We have on exhibition in our front store window a little "Buck's" Range which we are going to give to some girl under 14 years of age, who carefully and painstakingly follows these instructions.

INSTRUCTIONS

Read them carefully and follow closely

We are giving you with an outlined drawing of a very attractive dining room, a box of colored crayons.

To the little girl who colors this room interior most artistically, most neatly, and on a separate sheet of paper writes the most interesting short story, in her own little way, telling why she will have a "Buck's" stove or range in her own little home when she has one, we will present absolutely free this beautiful little "Bucks" Junior Range.

Write your name, age and address plainly on both picture and story.

Remember girls, this is a real little range, a mothers range in miniature. In it you can start a fire and bake and cook as mama does on her big range.

Now girls, we want you to get busy. Watch our advertisements for the closing date of the contest

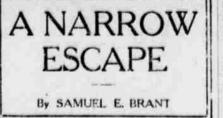

While scanning a newspaper for the purpose of passing the time my eyes lighted on the following advertisement: Mme. Durant - Healer. Removes the wear and tear of domestic troubles. Reunites divorced couples. Effects recon-cliation between parted lovers.

I cut the ad out of the newspaper and put it in my pocketbook. About ouce an hour I read it over. I wondered if Mme. Durant could help me. I wanted some one to go to Della and show her how unreasonable she had been. At last I started for the address given, with no definite purpose.

I expected to find Mme. Durant in a dingy apartment, with worn furniture and not overcleanly. Madame herself would doubtless be either French, Italtan. Spanish or of some other superstitious race and rely chiefly for her fees upon any or all of these peoples. She would be of tawny complexion, hair like an Indian and eyes piercing black, She was nothing of the kind. I rang the doorbell of a neat little house, and a. tidy young woman answered the summons. She was Mme. Durant. only she was an American and Durant was not ber name. She had adopted it because she considered it more attractive than her own, Ida Smith. She invited me into a neatly furnished living room, and after hemming and hawing and stammering l finally got out what I wanted to tell her about my difficulty with Della and asked if she would engage to bring the young lady to her senses.

She said that from what I had told her she judged Della to be entirely in the wrong, while the position I had taken was unimpeachable. She would engage to settle the matter between us for $100, half of which was to be paid in advance and the other half after the reconciliation. If there was no reconciliation I was not to pay the remainder of the fee. She was to make the acquaintance of my exfiancee, and without letting her know her mission gain her confidence and convince her that she owed me a humble apology.

This was a heads I win, tails you lose in favor of Miss Smith. But she seemed very confident of being able to bring Delia and me together and had an bonest countenance. This and my desire for a "makeup" decided me, and drawing a check for $50 I gave it to her. I sat some time after this listening to the cures she had effected. She had brought together a father and a daughter, the latter having been turned out of doors for marrying a man the father did not like. She had reunited no end of divorced couples and parted lovers. She did it all on a prinwords. When I asked her to give me these words she laughed and said, Should I do so you would expect me to hand you back the retaining fee you have given me, and there would be no reconcillation. I heard from Mme Durant, or Miss Smith, as I prefer to call her, within two days. During this time she had managed to make Della's acquaintance and learned about our separation. The following was the letter I received ed of working the circular saw. from the woman I had hired to convince Della that she had ill treated me: its use, then left him in order to attend to some pressing matters. me that you are entirely unworthy of so estimable a young lady. I return your check, since I find that the conditions under which I accepted it are entirely at variance with the facts. Yours truly, MME. DURANT.

When young Mrs. Marshall came to L, knowing that the start one makes socially in : place counts for a good deal, she made herself agreeable to every one, became famillar with only the best, was careful that her costumes were cut in the latest fashion, and, since the dominant circle admitted of cavaliers for their prominent members, she rather encouraged the attentions of Huntington Dabney.

It must be admitted that keeping Mr. Dabney up to his duties as her cavaller was hard work. His main accomplishment was leading a cotillion, and he was not known to have any secondary one. Mrs. Marshall could stand to be put in a straltjacket cos tume and listen to society gossip, including private quarrels and the mishap of the last social climber who had fallen from an upper round of the ladder to the bottom, but found it tiresome, indeed, to pretend to be flirting with Huntington Dabney in a solitary corner at a function in order to maintain a reputation for being one of those ladies to whom husband and children are a bore. And it was the harder for her because she was devoted both to her husband and her children. As for Mr. Marshall, she told him in the beginning what her designs really amounted to, but he didn't take sufficient interest in the matter to remem ber the explanation.

Among the other penalties Mrs. Marshall must pay for effecting an entrance into L. society was the sitting in tight slippers for several hours at dinner partles. Her feet were tender, and for this reason her footwear was made of made very small, binding the feet for hours on a stretch, will at last cause pain. It was sitting thus at a dinner party for an unusually long period that brought about a mishap to Mrs. Mar shall that came very near plunging her to the foot of the social ladder and rendering her fall so unfortunate that she would not have been able to begin to elimb again.

