Junior High Jaybirds Score Wins Over McAdoo

The Junior High Jaybirds go undefeated in district play after crushing the McAdoo Eagles. The Eagles flew the coop when the Junior High Jaybirds ran all over them 36-18, with Sally Garcia scoring 14 big points. The Eagles came out looking tough, but were soon to be defeated by the Jaybirds 50-31, with Mean Gene Cleveland, leading scorer, making 24 points to result in another big Jaybird victory. Let's hope these kids have a successful season ending as District Champs. Good Luck!

Celebrating Christmas Caused British King And Army To Be Captured

Thomas Burleson, Member of Congress WASHINGTON D. C. -- More than a thousand years ago in England in the year 878, the celebration of Christmas commenced on December 16 and would have ended according to custom on the 17th night, January 6. At that time King Alfred the Great was so occupied with Christmas revelry that the invading Danes took him and his army by surprise and he became a fugitive. The story goes on to indicate a happy ending. Fred came back to win, and his successful reign, he united most of England and in the process, brought Christianity to the invaders. Another very old story like this; one night in ancient days three men were riding across a desert. As they passed a dry riverbed a voice out of the darkness said "Halt!" and they stopped. The voice then directed them to dismount, pick up a handful of pebbles, put the pebbles in their pocket and remount. The voice said, "I have done as I commanded. Tomorrow when you will be both sad and sorry." Confronting the mystery of the horsemen rode on. As the sun came up, they reached in their pockets and that a miracle had happened. The pebbles had turned into diamonds and other precious stones. Then they remembered the warning voice. Sure enough they had not taken more. This illustrates the greed and selfishness in man. To be sorry not to have grasped more can lead us to forget the warnings which have led us our way. The world is still torn by dissension and numerous troubles. Everyone wants for peace, harmony and tranquility in our individual and national life. When we don't take these things, we are doomed to forget such things as the old English proverb, "God rest yemer-nothing you dismay; remember Christ our Saviour was born on Christmas Day." With faith in an all-powerful Creator, we can joyfully celebrate the birth of Jesus Christ who is our hope for "peace on earth, goodwill to men." This is our Christmas message from our house to yours. Several years ago, by reason of sheer volume, we simply had to abandon the practice of sending Christmas cards to friends we love. We hope you will take this as our personal wish for you and yours for a joyous and pleasant Season. The Chaplain Of The House Of Representatives gave this to us and we pass it on to you with warm friendship and appreciation. "May God send you for Christmas and the New Year enough joy To keep your heart singing, enough sympathy To make you understanding, enough hope To enrich your life, enough strength To steady your spirit, enough love To share yourself with others."

Fuel Prices

The test of government comes in crises, in how authorities meet them and cope with them in the best interest of the ordinary citizen and the economy. In that connection, some bureaucrats in the national capital are proposing sharp price hikes in fuel prices, to reduce consumption. That is, of course, the worst possible approach to alleviate the present fuel crunch. Sharply higher prices mean only that the rich and powerful get the fuel. The poor, and those without special influence or contacts, will be increasingly deprived. That isn't democratic, or good government. Once prices are sharply hiked, they are not likely to come down again. This, then, may be the Nixon Administration last chance to restrain its new Energy Czar, William Simon, to price-rise limits; restraint on price hikes now, even if it means rationing, will save consumers billions of dollars in future years. Shortages in themselves usually produce excessive profits and exploitation temptations among suppliers. The government need not join them in the process.

1973

Looking back on the year 1973 as it draws to a close, few will be sad to see it depart. The year began with great hope for the majority, who voted for President Richard Nixon in November, 1972.

Then came the disillusionment and shame of Watergate. Toward the end of the year war broke out in the Middle East (October) and the United States hastened to Israel's aid and in so doing failed to obtain a commitment from Tel Aviv to pull back from most of the Arab land Israel has taken in recent years—as so many U.N. resolutions have recommended.

Washington risked a confrontation with Russia, alienated the entire Arab world and precipitated an unexpected oil and energy crisis in failing to demand an Israeli withdrawal, which could have produced a peace settlement in the Middle East. (Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is now trying desperately to bring that about, and if a settlement is in view before the 31st expires, the memory of 1973 might not be so bitter.)

But, overall, it was a year of division, dismay and upset. Economically, it was a good year. But, proving that money isn't everything, most Americans will rate the year ending as one of the most unpleasant, despite the end of U.S. ground participation in Vietnam, in decades.

