Top priority

Recruit, train, motivate and retain

WASHINGTON (AFNS) -- Despite a reduced budget and plans to keep fewer people in its ranks, Air Force's top priority remains to recruit, train, motivate and retain quality people. Secretary of the Air Force Edward Aldridge Jr. and Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Larry Welch made that commitment March 8 while presenting the fiscal 1989 Air Force posture statement to Congress.

Secretary Aldridge and General Welch said, "Even with the significantly reduced budget, our priorities remain valid." They pledged that lower budget levels would not force a return to the "hollow force of the late-1970s." Instead, the Air Force has decided to reduce its numbers.

Budget levels forced a conscious decision "to maintain a smaller but healthy, well-supported force," the two leaders said.

Air Force's amended budget for fiscal years 1988 and 1989 reduces military end strength by 23,100 from the services' original fiscal year 1988 request. Also being eliminated in 1989 are 1,361 civilian positions. Secretary Aldridge and General Welch told Congress those manpower reductions are counterproductive, but budget pressures dictates a smaller force.

The two leaders said the smaller force must still have a competitive compensation package, including pay and allowances, medical care, MWR programs, reimbursement for moving expenses and other benefits.

Secretary Aldridge and General Welch said, "We will sustain programs that support our people, on and off duty."

They emphasized that it is "critically important" that Congress support the requested 4.3 percent military pay raise and the 2 percent pay hike requested for civilian workers.

Secretary Aldridge and General Welch added, "The future capability of the Air Force will depend, in large measure, on how well we recruit and retain quality people today." Air Force retention rates in most job-specialty areas remain healthy. However, downward trends in retaining pilots, engineers and some enlisted skills are cause for concern.

"The alarming drop in our pilot retention rate portends a shortage beginning in fiscal '89," the Secretary and Chief of Staff predicted. Air Force will face an increasingly competitive labor market in the 1990s. An aging national work force and a shrinking pool of service-age youngsters will make recruiting tougher.

Within that overall priority of building and maintaining a quality force, the two leaders said Air Force wants to:

- Modernize strategic forces.
- Maintain a high level of readiness and sustainability.
- Increase airlift capability.
- Modernize tactical forces.
- Improve its ability to operate effectively in space.

Panel says choice belongs to spouse

WASHINGTON (AFNS) -- Secretary of the Air Force Edward Aldridge Jr. and Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Larry Welch have announced a series of initiatives designed to alleviate pressures on spouses of military members and to enhance Air Force support for families and volunteer activities.

The initiatives are the result of recommendations presented to the Air Force leaders by the Blue-Ribbon Panel they had appointed to study employment of spouses and pressures to participate in Air Force activities. The panel's written report was released this week. The initiatives include:

- Adopting and fully implementing a clear policy statement on the spouse's freedom to pursue personal goals without affecting the military member's evaluation, promotion or assignment opportunities.
- Heightening awareness of and support for Air Force family support structures such as Family Support Centers and related volunteer agencies.
- Supporting spouses' career aspirations through formal programs aimed at such areas as personal skills assessment, job banks, resume clinics, and advanced employment

Fighting force is the best, despite cuts

RANDOLPH AFB, Texas (AFNS) -- A smaller U. S. fighting force, the result of a $33 billion cut in the proposed 1989 defense budget, will emerge well-paid, well-equipped and well-trained, James McGovern told Air Force reporters Feb. 26.

The Undersecretary of the Air Force said congressional cuts in defense spending in the last four years total almost $120 billion.

"There clearly are penalties associated with a $33 billion reduction coming in '89 on top of a $20 billion reduction last year on top of a $30 billion reduction the year before and a $33 billion reduction the year before that," Mr. McGovern said.

"Clearly, we will not be able to meet all of our commitments around the world in the manner required," he emphasized.

The congressionally imposed fiscal 1989 funding reductions will force a reduction in the number of Tactical Fighter Wings, eliminate 20 programs, including the Small Intercontinental Ballistic Missile; and cut the size of some Air National Guard and Air Force Reserve units.

"Aside from people, which clearly is the No. 1 force multiplier, the other areas of weapon system development that will enjoy a preferential treatment are those systems which take advantage of enduring Soviet weaknesses and which also obviously take advantage of enduring U. S. strength."

Mr. McGovern said examples of such high-leverage force multiplier

Dining out scheduled

The 1958th Communications Squadron holds their annual Dining Out tonight at 6:30 p.m. at the Enlisted Open Mess.

According to Capt. Gerald L. Brown, commander, 1958th Communications Squadron, "This year's event continues a tradition that was started several years ago and not only honors present members of the squadron, but all assigned members since the unit was originally formed at Harmon Field, Guam, in 1948."

The guest speaker for this year's event is Col. Jan P. Huggins, commander, Air Training Communications Division and deputy chief of staff for communications at Headquarters ATC, Randolph AFB, Texas.