At the dinner in question Mr. Dabtrict, for four weeks previous to first day of the next term thereney was assigned to take Mrs. Marshall out, Mr. Marshall having been the return day hereof, J. Astonished, chagrined, mortified, began to consider what I had done to bring about such a result. I spent a week thinking upon my own share in the quarrel. At the end of that time I had made up my mind that I was as much to blame as Della. Then it occurred to me that if I was as much to blame as she the fault was all mine, for a man should have more control over himself than a woman whose nature is supposed to be more volatile. I could not doubt Miss Smith's sincerity, for she had returned my fee and had no interest in deceiving me. I went to see her and had a talk with her, but gained no information. confessed the result of my deliberations and told her I preferred that she should be paid for her trouble. So I handed her the check she had returned to me. Before accepting it she asked me what I was going to do. I told her I would go to Della and take all the blame for our disagreement.

As soon as I said this Miss Smith put the check in her portmanteau and. taking a note from a desk, banded it to me. I immediately recognized Della's handwriting. It read:

Dearest George-Miss Smith has con-vinced me that it was all my fault. For-give me. Your loving DELIA.

I looked up at Miss Smith and saw her smilling at me. I sat thinking for a few moments, during which an un-derstanding of her adroitness found its way into my stupid brain.

"I think I can tell you," I said to her, "what is the principle on which you work. It is contained in three words. It is 'Look within yourself.'" "You have hit it exactly," was her

The revelers torsed off the brandy and ran laughing up the staircase. As scon as the last one had disap-peared Mrs. Marshall scrambled out and ran like a deer to an unoccupied music room, followed by Mr. Dabney with the slipper. Then Mrs. Marshall sat down to a plano and began to run over the keys. This brought these who hunted for them, and all ex-claimed:

So we concluded to tramp about, mingling with the people. and not give away the fact that we were Americans. We went to Interlaken by train and from there laid out pedestrian tours.

One of the first we made was to Grindelwald and thence up the side of the mountain to Scheidegg. There we got a good dinner, after which we walked up a short distance to a point where we could see the glacier. It was very wild and magnificent and all that, but seeing such sights is not what I am going to tell you about. In the afternoon we walked down the mountain to Lauterbrunnen and shortly before we reached that place came up with a couple of Swiss girls dressed in the costume of the country.

It occurred to both Billy and me that if we could walk the rest of the way with two pretty girls-no girl could be homely in the Swiss costume-it would our own uninteresting selves. As we passed them 1 bowed very politely. took off my cap and, pointing to a mountain whose name I knew as well as my own, asked in German-the language mostly spoken in this part of "That's the Eiger." replied one of the

After the dance I hunted for some from, one to introduce me to Lillie and was successful. The gir! had known I was watching her in the dance, and every one of her antics was for me. I wasn't a dancing man and persuaded her to sit out a dance with me. Then a nice looking, dapper young fellow took her for another dance, and I looked on again. This time her antics were for me all the same, but they were of another kind. She flashed her eyes alternately at me and into those of the fellow she danced with. I was too stupid to see through this feminine device then, and it had its effect. Quite likely it would have worked just as well with me if I had seen through it. When a girl wishes to attract and a fellow wishes to be attracted it's the easiest job in the world.

It wasn't long before I was going to see Lillie. She was an orphan and lived with her grandmother, an old lady deaf as a trolley car conductor whose car is jammed full of strap hangers. She was half blind too. But she must have heard by contact with substances if she didn't hear through the air, and, as for seeing, the darker it was the better chance she had of distinguishing objects. She was like other deaf and blind persons in that respect. She couldn't see or hear what she should see and hear, but had remarkable facilities for detecting what was most inconvenient for others for her to know.

About the time I made Lillie's acquaintance her grandmother was taken with her last illness. Lillie loved the old lady, and her approaching demise was an affliction to the niece. As for me, I was but twenty-one years old and had years before me in which to do courting, but so impatient was 1 that I grudged the old lady what little time she needed from Lillie. I feared would be too old for matrimony before the invalid got into her grave and ceased to require attention.

"If you won't help me we shall have to go hungry tomorrow."

It was a little old woman who had approached so softly that I did not hear her.

"Where do you live?" I asked. She pointed to a four story tenement almost opposite.

"Any family?"

"A sick husband and four children.

"Very well; lead on, and I will fol-

She kept looking back, and there was a puzzled expression on her face.

"This way-that's a child-keep to the rail-don't fear the dog-we're almost up."

"And as we reached the upper hall we turned to the right, passed down a blind hall running the other way, and presently she pushed open a door, and we entered a room lighted by a smoking lamp.

