Women who can play a horn, piano or drums are the subject of a nationwide hunt by the Women's Army Corps, which is increasing the size of the WAC band to a total of 60 musicians.

But not just anyone will do. WAC band officials make it plain that all applicants must pass an audition, either in person or by means of tape recording before being considered for membership in the 14th Army Band (WAC), the only women's band in the Armed Forces.

Local U. S. Army Recruiting Sergeants have been furnished data on specific requirements and can arrange for auditions for applicants.

Those selected for the band will have a guarantee in writ-ing before they enlist in the WAC that a place is waiting for them as a member of this muchtraveled band, which has played numerous fairs, concerts and public occasions, including three Presidential Inaugural Parades. The band is scheduled to per-form at the World's Fair in Montreal, Canada in September.

By Vern Sanford When it comes to salt water fishing, shrimp either live or dead-make the best bait.

But there may be times when shrimp are scarce. When you face such a situation, simply look to crabs, squid, mullet and Mrs. George Mullins in Big sand eels as substitute baits.

> The flesh of the blue crab with its yellow, fatty substance, makes excellent bait, One of the main attractions of this balt is the offy slick that it creates in the water. This slick floats off for a considerable distance and fish will follow the slick right up to the batted book. Flesh from the claws yields of crab meat. Whose crab also can be used for bait. Big kingfish and ling (cobia) always are quick to grab a crab floating near the surface. Squid makes excellent bait for red snapper, kinglish, mackerel and ling. A large squid can be put on a tandem hook rig for big fish. For smaller baits just dice up the squid with a sharp knife. One of the big advantages of squid as bait is the fact that they are tough and difficult for fish to tear off the hook. For example, in fishing for red snapper, trash fish near the surface will completely clean a shrimp bait off the hook long before it ever reaches bottom waters. Trash fish also will attack the hook baited with squid, But they won't be able to clean it off so quickly. Mullet, small fingerlings ?

or 3 inches long, are excellent baits for speckled trout, redfish and flounders. In the fall during the redfish spawn runs in the surf, mullet 5 to 6 inches in length make terrific baits.

Mullet can be rigged on the hook either live or dead. If they are six inches or less in size, rig them live by hooking through the tail or immediately behind the dorsal fin.

When used live, scrape some of the scales off the mullet. This the fatty flesh to escape and form a chum-slick in the water. This is great for attracting game fish,

Large mullet should be cut into chunks, which make excellent baits for redfish. If you have extra large mullet, it will be to your advantage to fillet strips for bait, Large live mullet fished five or six feet under the float are quite attractive for tarpon when the big silver kings range in coastal waters in the Spring and Summer. Sand eels and salt-water worms usually are hard to find. But if you should happen upon some, by all means use them for bait. These baits should be rigged in such a manner that they will look natural and not balled up in a bunch on the hook, A tandem-style hook is the best rig for these baits.

Bait can be where you find or catch it in salt water. Those bait - stealing piggies can be diced up into excellent bait. Even that big speckled trout can be saved for table fare and still be used for bait. Simply gut the fish and use whatever roe you find for bait. If there isn't any roe, then use the white air bladder. Trolled or retrieved rapidly, this white bladder will ravel through th ike a pock rind. Piggles, small en whiting that you or can be used at a t in offshore fishing fish. dissatisfied claimant could disagree with the denial action taken on his claim and request and receive formal reconsiderbasic camp will qualify him for ation of his claim by a different set of people from the ones who turned him down at first. But if his application is still denied, there are more possibilities to suggest. If the claim is again denied after such reconsideration, the claimant still doesn't have to give up and accept the decision if he feels it is wrong. He has six more months in which to request a hearing, in or near his community, by a Hearing Ex-aminer. There he may bring witness and/or new evidence if he wishes.

The areas of disagreement are talked out in a semi-judicial atmosphere, after which the Hearing Examiner studies the file, consults precedents, and in disability claims may secure the opinions of medical consultants and vocational experts. He then issues a decision upholding the previous denials, or reversing them and awarding the claim. If he denies the claim, it's still not the end of the road. Next week's article will explain further actions possible.

INDEPENDENCE DAY

The Fourth of July is upon us again, and there should be a firm rededication to the principles and ideals that brought forth the "great experiment" in human liberty ... the United States.

It is customary to recall with reverence an immortal remark of one of the nation's founders on this, the most important date, but perhaps at this time in our history, it would be more timely to quote a contemporary, an instructor in political science at Mercy College, New York. The professor says, "the Constitution is just a piece of paper which can be serapped if it has outlived its usefulness. Just like anything else." According to his remarks, the basic political and cultural system of the United States must be revised if it means a revolution culminating in violence.

Fortunately, the professor is protected by the very Constitution he belittles. Like any other citizen, he may speak his mind without fear, which in itself shows that we have kept faith with the founders of our nation. Because of this faith, the professor may speak with intemperance. Our detractors notwithstanding, the 4th of July has a deep meaning for most American citizens, and it will be so commemorated this year as it always has been in the

* * * * *

The 1966 "Youth Opportunity Campaign" is on again to help get jobs for young Americans leaving their classrooms in May and June.

The superb effort of private employers deserves our nation's thanks and the particular appreciation of those in the 16 to 21 age group. That effort has very often meant success instead of failure for willing youngsters who could not have found work without the organized assistance of private employers across the na-

Once again this summer, private employers, federal, state and local governments, are asked to provide work and training experience for as many young people as possible.

About half of these young people will be seeking career employment, venturing for the first time into the adult working world. For others, summer jobs are essential to continue schooling. Many in this group have extraordinary economic or educational disadvantages and will need special attention. Offer a helping hand if you can to the vacation job hunters.
