A Very Unusual Thing Happens At Showing of "Texas"

CANYON-Paul Green, the author of the attended drama, "Texas", attended eformances in the theatre of Friday and Saturday of st week. He encountered two surprises. One was the est attendance at any performance last Saturday, ,095 people. The second was the unexpected entry of a ar and a faun on the stage. During the Dug Out scene, deer suddenly appeared, stood calmiy in front of wanah's rock and looked steadily at the audience for everal seconds, standing in the light. Soon, she was sined by her fawn. They stood awhile, looking at the udience, then slowly moved out of sight.

This has been a year of celebration and recognition Mr. Green. When several communities planned their centennial activities, they realized the Green's ork had been developing faith in America for over fifty rs, and so they turned to him.

Fayetteville, North Carolina, received The ighland Call, a story of the Highland Scots in North arolina during the Revolutionary period, which had ayed there in 1939. The drama played in an indoor temorial theatre from February 26 through March 14.

The season opened with a tribute to Paul Green from the overnor of North Carolina and with a party in his honor nded by representatives of his shows from all over enation. Ten are in production this year.

The Mars Landing

A successful landing on Mars by NASA's unmanned spacecraft constituted a significant scientific triumph for the United States.

The Russians twice attempted such a feat and failed. The Viking lander is enabling scientists to learn much about a planet which in the past has been considered the most likely within reach to contain living organisms.

The landing reflects a technological space achievement enhancing the reputation of the nanation's space program.

Mars, of course, is so far distant man can't hope to venture on that planet for some years. Meanwhile, we can be learning of conditions on the most intriguing planet in our solar system, a vital, necessary first step.

Clothing costs rose 3.1 percent between May, 1975, and May 1976. This is national economists expect- tonight. ed, reports Margret Ann specialist with the Texas Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Are Placed Third In District Ratings

The Top O Texas high school football magazine just recently on the streets highly praises the Quarter-finalists 1975 State Footballers and predicts a bright year for them in 1976, yet this does not show in their team placings.

Sudan is listed No. 1 Class B team in the State followed by Groom, Anton, Sundown, Wheeler, Roby, Valley, Silverton, Wilson and Follett.

In district 3 B South, Jayton is listed third behind Roby and Forsan. Below Jayton in the standings are Sterling City, Loraine and Garden City.

From their interview with Jaybird Coach John Richey, their writers have this to say:

Size, experience of a club that advanced to the quarterfinal round of the playoffs and a winning tradition figure to make Jayton a 3-B title contender again this fall, if only the Jaybirds can fill in vital backfield spots.

The Jaybirds boast lettermen at every position among the more than 40 gridders expected to show up

The big vacuums to fall will be for the likes of Mark Fincher, who in four seasons became Texas' fourth highest ground gainer in schoolboy history. He'il be tough to replace as will be quarterback Bobby Kelley, a three-year regular.

Finding the backfield combinations is coach John Richey's biggest concern as he seeks his eighth career district football crown this fall.

The Jaybirds were flying high last fall until derailed, 28-13, by Groom as the Tigers marched into the playoff finals.

Returning off that squad are three all-staters: Gene Cleveland, a 6-1, 180 pound two-way back; Joe Martinez, a 5-10, 170-pound guard-linebacker; and Boyd

Dees, a 6-0, 180 pound defensive end. Cleveland was a two-way all-stater last fall, Martinez made the elite term for the second year at linebacker, while Dees was picked at defensive end. Cleveland intercepted 10 passes and recovered five fumbles, while Martinez led the team in tackles with 190, about 15 a game

Among other starters back this fall are defensive back Harold Parker (6-4, 190), linebacker Mario Segura (5-10, 180), tackle Ronnie Cheyne (5-10, 195), defensive end Gary Sumner (6-1, 190) and tackle Oscar Trevino

Richey also counts among his letter winners back tailback Steve Sweet, tackle Charles Arnold, wingback Otis Chunn, wingback Robert Segura and tackle Lanny

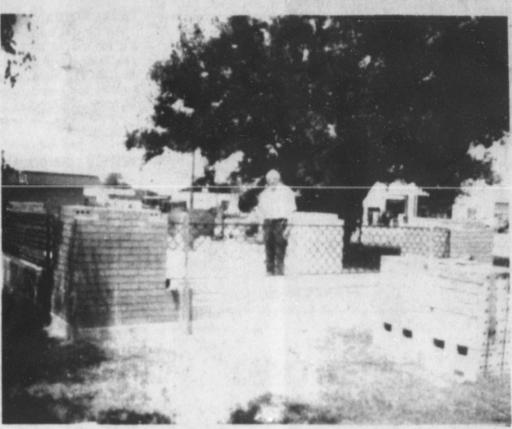

Roby and Forsan are expected to be formidable challengers to the Jaybirds, but based on their success over the last few years and seasoned experience back, don't count them out for the 1976 crown.