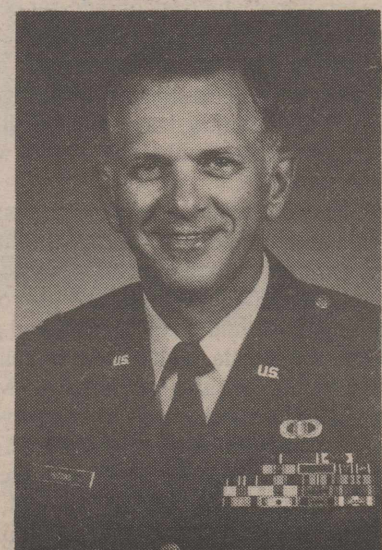

Colonel Huggins was commissioned Dec. 20, 1963. He has served at Keesler AFB, Miss., McConnell AFB, Kansas, Clark AB, Philippines, HQ/USAF, Washington, D.C., Tan Son Nhut AB, Republic of Vietnam, Randolph AFB, Texas, Scott AFB, Ill., Minot AFB, N.D., Yokota AB, Japan, and Offutt AFB, Neb.

He is a graduate of Air Command and Staff College (1974) and Air War College (1983) at Maxwell AFB, Ala. He has also completed the Air War College seminar program (1981) and the Industrial College of the Armed Forces by correspondence (1976).

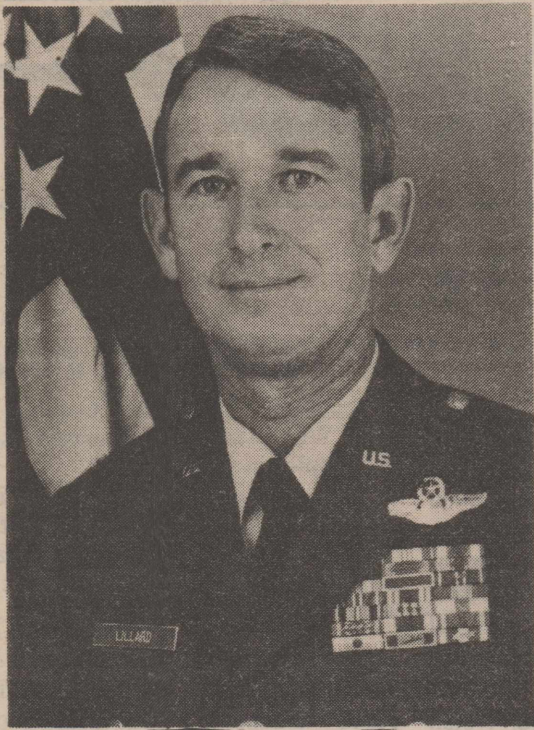

Colonel Huggins is married to the former Johnida Johnson of San Augustine, Texas. They have three children: Scott, Craig and Melissa.

Taking A Bite Out of Crime

Crime and the fear of crime can be a huge problem which can influence every action in a person's life. While we may believe that where we are currently living is safe and generally free from the threat of crime, just ask anyone who has had their home broken into about how safe they believe the area is. Crime can strike anytime and anywhere and the figures and statistics don't always tell the complete story. Crime prevention remains largely an attitude and is vital because each incidence of crime hurts all of us -- our neighbors, our schools and our children.

The most important resource we have in reducing crime and fear in our neighborhoods and on base are neighbors working together to prevent crime. Crime prevention means reducing the chances for criminals to victimize you and your neighbors. It means protecting people and property, and increasing community safety and well-being. Most of all, it means people just like all of us taking responsibility for our own and our neighbor's security. We all need to be on the lookout for suspicious activities and suspected crimes to help insure our communities remain a secure place for our families to live.

Blowing in the wind...

I estimate that Reese has had more than its allotted share of blowing dirt and dust this season. It never ceases to amaze me how the winds can blow so hard here in West Texas and get all of the inert material to somehow fly. But nonetheless it does, and we must all be made aware of a few simple precautions.

While you are driving, remember that visibility can be reduced very drastically and rapidly. Driving with your lights on will make you more visible to other drivers. While walking or working outside, be alert for flying debris. Dust and dirt aren't the only items flying in the breeze. And perhaps most importantly, police your work areas to insure all moveable items are tied down or secured to prevent loss and/or damage to expensive property. Let us work together to minimize any potential risk this Spring phenomena may offer.

A Sad Farewell...

Reese is indeed very sad to see Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Bill "Quick Draw" McGraw and his wife, Thelma, and Lt. Col. Paul Baker and his wife, Nita, depart the Reese community for their next assignments. The McGraws will be moving on to Lowry AFB in Colorado, where Quick Draw will become the Installation Staff Chaplain, overseeing a program roughly three times the size of the one here at Reese. The Bakers will be moving to Chanute AFB, Ill., where he will become the Base Civil Engineering Commander.

A farewell party for the McGraws and Bakers, scheduled by Air Base Group, will be held at 6:30 p.m. on Wednesday, March 23. RSVPs for the party are needed today (call 3655). In addition the chapel's Protestant Parish has scheduled a potluck farewell for the McGraws. Everyone is invited to attend this get-together at 6 p.m. March 27th. Come on out and say good-bye to these great people, whose contributions to Reese will be long remembered.

Kudos to...

