bean? They are long, blackish/ red in color, wrinkled up and look like something you might use to start a fire with.

So, who ever tasted one for the first time? Besides, a big dose of vanilla tastes terrible...so who discovered that a tiny taste made lots of things so good?

There are lots of foods that could prompt such speculation.

Brocolli, for example. Brocolli is a flower. Let it grow a few days too long and it will burst into yellow bloom. Now what curious oul discovered that the stuff was tasty in it's "bud" stage but not any earlier or later. (Yes, I know there are people in high places who don't agree that it is EVER tasty).

What possessed early gourmets to try to eat hot peppers? Can you imagine deliberately munching away at the firey pods and then experiment with using them in cooking...long before crackers and ice water?

How did someone discover that there was something inside of a coconut that was good? First you shaved through an outer greenish shell, then you were left with this hairy brown thing with the consistency of wood? It was a determined (or hungry) person who persisted all the way inside.

What intrepid culinary explorer went through a trial and error process until they came up with mustard. Ohhh, that exper-iementing could be hazardous. Even that simple staple of life, bread, is a puzzle.

At what point in time did early man learn to pick only certain grain heads, grind them up and then mix them with water to make bread? When the refinements of yeast come along?

When did humankind discover that smoked meat kept...who discovered dehydrated foods.

Cheese. Now, there's a good one. Who discovered that it you soured milk, squeezed it and kept presing and messing about it would turn into something so delicious?

When did the first dissatisfied diner sprinkle salt on food? Why did they choose salt.

What about ground pepper? And tea and coffee. Consider those favorite beverages. A coffee bean until it is roasted is absolutely disgusting. So who decided "If I take these funny little beans, get them ripe, then slow roast them, then grind them up and boil them with water it'll taste great"?

Tea is kind of the same thing...what would prompt someone to pick this particular type of little leaf, dry it and brew it?

Undoubtedly hunger has played the major part in these discisions and experiments.

Probably a lot of people poisoned themselves before the better foods were settled upon.

But the next time you are taking a chomp of pizza, or such like...think about it. Who discovered that tomato sauce, veggies, meat and cheese tasted good piled up on a slab of bread and eaten?

Country Cooking By Georie Bankhead

The Country Cooking column is being shared this week from the kitchen of Kenneth and Betty Thomas of Deport. They have been maried for 27 years and have lived in the Deport area all this time. They have two daughters, Janie and husband, Guy Joyner of Austin and a daughter, Michelle of Dallas; and one granddaughter, Crissy

Betty has spent the last seven years of her working career at Lamar National Bank. A job she enjoys very much and states it's a very good place to work. She has previously worked at other banks and has owned and operated a craft shop. She says after her retirement in 2 1/2 years, she wants to go back into working with crafts. Betty also loves to sew. She sews for all the girls, thegirls at the bank, and for the public. Crissy says that "Granny" is a sewing expert and all her friends at college really brag on her clothes. She also likes to paint sweatshirts and T-shirts. Painting takes a lot of time but she managed to paint more than 50 shirts and sold them in her booth at the Antique Mall in Paris a few months ago.

Another hobby she enjoys is catering weddings. She decorates for receptions and plans to get more involved with this hobby after retire-

Betty also likes to grow plants, lots of plants. She loves hanging baskets. She really enjoys cooking. She

Familiar Faces

Twenty-one year old Wade White .. By Denise Wood is living proof that the American Dream is still possible. In less than five years of graduating from Rivercrest, Wade has managed to plant his feet firmly on the ground. Not only has he bought his own business, but he is also an active member of the Army Reserve, a successful cattleman, and a rising star in the Country and Western entertainment scene.

How can someone so young have accomplished so much? A major part is being Wade White. You never see him without a big smile or the kindest of words. He wasn't even aware of all his accomplishments until this interview. Yes, he's even humble.

Shortly after Wade graduated from high school, he joind the Army Reserve. After four years, he is currently a SP4 Combat Engineer in the 952nd Engineer Company of Paris. He likes the military enough to retire. Thankfully, Wade did not have to take part in Desert Storm, but some members of his troop are still in Saudi

After a brief stay in Honduras with the Reserves in July, 1990, Wade returned home. One week later he bought the Tip Top, a local cafe. His decision was made because he wanted to own a business in Bogata. He loves the town and the people.

Wade is currently in the midst of something he has always dreamed of. On April 17, Wade will be a finalist for a talent search contest hosted by KOYN radio station in Paris, and Sunset Productions of Las Vegas. The contest will be held at Robert Allen's in Paris. The grand prize winner will win a trip to Las Vegas anda chance to sing at one of the casinos. This is Wade's first contest entry. Wade is not too concerned whether or not he will win, he's already proven to himself that he can

Five years from now, Wade hopes to own his own ranch, be successful in the music business, still operating the Tip Top, and of course, still living in the Bogata area. That dream also seems very possible.