Kent County Youths Attend The State 4-H Congress

"We the people..." was the theme for the 1976 Texas 4-H Congress. The fourth annual Congress began Tuesday, July 27th in Austin for approximately 650 statewide 4-H delegates. Main locations for the Congress were the State Capitol, the Driskill Hotel, and the Stephen F. Austin Hotel.

Congress delegates from the 14 extention districts in Texas were united by many activities. Recreational entertainment included events such as a get-acquainted party, and dance on the opening night. The delegation attended a Country Dinner Playhouse on Wednesday night. Thursday, each district planned activities for their own afternoon enjoyment. Thursday night, the Congress Ball was held for the Texas 4-H'ers. A country and western band provided dance music.

The Congress was not only fun, but educational. Mike Renfro, Travis Co. Judge and Jeffery M. Friedman, Mayor of Austin welcomed the Congress to the city of Austin. Guest speaker for the opening night assembly was Reagan Brown, Special Assistant to the Governor of Texas. His speech, "Government of the People...", set the mood for a very successful week, in which the 4-H delegates learned to better understand and appreciate our Texas Government system.

Wednesday morning, "Three Pillars of Texas State Government", were presented during a general assembly. The Congress was addressed by Mark White. Secretary of the State of Texas, A.M. Aikin, State Senator, and Ronald Earle, State Representative. Afterwards, Congress delegates were divided into five various issue groups. Each delegate represented either the Senate group, or the House group. The purpose was to study the legislative process of our government. These groups were lead by members of the outgoing, 1975-76 Texas 4-H Council. Issues were brought before the groups by members of the incoming, 1976-77 Texas 4-H Council. After careful study and much thought, each group compromised to form a bill.

Thursday, July 29th, each of the five bills formed were brought before both the Senate and House groups. Subjects for these bills were: instruction in career awareness in public schools; consumer education course in public schools; creating a Texas Youth Employment Agency; educating school students as to their legal rights and duties; and the selection of student members of school boards.

After a reading of the bills, each bill was debated upon before voting. Four of the five bills presented passed, and were then sent to the Governor's Office for Friday, July 30th, delegates again met in issue groups, to discuss how 4-H could help put the bills into action. Groups were led by the Texas 4-H Council members.

The Honorable Sarah Weddington, Austin, State Representative, addressed the Congress in a closing assembly. "We Hold These Truths..." was the topic of her speech

Those attending from Kent County were Janet Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Caroll Johnson, and LaRhonda Carriker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donnie Carriker. Also attending was Rena Burah daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmle Bural. Rena represented Kent County and District 3 as a member of the 1976-77 Texas 4-H Council.

LET THE BUYER BEWARE

Many accidents in and around the home are no accident. Some are caused by products and some by carelessness Here's some sound advice that may prevent you or your children from becoming just another statistic.

Always make sure construction toys for children too young to use hand tools fasten or fit together. This eliminates the possibility of mashing a finger with a hammer

Always make sure that suggestions by well-intentioned legislators for government cutbacks won't result in unsafe conditions. For example, a recent suggestion to speed up mail delivery by providing curbside boxes would result in elderly social security recipients being obliged to walk 100 or 200 yards in all kinds of weather to pick up their mail.

Always make sure that a baby's or young child's toys are washable and too large to fit in a mouth, ear or nose.

Women in southern India once feared that to pronounce a husband's name or to say it even in a dream would bring him an untimely death.

Poor Voters

In comparison with other advanced democracies, voter participation in this country is poor. In the last (1972) presidential election only about 55 per cent of Americans of voting age took the time to vote.

And 1972 was no exception to the rule; it was, a rather typical election year. Interestingly, records indicate, when new candidates are making a presidential race, voters tend to be skeptical and stay away from the polls.

After a four-year term which seems successful, voters turn out in greater percentages. Likewise, records indicate an incumbent chief executive enjoys a decided advantage in election years. If the nation is prosperous and at peace voters tend to return the President in office.