- A1C Roy Paz for being selected for the Quarterly Individual Safety Award.

- A1C Victor Fulton, 1958th Communications Squadron, for being selected as the 64th FTW Airman of the Quarter.

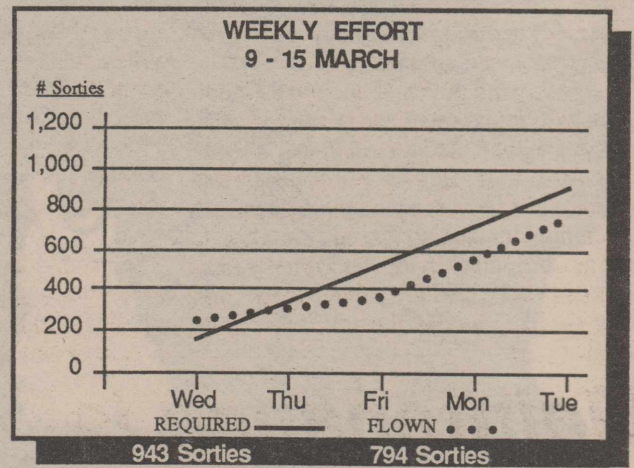

- A1C Shaun Terry, 64th OMS, who was presented an Achievement Medal for superbly maintaining my T-37 aircraft.

- Mr. Garland W. Love, for being recently selected as the first president of the South Plains Chapter of the Texas Society of Quality Assurance.

- Congratulations go out to two of our Hospital Staff -- Lt. Col. Craig Ruble, for being selected by the South Plains Nursing Administrators Council for a two year term as their President; and to Capt. Kathleen Koles, for being selected to be the Council's Secretary-Treasurer. The council is a composite of Region Hospital Directors of Nursing and other Nursing Administrators whose focus is on methods to improve and enhance Health Care Systems for West Texas.

- Detachment 11 of the 24th Weather Squadron won the 3rd Weather Wing Commander's Award, and was nominated for the Williams Award to HQ Air Weather Service. That makes them the best weather unit in the Air Training Command and also the Strategic Air Command!

programs are "the B-2 advanced technology bomber, which is going to force the Soviets to totally revamp their air defenses; the advanced tactical fighter, which is going to revolutionize air-to-air combat; the Peacekeeper missile, if we are ever able to get the Congress to agree to base it in rail garrison; certainly the Strategic Defense Initiative; and the advanced medium-range air-to-air missile, which is going to allow us for the first time to be able to see first, fire first and leave the site."

Mr. McGovern said a smaller Air Force nevertheless must be adequately paid. The fiscal 1989 budget proposes pay raises of 4.3 percent for the military and 2 percent for civilians.

"We've made a conscious decision that we are not going to make the same mistakes they did in the Carter administration. If we are going to have to live with the congressionally imposed defense budget reductions, then we'll reduce the number of military people and civilians.

"But those that are left are going to be adequately paid, well-equipped and well-trained," Mr. McGovern emphasized. "The quality of our people is our greatest success story," he added.

"Air Force will continue to prioritize those programs which encourage our people to stay in the Air Force," Mr. McGovern said, adding that the Air Force today overall has "a pretty good standard of living," he added. "Quite frankly, I don't see that diminishing very much for the people that we've kept in the force."

To keep that standard, Air Force's budget focuses on a number of initiatives, including cutting out-of-pocket expenses for permanent-change-of-station moves; improving family housing and medical care; and good funding for morale, welfare and recreation.

Mr. McGovern also said he thinks MWR funding will be kept at the level approved in 1988. "We are implementing some reforms designed to manage our MWR resources in a more business-like fashion," he said, adding that he hopes "Congress will give us some breathing room in that area."

"Those are the things people watch," he said. Air Force leadership has devoted a lot of energy educating the Congress about the importance of MWR to the morale of our people.

"Although we're disappointed with the funding reductions, Congress was threatening much more severe reduction. We were able, with a lot of pressure, to turn that around."

The congressionally imposed budget reduction may result in hiring freezes, terminations and furloughs, and particularly concern the Air Force. "Let's get one thing straight, however; the Air Force is totally opposed to the budget reductions and the resulting hiring freezes, furloughs or terminations. We're opposed because it's not in our national interest but the Congress isn't listening; we are being forced to fit 10 pounds of requirements into a 5-pound bag." On the other hand, he added, there is nothing in the '89 budget that requires us to reduce civilian strength."

The Undersecretary also expressed concern about declining pilot retention rates. The budget proposes a bonus program for aviators. "We in the Air Force have one of two choices. We can deal with the problem or we can bury our heads in the sand," Mr. McGovern said. "Most people in the service understand that the problem must be solved because the demand for pilots around the world is exceeding the supply."

"The pilot bonus," Mr. McGovern said, "is the only answer we've been able to devise in the short term to deal with the problem. I think there is a reasonable chance that Congress will provide the funding and the legislative authority to allow us to pay the bonuses." He cautioned that the first industry affected if the economy goes bad is the airline industry.

"I think that many of our pilots should probably, before they get out, consult with some of their predecessors--those in the late '70s who got out and within a year or so were unemployed for several years," the Undersecretary said.