"John, children, it's a stranger come to see us," said the woman as I stood and looked about Here were two small rooms, three chairs, a cupboard, an old table, a wretched bedstead and more wretched bedding, on which lay a man. Across the room was a mattress, on which the children were lying as I entered. In the other room I saw a stove, a washtub and a bucket of coal.

"Sit down, sir," said the woman as she placed : chair.

The husband looked to be fifty years old. He had the bright eyes and the hollow cheeks of a consumptive.

"Are you a doctor?" he asked as I sat down. "No."

"The rent is overdue, but we haven't even bread to eat," he said.

"I am not your landlord nor his agent. I simply came up to see youto see if you were sick, to see what you needed."

"John, you know how it is with us.

"To see if you were really in need I said as she

Just before graduating for the ministry Bruce Stevens spent tour days In the town of Newbern as a part of his vacation.

Mr. Stavens found a political boss and a political ring in the town.

He found one-half too many saloons for a town of its population.

He found the sheriff of the county and his deputies and the constable in caboots with the tough element,

The justice of the pence was the keeper of a saloon and passed drinks over the bar, and he protected his own sort when it came to legal troubles.

"Why don't you do something?" he asked of a merchant of the town who was a representative of the better element.

"And get boycotted and driven into bankruptcy?" was asked in return. "Is it as bad as that?"

"The gang has us by the neck and bas us scared. We have no leader."

A few weeks later, when ready to take up his ministerial duties, Mr. Stevens asked to be sent to Newbern.

"But we have a minister there," was replied.

"But he bas lost nearly all of his con gregation."

"Yes, the reports from that parish are not at all cheering, and I believe Brother Baker would welcome a transfer. You know it's one of the hardest towns in the state."

"I have spent four days there."

"The cause of religon is reported as very lukewarm."

"I didn't know that there was any there at all." smiled the minister.

"Well, you'll be appointed to place. I hope you may stir things up." The Rev. Mr. Stevens arrived. He started out with a sermon that jolted and jarred. He spared neither Christian nor sinner. While he criticised the former for lack of backbone, he plainly told the latter that the crisis had come. The crisis meant decency and reform without any shame about it. After the sermon he lingered to talk with members of his congregation. He found them looking forward with great timidity. If he started a crusade he must not expect any active help from them. They were thoroughly cowed.

"This is to be a one man crusade." he answered them. "I did not expect your aid, and so I'm not disappointed." Monday morning the crusade opened. Mr. Stevens visited the sheriff. and, without any beating around the bush, he said:

"Sheriff, I am the new minister." "Yes?"

"I am going for your crowd tooth and toe nail."

"Why do you call it my crowd?" was asked

"Because it is. There are violations asked.

"We have so many tourists about us all the time that we could tell their nationality no matter what disguise they might put on. You are not German either. Don't you suppose we can tell a German from a Frenchman or an Englishman?"

"What nationality are we?" Billy

"You wear French clothes, but you are not French. You are either English or American. I think you are

"By Jove, Billy," I exclaimed in the plain American language, "they're smarter than I thought they were?" The girls were very much tickled that they had been able to tell our nationality. They asked us to teach them a little English. So I told the one I had walked with to pronounce the words "I love you." She spoke them, "I lofe you," and asked me to translate them into German, but there was a look in her eye that made me as to their meaning. I told her they meant "Thank you."

Meanwhile Billy was amusing himself by telling the girl to say "Kiss me," telling her the words meant "Good morning." Billy and I kept looking at each other, laughing over the fun we were having, and by and by the girls said they must go on home. We asked permission to attend them, but they declined. At parting one of them said:

"We thank you for your kindness gentlemen. Though we are only poor Swiss farmers' daughters, we seem to have amused you."

"The thanks are due to you," I replied, "since you have given us a very pleasant hour.'

"Don't you think," said Billy, "that there was some shenanigan about those girls?"

"What do you mean?"

"Seems to me they know more than we think they do."

A week later we were in the casino at Lucerne when I heard a woman's voice behind me speaking with the real American accent.

"For beaven's sake, Jule, where have you been all this time? I've been looking for you everywhere." I turned, and there stood our Swim asant girls. "Stung!" cried Billy, and the girls Burst into a laugh randmothe hoping every minute that she could come downstairs for a brief sitting with me. One evening when I had waited a couple of hours in this way I concluded, considering that the old woman was blind and deaf and her imperfect senses must be further deadened by illness, to go upstairs to the sickroom, steal in and see if I couldn't get a word with Lillie. I tiptoed up the staircase and to the door of the room, which fortunately 1 found ajar. Lillie was sitting in a chair where she could see me. She came to the door, and I told her that if she couldn't come to me I was bound to go to her. She went back into the room, turned the light very low and beckoned me to enter. There was a sofa placed where the invalid could not very well see it. I stole toward it, and Lillie and I sat down side by side with our arms around each other. We whispered more love than today, at fifty, I could talk in a year, and to he heard by each other we scarcely needed to whisper, for when I spoke my lips touched her coral ear, and when she spoke her lips were a miltionth of an inch from mine. "Who's there?" came from the invalid.

