Rodeo, Frontier Days Liven Weekend

Bogata once again prepares for the biggest event of the year as the annual rodeo and Frontier Day celebration approaches, and area commmunities will be there in force.

The weekend celebrations start off with a parade at 5 p.m. Thursday, June 26 in downtown Bogata. Excitement mounts as residents and visitors event which has grown to await be one he biggest of its kind in nor-ly, people aren't the only things mat hold family reunions...at least, that's what I think went on out at our place the other day.

Martins, as most people know, are communal birds. They like to live in bird-type apartment houses..the more the merrier.

They fuss and fight some, and also sit out on their front porches chattering in the cool of the evening. In between talks, they eat three times their weight in mosquitoes each day, so they are handy little birds to have around.

We installed our martin house where we can look at it while sitting on OUR front porch, chatting. We don't however, eat mosquitoes....they eat us

Well, the four pairs of martins we've had this year ... along with a family of sparrows, raised u psome young really early, then raised up yet another family.

The house is next to the power line, so that the adults can coax the reluctant youngsters off the nest and to the line in their first short flight.

But the other evening I heard the darndest noise, it sounded liek all the martins in the world were outside. Stepping out, there were martins everywhere! There were martins covering the birdhouse, martins flying through the air, martins sitting on those power lines! As martins do, of course, each one was talking away in high pitched little bird chatter

I began counting...and with all the movement, fly-ins and fly-offs, came up with a rough total of 42 black or black and gray birds flitting around. What was going on, I wondered. Eighteen was a previous record. A wedding? Nope, too late in the season. They hadn't brought in the neighbors to see a new hatching, too many birds. One of the birds had crashed into our window a few days before, and for a moment I gave serious consideration to the idea that they were having some type of bird-wake, kind of like the Irish.

But they seemed entirely too cheerful for that ... it just wasn't a funeral like atmosphere.

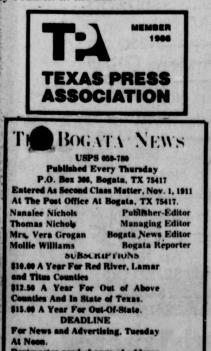

Finally, I figured it out. Over there was aunt Bess, talking to beat the band with Uncle Clarence!

All the distant Oklahoma cousins were there too, and sitting on the porch, surrounded by a host of young fledglings..yes, it sure looked like great-grandpa...feathers ruffled and notched, but telling tales from the old days

Mendy Norwood Athletic Physicals Should Be Taken Now

Athletes needing physicals for the 1986-87 school year should make appointments and get their physicals now

You should not wait until the last minute. If the students wait until the end of the summer, this puts too much of a load on the local doctors at that time Those athletes needing physicals are: all seventh graders and all ninth graders for 1986-87. Other athletes should read the medical appraisal form to see if they will need a physical.

Rivercrest Principal Resigns

William B. (Buford) Hervey of Talco resigned his position as principal of Rivercrest High School. Mr. Hervey, a native of the Johntown community, was high school principal of the Sabine School District for 12 years before coming to Rivercrest in July of 1984.

a son, James Hervey, who will be a senior next year at the University of Texas

In a telephone conversation with Mr. Hervey, he stated that he was resigning for an early retirement and that Le had mixed emotions about his resignation. He commented that Rivercrest had the bet kids he had ever worked with and a good faculty, also. "I'm leaving a good job, but I feel I've reached that time in my life when I need to do some things I've always wanted to do before I get too old to do them," Hervey said.

Mr. Hervey plans to find part time employment and live in Johntown where he is in the process of building a new home.

A Safe Choice

Incorporating

our electrical safety tips into your lifestyle is a safe choice for ensuring the security of your family. If you want to make a safe choice, remember to follow our advice below.

 Avoid the use of water around electrical outlets or appliances. Water conducts electricity, so keep all electrical wiring away from water, especially around bathtubs or sinks. Child proof your electrical outlets with Child Safety Plugs, too.

 Teach your children about power line safety. Never touch a power line with anything, including antennas, tree pruning tools, ladders, kite strings, or sailboat masts.

•If you see a fallen power line, do not get close to it. Report it to either our office or the local law enforcement officials.

You can use and enjoy the benefits of electricity-the safest and cleanest power choice-but you have to make sure that it is not used carelessly. Call our office today for more information.

Everybody Loves A Rodeo!