While Air Force cannot reduce some irritants experienced by military members during their careers, such as unaccompanied tours and deployments, Mr. McGovern said the service offers some very exciting challenges that people can't find anywhere else.

He said that publicity on the DOD budget has created some myths in the public's perception of defense spending. "It's interesting to note in recent polls that if you ask the American people whether we ought to spend whatever is necessary to maintain superiority over the Soviets, 63 percent will say yes," Mr. McGovern said. "And if you ask whether or not we're spending too much for defense, nearly 60 percent will also say yes. What that tells me is that the American people have been led to believe that we are spending more than what is required."

"Some of the myths are that the American people think that 50 percent of our federal budget annually goes to defense when it's actually 26 percent," Mr. McGovern explained. "About 65 percent of the people feel that we spend more than 20 percent of our gross national product, which is a good measure of our commitment to defense spending, when we actually spend roughly 6 percent of our gross national product--less than what President Kennedy spent on defense in the 1960s. And that was at a time when we were clearly a preeminent military power," the Undersecretary added. "Today we are not. It's a much more dangerous world than it was then."

Another myth is that there has been widespread fraud, waste and abuse in defense spending. "In reality," the Undersecretary said, "if all the alleged waste, fraud and abuse were to be totaled annually, it would be less than one-half of 1 percent of the entire defense budget."

While even that small sum is still "intolerable," he believes the facts have been distorted in a way that has eroded public confidence in defense spending. "That is another myth that we are going to have to deal with," he said.

Mr. McGovern concluded that the Air Force is doing "pretty well" despite its disagreements with Congress. "We are not going to reduce our flying hours despite the huge reductions that have been imposed on us by Congress," he said. "You can walk out to any flight line and see that most of our aircraft have been modernized in the last few years. In most cases we're flying with operational ready rates in excess of 80 percent. One only has to look around at our facilities to see that we are in far better shape than we were in the late '70s," the Undersecretary said. "The Air Force leadership will fight very, very hard, as it has been doing for the last several years, to maintain the funding for our people programs. And I think we will be successful."

OWC Art auction set

More than 300 works of art by such masters as Chagall, Picasso, Miro, Dali, and Rockwell will be featured at the Reese Officers' Wives' Club Annual Charity Art Auction. The auction will be held on Saturday, March 19, and Sunday March 20 at the Officers' Open Mess.

Featured at the auction, conducted by Art Auction, Inc., Galleries of California, will be original lithographs, etchings, serigraphs—all signed, numbered, and authenticated, as well as original oils and watercolors. All works of art are framed and ready to hang.

Viewing and exhibition of all pieces to be auctioned will be from 6:30 - 8 p.m., with the auction beginning at 8 p.m. Seven door prizes, donated by the gallery, will be given away during the auction. There will be a $1 donation per person, and free hors d'oeuvres and a no-host bar during the viewing.

The art auction is just one of the many fund-raising projects sponsored by the Reese Officers' Wives' Club. All profits made will be given to various charities and the scholarship fund. Of the $12,000 raised by last year's fund-raising efforts, over 75 percent directly benefited Air Force families and organizations.

As a special treat, Harry Landers, a renowned actor famous for his role in the television series "Ben Casey," will be the guest auctioneer.

Purchases can be made with personal checks, VISA, and Master Card. In addition, art work over $500 will be eligible for a long-term payment plan.

information prior to permanent-change-of-station moves.

Investigating the establishment of a volunteer management program to more effectively recruit, place, retain and appropriately recognize volunteers.

The following policy statement concerning spouse employment and participation in Air Force support activities has been adopted by the Air Force: "It is Air Force policy that the choice of a spouse to pursue employment, to be a homemaker, to attend school or to serve as a volunteer in the Air Force or local community activities is a private matter and solely the decision of the individual concerned.

"No commander, supervisor, or other Air Force official will directly or indirectly impede or otherwise interfere with this decision. Neither the decision of the spouse in this matter, nor the marital status of the military member will be a factor used to affect the evaluation, promotion or assignment of the military member, except under conditions specifically permitted by Air Force Regulation (e.g., joint spouse assignments or personal hardship circumstances.) Air Force spouses and members have a long tradition of service to their communities. Their individual and collective efforts have enhanced the quality of life in military and civilian communities around the world. This generous and willing participation in volunteer organizations, in clubs and in other support activities has contributed greatly to the morale and well being of the Air Force family. The Air Force welcomes and values this generosity of spirit. At the same time, the Air Force recognizes that voluntary services must be exactly that -- voluntary, and must be so regarded by all Air Force members."

Implementation of this policy as well as the other initiatives is already underway. Senior commanders in the Air Force were recently briefed on the panel's findings and concurred with the leadership's commitment to the policy and program adjustments. Major Air Commands have been tasked to develop expanded programs for enhancing employment opportunities for spouses. They have also been directed to study volunteer management options at local bases, including the possibility of professional volunteer management bureaus. Efforts to inform Air Force personnel and their families about these policies and programs will continue to be expanded. Air Force leaders emphasized the continued importance of voluntary participation of spouses. They believe these initiatives will heighten the recognition for such service while eliminating coercion.

