from this one letter, but it seems to me highly possible that you might handle the situation this way: Go to see the sympathetic, fine mother-in-law and tell her that Paul is dead and that you are going to find work to support yourself. Since you two were once close friends, and since she held her son responsible for most of the difficulties that separated you, she may easily ask you to visit her for Consideration Is Welcome.

If she does, make yourself quietly invaluable. Be everything to her and her old sister. Consideration is welcomed in any household, and honest flattery is very sweet to older women. It is highly possible that you will be asked to stay, to lift some of the responsibility of two lively youngsters from her shoulders; children of 8 and 10 need a lot of policing, and in a family with no servant they represent a lot of actual hard work. You might stay on as a sort of working housekeeper, or you might get a job near by.

Then go to the old friend who is so anxious about Doris' welfare and suggest that he and his wife take her on for awhile, or find a good boarding school and take her for vacations. Turn over to him almost your entire income, and express a lively and affectionate concern for Paul's daughter, but explain that sition of spending all my time and your own children need you, and energy to take care of the child of thus escape to reclaim all the joy

IN "HAPPY Go Lucky" A Mary Martin will have a new hairdress that's the result of a suggestion from Jack Beddington, of the English Ministry of Information. He cabled David Rose, Paramount's managing director in Great Britain (then in this country). "Medical authorities here consider it highly desirable in the interests of hygiene and safety that factory girls and other war workers should wear hair as short as possible on the back of the neck. Urge you to persuade Hollywood star to adopt similar style to encourage them to do so.'

Chris-Pin Martin made actors out of his six grandchildren the other day. Told to select half a dozen youngsters between the ages of four and ten to be his family in "Across the Border," the new Hopalong Cassidy film, he just went home and got them.

> Pop Corn Nougat. 11/2 cups corn syrup

1½ cups sugar

½ cup warm water 1/16 teaspoon salt

3 tablespoons honey

2 egg whites 1 cup chopped pop corn

2 tablespoons candied cherries, cut fine

Cook syrup, sugar, water and salt until brittle when tried in cold water. Put honey in a large bowl, place over pan containing hot water to keep honey warm. While candy s cooking, beat egg whites stiff and fold through honey. When syrup is cooked to the proper stage, pour it slowly over the honey and egg, beating hard with wooden spoon. Beat until the surface has a satiny appearance. Fold in pop corn and cherries, press into buttered pan.

Ever so good, ever so simple, and very pretty describes this light green salad in today's column. The grapefruit and lime flavored gelatin are a spirited combination that work the right kind of magic.

Lynn Says:

As fish gains prominence in menus, are you wondering how you can make it appetite-tempting? Here is a guide:

Nice to dip in egg and bread crumbs and fry in shallow fat: perch, pike, haddock, halibut, cod, sole, lake trout, salmon, in steak or fillet form.

Good for baking with or without a stuffing: the large fish, like whitefish, haddock, halibut, walleyed pike, salmon steaks, lake trout.

First class for deep-fat frying: oysters, shrimp, scallops. Dip these in beaten egg and crumbs and fry in deep, hot fat. Baked in loaves or timbales:

haddock, salmon, tuna, cod. Stuffings that go well with baked fish: bread stuffing (the same kind you make for your fowl!); celery stuffing, or rice stuffing (try this with pike!). For rice stuffing, combine 1 cup cooked rice with 1/2 pound sauteed mushrooms, 2 tablespoons of chopped onion, 2 beaten eggs, 1/4 cup celery, all cooked with 1/3 cup butter. This makes enough for a 3 to 4-pound fish.

THE MIGHTY WORKS OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT-Matthew 8:23-34. GOLDEN TEXT-What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him!-Matthew 8:27.

The mighty works of Jesus declared Him to be the Son of Godyes, very God Himself. Unbelieving men who would discredit the Word of God and deny the Godhood of the Son are at much labor and trouble to explain away the miracles, but without any success.

In our lesson for today we have Christ showing His divine power over the forces of nature, and over the demons of the evil spirit world.

We find the disciples in the storm-I. Fearful-but Not in Danger (vv.

As He calmly slept, fear of destruction laid its deadly grip upon the hearts of the disciples. For the moment they saw only the angry waves, the smallness of their craft, the hopelessness of their situation, apparently forgetting that with Christ in the boat they were in no danger, in spite of the fearfulness of their surroundings and circumstances.

Is this not clearly a lesson for us in this day so full of alarms and shall be overcome with fear-and well we may, if we do not have Christ with us in the boat of life But if He is there-if we are His with grapefruit sections and greens. in the kinship of regenerating grace

These two men (Mark and Luke speak only of one-perhaps the more violent of the two) were so strong lightful touch to the squash which is and wicked because of the demon in them, that their relatives and friends had given them up as hopeless and had sent them out to live in the wilderness.

How horrible is the power of the devil in the life of any man or woman. But let us never forget that while no man can control such a situation (Mark 5:4), God is able. "With God all things are possible" (Matt. 19:26). We have not done all we can for our devil dominated friends and relatives until we have brought them to Jesus:

Perseverance

Soldiers must break step in marching over a bridge, for the vibration caused by their marching in step would shake down the most solid structure. And so it is with the spiritual obstacle you may meet: steady tramping, the plodding doing of your duty day after day, will in time tumbie it over. In any task to which God sets you perseverance is all the power you need.
