Miller Creek Lake Catches Water

Water is beginning to flow into the new Miller Creek Lake due to rains in the area over the weekend. According to Mr. Pete Beecher, all contracts on work at the lake should be complete by the latter part of July. Already four of the six contracts are complete. Work is nearing completion on the dam, and work now in progress is on the top area of the dam and the treatment plant.

Most of the 224 square mile watershed that will feed the lake received rain recently. Moderate to heavy rainfall was reported in the watershed area along the five other creeks or tributaries along with Miller Creek. Mr. Beecher stated the lake is ready to receive water and work can be completed as the lake is filling.

It's time your family stopped being just "Smith Harold" in the telephone directory.

The new edition of your telephone directory is going to press soon. If you have only a single listing, a lot of people are going to have trouble looking up other members of your family. Certainly, your wife deserves her own listing. And giving a teen-ager a place in the directory is a nice way of saying "You're growing up." To add or change a listing just call our business office. GOD'S FIVE

MINUTES

JUST LIKE ME!

A young man had returned to our town with a degree from the best school in our state. He took up his life as a popular partner in his father's prospering business. It was easy to see that every advantage was his.

I admired him from afar. "I, too, could be popular," I said to myself, "if I were in his shoes instead of mine."

I didn't dwell on the matter. I certainly didn't burn with envy, but I did feel that fate had dealt me a less likely hand than his.

Then, one day, I was called to another pastorate in a distant city. On my last day as I said goodbye to friends, he handed me a letter which he asked me not to open until I was gone.

Following his request, I opened it after I left town. He had written that fate had dealt him a less viable hand than mine. He told how empty of real accomplishment his life was and that if he had the courage, he would like to be just like me.

I think it was then I learned, once and for all, of the mockery of the greener grass on the other side of the fence.

Remember, you are a child of God. Strive to be the best you can be.

Tourism In Texas

The Texas Tourist Council, chartered in 1962 as a privately financed organization devoted to increasing visitor travel to and within Texas, has just completed its report on "Ten Years of Texas Tourist Growth 1963-1973," according to a report by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby. The information from the Council is impressive and very informative.

From the late 1950's until 1962, Texas' travel market declined. One reason for this decline was a constitutional prohibition against the Legislature spending money to attract 'immigrants.' 'Immigrants' was interpreted to include tourists. With other states advertising for tourism, Texas was at a decided disadvantage.

A predecessor group to the Texas Tourist Council led the fight which finally saw the lifting of this constitutional restriction in 1953. With the beginning of the Council's active programs of tourist development and the growing efforts of the Tourist Development Agency, Texas' tourist industry began a steep growth that continues today.

In 1963, Texas had 11.1 million visitors. In only 10 years, this figure doubled to reach 22.7 million in 1973.

Tourism is the nation's third largest industry with 130 million Americans taking trips and spending 60 billion each year. Texas is definitely getting its share of this boom. Tourist dollars are important because they are earned elsewhere but spent here. This builds strong, vibrant economies.

In 1963, Texas received $522 million from its tourist industry. Last year we got $2.1 billion.

While in Texas, visitors contribute additional millions of dollars to our state treasury through taxes on their expenditures. In 1963, state sales, lodging, gasoline and excise taxes received from our tourist industry amounted to $42 million. In 1973 they were $193 million.

The state invested a total of $1.9 million in 1973 to attract visitors. This figure includes the combined budgets of the Texas Tourist Development Agency and the Travel and Information Division of the Highway Department.

With state taxes paid by visitors totaling over $193 million, Texas received a $101 return on each $1 invested. In addition, about 12 percent of all Texas jobs, or some 600,000 are related directly or indirectly to the visitor industry.

It is obvious that our tourist industry is important to our economy. And, it is no surprise that many millions of Americans come, again and again, to Texas. We have much to offer—hospitality, beautiful weather, clean air and water, recreation facilities, historic sites, and much more.