It's true that it's more blessed, and gratifying, to give than to receive. Getting someone else to do your work is the recipe for real "success."

Rep. Charles Finnell Honored With Banquet

HOLLIDAY--State Rep. Charles Finnell was honored at an Appreciation Banquet last Thursday by more than 500 friends from the 8 counties he has served during his 4 terms in the legislature. Clyde Whiteside, a member of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles and a former legislator from the area served as master of ceremonies for the Finnell dinner. Whiteside said of Finnell, "He is a loyal and dedicated servant of the people of the State of Texas. He stands to be counted, he has never ducked out on a vote. He makes it plain and clear how he feels on all issues." Finnell, who received two standing ovations from the overflow crowd expressed his gratitude, saying, "Your friendship is what makes it worthwhile. There is no greater honor than serving you in the State Legislature."

including Rep. Joe Hanna of Breckenridge who now represents two of the counties formerly represented by Finnell. Telegrams came from friends, fellow legislators and other officials, including Governor Dolph Briscoe and Senator Lloyd Bentsen. Senator Bentsen's telegram read in part, "His constituents know him to be a can-do man who has done an outstanding job in representing their interests in Austin." Don Talley, chairman of the steering committee for the dinner said, "I thank you all for having made an investment in the political future of Charles Finnell." Archer County Judge Bill Holder who officially welcomed the crowd said the dinner was "the largest banquet in the history of Archer County." Dr. Travis White president of Midwestern University, gave the invocation. Special entertainment was furnished by the Holliday High School Stage Band under the direction of Wes Hayes.

Mrs. Bill Perkins led the group in prayer. Games were played and gifts exchanged. Twenty people were present.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor
Sometimes something happens that makes you wonder where the values really are. This afternoon about five of the clock I was cruising along from Jayton going home at a very safe and gas conserving speed of fifty MPH. A highway patrol car pulled in behind me, and we paced each other for about a mile then one of these underslung speed demon cars came along passed us like we were parked, and started disappearing in the distance. The patrolman passed me as though he was going to try to catch this speeder, then he turned his red light on me. I stopped and he came charging back to my pickup, and by the time he got there he had a surprised look on his face and said "I thought that you did not have a valid sticker, but I see that you have." I asked him why he checked me who might have been out of compliance, and let the speeder who must have been making at least half again the legal speed go? He just smirked and walked away. Best regards

Claud Senn

December Dates

The last half of December brings us winter, at 7:08 in the evening on the 21st, the shortest days and longest nights of the year, Christmas Eve, Christmas and New Year's Eve, among other memorable dates.

The anniversary of the Battle of Trenton falls on the 26th, dating from 1776. It was the turning point of the Revolution; Washington gathered his men together Christmas night, secretly ferried them across the Delaware River at Taylorsville and surprised a British force of some 1500 men (mainly Hessians) on the morning of the 28th, reaching picket lines just outside Trenton before his force was discovered.

Woodrow Wilson, 28th President and son of a Presbyterian clergyman, was born at Staunton, Virginia, on the 28th in 1856. (South Carolina in 1928 made the anniversary a holiday, which few still observe.)

Andrew Johnson, 17th President, was born on the 29th in 1808, at Raleigh, North Carolina, but moved to Tennessee at the age of eighteen. Though Congress tried to impeach him, historians have been kind to him; the emotional, vindictive effort to impeach him failed, in 1868, by one vote. By that slender margin the presidential power and arm of American government were saved from destruction. (Again in 1973, the talk of impeaching a President is being heard.)

Johnson, who had succeeded Lincoln at his death, believed, like Lincoln, that the Southern States had never left the Union, thereby making it easier for them to resume their former roles. But as a Tennesseean, he was suspect and many of his vetoes were overridden by a victorious, vindictive Congress.

Old-Time Christmas

Most of us long for an "old-time" Christmas. And just what do we mean by an "old-time" Christmas? Let's dig back into the past, to remember how it was, for some of the answers.

The nation was not as wealthy in the past as today. In fact, if we go back a few decades, many families were hard pressed to earn enough to pay the rent and buy sufficient food and clothes to keep going.

We didn't have as many automobiles. We didn't have as many work-saving appliances and gadgets. We were often at war—in 1941-45, 1950-53 and 1963-72. We didn't have the variety of foods, toys and amusements we have today, nor television.

