REVIVAL TO BE HELD AT ASSEMBLY OF GOD CHURCH

A revival will begin Sunday, July 24 at 7:30 p.m. at the First Assembly of God Church, formerly the Bethel Assembly, purchased from Rev. Lee Bateman.

Rev. W. H. Law, of Houston, will be the principal speaker and will later be the pastor of the church.

The dedication of the church will be in the near future and will be in full fellowship with the Assemblies of God movement, headquarters located in Springfield, Mo. Everyone is welcome.

Joe Johnson Home Built In 1869

John Gibney built the Joe Johnson home about 1869, and sold this true Cape Cod cottage to Pick and Laura Terry in 1876. Gordon Gibson bought and repaired it in 1938. The Johnsons purchased it in 1945.

The fence, the beautiful old live oaks and shrubbery complete the atmosphere of a treasured New England home, of a type unusual on the South Texas coast.

This one-and-a-half story house has a long roof line extending over the porch across the front. The large chimney near the center of the house in typical of early New England homes, and so are the eight-paned windows and shutters, and wide clapboard siding.

Texas Trail Of Gold

Twin ruts still trace an indistinct pattern across portions of the Western desert wasteland, but those who see them would hardly know that here passed the old Chihuahua Trail—the great highway that once carried the commerce of two nations.

Long ago, it stretched from old Indianola westward through San Antonio, past the present sites of Del Rio and Fort Stockton, then plunged south into the Big Bend, to end eventually in Old Mexico, 1150 miles from where it started.

Over it passed wheat, cattle, gold, silver, copper and lead to the value of millions of dollars. Mexican commerce was important in the 19th century and, for Northern Mexico and the area along the border, Chihuahua was a natural distributing point. In the beginning, American goods were imported via the Santa Fe Trail, which ran from Independence, Mo., through Santa Fe, N. M., and El Paso.

However, this trail was long and difficult, so, in 1839, Dr. Henry Connelly, and American, and several other wealthy merchants of Chihuahua, encouraged by the Mexican government set out to find a shorter route. With seven wagons, 700 mules, 100 men (including 50 dragoons), and from $200,000 to $300,000 in silver and gold, they headed north, crossing the Rio Grande at Presidio del Norte and eventually arrived at Ft. Towson, Okla.

This first trip was not very successful, and it was not until 10 years later, when Americans entered the trade, that the trail assumed any importance. Then, its course was changed to pass through San Antonio and Indianola and, from that time until railroads were built, it was the great trade route between Europe, the Southwestern U. S. and Mexico. Merchandise moved inland and, in return, the wagon trains carried gold and silver by the ton to pay

Miss Dye, Bobby Coward Pledge Marriage Vows

Miss Gloria Juanita Dye and Bobby Darrell Coward were married Wednesday night at the home of Miss Dye's guardians, Mr. and Mrs. William Blevins.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Coward are the parents of the groom.

Sweet bay branches in the recessed windows of the living room were the background for the improvised altar, along with white tapers in white standards and floor baskets of white gladioli and Majestic daisies.

B. H. Thompson, pastor of the Church of Christ, officiated at the single ring ceremony. Miss Iris Sorenson played the traditional wedding music.

The bride, who was given in marriage by Mr. Blevins, wore a very full ballerina length dress of white net. The strapless bodice was fashioned with a long torso, over which was worn a short silk jacket which buttoned to the waist. A veil of illusion fell from a tiara of net and orange blossoms and she carried a white Bible topped with an orchid.

Miss Sue Blevins was maid of honor.

Her dress was of aqua voile and she carried a nosegay of white carnations with satin ribbon shower.

The bridesmaids, Miss Ann Blevins and Mrs. C. C. Perkins of San Antonio, wore pink voile and carried nosegays of pink carnations with satin ribbon shower.

Edwin Coward Jr. was his brother's best man. Johnny Sapp and C. C. Perkins were groomsmen and Joe Blevins and Tommy Picton were junior ushers.

A reception followed the ceremony, where Mrs. J. D. Spencer was in charge of the guest book.

The bride's table was laid with a white embroidered linen cloth and the attendants bouquets on a reflector formed the centerpiece.

Miss Joy Roe presided at the silver punch bowl and Miss Sue Blevins and Miss Ann Blevins served the double ring cake, which was decorated with white doves holding wedding rings.