These statistical facts are accepted by Democrats and Republicans; they are more disturbing to Democrats, who have a new candidate and are likely to be facing an incumbent President in November. The poor U.S. voting record, in fact, is one of the major reasons polls and other election projections cannot be totally relied upon. RICE OUTLOOK DISMAL

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which

Possum Hunt Real But Not The Lion

by Paul O. Cardwell
Our friend and neighbor, John Ellisor, came over the other day and he and I sat on the porch engaged in what would be considered light conversation. We didn't even touch politics even though the national Democratic convention was brewing

The trend of our verbal exchange finally got around to the ways people entertained themselves when life was simpler and less nurried and people had less money to spend on spectator amusements. In the process, I reached into my bag of memories and related the following anecdote

Some forty years ago we lived in a section of North Dallas which sociologists loved to term a "sociological interstice," which the dictionary defines as "a space that intervenes between things."

This was a delta-shaped section of the city with its boundaries defined by a creek on the north and a railroad on the south. Beyond these barriers were the wealthier inhabitants of Oak Lawn and of Oak Lawn Heights. We were the common folk.

However, we didn't call our community a sociological interstice. We called it a "neighborhood". Most of the people who lived in this neighborhood had moved to the city from the country - principally from Delta county - and had managed to keep their country ways.

"Society" for the women of the community was expressed in the neighborhood sewing circles. As for men, aside from the few loafers who kept domino and checker games going continuously under friendly shade trees, their needs for social contacts were fulfilled in a monthly get-together at night for sessions of dominoes and strong coffee and sandwiches made of sow-belly dipped in flour and fried crisp in deep fat.

To give variety to our social activities, a carpenter suggested that we have a possum hunt since he knew a man who had some dogs and a place to hunt. We all heartily agreed and set a date.

On the night designated for the hunt, we pooled our transportation and drove out to the Trinity River in the vicinity known as California Crossing. Here we met the man with the dogs and he outlined our procedure.

He and the carpenter would take the dogs and move on ahead while the rest remained behind until the dogs treed. Since it was cold, we would build a fire and sit around it spinning yarns until we heard the call to move forward.

We did have some luck which we called good. The dogs treed a possum but it was out on a limb over the river. One man he took hold of the animal he lost his hold on the limb and splashed into the river which was a few degrees above freezing. But he held on to the possum.

Most of us were wearing extra pants and shirts because of the cold. So, while the water victim stripped, we had to share some of our extra clothing to keep him from freezing. But all of that is fun when you're on a possum hunt.

As the night wore on, some of us got restless and moved forward before we were called. We had gone about a hundred yards from the latest campfire when we were brought

"A-u-u-r-r-g-g-h-h!"

"Oh, it was just a bullfrog."

Then came again the definite and unmistakable roar of a lion! I tried to reason that no lion would be loose in the Trinity River bottom. Quickly I reasoned how it could happen. The lion could have escaped from the zoo and had come up the river to California

About that time a third roar chilled our blood and all reason fled. My head ceased to function and my feet took over. All of us had the same idea at the same time and that was to leave the immediate vicinity in the shortest time possible.

As we turned back in the direction of the campfire - a fire is suposed to discourage approaching wild animals - ahead of me was a fat guy and ahead of him was a skinny one. The hefty fellow had speed which belied his weight. He tried to pass Skinny. But every time he zigged the fellow in front of him zigged. And when he zagged the man in front zagged.

This was spoiling his track record. Co he gave the skinny guy a shove and down he went. The last I saw - which was a very fleeting glimpse as I passed by - the downed man was trying to crawl under a brush pile.

Years later I moved next door to a man who looked slightly familiar. At last I asked him, "Did you ever go on a possum hunt?" He grinned and said, "I've been wondering where I had seen you before." It was Fatty who broke all sprint records on that unforgettable night. On our journey up the river for our rendezvous with the hunters I had fallen into a ditch and got a terrific jar. On our rather hasty return trip someone had moved the ditch or filled it up for I never

The young man who was carrying the possum previously captured arrived back at the campfire with, the possum. But now it didn't play dead - it was dead. I tried to imagine the whipping motion to which the animal was subjected as his carrier raced madly

Next day, the local shoe-shine man said, "I wonder what happe ed to Mister Robert last night. His boots were cut all to pieces." It happened that Mr. Robert, who was not as fleet as some, tried to climb a tree for refuge. But why, of all the trees in the darkened river bottom, did he pick a honeylocust? I tried to envision what his clothes - and skin - looked like.