The panel was formed in early August 1987 and traveled to 17 Air Force bases worldwide. Panel members talked with more than 2,600 military personnel and spouses to gain an understanding of the issues related to spouse employment decisions.

Maintenance is going contract, or is it?

By 2nd Lt. Joan M. Kinsey
Chief, Cost Branch

The determination whether aircraft maintenance at Reese AFB will be accomplished by government or contractor personnel has not been made yet. In fact, it will not be made until mid-1989, after an extensive review of the function has been completed.

This process began with the Air Staff. They decided that aircraft maintenance is a commercial activity, which means that the same service can be provided by the private sector as well as the government, so military personnel are not essential to this activity.

Then an in-depth analysis of the maintenance function is made to determine the government's minimum needs in this area, and a work statement is developed which specifically states the work required to meet these minimum needs. This work statement forms the basis of a contract between the government and the employees, whether they are contractors or civil servants.

Next, the government's representative, the Management Engineering Team (MET), prepares a cost estimate of the in-house operation based on this work statement. They develop the Most Efficient Organization (MEO), which is a streamlined organizational and operational structure based on input from any and all maintenance personnel. In developing the MEO, the contributions and experience of the maintenance folks enables the MET to get "lean and mean," or determine the smartest method of accomplishing aircraft maintenance with the fewest number of people. Then the government's "bid" of the cost to perform the work is calculated.

Finally, the contractor's estimate of the cost to perform the work is evaluated. The lowest bidder is determined, but in order for a contract to be awarded, the total cost of contract operation for the lowest bidder must be 10 percent less than the government's total in-house cost estimate. Otherwise, the government retains operation of the function.

Submitting an activity for review under this process produces dollar savings to the government by increasing efficiency. Manpower historically has been reduced by developing the MEO. This forces the organization to increase efficiency in order to accomplish the same work with fewer people. It also enables the government to realize a sizeable cost savings in personnel. Savings are further increased if the function goes contract, since the contract operation has to be 10 percent cheaper than the government's operation. In any case, the bottom line is that the government, and therefore the taxpayer, gets more for their money.

Reese personnel can expect to see the eventual elimination of all military personnel from maintenance. The manpower authorizations will be reprogrammed to alleviate shortfalls in other areas in the Air Force. They will be replaced by an all-civilian workforce, either government civil servants or contractor employees, on or around October 1, 1989. But until the last item of the cost comparison is completed, the outcome is uncertain.

Staff Sergeant Ken Warner, a T-37 crew chief assigned to Cobra Flight, 64th Organizational Maintenance Squadron, refuels a T-37 between flights. The T-37 will hold 326 gallons of fuel. The Maryville, Tenn. native has been assigned to Reese for four years. (USAF Photo)

Much more than words

As many of you may already know, your DO graduated from that oft-scoffed university on the Brazos River--Texas A & M. Whether you're friend or foe of the great AGGIE tradition makes little difference in this particular writing, except the homespun philosophy of life that follows belongs to a venerable and tenacious alumni Class of 1913 -- H. B. Zachry. Sharing it with you is pure joy because the philosophy is much, much more than words, it's an outline for life that each of us can choose to follow and measure our own success by:

"I do not choose to be a common man. It is my right to be uncommon if I can. I seek opportunity --not security. I will refuse to be a kept citizen, to be humbled and dulled by having my state and nation look after me.

"I want to dream and to build, to fail and to succeed --never to be numbered among those weak and timid souls who have known neither victory nor defeat. I know happiness can come only from the inside through constructive work and sincere positive thinking. I know that the so-called pleasures of the moment should not be confused with a state of happiness.

"I know that I can get a measure of inner satisfaction from any job if I intelligently plan and courageously execute it. I know that if I put forth every iota of strength that I possess--physical, mental and spiritual--toward the accomplishment of a worthwhile task'ere I fall exhausted by the wayside, the Unseen Hand will reach out and pull me through.

"Yes, I want to live dangerously, plan my procedures on the basis of calculated risks, to resolve the problems of everyday living into a measure of inner peace.

"I know if I know how to do all this, I will know how to live and, if I know how to live, I will know how to die."

Enough said. Gig-em!

"The best, most advanced systems, with the finest, fastest, most capable weapons, are worthless without good people to operate, maintain and support them."

2,500 personnel needed to retrain

AIR FORCE MILITARY PERSONNEL CENTER, RANDOLPH AFB, Texas (AFNS) -- Phase II of the fiscal 1988 Air Force retraining program has begun service-wide to give people a final chance to voluntarily retrain into another career field.

Phase I was the first of a potential three-phase process. It canvassed the largest group of eligibles with letters advising them of their retraining opportunities. Under the first phase, more than 400 people agreed to retrain.

There are approximately 2,500 class seats for retraining allotted for fiscal 1988. During Phase II, letters are sent only to those being considered for selective involuntary retraining. These letters give eligibles their relative standing should involuntary retraining be necessary, and invite them to seek retraining while they still have a choice.