For a trip to San Antonio, Mrs. Coward wore a navy blue ensemble with navy and white accessories and an orchid corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Coward will make their home in Rockport.

Both are graduates of the Aransas County High School.

Mrs. Wayland Wright and family spent several days in Alice visiting Mrs. Wright's mother.

Mrs. Babe McDowell of Alice spent the week with her mother, Mrs. Koehler.

Dr. and Mrs. R. R. Senter, of New Orleans, La., are visiting her parents, Major and Mrs. Benj. Stocker.

Trains like those of Santleben and Froboese of San Antonio were composed of prairie schooners to which 10 to 16 mules or oxen were hitched. They could haul about four tons per wagon, and freight from San Antonio to Chihuahua was $180 a ton. Ore, shipped in the opposite direction, was carried for $100 a ton, and the tariff on Mexican money and silver was $25 per $1000 of valuation.

The trains moved in military order. Sentries were posted at campsites and teamsters stood watch over the mules while they grazed.

By 1860 traffic had grown to enormous proportions, even though no cattle had yet moved over the trail as they were to do later. There were more than 200 freight and pack mule outfits operating. Upon arrival at Chihuahua, all of them quartered in the Meson de Massarre. The buildings of this establishment formed a hollow square, and along the inside walls were stalls for 600 mules. The great wagons stood in the patio, and from there traders did business with the merchants of the city.

However, with the coming of the railroads to West Texas, the trade died out, and the great Chihuahua Trail was no more.

Miss Foyenell Cole is Bride of Royce Harrell

At a twilight wedding at the Fulton Baptist Church Thursday night, July 14, Miss Foyenell Cole became the bride of Royce Eugene Harrell. The Rev. George W. Merriman officiated at the double ring ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Birdie Lee Cole of Fulton, and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Jackson of Mun. day. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. George Harrell of Rockport. Cathedral tapers in candelabra were the background for floor baskets of pink gladioli on either side of the altar. An arrangement of pink carnations was on the piano. Miss Karen Casterline provided the nuptial music and accompanied the soloist, Miss Barbara Schuster. Cecil H. Cole gave his sister in marriage. Her waltz length dress of white lace and net over taffeta, fashioned with a strapless bodice, was worn with a white lace bolero. Her fingertip veil fell from a crown of white rosebuds and she carried a white Bible overlaid with an orchid and showers of satin ribbon. Miss Shirley Bea Cole was her sister's maid of honor. Her ballerina length dress of blue net over taffeta with strapless bodice had a matching stole. She wore a shoulder length veil of blue net which cascaded from a halo of matching flowers and she carried a nosegay of white carnations. The junior bridesmaid was Jerry Lynn Harrell, cousin of the groom. She wore aqua net over taffeta, with shirred bodice, tied on the shoulders with matching ribbons. An aqua net shoulder length veil was attached to a band of matching flowers and her nosegay was made of white carnations. Lee Prophet was the groom's best man. Leslie Cole, brother of the bride, was groomsman and Francis Rouquette, Jr., junior groomsman. Cecil Casterline and Jim Ben Cloberdants ushered. Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the church parlor. The attendant's nosegays on a reflector formed the centerpiece for the bride's table, which was laid with a lace cloth over pink. Pink tapers in crystal candelabra flanked the tiered cake ornamented in pink rosebuds. Mrs. H. B. McDowell Jr., of Alice was in charge of the guest book. Mrs. Milton Harrell poured punch and Mrs. John R. Downs served the cake. For a wedding trip to San Antonio and Bandera, Mrs. Harrell wore a pink linen sheath with white nylon duster and white accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Harrell will make their home in Rockport. Mrs. Charles Cron spent several days in San Antonio visiting with her daughter and her family, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Ruble. Miss Shirley Harrell, who has been attending summer school at A. and I. College, has returned home for the remainder of the summer. Leslie Webb, of Wichita Falls, is visiting his aunts, Mrs. Clyde Townsend and Mrs. Richard Hapner and other friends and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Perrenot, of Pharr, visited with his mother, Mrs. W. T. Crawford last week before leaving for Edna and Houston to visit other relatives.