Another of our group chose to climb a tree. And long after we got back to the campfire the river bottom echoed with his frantic call of his wife's name

By the time most of us got back to the campfire - it took us most of the night to round up all of them - the hunter, carpenter and two boys came into the glow of the fire. They were almost hysterical with laughter.

One of the boys carried a nail keg with a rawhide head, in the center of which was attached a cord. The other end of the keg was open. By putting rosin on their fingers, grasping the cord near the rawhide head, and pulling the fingers down along the cord - the 'lion" was created.

I don't apologize for my flight. A few weeks later I was down there in the daytime. It was wild! If a cricket had chirped, I think I would have re-enacted my wild scramble of that unforgettable

A long time ago we didn't have to rely on the boob-tube for entertainment - and we had lots more fun.

By Rep. Omar Burleson Member of Congress, Texas

Omar Burleson, M.C. 17th District, Texas

WASHINGTON, D.C.-Since the beginning of the 94th Congress over 18,000 bills and resolutions have been introduced. Probably no more than 600 will ever be enacted into law.

If it were only the laws themselves put on the books by the Congress, the volume would be comparatively small. But statutory enactment is only the beginning. In 1974, the last accurate account, over 7,000 rules and regulations were cranked out for the administration of laws passed by Congress. This simply means that the Nation is being governed by bureaucratic decisions to a really greater extent than by what the Congress itself SURE...BUT DIDN'T YOU NOTICE HOW MANY does.

There is no need to entirely blame the bureaucrats. If the Congress did not attempt to correct all the ills, both real and imagined, then there would not be all the rulemaking and regulations which have the effect of law. If a person violates an act of Congress, which is criminal in nature, he is arrested by a Federal official, brought to trial before a Federal court, and if convicted by a Federal judge, serves time or pays a fine. The exact same is true if a citizen violates an administrative rule written by a bureaucrat who is elected by no one and is only responsible to the unelected head of a certain agency.

Legislation is now proposed that the Congress shall have a veto power over these rules and regulations before they are adopted by the administering agency. This sounds perfectly good but there is some suspicion that the proponents for this action may be trying to get off the hook for their original action in supporting the legislation in the first place. They find that their constituents complain about the rules and regulations and it is always easy to blame the bureaucrats. Many are taken in by the high-sounding titles often applied to bills. For instance, last week a bill was overwhelmingly approved by the House of Representatives known as the "Government in the Sunshine Act." The Senate has already passed such legislation unanimously.

The purpose of the legislation is to open the agencies to the public when rules and regulations are being drawn. As a matter of fact, when rules are proposed by the agencies, they are printed in the Federal Register which gives notice to the public before being finally adopted. Technically, under this legislation, two officials who may be in a policy-making decision position can not discuss their business over a cup of coffee or at lunch without a full transcript being made of their conversation. The estimated cost is $45,000 for each agency.

The proposed legislation would require rules and regulations be submitted to the Congress for a period of 60 days before they are adopted, reserving to the Congress the right of approval or veto.

There is already provision for "oversight" in every Committee which supposedly performs this function. As a matter of fact, it is so time-consuming and complicated that it doesn't work very well. The Committee on Government Operations has the function of overseeing executive administration of the Government but, here again, it is so overpowering that, although they do the best they can, it hardly meets the need once this myriad of laws is enacted

A better approach would be to stop applying these high-sounding titles to legislation, many of which leave the impression of being a cure for the ills which it supposedly meets. Stop giving the bureaucrats the authority which they are so often accused of abusing and the Country will be better served.

Dean of Tech Law School To Resign

Texas Tech University Law Dean Richard B. Amandes has submitted his resignation, effective Aug. 31, 1977.

The only dean the school has had since its inception In 1966, he said he was announcing his plans a year in advance "in order to permit ample time for a thorough search for my successor."

'It has been a pleasure to serve Texas Tech during your tenure as President for the past 10 years," Dean Amandes told Texas Tech President Grover E. Murray in his letter of resignation. "I look forward to a continuing productive relationship as professor of law under your successor." Dr. Murray's retirement from the presidency of Texas Tech becomes effective Aug. 31, this year, and Dr. Cecil Mackey, president of the University of South Florida, Tampa, has been selected to become Texas Tech's ninth president on Sept. 1. "When I complete the next year as dean of the School of Law at Texas Tech," Amandes said, "that will make 19 years of law school administration, and that, I think, is enough. "It seems to me that it would be a good time to leave the deanship and return to full-time teaching," he

The only time Dean Amandes has been absent from law school administration recently was during the academic year of 1974-75 when he took a leave of absence to serve as visiting professor at Gonzaga University School of Law in Spokane and at Southwestern University School of Law in Los Angeles.