Lillie arose, went to the bed and asked her grandmother if she wanted anything. She replied that she thought she heard whispering. Lillie told her that she must be mistaken, put her hand on the sick woman's head to soothe her and told her she had better try to get a little sleep.

Whether grandma was satisfied with this or not she said no more, and Lilile, after coddling her awhile, came back to me. I had been wishing I could burst the remains of the drum of the old lady's ear with a ramrod. but when Lillie came back I felt better. However, we didn't think it prudent to do, any more whispering and refrained. I took a pencil from my, pocket and some old letters and wrote what I had to say - very short sentences, in every one of which the word love" figured conspicuously.

Men, instead of choosing, as is supposed, appropriate opportunities for proposals, are quite likely to choose the most unfitting. I was unable to even whisper without being heard by a deaf and dying old woman, and yet I must needs choose the moment to make a declaration (on paper) and ask Lillie to'be my wife. She accepted me (on paper), and I sealed our engagement with a kiss which was uninter ionally a smack. "Lilliel" came from the sickbed. na. dear? "Is it rai ng Y you had any supper?"

"Just a crust for him, sir, but nothing for the rest, and but for you the children would be crying with hunger.'

"Very well. I'll mind the house while you go out. Get bread, butter, ten, milk, sugar, potatoes and meat." "You-you dou't mean it?" she gasped.

The man rose up on his elbow to get a better look at me, and I saw something like alarm in his face. To quiet bim I said:

"The case is clear enough. You used to get along all right, but sickness came; you could no longer work; you have reached your last penny. Why shouldn't I help you a bit?"

"It's sadly enough we need it, God knows, but-but"-

"But you can't make out why I came up here?" "No. sir."

"Well, don't worry about it. Queer things are always happening to all of us. How long have you been ill?" "Over a year, sir."

"And how have you lived ?"

"By using the few dollars I had put by and by selling whatever we could spare until we are as you see us. I once earned my $3 a day, sir, and no poor man's family was better cared for.'

"And today you are penniless and hungry?

"Aye, sir, and as I latd here I'd have cut my throat if I had a knife."

By and by, as we talked, the mother and children returned. I heard the latter shouting, even on the lower stairs. Each had a load, and the wife returned after a lamp,'a bottle of wine and some other things. Poor soul! She was laughing and crying by turns, and to have seen those forlorn children sit down on the floor and eat the dry bread as famishing wolves devour their prey was something to pain your heart.

"It's real meat, John," said the woman as she came to his bedside-"real meat, and real potatoes, and real sugar and tea, and there is a God after all!"

"Yes, there is a God, Mary!" he whispered as he wept.

And while I sat there the wife cooked supper, and the hunger of all was satisfied, and the two smaller children afterward knelt at the bedside and repeated the Lord's Prayer and were asleep three minutes later.

It was only a drop, only a little ray of hope shining through the darkness and gloom of their poverty and de-spair, but to have caught that one ray filled them with new strength to battle in the future, and I had touched ows with still another phase of

of the law every hour of the day, and you stand by without interference. You drink in every saloon, and you comrade with every lawbreaker. It's the same with your deputies and the constables. It's got to stop. You have got to do your sworn duty."

"Another reformer struck the town eh?" was the insulting reply.

The sheriff went from saloon to sa loon and laughed at the reformer and said there should be no interference from him. Within two weeks he was removed and another man named by the minister was in his shoes. The citizens of Newbern were stunned. It seemed incredible.

The Rev. Mr. Stevens visited the justice in his saloon and seid:

"It's for you to enforce the law, and here you are among the lawbreakers! The others are depending upon you to dismiss any complaint made against them. What course are you going to take?"

"None of your business!"

The next day the minister complained of nine saloons which had violated the law. Each one of them was dis missed. Inside of twenty days the old justice was out and a new one in.

There were ordinances against Sunday sports. They had not been enforced in five years. They came to the front now. No more baseball or borse racing.

"Beat the meddler up!" was whisper ed, and a shake purse was made no to reward a scrapper for doing it.

He started out with great ardor to make a two minute job of it, but it lasted only half that time. The minister knocked him out with a jab on the jaw and then had him arrested and fined for disorderly conduct.

Then a public meeting was called at a ball, and the minister did some tall talking. He put heart into the decent citizens so strongly that they came out boldly to his support, and the opposition saw that their cause was lost.