This special retraining program for second- and subsequent-term people responds to changes in manpower authorizations, weapon system and equipment conversions, and other mission requirements.

Some skills are considered labor-intensive, or oriented toward hands-on work, while others are geared toward technicians and supervisors.

Realignments are used to put skilled Air Force people where the mission needs them most.

Air Force seeks to fill all of its retraining requirements with volunteers. Those who volunteer for retraining will be able to list their preferred Air Force specialties and will receive consideration for a base-of-choice assignment.

Although retraining is used to meet changing requirements, it also gives career airmen one of their few opportunities to change career fields.

Should Phase III, the involuntary phase be needed, incentives will not be offered. Major Commands will decide who is to be retrained. After Air Force approval, specialty codes and assignment selections will be tailored to meet Air Force needs. Additionally, selections may not satisfy individual preferences.

Selective retraining may be necessary if enough volunteers are not obtained. People who receive letters advising them of their status should consider voluntary retraining as soon as possible.

Vacuum cleaners recalled

The Eureka Vacuum Company has issued a voluntary recall of their vacuum cleaner model 3321, because of a possible electrical defect, AAFES officials announced. Customers who purchased a Eureka canister-type vacuum after Jan. 1, 1988, should check the unit, which sold for $64.50 for serial numbers ranging from 36565748 through 36568146. Some units in this series were found to have defective electrical cord plugs. The vacuum cleaner can be returned to any Army and Air Force Exchange for a full refund.

Musicians needed

The Reese Chapel will again use a brass ensemble for Easter services and mass. Trombone and French horn players are needed as well as one percussionist. Call 3536.

Fulfill your lease

The Housing Referral Office has received several complaints from apartment managers and homeowners complaining of one co-resident wanting to vacate their quarters because the other co-resident is unable to fulfill the lease. The Texas Apartment Association Lease states:

"Except under military a clause below, residents will not be released on grounds of voluntary or involuntary school withdraw or transfer, voluntary or involuntary business transfer, marriage, divorce, reconciliation, loss of co-residents, bad health, death or any other reason, unless otherwise agreed to."

If you cannot abide by a lease, then do not sign it until it is agreeable. You are liable for the lease. If you have question, contact the Housing Referral Office at 3601.

Employment opportunities

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service is continually recruiting for qualified applicants. As a spouse of an active duty military member you will be given preference when competing for vacant positions, if you are equally qualified with other applicants. In order to qualify for spouse preference you must have transferred to the new duty station with your sponsor and submit an application within six months after the sponsor's reporting date.

Applications are accepted each Tuesday between 10 a.m. and 12 noon. Contact Janice Dearwechter, 885-4581.

The Volvo values - quality, safety, and durability - are built into every 240 Series sedan and wagon we make. Which makes them perhaps the best way to transport your most valued possessions. Your kids.

And because the Volvo you buy is built to last, it may be the car your kids drive first.

So after you've faithfully carried them from Dick and Jane through Dickens and James, you can send them out into the world with the same set of values they grew up with. A Volvo.

What could be more valuable than that? VOLVO

NCO Prep Course 88-04 graduates

Noncommissioned Officer Preparatory Course Class 88-4 graduated March 10 during a ceremony at the Mathis Recreation Center.

The Honor Graduate for Class 88-4 was SrA. Monica R. Stinson, assigned to the 3500th Mission Support Squadron.

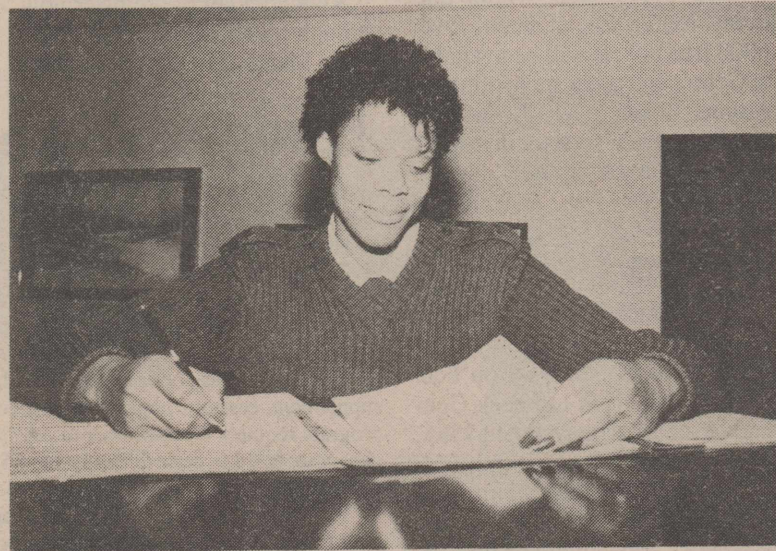

The Distinguished Graduates are SrA. Gene Strassner, 64th Supply Squadron, and SrA. Gregory J. Griffin, 64th Organizational Maintenance Squadron.

Staff Sergeant Michael Masters, guest speaker for the event, spoke on the maturity of an NCO. "The most outstanding trait of a good NCO can be summed up in one word: maturity, with the main ingredient of maturity being self-discipline."