During his absence Professor Richard Hemingway of the Texas Tech law school faculty served as acting

The dean came to the university July 1, 1966, to establish the School of Law soon after it received approval by the state legislature. For two years immediately preceding his arrival he had been associate dean and professor of law at the University of California, Hastings College of the Law.

He also has taught at the University of Washington, New York University School of Law, Southern Methodist University and the University of Wyoming.

He earned the bachelor's degree in 1950 and J.D. degree in 1953 from the University of California and LL.M. degree in 1956 from the New York University School of Law.

Dean Amandes' principal teaching interests are in the areas of criminal law. juvenile law and real property.

The Minnesota law-thought by backers to be a new social movement rather than merely a law-is one other states should duplicate. Twenty now have clean air laws to restrict pollution, but many are less effective than Minnesota's.

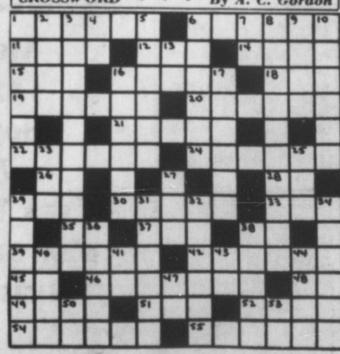

In some countries-Sweden is an example-the government is moving toward even more restrictive measures than U.S. states. The goal is to eliminate all cigarette smoking entirely.

Until that is done-and some day people will look back on the fashion of sucking burning cigarette smoke into their lungs as ignorant abuse of the body-the least states should do is protect the health of those who don't inhale tobacco smoke by addiction.

Federal agencies should long ago have banned smoking-except in limited areas-on buses, trains, aircraft (present C.A.B. rules are a farce), etc.

The U.S. Budget

Eight states (Georgia, Louisiana, Delaware, West Virginia, Nebraska, Mississippi, Maryland and North Dakota) have called for a constitutional convention to make it unconstitutional for Congress to spend more money than it collects.

This requirement that the federal government balance its budget would be mandatory in peacetime and it would put a halt to the rising national debt, now staggering at a $600 billion mark.

If politicians continue spending more money than the nation has in the treasury, promising more government aid, jobs, benefits and care than the country can afford, our grandchildren will see the nation forced into bankruptcy. It can't go on forever. New York City found out. Great Britain is learning the lesson now.

In addition to the eight states on record in favor of a spending limitation, five others are pondering the question and others are sure to join the call. (Florida, New Hampshire, Illionis, South Dakota and Nevada are currently considering the question.)

Since two thirds of the states (34) must officially request a constitutional convention before it's convened, the road ahead may be lengthly. But one suspects the people in every state are overwhelmingly in favor of a federal spending limit. A constitutional convention would, in effect, be the people speaking to congressional lawmakers-telling them to live within the

Political Ads

A disturbing trend in recent years is that of politicians to go for image-making rather than substance in election campaigns. An official of the advertising agency which ran Jimmy Carter's successful primary campaign recently indicated that emphasis in a breakdown of how funds were spent: 4 or 5 per cent for newspaper ads. 15 on radio and the rest for television.

Since newspapers are the only media source of indepth coverage of candidates and the only potential source of permanence and substance in political ad-

The 1976 Harvest

Since crop prospects in Western Europe were adversely affected by the summer drought, are off some what in Australia (one of the three surplus-producing countries) and not quite as good as had been anticipated in Russia, sale of the U.S. crop seems assured There will also be an adequate supply of grain in U.S. warehouses to help hold down food prices and fight resulting

In times when so much of the news is disquieting. good news of agricultural abundance is satisfying and U.S. farm operations are a source of pride. Farm exports are now what keeps the international trade balance in the black.

A few years ago completeness, a full discussion of the issues and a complete summary of the candidates' records, in black and white, were prerequisites for capdidates. These printed advertisements, easily checked, were studied long and seriously.

Today the television grin, a good-guy image, the total personality as created by all the tricks and gimmicks of color, action and camera, dominate political advertising (or image-making). Substance is too much sacrificed to easy, colorful indoctrination via the tube. t is a disturbing trend.