Some of the interesting statistics show that the average stay by our out-of-state visitors was 3.3 days in 1973; they spent an average of $18.04 per day per person, and if each visitor had stayed one extra day $405,000,000 more would have been spent. A breakdown of expenditures show that the food and drink industry received $558 million from tourists, the hotel and motel industry received $537 million, our visitors spent $472 million for gas, oil and automotive expenses, $216 million for entertainment and recreation, and $364 million for other services and goods.

The Texas Tourist Council represents approximately 12,000 firms in matters pertaining to visitor development.

Meditation for June
When I awake to each day's new challenge,
I begin trembling and feeling so small
Until I take it all to the Lord,
And then—why it's no worry at all.

For year after year, He has led me
Through depression, sadness and trials—
He blessed me with strength for each sorrow
And changed my tears into smiles

Meditation means continued thought, reflection
And in these verses, this I have done
If you're troubled, and know not an answer,
Do as I do: Talk with God, and you've won!
—Mrs. Ruth Ann Klose

CONSERVATION VIEW POINTS

J. C. YEARY, JR.
District Conservationist

Vicent Price, Informational Specialist for the Soil Conservation Service from Washington, D. C., states that the American consumer's demand for more beef has put pressure on both cattlemen and grasslands. Forecasts indicate a sizable increase in the supply of slaughter cattle for 1974 over 1973.

Our current problem, now facing America's cattlemen, is how to feed more cattle on the same amount of land. It is economically impossible to raise cattle solely on feed grains. Our breeding herds and young animals must still eat grass. And the amount of Haskell County grassland cannot possibly be increased since pressures from other land uses are so great.

So where will more grass come from? Primarily from our irrigated improved pastures because our native rangelands are not going to produce enough grass under current drought conditions to supply the demand. However, there is a way for ranchers to increase grass production and feed more cattle on the same acre.

In the last few years, Soil Conservation Service range conservationists working with Soil and Water Conservation District cooperators, have helped many in developing planned grazing systems. Different types of grazing systems are used depending on the classes of livestock, types of forage, water supply, and numbers of cattle.

Basically, a planned grazing system involves dividing a range into two or more pastures, and then rotating so each area is allowed to "rest" for at least part of the growing season.

Resting a pasture allows grass to recover and stimulates better plant growth. Increased forage production in turn permits the same amount of land to support more cattle.

That a planned grazing system is productive and profitable has been demonstrated again and again.

Matt R. Davis of Throckmorton, co-owner and operator of the Davis Ranch in southern Haskell County, established a planned grazing system comprising 2,200 acres for a herd of approximately 180 animal units in 1972. Davis reports that his system could now support approximately 200 animal units annually due to increased forage production.

Two benefits of planned grazing systems stand out: an increase in forage production and stocking rates, and an improvement in range condition.

Still, converting to a planned grazing system takes thought, time and effort. As one rancher put it: "Anybody can have good grass by leaving his land idle. Anyone can produce cattle for a short time by overgrazing his pasture. But it takes a good rancher to produce more cattle and better grass on the same land at the same time."

Much more information is available than space here permits. If you, as a rancher or livestock farmer, are interested in producing more grass and more cattle on the same land, your SCS conservationists will be glad to assist you. Come in and talk it over with us.

mer point makes Brangus a necessity in the desert or in the hot, humid tropics. The latter point makes them a good, sound investment in other areas. Their outstanding mothering ability, feedlot performance, and carcass merit are causing Brangus to make inroads in the West and Midwest and, in fact, any good cow country.

Older Americans May Qualify For New SSI Program

COLLEGE STATION—Older Americans may qualify for the new supplementary security income program when they retire, one expert says. Lynn Bourland, home management specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, described the new program. "Supplementary security income provides anyone 65 or older, blind or disabled a monthly cash income of at least $150 for one person and $195 for a married couple, if they qualify for the program. "If retirement pension won't be that much—or if the older American keeps working and earns less than $345 a month, he may qualify for the program."

A person may still qualify for the new program even though he owns a home of reasonable value, personal belongings, and one car, Miss Bourland noted. "However, savings, cash on hand, insurance, second cars and other property may disqualify a person for the program."
