Fundraiser for Norma Jo Collins

WINTERS ENTERPRISE TAFF REPORT

WINTERS- A fajita dinner fundraiser will be held Sunday, February 23, 2014 for Norma Jo Collins. Jo has been diagnosed with a rare form of lymphoma and also has a genetic kidney disease. A fajita dinner with the trimmings will be held from 11 a.m.-1:30 p.m. at the WISD school cafeteria.

Plates will be available for adults and for children 10 and under. A live and silent auction will be held in conjunction with the meal along with a quilt that will be given away at the meal. Tickets for the quilt are available individually or at a discounted rate for six tickets. Jo has been an LVN since the late 1970s and has cared for many residents of Winters and Runnels County in her nursing career. Jo will not be able to work while she is taking chemo treatments

Volunteers will be con-tacting the community to help give back to Jo in her time of need. Money raised at the benefit will help defray Jo's medical insurance. If you would like to donate your time at the meal, donate auction items or funds to help pay for expenses, please contact Bobbie Collom at (325) 977 7379, Teresa Walden at (325)

WINTERS HEAD START A wide array of services for families in the Winters area

WINTERS ENTERPRISE

STAFF REPORT WINTERS- Serving children ages 3-5, Head Start, a program of Central Texas Opportunities, Inc. has a wide array of services available for families in the Winters area. Head Start was started with the belief that regardless of one's circumstances, everyone deserves the chance to have a better future. Head Start accomplishes this by supporting the growth of the whole child and family. Physical wellness, social - emotional development and early learning experiences help children and their families succeed. Head Start is a comprehensive child development program which serves children from birth to age five and their families. The programs are child-focused and have the overall goal of increasing the school readiness of young children in low-income families.

Head Start provides a range of individualized services in the areas of education, medical, dental and mental health, nutrition and social service to children and their families.

Priority assistance is given to children from lowincome families and children with a disability, including a severe disability. Income eligibility requirements for Head Start may be waived, if a child has a current Individualized Education Plan. What does the Central Texas Opportunities, Inc. Head Start 3 and 4-year-old program offer? The 3 and 4-year-old program currently serves 356 children and serves seven area counties including: Brown, Callahan, Coleman, Comanche, Eastland, McCulloch and Runnels. Ten centers are available to families in these counties. A variety of services are offered to children and their families who participate in the program, including nutrition, health, education and disabilities services. Who is eligible to participate in Central Texas Opportunities, Inc. Head Start? Children from birth to age 5 who meet federal poverty guidelines may be eligible for Head Start services. Central Texas Opportunities, Inc. Head Start has established priorities for enrolling children based upon child and family circumstances, community needs and available funds.

2 Winters Enterprise FUNERALS AND OBITUARIES Karen Austin

Karen Smith Austin died on Thursday, January 9 in McKinney, Texas. She was 73. She is survived by her husband, Roy, her children, Toni and Greg and their families, along with countless relatives, colleagues and friends. A memorial service for Karen will be on Satur-day, February 15 at 11 a.m. at Wilshire Baptist Church in Dallas. In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to the McKinney Young Artist Competion, 701 Sorrell Road, McKinney, Texas and for autism research through the Autism Research Institute at www.autism. com. Karen's life was a rare and wonderful blend of love, beauty, excellence and strength. Her devotion to her family was foremost and unwavering, but she also created a sense of family among all those whom she knew and loved. As a piano teacher, her love for her students was as deep and expressive as her lifelong love for the music she taught. Karen delighted in all that was truly beautiful, both in things and in people. She created a world of beauty all around her, includ-ing her home, her joyous celebrations, her inspiring music and, most of all, through her gracious smile and generous spirit. Karen sought excellence in all she did, whether in her long career as a teacher, as a leader in numerous professional and community organizations, or as she ministered to so many by sharing her musical gifts through her passion for genuine wor-ship. Karen was a woman of extra-ordinary strength, both in character and conviction. She used adversity as an opportunity for constant learning and growth, personal success as a means to affirm others rather than self, and responsibility as a power to be used for good. Karen Austin's accomplishments are too many to describe, her limitations too few to mention and her essence too deep to fathom. For most of us, when we are gone, our presence is merely absent. There are those few among us who, when they leave us, create an absence that is ever present. Karen Austin was one of those people. She loved us, she inspired us, and we

From the Chief's Desk War on drugs

By Randall Davis Winters Chief of Police

While watching the news in recent days, I have become aware of the recent death of Phillip Seymour Hoffman, an actor who many may not know but have most likely watched movies where he played a part. Mr. Hoffman was an extremely talented and versatile actor with a promising career. But like many people he suffered from his own demons. Mr. Hoffman's demons were alcohol and heroin addictions, among other dangerous substances, developed at an early age.

I recently watched an interview with Mr. Hoffman where he admitted to severe addictions early in his career, his getting sober and his struggles to remain sober and clean for the past two decades. After 20 years of "being clean" and his career was reaching new heights, tragedy struck and Mr. Hoffman admitted he relapsed. The relapse ended with his death and Mr. Hoffman joined the ranks of such talented people as Hank Williams, Janis Joplin, Jimmy Hendricks, Judy Garland, Elvis Presley, Bruce Lee, River Phoenix, Chris Farley, John Belushi, Mike Von Erich, Heath Ledger, Anna Nicole Smith, Brad Renfro, Whitney Houston, Michael Jackson, Thomas Kinkade, Cory Monteith and the list just goes on, and on, and on.