One thing more. The Rev. Mr. Ste tens from his pulpit raked the citizens of Newbern as they had never beard a minister talk before. They owed a duty to God and to man. They must show up at church, whether they were Christians or not. The Sunday school must be resurrected. Then must be church work. Religion and politics must mix until every office in the county was filled by a decent man. The devil had had possession of New-bern long enough. Now he must be

A Dead Meeting.

Little three-year-old Willie, the son of a Methodist preacher, on the way home from services one night, heard his father remark that the meeting was dead.

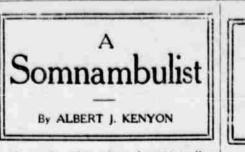

The next night, just before entering the church Willie and his brother. Tom, smelt a dread- fore we made no change. I in a measful odor.

"Whew! What is that that stinks?" asked Tom.

Little Willie responded, "I guess it is the meetin, 'cause papa said it was deadl"

My uncle, with whom I went to live enjoy its exhila- at the death of my mother-my father rating frosts by had died when 1 was an infant-had an only child, a daughter, Alice. She was much younger than I, and I saw very little of her, for when she was ten years old I went to college, and after completing an academic course I stud-Good blood prevents sickness led a profession. When I returned to me:

> "As you know, Alice has inherited a half of it to you. I wish that you and Alice would make a match, for I consider you both as my children and would like you to enjoy the fortune in common. I can do nothing to bring guardian under her mother's will, with power to appoint a successor to take my place if I should die before Alice comes of age. I have appointed you to the position in case a successor becomes necessary, for I know of no one eise in whom I have the confidence I have in you."

> My uncle died about a year after speaking these words to me, and I became Alice's guardian. After her mother's death her father had taken in a woman to care for the child and the house at the same time. My uncle on his death had told us all that after his demise we had better keep everything as it was, living in the house as we had been doing. Thereure filled my uncle's place, and this was facilitated by my being Alice's guardian, since it gave me the control of the funds. Mrs. Withers, the housekeeper. I had had little to do with, since I had been so much of the time away. The weak point in the accomplishment of what my uncle had desired was that I was obliged to antagonize Mrs. Withers, who, having brought up Alice from a child, had great influence over her. She endeavored to poison Alice against me, but Alice had always been very fond of her "big brother," as she called me, and the poison process was not easy. Nevertheless the but he did not make himself acquaintcap between myself and Mrs. Withers widened as time passed and poor Alice was constantly obliged to listen to attacks upon me by the housekeeper. When every other artifice failed the latter began to insinuate that I was managing Alice's estate badly, and from that it was intimated that I was gradually appropriating it to myself. I kept the papers pertaining to the estate in a safe, where my uncle had always kept them. Before he died he gave me the combination, telling me that no one but himself knew it previous to his imparting it to me. One day 1 went to the safe to look for a receipt I had taken for moneys expended for Alice's estate, but could not find it. After satisfying myself that it was not in the safe I was forced to the conclusion that I had failed to place it there. Some time after this I looked for another paper, and, not finding it in its place, it began to appear to me that either I was becoming very careless or some one was purloining my papers.

"Amy," said Mrs. Stringfellow to her daughter, "Walter Barnard has been paving attention to you now for six months. If you were engaged I pre-knotty jointed, red headed, freckled, sume that you would tell me. But I wish to know surely whether you are or, are not."

"I am not," replied Amy dolefully. "That evidently means that Walter hasn't spoken."

"I think be will, mamma."

"Not without being brought to the point." "Mamma, you wouldn't wish me to tell him that I am expecting him to propose to me, would you?"

"Certainly not. That would not be the part of a girl. But a girl has her privileges, and one of them is to indicate to a young man paying her attention that she wishes him to discontinue doing so."

"But I don't.""

The mother bit her lip, but said nothing more. Nevertheless she determined that since her daughter had not the spunk to bring her lover to a proposal she would make the attempt herself. To interfere in such a matter is always a great risk, and the lady realized that by doing so she might make breach between herself and her .

daughter that might never be healed But Mrs. Stringfellow was naturally diplomatic and determined that she would pursue a little game of her own which might mean a great deal or might mean nothing.

Not long after this little dialogue Mrs. Stringfellow arranged that Amy should go away on a visit. Amy objected, not being willing to leave Walter even for a day, though she did not see him oftener than once a week. But the mother prevailed, and Amy de parted with fear and trembling that the man she wanted would during her absence fall into the tolls of some other girl.

One day during Amy's absence Walter Barnard called upon her mother to pay his respects and ask how her daughter was enjoying herself. He was ushered into the library, where table lay a bill from a prominent dry goods store. It was so plainly exposed that the caller could not help seeing it. ed with its contents till an unrolled package on a chair attracted his atten tion. It was white and of a delicate fabric. Near it was a box, in which some white gauzy substance so loosely rested that a part hung over the side. There was still another box with the cover on "That new hand I hired today," said Farmer Jinks, "is the homeliest man I ever set eyes on. He's long limbed. blear eyed, snaggle toothed, and when he smiles one would suppose he had the stomach ache."