"I would like to challenge all of you to use what you have learned in this school and not to throw it away or forget it as soon as you walk out that door," he said. "Help make this a better Air Force."

Other graduates of NCO Prep Course 88-4 are: Senior Airmen Dennis E. Breeding, Michael J. Williams and Denver L. Cook, and Airmen First Class Steven J. Becky, James E. Woodham, Kenneth B. Elder, Dennis D. Riley, Thomas H. Swartz and Joseph S. Santangelo assigned to the 64th Organizational Maintenance Squadron; Senior Airmen Roderick B. Baker and Victoria E. Edmundson and Airmen First Class Ronald E. Peck and Guy K. Lensert assigned to the 64th Field Maintenance Squadron; Airmen First Class Terry G. Carpenter assigned to the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron; SrA. Jacqueline Garland assigned to the 64th Supply Squadron; SrA. Michael J. Ford assigned to the 1958th Communications Squadron; and SrA. Lisa A. Sharp assigned to USAF Hospital-Reese.

Senior Airman Monica Stinson, NCO Preparatory Course Class 88-4 Honor Graduate, checks through personnel records. She is a Records Clerk, and is assigned to the 3500th Mission Support Squadron. (USAF Photo)

Educational assistance available

One hundred thirty three million and still climbing. That's the total value of the Guaranteed Student and Guaranteed Parent Loans made to Air Force people and their families sponsored by the Air Force Aid Society since 1979. The cost of these loans to the Society is three one-hundredths of the value received, a vitally important assist for many recipients who might be unable to receive these loans elsewhere.

The Air Force Aid Society's Guaranteed Student and Parent Loan programs are offered to Air Force personnel, their children, spouses and widow(er)s to help them finance their post-secondary education. Loans are made by the Society's affiliated lender banks, under the Department of Education's Guaranteed Student Loan or Guaranteed Parent Loan programs. The loans are insured through United Student Aid Funds, Inc., (USA Funds), a private non-profit corporation, on the basis of reserves deposited by AFAS and held by USA Funds.

The Air Force Aid Society is the official charity of the United States Air Force, incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia in 1942 as a private, nonprofit organization. In its 46-year history, the Society has focused its activity on helping commanders provide emergency assistance to deserving individuals. Funding for that vital mission has come from annual donations to AFAS, each dollar of which has been put directly into emergency assistance operations. Income from the Society's investment fund has been partially used to permit AFAS to sponsor student and parent loan programs, and to test a new Freshman Academic Grant program in the Fall of 1988.

Sponsorship of educational loans has been institutionalized by AFAS as a tremendously important program within the Air Force community. Judging by its growing commitment to Air Force families in need of educational assistance, the Air Force Aid Society is clearly determined to provide help both with traditional programs and especially tailored new initiatives.

$1000 not so easy to obtain

Consumers interested in losing weight while making money at the same time are calling the Better Business Bureau (BBB) about a mailing from the Board of Medical Advisors of Henderson, Nevada.

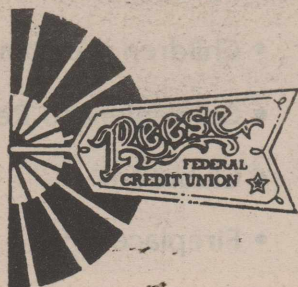

The promotion also operates under the name Amerdream. The company offers consumers a diet supplement program and a $1,000 treasury bond for trying the diet and reporting its success. The program was developed by a Dr. Robert Willner.

The Bureau has not been able to find out if he is an M.D. or a Ph.D. The diet supplement, cassette, books, etc. cost consumers about $229. The fact that the program requires the consumer to pay is not revealed in the mailing piece. The consumer is led to believe that he pays $229 for a diet supplement program and for participating receives a $1,000 U.S. Treasury bond.

The catch is that the bond is worth approximately $110. Consumers would have to wait until the year 2012 for the bond to mature. Net result - the consumer is paying $119 for a diet program.

The owner of the company, Frank Sarcone, was the subject of a consent order with the U.S. Postal service for alleged misrepresentations with his Forever Thin promotion in 1984.

'Grizzly Bear' handled gun with ease

By Marty Brazil
Company of Military Historians
Keesler AFB, Miss.

Sergeant Ben Warmer was a giant of a man -- 6 feet, 6 inches tall in his stocking feet and 275 pounds.

No wonder the "grizzly bear," as he was nicknamed, handled his B-17 .50-caliber waist gun with such ease.

Sergeant Warmer was more than big. He was strong. He played college and pro football as a fullback and had served as the bodyguard to a former secretary of the Treasury.

In April 1942, he enlisted in the Army Air Corps. He found himself teaching physical education and longing for combat flying. An afternoon at the gunnery range in front of sharp-eyed officers assured him a combat assignment.

By the time the North African campaign was over and the invasion of Sicily was imminent, Sergeant Warmer, a member of the 99th Group, 12th Air Force, had flown 12 missions.

July 5, 1943, on his 13th mission over Gerbini, Sicily, the sergeant was thinking of his seventh wedding anniversary.