THE SPECKLED TROUT

This ought to be one of the best speckled trout years in a long time. There has been no freeze for years, and the last one cleaned enough of the rough fish out of the bays to give the trout an even break. In addition, there has been at least one year since the cold weather of 1950-1951 when conditions were exactly right and almost the entire spawning for the season got off to a good start. This is borne out by the size of the fish being caught this present season. Speckled trout, while young, grow fairly quickly, a fact disclosed by the examination of thousands of specimens made by biologists of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service. At the end of their first winter they are around four inches long; at a year and a half they have reached eight inches; and a trout at the end of its third winter of life is around twelve inches, the length usually caught by sportsmen. Trout that have seen their fourth winter are usually around 17 inches, although their girth has increased greatly. During the following year they increase another inch; a 20 inch trout has seen six winters, a 22-inch one is roughly 7 years old, and a two-footer has lived for around eight seasons. These fish move in and out through the passes along the coast, particularly during cold weather, but a program of tagging carried out over a period of several years shows that such movement is much smaller than is generally supposed. Particularly during the warm months of the year, as long as there is food, a school of trout may not move over a mile or two in a considerable period of time. This may explain why the fishing hole that was so hot last week hasn't a fish this week, and for some time to come. Everyone has heard about the hot spot; everyone has fished there; most of the school has been caught out and, because food is plentiful elsewhere. By far the great majority of trout caught by the average fishermen are only ten or twelve inches long, and, at this size they are apt to hang around shell reefs, and apparently use them as a loafing place, for very little of the food taken from their stomachs shows any organisms that live on the reef itself. Out of about 15,000 trout examined some years ago, only a small fraction (less than one per cent) had eaten any animal that live on a reef. Sixty-seven per cent of the total food was shrimp. The balance was composed largely of fish, particularly in winter months when shrimp were scarce. Incidentally this food study confirmed the fact that trout do not move much, unless the food plays out. It was possible, after a while to tell what part of the bay the fish came from by checking the contents of its stomach, other than shrimp. After a trout gets to be of fair size, it no longer hugs the reefs. Big ones don't school in the same manner as the two and three-year old fellows. They are more inclined to be solitary, or to move in small groups, and they prefer the grass covered flats during much of the year, where they can be taken by wading. These big fellows change their feeding habits, also. Where the stomachs of smaller fish show that much of their food is shrimp, those of the larger ones contain more fish. Like school fish they generally feed on the tide changes. They'll slap at a lure almost any time it's properly and enticingly offered, but as a general rule, the best time to fish for them is immediately before high tide, and from then until an hour or so after the ebb begins. If you are a bait fisherman, small crabs make an excellent tidbit for specks, particularly if you are fishing for them on the bottom. Shrimp make good top water bait. Live squid is good at night, and the fish will also take mullet and piggies. In the realm of artificials, which is where speck fishing comes into its own, they will hit spoons, plugs, spinners, metal squids, streamer flies and bucktails. Most anglers that fish for them with fly rods have their best luck with white or grayish white, or red and white, bucktails and streamer flies.

Dr. John E. Sparks Publishes Book 'An M. D. the Hard Way'

Dr. John E. Sparks, former Rockport physician, has become an author in San Antonio at the age of 78. His autobiography, "An M. D. the Hard Way," has just been released by the Naylor Company, San Antonio, book publishers to the Southwest. Dr. Sparks spent much of his boyhood in Rockport and first began to practice here after he received his medical degree in 1910. His father was the founder of Sparks Colony. In 1912 Dr. Sparks moved to Floresville, and in 1929 to San Antonio, where he still keeps daily office hours although he does most of his practicing in a wheel chair. "An M. D. the Hard Way," was written principally, he said, for his two daughters and two sons, now grown, so that they might know more about his younger days. This included much pioneering in truck farming in the Rockport area and going to dances across the bay in a boat. Later he went into the mercantile business, and it was not until after he was married that he decided to study medicine. He was born on a ranch in Bosque County near Waco and lived also in Valley Mills before moving with his family to the Rockport area. The new book is available at the Joe Johnson Drug Store and from the publisher at $4 per copy. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wright and family and Mr. and Mrs. Frank McLead and family left Saturday for Boerne to visit Mr. Wright's cousin and her family, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Watkins. Patricia Wright remained in Boerne for a two week's vacation. On their return trip home they visited in Marble Falls and San Marcos.