The farmer spoke these words early in July, when the wheat was being cut. One day in August, when the corn was ready to be gathered, Newton Simmonds stepped up to his employer and said:

"Mr. Simmonds, would y' mind my keepin' company with your darter, expectin' to marry her?"

"What do you mean, you red headed galoot?" "Just what I say. Eunice is the purtiest gal I ever seen, and I'm dead gone on her. But I wouldn't say anything to her about it without gittin' your permit. There ain't nothin' underhanded about me."

"See here, Newt," said the farmer. struck with the man's sense of bonor. "my daughter is spoken for. She's goin' to marry Hasbrouk's son: you're not in the race at all. Now just put it out of your head."

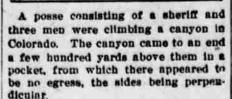

"I won't put it outen my head because I can't, but I won't say nothin' to Eunice, either, seein' you don't want me too. When a man brings up a darter, the apple of his eye, its darn mean for a feller he don't want to have her to go steal her away from bim.

"You're dead right, Newt. I'm very much pleased to bear you talk like that.

This dialogue occurred in the barn. and the subject of it, Eunice Jenks. was in the chicken house gathering eggs at the time, so she heard every word of it. She was engaged to marry young Tom Hasbrouk and satisfied to do so, for he would one day own the Hasbrouk farm, and her parents desired the match. Farmer Jenks said nothing to his daughter as to the new application for her hand. One day soon after it was he usually visited with Amy. On the made he saw Eunice walk down to where Simmonds was at work. She chatted with the farm hand for a few minutes, then went on her way to the village. Her father thought nothing of this and soon forgot all about it. The next day while Simmonds was cutting hay he saw Hasbrouk walking rapidly toward Simmonds, who was driving a reaper. Simmonds stopped his team and Hasbrouk stood by him talking angrily, though Jenks could not bear what was said. Presently Simmonds jumped down from hi hat and aimed a blow at Hasbrouk. Shen followed a rough and tumble fight in Suddenly the men came to a little cabin perched on a ledge overhanging the boiling mountain stream zigzagging down the canyon. A woman, a slatternly, ill favored creature with toussled bair, was standing beside a board supported by stakes driven into the ground just outside the door washing disbes.

"Is this Jaycoz's cabin?" asked the aberiff.

"Yes. What dy'e want with him?" "We're prospectors and have beard that he has struck paying dirt in a bole bereabout. We wouldn't mind putting up some cash to work it if it ooks well."

"Better have nothin' to do with Bill Jaycoz. He'd get yer money, and you wouldn't get anything.

The sheriff pricked up his ears at this, wondering if the woman could be used to help him land a man wanted for borse stealing.

"Oh, that's the kind of a man be is in 1t?"