But the "old-time" Christmas was more fulfilling and enjoyable. Why? Perhaps it was because we thought more of a time for family reunion, quiet days and evenings of family life together, meals together, games together, etc.

The age of the automobile and television in some ways splits and separates families, even though modern transportation theoretically brings families together. The superabundance of amusements, automobiles, television, etc., seems to mean fewer family undertakings, less time in full family pursuits, and less time for family discussions, meditation and thanksgiving.

And much of the spirit of "old-time" Christmases was to be found in full family gatherings and serious appreciation of the day for what it represented in the Christian world.

Remember?

On December 5th, in far away Scotland, at 81 years, Sir Robert Watson-Watt died after a long period of poor health. His name should be remembered.

It was Sir Robert who played the major role in the successful development of radar in the years immediately prior to World War II. Without radar the Royal Air Force would not likely have handled the Luftwaffe so savagely in the fiercely fought Battle of Britain.

And had the R.A.F. not won that battle, democracy in England could have been snuffed out rather quickly; the British Army, just after having been badly routed in France, was no match for the all-victorious Germany Army, if it could have reached the shores of England. The British controlled the sea. But for the first time in war air power was sufficiently potent to overrule sea power in the English Channel. The Luftwaffe set out to break the R.A.F. and failed, primarily because of the advantage radar (and higher U.K. fighter production) gave the British.

Interestingly, Sir Robert and others pleaded for more time to get ready when Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain flew off in 1938 to see Hitler, in an effort to avoid war. Chamberlain, knowing the R.A.F. was not ready, gambled for peace by concluding the Munich agreement with Hitler, an agreement Hitler broke. But the year he thus gained for British radar, and fighter production, was a crucial, perhaps decisive, year gained. (And Hitler knew it.) Chamberlain, long denounced as an appeaser, made the right decision, largely because of the work of the late Robert Watson-Watt.

Washington's Baseball

After months of mystery, uncertainty and speculation, the San Diego Padres have apparently disappeared from the Major League baseball scene. The club is to appear, renamed, in the national capital.

Oddly enough, the recently-departed American League Washington Senators are now playing in Dallas-Fort Worth as the Texas Rangers. If they couldn't make it in Washington, how can the remodeled Padres, of a different league, the National League, make it?

For one thing, Hank Aaron will be coming to Washington as a member of the Atlanta Braves. Also, if one goes back far enough, the national capital's team was once in the National League and that long-ago affiliation might help.

If baseball is indeed the National Pastime, and there are those who would argue the point today, surely Major League baseball should be represented in the nation's growing capital city. The test now will be to see whether there are enough fans in the area to support the club, and this of course depends in part on how good the club becomes.

Washingtonians will enjoy one unique distinction, now that they're home for a National League team. They saw Babe Ruth regularly, in the twenties and thirties, and his legendary homerun hitting. Now they are to see Hank Aaron, certain to become the new homerun king in 1974, playing regularly there as well; this alone will bring out the fans in Washington, a city now more than eighty per cent black, by population count.

A Weekly Report Of Agri-Business News

Farmcast

Compiled From Sources
 Of The Texas Department of Agriculture
 John C. White, Commissioner

Fourteen Turn Down... All Livestock Prices Decrease... Cotton Is Up, Cottonseed Down... Production Costs to Increase.

While most people are aware that the stock market has taken a plunge, only a few realize that farm prices, too, have taken a downward turn. From Oct. 15 to Nov. 15, a total of 14 commodities have shown declines. Of those commodities which have advanced, only a couple have shown any real significant increases.

All categories of livestock have shown declines during the past month. Hogs are down 20 cents, beef cattle are down nearly $3, calves are down almost $10; sheep are down 40 cents, and lambs are $1.30 off the past month quotations.

Beef cattle average $39.10 in Texas as of November 15, down from the $42 of October 15. Calves at $49.40 are almost $6 below parity. Sheep are $4 under parity, and lambs are more than $13 off parity.

Broilers are down four cents from a month ago. Turkey prices are a nickel a pound below the previous month. Egg prices are almost the same as a month ago. Wool and mohair prices are unchanged.

In crops, wheat is down eight cents per bushel to an average of $4.15. Corn is up only a nickel a bushel while barley is off two cents. Grain sorghum is up only two cents per hundredweight to quote at $1.83. Rice is up $1.50. Hay is up $2.50 per ton; alfalfa is up $5.50 per ton.

