Washington, and the 49th Armored Division (Texas National Guard) at Fort Polk, Louisiana, General Decker said in February, 1962: "Results of my visit were most gratifying. Morale is uniformly excellent, officers and men have a high sense of purpose, are extremely proud of their units and are resentful of the unfavorable reflection on them caused by the complaints of a few. They are working hard to complete successfully their intensified training program and the Army Training Tests administered at the conclusion of that period of training. Some shortages of equipment still exist, but these are being corrected as fast as the Army resources will permit . . .

"The most impressive fact concerning the reserve forces on active duty is the high quality of personnel of all ranks. I was most favorably impressed by their keenness of mind, their professional skill, and their devotion to duty. I am convinced that they fully understand the reasons behind their call-up and that the vast majority have accepted the interruption of their normal lives graciously."

Carlisle P. Runge, then Assistant Secretary of Defense "Never before have we recalled reserve component units with as little difficulty as in 1961. Never before have we recalled reserve component units which were as capable as were those in the recent recall. Much of the credit for this can be traced to the planning which has gone into our present reserve structure—the legislation which has permitted the reserve components to become the ready forces they are today, and to the dedication.

the legislation which has permitted the reserve components to become the ready forces they are today—and to the dedication of the reservists themselves who reported for duty."

Speaking of the two Army National Guard divisions called to active duty, he said, "They entered on an accelerated training program designed to develop combat readiness at an early date. For the record, these units performed in a magnificent fashion, attaining their combat readiness posture approximately 8 months scoper than newly formed divisions." months sooner than newly formed divisions."

Editorial in the New York Times, 23 December 1961
"On October 1, twenty-nine Air National Guard and five Air Reserve squadrons were mobilized and reported for duty to the Tactical Air Command.

"On October 27th—after less than a month in Federal service—eleven of these National Guard squadrons flight-ferried 218 aircraft to bases in France and Germany without loss of a man or a plane.

loss of a man or a plane.

"On November 1, three more Air National Guard squadrons flying the short-legged F-104 reported for active duty and ten days later were being airlifted to Europe. In Europe the Air Guardsmen have opened and rehabilitated some of their bases, and are now commanding, administering, and operating them, while putting in their full quota of flying hours.

"For 'weekend warriors' less than a month away from an office desk, a flight across the ocean in the cockpit of a single seater fighter is, in space vernacular, 'A-OK' even in this age of fore-shortened geography. The Air National Guard and the Tactical Air Command have demonstrated an encouraging and magnificent readiness for duty."

Accidents in American farm homes take about 2,700 lives a year, according to the Texas Farm and Ranch Safety Council, and some 3,400 persons are killed each year doing farm work. This is in addition to the 4,700 farm residents who die on the highways in non-work accidents.

An extra measure of careful ness could prevent many of these tragedies. Proper observance of Farm Safety Week should make farmers and ranchers more alert to the hazards to which they are commonly exposed.

Convert Storm Cellars To Fall Out Shelters

Many of the tornado and underground vegetable cellars in Texas can be made into good fallout shelters, says W. S. Allen, exension agricultural engineer.

However, there are several points that must be kept in mind when remodeling these shelters to provide adequate fallout protection. They are: (a) adequate shielding, (b) a protected entrance, (c) positive ventilation, (d) storage facilities for supplies, (e) and installation of a radio antenna for radio reception. The most economical means of providing the additional shieldng needed is with a layer of soil to a depth of about 3 feet over the entire cellar roof. Most cellars will require additional reinforcing in the roof in order to hold this extra weight. A steel reinforced, six inch thick concrete slab cast over the roof may be used instead of the soil cover. A local contractor can tell you the amount of steel necessary for your situation, but for most cellars 1/2" steel bars laid on 12" centers in both directions will be

Here's how Gas heat COOLS your home!

Cooling with a Gas flame combines four simple laws of nature. The ARKLA-SERVEL Sun Valley* GAS air conditioner employs them to produce the finest air conditioning science has yet devised!

First, BOILING, as in a percolator, moves the liquid refrigerant to the top of the unit in the form of vapor. Secondly, CONDENSATION, as on a glass liquid. Next, EVAPORATION provides the chilling effect, just as blowing upon your hand, when wet, makes it feel cool. Last, is the ABSORPTION of the vapor by a salt solution called lithium bromide, in the same manner as table salt absorbs liquids. The liquid then returns to the "percolator" to start the cycle over again.

This is why an ARKLA-SERVEL Sun Valley* GAS air conditioner has no moving parts to wear out or break down, and why it 1) has a life expectancy of three-to-four times that of an ordinary air conditioner, 2) does not lose its efficiency with age, 3) operates with a minimum of service or repair, and 4) maintains its low operating cost throughout the life of the unit.

All these reasons add up to LOWEST OWNER-SHIP COST . . . and make ARKLA-SERVEL Gas air conditioning truly the wisest investment you'll ever make for your home.