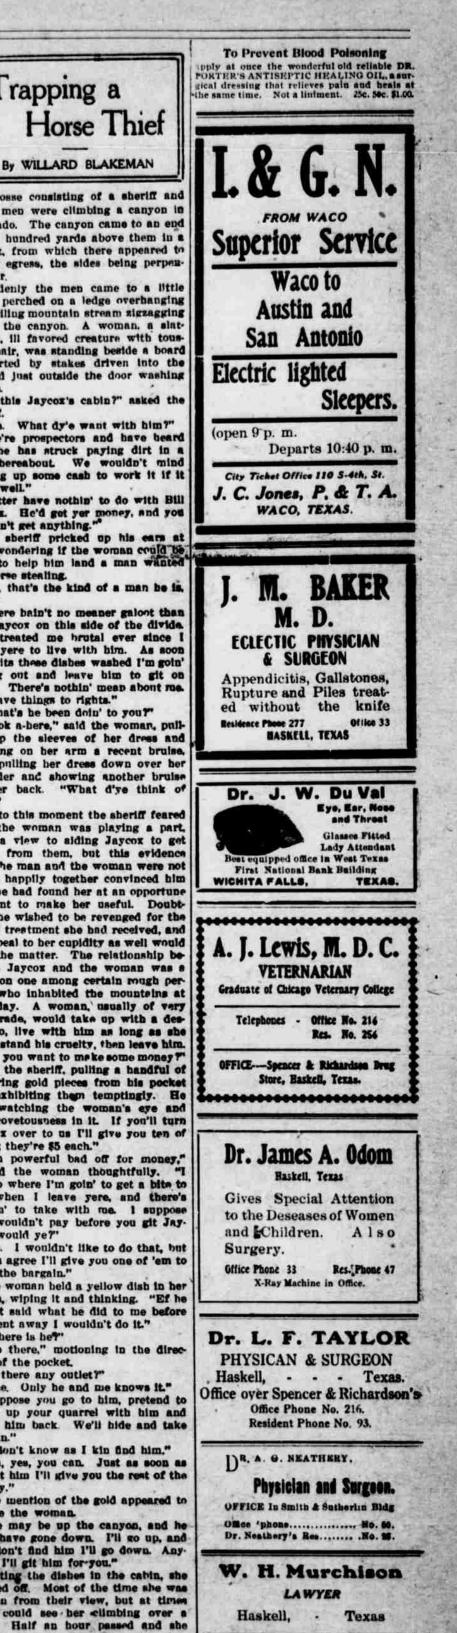

"There bain't no meaner galoot than Bill Jaycox on this side of the divide. He's treated me brutal ever since I come yere to live with him. As soon as I gits these disbes washed I'm goin' to dig out and leave him to git on alone. There's nothin' mean about rus. I'll leave things to rights."

"What's he been doin' to you?"

"Look a-here," said the woman, pulling up the sleeves of her dress and showing on her arm a recent bruise, then pulling her dress down over her shoulder and showing another bruise on her back. "What d'ye think of that?"

Up to this moment the sheriff feared that the woman was playing a part, with a view to aiding Jaycox to get away from them, but this evidence that the man and the woman were not tiving happily together convinced him that he had found her at an opportune moment to make her useful. Doubtless she wished to be revenged for the brutal treatment she had received, and an appeal to her cupidity as well would help the matter. The relationship between Jaycox and the woman was s common one among certain mugh persons who inhabited the mountains at that day. A woman, usually of very low grade, would take up with a desperado, live with him as long as she could stand his crueity, then leave him. "Do you want to make some money?"

asked the sheriff, pulling a handful of

RECEIVED HIGHEST AWARDS World's Pure Food Exposition, Chicago, Illinois. Paris Exposition France, March 1912.

When a boy I had been caught once or twice walking in my sleep. 1 feared that the habit had returned to me and that I was taking papers from the safe myself while asleep This view was partially confirmed by my waking up one night belaboring the furniture with a cane, dreaming that I was driving burglars from the house. I argued that if I had been a somnambulist on this occasion I might have been one before.

I began to notice a change in Alice's bearing toward me. Something seemed to pain her and cause her distant treatment of me at the same time. Then one day I was called upon to make a special accounting of my stewardship for Alice's estate, I found that so many papers had disappeared from the safe that it would be impossible for me to make a satisfactory accounting. At this time Alice acted in such a way toward me that I was convinced she was in the secret of my trouble, or, rather, that she had been told about it to my disadvantage.

By securing duplicate receipts for certain expenditures I managed to satisfy the court for the time being But it was not long before I began to miss other papers and was in an agony because I saw ruin staring me in the face. I was convinced that while asleep I was making way with the papers, and since they were not to be found it was likely that I had destroyed them.

One night I was awakened by a shrick. I was standing in the door of the room containing the safe, in my nightshirt. Mrs. Withers was kneeling before the safe, which was open. staring at me. It was her shrick at being discovered that awakened me. Had she known I was asleep she might have escaped undetected.

That was the end of the mystery, She confessed that while I had walked in my sleep she had heard me repeating the safe combination and had made use of it to ruin me.

On Allce's account I failed to proscute her, but since it was necessary to get rid of her. Alice and I, after consultation, agreed to be married and remain as we were.

him, so his mind became fixed on these articles. He examined the fabric, and it seemed to him that there was about enough of it to make a dress. Then it occurred to him that the gauzy stuff might be intended for a bride's vell. Having gone thus far in his surmises. he was naturally curious to know what was in the covered box. He lifted the cover and saw that it was filled with orange blossoms

Evidently some one was about to be married.

But who? There was only one single woman in the house, and that was Amy.

A terrible thought entered the young man's brain. Could it be possible that while he had been putting off his pro posal some other man had come in and occupied the vacant place ahead of him? His heart seemed to stop beat ing. Perspiration stood out on his fore head.

He paced the floor till Mrs. Stringfellow came down. When she saw the dry goods she looked displeased, called a maid and directed her in a sharp tone to take them upstairs. Then she turned her attention to her visitor.

Barnard was too disconcerted to talk connectedly. He jumped from the warm weather to the news from abroad and from the news from abroad to the last bit of social gossip. ' Then he asked if Miss Stringfellow was enjoying her visit and was informed that she was having a delightful time. He asked when the young lady would return, and his hostess informed him that certain events that had happened since her departure would necessarily alter the time of her homecoming, but did not say whether it would be hastened or delayed.

Two or three times Barnard was on the verge of asking whether Amy was about to be married, but every time he balked. Once he got his question partly out, but Mrs. Stringfellow looked at him so coldly that he turned the question into something else. Finally he arose to go, stumbled against a chair's back or against an open door, dropped his hat and stepped on it, finally getting out in great confusion.