Cotton at 48.5 cents per pound is up 11 cents from a month ago but cottonseed is down $1. Cotton in spite of the increase is still more than 25 cents under parity.

So even though farm prices this year continue to run well above last year, production costs for 1974 are going to increase. Some economists estimate farm production costs could be as much as a fourth to a third higher in 1974. Thus, the old farm-cost price squeeze is expected to be showing up again next year.

The parity ratio as of November 15 is 89 per cent; that is two per cent under a month ago, but is 14 per cent above a year ago.

REMEMBER if you are one of 75,000 Texas agricultural producers who have received, or will receive, a crop and livestock questionnaire from the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, be sure to fill it out accurately and return it promptly.

None of the reports will be used individually, nor will any other government agency get access to the reports. The figures will be compiled into county, district and state totals.

Agriculture is Texas' largest industry, and the reports are needed to present a clear and accurate picture of agriculture.

DRYLOT sheep feeders with a lot capacity of 2,000 head or more had 91,000 sheep and lambs on feed as of December 1. This is two per cent below the number on feed a month ago, but 22 per cent below the number on feed a year ago.

Current intentions to market the 91,000 head are: December 38,000; January 33,000; February 16,000; and 4,000 to be marketed later.

Placements during November totaled 44,000 head with a total of 11 feeders reporting 1,000 or more head on feed December 1.

Marketings during November were 46,000 head, which was 13,000 above intended marketings reported earlier.

The January and February intentions to market are incomplete at this time because additional lambs could be placed on feed and marketed during this period.

Women's Rights

By Bill Hobby

In 1923, the Congress first debated an amendment designed to provide equal rights for women.

Since then, this amendment has seriously been considered on several occasions but was not adopted by Congress until 1972, almost fifty years after its introduction.

The Equal Rights Amendment, which now has been ratified by 30 states, is only eight states short of ratification. It will go into effect two years following final approval.

The Amendment reads "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex."

I think the people of Texas can justly take pride in the knowledge that they approved, in November, 1972, an amendment to our Texas Constitution stating that "Equality under the law shall not be denied or abridged because of sex."

The Equal Rights Amendment has been the source of much controversy.

Its supporters feel that a greatly enlarged society must give women the civil and political rights which have been denied them.

On the other hand, its opponents hold the traditional view that woman's place in civil and political matters is limited and that she should be protected by the law.

Of greatest concern is the effect which the ratification will have on existing statutes.

There are five major categories of legislation which distinguish on the basis of sex. They are (1) Laws which confer "a benefit, privilege or obligation of citizenship" to one sex; (2) Laws which "limit the opportunities of one sex"; (3) Laws which make age distinctions on the basis of sex; (4) "Laws which could not possibly apply to both sexes because of the difference in reproductive capacity"; and (5) Laws which provide for separation of the sexes.

The first category includes statutes that require a minimum wage or a rest period for only one sex, that allow alimony to be granted to wives but not to husbands, and social security legislation that provides greater benefits to one sex over the other.

It is felt that such statutes need not be invalidated, that the coverage will be extended to those who initially had been omitted. For example, widowers would receive benefits just as widows of workers covered under an insurance plan.

Those laws which fall into the second category includes statutes prohibiting women from entering certain occupations, discriminatory public school admissions and standards policies and jury exemptions based on sex alone.

Laws defining a married woman's legal rights and obligations would be subject to the most extensive revision of those in this category because there are more restrictions on a married woman's activities than on a single woman's.

The third category of laws, concerning age distinctions, would likely require two courses of action. If the age restriction limits individual freedom, the lower age would apply; if the limitation bestowed privilege, the higher age would be applicable.

The fourth category, relating to reproductive capacity, probably will not be affected. And, separation of sex, where an overriding compelling public interest is present would be permitted.

I am pleased that Texas already has ratified the Equal Rights Amendment and I hope other states will do so soon.

Rights of Grandparents

Do grandparents have a legal right to the companionship of their grandchildren? Consider the tale of woe brought into court by an elderly couple.

"Since our daughter died, relations with our son-in-law have gone from bad to worse. Lately he won't let their little boy come to visit us, or even let us go to visit him. Surely we have a right to see our own grandchild."

But the court refused to come to their aid. The court said that since the father had legal custody, he alone could decide when the child should see.

This is the usual rule—that grandparents have no independent right, against parental wishes, to spend time with their grandchildren. However, courts have held the other way if the child's own welfare is clearly at stake.