The list of lost talent is truly tragic, all gone due to drug overdoses, but even more tragic is the list of the many thousands of normal everyday people who weren't sensationalized as the Hollywood "A" list, or the super rock star, the artist, or the sports hero, but are still just as gone, and gone because of a drug addiction leading to a drug overdose. One may argue, but some of those celebrities died from prescription drugs, or his overdose was an accident, but the fact remains the end result was final Sadly, the loss of so many lives, so much talent, so many sons, so many daughters, still has not slowed the flow of narcotics and illegal drugs into and through this country. To the contrary, the illegal sale and use of these dangerous substances have continued to increase, and are still continuing to endanger an ever increasing number of people.

It is all too sad fact, law enforcement cannot win the war on drugs any more than a parent can protect their own children by watching their every move, 24 hours a day. It is going to take a society as a whole, getting tired of losing their friends, classmates, their children, their heros, senselessly to an illegal drug or narcotic. It's going to take that same responsible society to build the strength and courage to stand strong, together, and say enough is enough.

THE ORGANIZATION OF RUNNELS COUNTY

Runnels City looses battle to railroad, drought

CONTRIBUTED BY RUTH COOPER RCHC CHAIRPERSON

WINTERS- The town of Runnels City had exhausted "every legal remedy", and managed to remain the county seat but the victory came too late to save her crumbling fortunes. Failures of the different railroad projects to go through Runnels City and the devastating drought presented unsurmountable obstacles to the once thriving frontier town. With each passing day, more and more people were moving to the new railroad metropolis on the Colorado River.

The sunbaked citizens of Runnels City could not set un-tempted in their rapidly deteriorating town while five miles away gaiety and money flowed freely. Ballinger did not feel the drought so much and continued to display a carnival atmosphere throughout every day. Few people could see any point starving in Runnels City when business and residence lots were waiting to be occupied in Ballinger. For those wanting to move, the movers would set the houses on the running gears of wagons and make the five mile trip to Ballinger. On some occasions, the family would live in the house at night and ride in wagons by day.

Ballinger was the western terminus of the railroad and a wide open surging city. According to the records of Jim Johnson, early day rancher and financier, he remembered a lot about the old trail drivers and the various situations of the time. He tells the following story: "In 1886, I married Miss Cora Walden and the following year, I trailed a herd for Jim Parramore, whose headquarters were on Bluff Creek, five miles north of Runnels City, to Cooledge, Kansas as the boss of the outfit. We made a pretty fair drive, average time and nothing except the usual stampedes, storms, high water and Indians begging for beef to contend with. I rode the cushions back almost to my very door for the first time since I had been in Runnels County. The Santa Fe had built to within six miles of Runnels City and laid out the town of Ballinger, just close enough to kill our town."

The first cemetery in Ballinger, Texas was located on a hill near the forks of the Colorado River and Elm Creek in the southeast part of the city. It was thought to be the burial place for a Major Huston who had died a few weeks after Ballinger was established June 29, 1886; however there are no county records concerning Major Huston. Several decades later, several of the graves in this early cemetery were washed up by a flood.

Shortly after the estab-lishment of Ballinger, the Ballinger Cemetery Company was formed with J. A. Ollive, A. Mathews and W. S. Davis as Trustees. It would be completed July 11, 1888, when the trustees purchased from the Gulf, Colorado and Sante Fe Railroad Company a lot of 10 acres of land to be used as a cemetery. This land was located in the northwest part of Ballinger according to deed records. Stories of another early cemetery once existed on land southwest of and adjacent to St. Mary's Catholic Church in Ballinger. Research has not proven any records regarding this burial site.

The controversy that had begun at Runnels before the lot sale at Ballinger continued. Opposition to moving the county seat persisted. The most prominent people of the county were fighting hard to keep the county seat at Runnels. S. P. Brown was one of those best loved and most respected citizens. In "Biographical Sketches of Confederate Soldiers", written by Henry Davis Pearce of Runnels City, a more glowing tribute had seldom been given than one written at his death by the Honorable A. C. Avery. Avery was a Judge of the Supreme Court of North Carolina when the letter was written. He had been a comrade of Brown on the battlefields of the Civil War. Brown had come into the county in 1879, settling in the Blue Gap Community. He helped organize the county and always took an active part and interest in the county affairs.

He with his family had just moved into Runnels City in 1885. His move could have been to see that his daughter had advantages of a good school and piano lessons as well as a city life. Most everyone in Runnels had invested in good lots and nice homes and to change would mean personal and financial losses to the many families of the Town of Runnels.

It was the fall of 1886; Henry D. Pearce made daily trips to Ballinger to work on the block he had purchased. His children kept the post office going in the old Brandt Hotel where the family also lived. He had hired a house-moving business to move their house to the block in Ballinger.