By D.W. (Red) Emery Rodeo is a sport that knows no season. With the coming of each new year comes a new rodeo season. With most of the sport's emphasis placed on the performing cowboys and the bucking stock, the people behind the sas, Oklahoma and Louisiana. Jerald particularly liked calf roping, and actually thought that he was on his way to being a good roper, but a good horse is part of a calf roping team and he never was able to purchase his own. He soon gave up ropto be something in the rodeo business I could do if it was nothing more than watering or feeding the horses."

Three months after the accident, his recovery progressed to the point that he could sit up, but only with help. He was paralyzed from the and December, the Smith's spend their time at the ranch. They inventory, select and replace stock and book rodeos for the season ahead. Jerald and his wife Joan have little idle time during the so-called slow part of the year. Joan is the bookkeeper and handles the booking and planning for the entire year, and according to her records. Wing will produce some 75 rodeos with 250 performances during the 1986 season. The production phases of rodeo are never seen, or even thought of by the rodeo fan. "Once the season starts in the spring, we roll on through the season, it's a seven day a week business," Smith explained. "Most of our rodeos are three and four day events, and we know how many head of stock are necessary. For example, a three day performance requires 50 head of timed event anmals, these are for roping, dogging and team roping. We will take 40 bucking bulls and 50 head of horses, that's 140 head of competitive stock, and in addition to these, we'll take 10 saddle horses. The saddle horses are to be used by the pickup men and in the parades and grand entries."

When showtime arrives, the Wing Rodeo Company is ready with stock, and the stock is ready to combat the best cowboys in the business.

scenes are often overlooked. Without the producers, promoters and sponsors, rodeo as we know it would not exist.

Had it not been for a tragic accident in the fall of 1952, one of the nation's largest and prestigious rodeo producers might never have founded the Ŵing Rodeo Company of Bogata.

In fact, the Wing Rodeo Company owes its beginning to the shattered dreams of a promising young rodeo performer. Jerald Smith, whose hopes of becoming a top rodeo hand were destroyed, not by a bucking bull, but by a fall from a pecan tree.

Being a younger brother sometimes has its advantages, at other times there are a few disadvantages. In the case of Jerald Smith, both may have applied in a childhood spent in Pine Branch, a rural community halfway between Clarksville and Bogata.

As a younger brother, he attended Sunday buckouts at the Pine Branch store. And as a youngster, he was too small to take part in the action, but he watched his older brothers, Jake and Pete, the Presswood brothers, John, Harry and Gaither, along with the other would-be cowboys ride the local bucking stock, and hone their roping series.

The decidisadvantage Jerald experienced was simply that he was too young to take part in the action. Most youngsters experience some impatience just waiting to grow into their teens, especially when their associates are older boys, as was the case of Jerald Smith.

"I never missed a Sunday buckout. Those were the longest day sof my life," he said explaining his frustrations. "Just watching the older boys and wondering if I would ever grow up and be allowed to take my turn. I knew in my mind that I could ride anything the others could, but my parents kept saying I'd have to wait until I got a little older and a little bigger. My er brothers enforced my parent ders, they didn't want the responsibility if I was allowed to try riding a bucking yearling and got hurt in the process. They kept me grounded for what seemed to me at that point in my life, a lifetime, time just seemed to stand still'

The advantage during that period of waiting to grow up, was that he had time to study the riders and the bucking stock. By the time he was ready to take his turn, he had his own ideas on how bucking horses and bulls were supposed to be ridden. His ability to ride progressed even better than he or the older boys expected, and by the time he reached his late teens, he was competing in bull riding, bareback riding and saddle bronc riding events at rodeos around East Texas. Arkan ing and concentrated on improving his riding skills. After all, any purse money won roping calves on a borrowed horse had to be shared with the owner of the horse.

Jerald Smith was a promising young performer, tall and lean and possessed of the courage to take on any horse or bull that he might draw.

His purse winnings were more numerous than they were large. As a result, he like other young cowboys, would work at almost any job between rodeos to help make ends meet. In the fall of 1952 Jerald landed work thrashing pecans in a Titus County orchard. A fall from one of the trees suddenly ended his career as a rodeo performer. It also came very close to being the end of Jerald Smith.

With his back broken in three places, the times ahead looked pretty dark for a 21 year old cowboy. The surgical repair of his back included the insertion of three plastic discs, and forced him to spend three months lying in the same position. Such inactivity gave him time to do a lot of thinking. He had been a good cowboy, bût he was well aware of the fact that he would never perform competitively again. He also knew that there were other phases of rodeo operations that he might handle, if he could just get back on his feet.