For example: Custody of two little girls in a divorce case was awarded to their mother. At the time, she did not object to giving visitation privileges to the father's parents, since the children had a long and loving relationship with them.

Later, she changed her mind and tried to end those visits with the grandparents. But this time a court ruled—for the sake of the children—that the contact should not be broken off.

"To have suddenly severed the close blood tie of love and affection," said the court, "might well have caused emotional disturbance."

Furthermore, there is always the possibility that grandparents can take over full-time custody by proving that the parent is no longer a fit person to be in charge.

Thus, in another case, the grandparents of a three-year-old boy were able to show that his mother was guilty of frequent intoxication and immorality.

The court switched custody of them outright. The boy would be better off not merely to visit said the court, but to move right in.

T'was The Season To Be Jolly

'Twas the season to break his three-drink limit, too. What the heck, though, the Christmas Season comes but once a year, right? Sure it does. Assuming you're around to see it. Just remember, some people have a lower tolerance to alcohol than others.

For them, one or two drinks can be trouble when they try to drive. If you're feeling a little too jolly after this year's big party, call a cab or get a sober friend to take you home. It could have a lasting effect on your happiness.

maining whipped topping.

Monkey Bread

2 yeast cakes
1 cup lukewarm water
1 cup shortening
1 cup boiling water
2 tsp. salt
3/4 cup sugar
1 1/2 cups nuts, ground and toasted
2 beaten eggs
6 cups flour melted butter

Dissolve yeast cakes in lukewarm water. Mix shortening, sugar and salt. Add boiling water and mix well. Add eggs to this mixture and stir. Add flour and yeast mixture to the shortening mixture alternately until all is mixed well. Let rise until double in size. Roll out any portion to 1/4 to 1/2 inch thickness. Then cut in various shapes, sizes and squares. Dip in melted butter, then nuts and lay these pieces in a tube-pan, layer on layer, until all dough is used or until the pan is half full. Let rise to top of pan. Bake 1 hour at 350 degrees.

Tutti Frutti Balls

Put through the food chopper 1/2 pound each of layer figs, seeded raisins, pitted dates and pecans or almonds; also 2 ounces of candied orange peel. Blend all together and put through chopper again, using the finest blades until the mixture is as smooth as possible. Form into balls the size of a cherry, moistened with syrup from canned fruit if mixture is too stiff. Thicken with rolled and sifted macaroons if too soft. Dip in melted chocolate.

Fashion

It is holiday time again and women seem to be buying long dresses for evening.
They come in a variety of styles but soft materials seem to be favorite fabrics.

The high neckline is still good although the low neckline is very popular. A slip like dress with a small jacket is not only becoming but makes for economy.

Hats reminiscent of the thirties are in style.

Flaky Danish Crescent

1 package active dry yeast
1/4 cup warm water
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup chilled butter or margarine

1/4 cup milk, scalded
1 slightly beaten egg yolk
1 recipe Meringue Filling 1/2 cup chopped almonds or pecans

On floured surface, roll one piece in 12x9-inch rectangle, about 1/4 inch thick. Reserve 2 tablespoons Meringue Filling for glaze; spread dough with half of remainder. Sprinkle with half the nuts. Roll as for jelly roll (start at long side). Seal edges and ends. Place roll, seam down, on baking sheet. Shape in crescent; flatten slightly. Repeat with remaining dough. Cover; let rise in warm place till almost double (about 1 hour). Brush with reserved Meringue. To garnish, sprinkle with additional almonds, thinly sliced. Bake in moderate oven (375°) 20 minutes or till done. Serve warm. Makes 2. MERINGUE FILLING: Fold 1/4 cup sugar and 1 teaspoon cinnamon into 1 stiff-beaten egg white.

Why is it that the days are now becoming relatively longer in the southern part of the United States?
This is because the southern part of the United States is in position to receive the sun's rays, as the sun moves southward and the Winter Solstice (December 21st) approaches.

The days are getting shorter, and will continue to do so, in all the states, until December 21st. However, they are growing shorter faster in the states in the northern areas. By December 21st, the sun will rise at 7:18 and set at 4:31 in New England, New York, Michigan, Wisconsin, the Dakotas, Washington and Oregon.

In the southern part of the United States, from Charleston to California, the sun will rise at 7:58 and set at 5:00, an hour's dif-