As the 30 lead bombers of the 99th Group approached the target area, the German fighters came up to attack. The lead fighter elements were twin-engine Messerschmitt Me-110s. Right behind them were sleek single-engine Me-109s.

As Sergeant Warmer squinted into the bright, clear sky, he saw an Me-110 coming in on a wide curve, its tracers falling short of the B-17. The sergeant waited until the Messerschmitt slipped into range and began to hose him down. Pieces broke off from the fuselage and right wing of the fighter. Quickly, it broke off to the left, then exploded in a huge fireball.

That was one -- Sergeant Warmer's first kill.

He caught a second fighter with a long burst into the engine. The plane staggered and veered toward the B-17, dropping just beneath the fortress.

Someone shouted over the intercom, "That's two for ya, Ben!"

Suddenly, a shark-like Me-109 came in on a long downward turn. Sergeant Warmer yelled, "Two o'clock high," and began shooting. A burst into the gas tank and the Me-109 exploded, rocking the bomber.

That was No. 3. The sergeant looked around. Holes had appeared all over the aircraft. The Germans were shooting good. Forward, a cannon shell had started a fire.

The other waist gunner's oxygen nozzle froze, and he passed out. Sergeant Warmer tended to his friend, who looked up and said weakly, "Watch out, Ben! Three o'clock high!"

The timing couldn't have been better. Sergeant Warmer caught the German head on. Later, the sergeant remembered that the Messerschmitt looked like "a clock with a busted mainspring" as it blew up.

Four kills. One more and Sergeant Warmer would be an ace.

An Me-109 came sliding in from 4 o'clock low. The tailgunner was tracking him, but just a little too slow. As the German steaked into view, Sergeant Warmer put his tracers into the wing root. The fighter pilot tried to roll out, but his wing snapped off at the fuselage.

Sergeant Warmer was an ace.

As an Me-110 rolled in for the attack, Sergeant Warmer lined up and squeezed. Empty! Quickly, the sergeant started feeding a new belt into his machine gun. The Me-110 got bigger and bigger. Pieces of the B-17 were being chewed off and whizzing by in the slipstream.

Just then, the fortress let go her bombs and lifted skyward, free of her heavy load. The Me-110 streaked by, followed by the sergeant's curses.

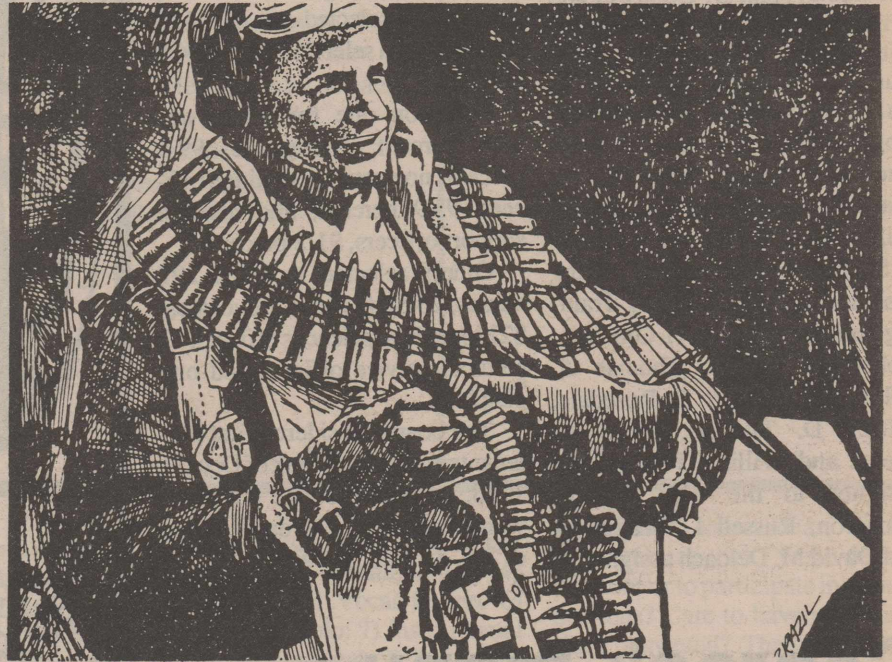

A single Me-109 came in from 12 o'clock high, knocking out the forward guns. The pilot yelled to Sergeant Warmer that the German was passing his waist position. The sergeant put a long burst into the canopy that left a bloody froth hanging in the air. The Me-109 went down with its dead pilot.

Six kills.

As the B-17 was leaving the hostile skies over Gerbini, two German fighters gave it one last concentrated effort. The belly gunner drove one off as they came from below, but the other continued its upward rush.

Sergeant Warmer pushed his .50-caliber's nose down and put some short bursts into the engine cowling. The Me-109 seemed to stop and hang in midair as its propeller froze. Everyone on Sergeant Warmer's plane watched the Messerschmitt spin all the way down and explode.

The "grizzly bear" had his seventh kill of the day, a feat which earned him a commission and the Distinguished Flying Cross. (Courtesy the Keesler News)