Many Area Residents Receive Social Security Payments

Monthly payments or retirement and family insurance totaling $8,423 to 221 Aransas County residents were being made at the beginning of this year...

That is equivalent to an annual payroll of $101,076 in this county, according to H. M. Cleveland, manager of the Corpus Christi district of the administration.

In the 17-county area of South Texas which is served by the Corpus Christi office, 10,057 beneficiaries were receiving benefits of $386,680 a month.

For all of Texas, 232,084 persons were receiving benefits at the rate of $9,960,463 a month. Nationally, the statistics show that monthly payments of about $340 million were going to about seven million workers...

The national average retirement payment was $59.14 a month. Cleveland explained that the amount is based on a worker's average earnings for work that is covered by the Social Security Act.

the property. For example, here is a general idea of how the community property which you and your spouse have accumulated will be divided if you do not make a will prior to your death.

If your husband or wife survives and there are no children, the surviving spouse receives all of the property.

If, in addition, there are surviving children or descendants of deceased children, they would divide one-half of the property...

Of course, grandchildren do not share in the estate unless their parent who would inherit is deceased. And when descendants of previously deceased children do inherit...

An odd note, perhaps, is that the surviving spouse already owns one-half of the community estate prior to your death...

When there are only children and their descendants surviving, they divide the entire community estate between them.

"IF I SHOULD DIE . . ."

What will happen if you should die without executing a legal and proper will? Who will inherit your property? Your husband, wife, mother, father, children, your wife's relatives? The best way you can say who will have it is to provide a will which will protect your rightful beneficiaries and dispose of your property in accordance with your wishes.

When a deceased has no will, or dies "intestate" as the law calls it, the property of that person is distributed according to a detailed formula fixed by law. In some cases this may be the way you yourself would divide it—but in many cases it is not.

The provisions of the law concerning the distribution of the property of a person who dies without a will are rather complicated, and all of the possibilities cannot be covered by a general statement.

There are different rules for real estate and for personal property, for community property and for separate property, for homestead property, and for all of the many possible combinations of surviving relatives. Each situation must be carefully studied to determine the correct distribution of

So You Want to Go Sailfishing

So you want to go sailfishing in Texas? Well, that's easy, just head for Port Aransas or Port Isabel and take off.

However, there are a few things you ought to know, and will probably have to learn before you and Mr. Istiophorus (sailfish to you) can make contact.

First, there is the matter of a boat. Any good 25- or 30-footer will do, but as much of the fishing is from 5 to 20 miles offshore, the larger one will probably be more comfortable.

Whatever the size of the boat, it should be fitted with outriggers. These are generally long bamboo poles attached to the deck on either side, just forward of the cockpit, that can be locked in place vertically when not in use. They are fitted with a halyard, in the manner of a flagpole, by means of which a big clothespin may be hauled to their top.

In action, the outriggers are lowered to about a 45 degree angle, where they are rigidly secured, and the clothespin is hauled inboard. The angler's line is secured within the jaws of the pin in such a manner that a light yank will free it, and then hauled out to the tip of the outrigger, leaving the bait riding about forty or fifty feet behind the stern of the boat.

Outriggers are used for several reasons, the main one being the way the sailfish takes the bait. He mouths it, but if there is any resistance he will leave it alone. This is not generally known, but extended research by the University of Miami has shown that it is true, though the common belief has long been that the fish strikes the bait with its bill first, and then waits to see if it is killed or crippled.

In the early days of sailfishing, Captain Bill Hatch, of Miami, the papa of sailfishing, observed this fact, and tried letting his bait run aft, after the strike. This gave the fish the illusion that the bait was killed or crippled, and the sail hung on, instead of releasing it.

However, the difficulty in flat line trolling of getting an inexperienced fisherman to do all the things necessary to hook a sailfish was enormous. In the first place, a beginner found it hard to recognize a strike, which may check the bait only for an instant, and then let go.

This is the time that an experienced angler will free-spool his reel and allow his bait to drop back, counting 1,000, 2,000, 3,000, and so on, up to 10,000, at which time he throws on his drag and sets the hook.