Jerald Smith did eventually get back on his feet, and in his own words. he tells of his confinement in teh hospital and the beginning of his recovery, "I realized as I lay in the John Sealy Hospital in Galveston. unable to move that my riding days were over, sort of like the world coming to an end, I guess. I did the thing that probably any 21 year old in a situation such as this would do. I got a good case of self pity. My professinal career had been short, but I had made a lot of friends, and when those friends and many others that later became friends, started visiting me in the hospital, and showed very little, if any, pity, only encouraging me to hang tough, it might take some time, but they all assured me that I could make it. And from there my thoughts began to turn in a different direction.

He went on to say, "Those guys were cowboys, they were tough cowboys, and they honestly believed I could beat this rap. I realized it was going to be up to me. I made up my mind, since rodeo was in my blood, and up to the time of the accident, I had done almost anything that I wanted to do, if the good Lord was willing, I was going to stay in rodeo in some way or the other, i knew that I would ever climb into another chute and mount a bucking bull or fork another bucking horse, but there had waist down, and after three more months of determined rehabilitation and therapy, he was able to get around in a wheel chair. Smith later underwent a series of operations to repair the leaders in his feet which had deteriorated during his bout with paralysis. The corrective surgery was necessary if he was ever to walk again.

"It must have been about a year after the accident that I got back in rodeo, not as a contestant, but I was selected as one of the judges at the Camden, AR rodeo," Smith said. 'This was my first experience other than as a performer, or sometimes working with the stock. I was still pretty shaky and weak, but with the help of some pretty well known cowboys at that time, Pete Belcher and Pop Bivins from Cuthand and two Talihina, Ok cowboys, Don Huddleston and Keith Freeman, I was positioned at a proper vantage point for judging. I kinda felt like I was back in the saddle again."

"I guess I did a pretty good job, because I stayed fairly busy for about three years, and during this time I was in and out of several hospitals for therapy treatments. My physical condition was slowly improving, and with the aid of crutches I was beginning to be able to do almost anyting any cowboy could do, but I knew I'd never be able to do what I wanted to do most, compete as a professional."

Smith worked for 10 years with the Crenshaw Rodeo Company of Haworth. OK. He managed the livestock booked rodeos and continued to be in demand as a rodeo udge. The years that he followed the rodeo circuit, not as a performer, but in booking, livestock handling and managing had been another learning experience. It was also a time filled with dreams and ambitions of some day being on his own.

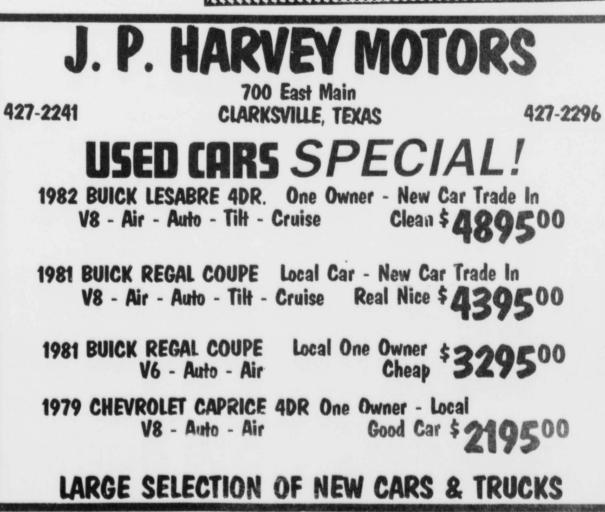

These desires finally became a reality in 1966. With two partners, Sloan Williams, a south Texas rancher and rodeo producer, and John Barnes, a Houston investor, the Wing Rodeo Company was formed.

The name Wing was adopted, simply becaues a wing spreads, and the more it spread the more it covers. The trio's idea was to cover as much of the rodeo world as possible. The Wing Rodeo Company was a successful ooperation from the beginning with Smith acting as the production manager. He and partner Williams bought the Barnes interest after the first year, and in 1969, Smith bought the Williams interest. Since that time, Wing Rodeo Company has been a Smith family operation.

With little rodeo action slated during the winter months of November Once a rodeo is over, the stock is trucked back to the ranch, and fresh stock selections are begun for the next scheduled rodeo.

"Our season is long, our days and most of the nights are long, and sometimes our patience is short, but we've been in the business a long time and are pretty well organized. We have dependable people who know and understand the stock, therefore our problems are very few."