That night he slept only a few hours and in the morning took an early train for the place where Amy Stringfellow was visiting. She was much surprised at seeing him and waited for him to declare the object of his coming.

"Are you going to be married?" he asked in a tone to warrant that if she were he was ready to kill the groom.

"No. Why do you ask?" There was an embarrassed silence for few moments, when he spoke again.

"Well, then, I wish to put in my claim for you. I don't want any more scares like this."

When Amy returned to her home her mother confessed her russ. Had it failed she could not have been convictof it.

which Simmonds downed Hasbrouk and sat on him. Presently he let his enemy up and Hasbrouk walked away. "That must be about Eunice," said the farmer. "I wonder how Tom got on to the fact that Newt wants her?"

From a window Eunice had watched the fight and seen her lover worsted. She had been the cause of the trouble, but this did not prevent her from going out later to Simmonds and asking him what was the matter between him and Hasbrouk.

"He riled me with his talk." Simmonds replied.

"Talk about what?"

Simmonds hesitated for a moment. then said, "Reckon, Miss Jenks, you'll have to ask Hasbrouk about that." Eunice didn't press the matter, because she knew all about the cause of the trouble already. "Dad," she said one day not long after this episode, "it's all up between Tom and me."

"What!" exclaimed the astonished parent.

"I reckon I don't want him." "I'm mighty sorry about that," said the farmer, disappointed. "I kind o' thought you was provided for in case anything should happen to me. What's the matter?"

"Oh, nothin'; we just don't happen to work in harness together."

The farmer, knowing that be could not force his daughter into a match that did not please her, said no more. He must wait for some other suitor for his daughter's hand. Who that suitor would be he did not know. Eunice went quite often to the store and be rather suspected that one of the clerks there had excited her sympsthies.

One day Newt stepped up to him and said:

"I hope y' won't bame me, Mr. Simmonds."

"Blame you for what?"

"Why, Eunice told me to come to you to ask you for her." "Eunice told you to ask me for her! What d' y' mean?" "That's what she said for me to do.

told her you wouldn't like it. I hope you won't blame me." The farmer looked at his employee some time before he replied. At last he said: "No. Newt, I don't blame you. You're the soul of honor. If there's any blame in the matter it belongs to Eunice. I'll see her and find out what it means. I don't propose that she shall treat an honest feller like you any way but square."

The farmer conferred with his daughter with the result that be gave his consent for her to marry the homely farminand. "I'd ruther you'd marry the ugitest man on earth," he said to her. "than one that wasn't squar', and Newt is squar ."

glittering gold pieces from his pocket and exhibiting them temptingly. He was watching the woman's eye and maw covetousness in it. If yon'll turn Jaycox over to us I'll give you ten of these; they're $5 each."

"I'm powerful bad off for money," replied the woman thoughtfully. "I dunno where I'm goin' to get a bits to eat when I leave yere, and there's nothin' to take with me. I suppose you wouldn't pay before you git Jaycor, would ye?"

"No. I wouldn't like to do that, but if you agree I'll give you one of 'em to bind the bargain." The woman held a yellow dish in her hands, wiping it and thinking. "Ef he hadn't said what he did to me before he went away I wouldn't do it." "Where is he?"

"Up there," motioning in the direction of the pocket.

"Is there any outlet?"

"One, Only he and me knows it." "Suppose you go to him, pretend to make up your quarrel with him and bring him back. We'll hide and take bim in."

"I don't know as I kin find him." "Oh, yes, you can. Just as soon as we git him I'll give you the rest of the noney."

The mention of the gold appeared to decide the woman.

"He may be up the canyon, and he may have gone down. I'll go up, and if I don't find him I'll go down. Anyway, I'll git him for-you. Putting the dishes in the cabin, she started off. Most of the time she was hidden from their view, but at times they could see ber climbing over a rock. Half an hour passed and she did not return. From the cabin they could see any one who moved out of the canyon, and one of the party was deputed to watch. Presently they saw the woman passing down. They hafted her, but instead of replying she stmply waved her hand to them and passed on.

An hour passed, and the sheriff, becoming impatient, started with his men up the canyon. There was no egress When they had gone as far as pos sible they saw their quarry sitting on a stone smoking a cob pipe. They called on him to surrender, which he did.

"By thunder," exclaimed one of the men who had approached the horse thief with a pair of handcuffs, "it's the woman"

And so it was. She had exchanged clothes with Jaycoz, and it was be who had passed down the canyon.

"Do you think, sheriff," asked one of the men. "that it was a put up job on ns from the first?"

"No; I don't think that. What I think is-well, you never can tell just what a woman is going to do abe doesn't always know herself."