Meanwhile, life went on in both areas. The ladies of the Pearce family made curtains, quilts and rugs for the hotel being built in Ballinger. It would be known as the Pearce Hotel.

Hwy 158 to be expanded between Garden and Sterling cities

WINTERS ENTERPRISE STAFF REPORT

SAN ANGELO -In the coming months, a series of three construction projects, with two different contractors will be underway along a 46-mile stretch of State Highway 158 between US 87, north of Sterling City, and the Midland County line, about 20 miles east of the intersection with Interstate 20 in Midland. These improvements will widen the existing section of two-lane highway to a four-lane undivided bighway.

highway. Reece Albert, Inc., was awarded a $19.2 million project to expand a 14-mile section of SH 158 between Garden City and the Sterling County line in November 2013. Barricades have been placed and construction is scheduled to begin the week of February 10. Work will begin with the extension of the existing culverts. This activity is expected to last six weeks and to have little impact on traffic. The speed limit has been reduced to 65 mph in the work zone and a 10-foot width restriction is in place along the entire project in Glasscock and Sterling Counties. Construction on this segment is scheduled to be completed in August of 2016.

Last fall, Price Construction was awarded the $13.8 million western expansion of SH 158 from Garden City at RM 33 to the Midland County line. Improvements to this 18-mile section began in October 2013 and are expected to be completed by March 2015.

Price Construction was also the successful bidder for the final segment, a 14.4 mile section.

Record-setting Grand Champion at Ft. Worth Show

FORT WORTH- Community support for Texas youth was evident during the Ft. Worth Stock Show and Rodeo, as $3.3 million was generated for the 2014 Junior Sale of Champions. Local business owners, executives and individuals purchased 295 head of steers, barrows, lambs and goats. The grand champion

The grand champion steer, a 1,335-pound European crossbred, was exhibited by Flint Newman of Stanton. Coors Distributing Company of Fort Worth topped all challenges with an impressive $200,000 bid. The reserve grand champion steer was a 1,339-pound European crossbred exhibited by Jayton Cogburn of Eastland. Hillwood Properties purchased the reserve steer for $140,000.

The grand champion barrow was purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Bass for $45,000. Claire McCormick of Canyon showed the crossbred barrow. Syracuse Food Group, LLC topped the bidding at $25,000. The grand champion lamb,

The grand champion lamb, shown by Teah Alane Patton of Silverton, was sold to the Anne T. and Robert M. Bass Foundation for $34,000. The res. champion lamb, exhibited by Rachel Evenson of Stephenville, went to the Ladies on the Lamb for $27,000.

JULIA MILLER

FOR RUNNELS COUNTY CLERK

TTTT

Julia Miller, daughter of Dr. Robert & Beth Miller, was born in Winters, raised in Ballinger and is a fourth generation resident of Runnels County. She is the second of four children who include Lori McClung, Nancy Minzenmayer and Rob Miller. She and her siblings grew up helping their dad at his vet clinic and at their ranch while developing a healthy respect for hard work as well as a deep love for animals. Julia graduated from Ballinger High School in 1979 and attended Hardin-Simmons University on a basketball scholarship. Her sophomore year, she transferred to Texas A&M University and graduated in 1984 with a bachelor's degree in Animal Science with an emphasis on equine studies. She began working in the thoroughbred industry during college which continued after graduation. She worked with thoroughbreds throughout the United States and later found her way to south Texas training horses on the King Ranch.

In 1990, she made the decision to follow a childhood dream and moved to Los Angeles to pursue a career in film and television. Working sporadically as an actress, she needed a "day job" to pay the bills so she held down a full time job while studying acting. Initially, Julia worked as a messenger but rapidly worked her way up into a position as a facility manager in one of the larger law firms in Los Angeles. She was a supervisor of over 20 drivers/messengers and coordinated all incoming and outgoing deliveries, court filings, court research, service of process and mobile document copying. She later was offered a position with a litigation support company in Century City. In this new position as head of the accounting department, she managed all of the accounting systems and developed the department from the ground up. She was supervisor of two accounting clerks and was responsible for payables, receivables, invoicing and collections as well as office administration.

As her acting career began to pick up, she quit her "day job" and began working full time as an actress. Julia's hard work paid off and she appeared in dozens of television commercials as well as film and theatrical productions. It was during this time that she realized that she was blessed with a talent for drawing and her works quickly became displayed in private homes across the United States and as far away as Australia. She currently enjoys photography and is self-taught in website and graphic design.

In 2003, tiring of city life and longing for the country, Julia decided to move back to Texas. She wanted to get back to the horse work that she had always loved and also carry on with her artwork while being closer to her family. She returned to training horses until she accepted a position as assistant to the Runnels County Judge in 2011 which she currently holds.

In her spare time, Julia enjoys time with her horses and her adopted boxer, Liberty. As a lover of animals, she has also worked with rescue groups, fostered rescue animals and found loving homes for the animals that she has taken into her care.

Julia is an honest, dependable and highly organized individual and feels that her attention to detail combined with her years of office experience and management make her an excellent choice for the position of Runnels County Clerk.