A beginner doesn't do this, especially if he is used to fishing for species like king, dolphin or bonito, where there is a hard, smashing strike. If he recognizes the strike, the impulse to set the hook is overpowering, and instead of letting the hook drop back, he makes every effort to tear the fish's head off.

This is a fatal error, for if the sail feels any resistance at first, he is apt to decide he wants no part of the bait, doesn't get it far enough back in his mouth, and, nine times out of ten, will quit right there.

To get around this, and to make sure of hooking more fish, the outrigger was evolved, advantages of which are enormous. In the first place, it gets the bait out away from the side of the boat into clear water. Second, the roll of the boat, augmented by the length of the outrigger, gives the bait a jumping, skipping motion, exceedingly attractive to sailfish. Most important of all, however, is the fact that when the fish first mouths the bait, the clothespin releases it, allowing it to drop back automatically without leaving any strain, giving the fish a chance to get the hook within its jaws, so that all the angler has to do is strike as soon as the line straightens.

The first run of a sail is strong and fast, and he may take a hundred yards or more of line. This is followed by a high, twisting leap, or a series of them, or he may decide to "tail walk" with body upright, and the tail beating out a frothy wake. Baits are many and various, although the first choice of most experienced anglers and guides seems to be a strip cut from the side of a bonito. A close second is furnished by a slice from the belly of a barracuda. Whole small mullet or strips cut from a larger one or also used. Cutting these, and getting them to troll naturally, without twisting, is an art.

Rods are up to the individual, and any medium tackle, provided you have enough line capacity, is all right. Because breakage is high, many guides furnish outfits heavier than needed. Sailfish are generally considered a nine-thread fish, which indicates a five or six ounce tip with 2/0 or 3/0 reel. There is a growing tendency towards six-thread, or lines testing less than 20 pounds, used with modern glass rods.

The terminal rig is 15 feet of doubled line to a No. 1 or No. 2 swivel, and a wire leader about 15 feet long. Hooks range from 8/0 to 10/0 in size.

We have already mentioned that baits should be trolled from 40 to 50 feet stern, according to the captain's judgment, but care should be taken to keep them in sight at all times, and clear from weed or similar fouling.

When the strike comes, if you are fishing with an outrigger, let the line straighten out, then strike. After that, it's up to you.

All the foregoing paragraphs have led up to this moment, and were intended to give a sort of preliminary picture of the mechanics of sailfishing. However, no words can convey, and no one man think of, all the things that you will learn in one trip to the Gulf with a competent guide, on a properly rigged boat, for there are many little tricks easy to grasp when you see them, but hard to describe.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Silberisen and Mrs. Ruth Janeeck and son, Herbert, of Corpus Christi, visited Friday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Bracht.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clinton and children spent Tuesday night with the Rev. Leo C. Owen and family of Kenedy. Then on Wednesday they went on to San Antonio on business. Rev. Owen is the former pastor of the Church of Christ in Rockport.

Circle One Meets

Mrs. Ran Wilde was hostess for Circle One of the Presbyterian Church Thursday in the Assembly Room of the church. Nine members answered the roll call. The meeting opened with the Lord's Prayer.

Mrs. Pat Greene, chairman, presided over the meeting with Mrs. Ellis Clark giving a most interesting lesson titled "Flesh and Spirit".

Mrs. Fred Brundrett, chairman of church extension, gave the emphasis on Christian Citizenship.

The hostess served coffee, Coke and home-made cookies before the meeting.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. Fred Christilles as hostess, August 11 at 9:30 a.m.

B. C. KINDEL OF SINTON, NAMED CHAIRMAN OF TEXAS UNITED DEFENSE

B. C. Kindle, of Sinton, has been named as chairman of District 10 on the Texas United Defense Fund, the state-wide group which will sponsor USO's campaign for $640,000 in Texas this year. This district includes Aransas, Brooks, Jim Wells, Kenedy, Kleberg, Nueces and San Patricio counties.

Mr. Kindle was appointed by George O. Jackson, of Laredo, who is Regional Campaign Chairman of the forthcoming fund appeal to carry on the familiar services of the USO to the young men and young women of the nation's armed forces. A major portion of the Texas goal, as in 1954, will be included in Community Chest and United Fund campaigns throughout the state this fall.

Mrs. John Wright of Turnesville, New Mexico, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Laverne Blackburn.
