Friends and Neighbors make things worthwhile

Have you ever heard that it's the "little things that mean so much" or "the little things that count"? Cliches or not, it's quite true.

My knees have been bad and my father in the hospital, and with no fanfare little bits of kindness have been pouring in.

The family practitioner down the street from the main office came down to simply offer some moral support, knowing I could use it.

Morris Weddle brought in a bag of the most gorgeous tomatoes that we've ever seen from himself and his mom and family.

Shorty Ballard came by (after providing us with some truly delicious blackberries a few weeks ago) and provided a bounty of potatoes, squash, tomatoes and okra.

Richard and Clara Nance brought fresh corn and tomatoes.

Juanita Sparks sent chicken salad and crackers down on Tuesday because it was a long stressful and difficult day and she felt like we didn't want to cook (she was so right).

Dave Seber sent a cheer up basket of kittens! Why would that cheer me up...because they are stuffed kittens of calico fabric, NOT bottle babies that need to be tended to. There have been cheerful words and thoughts exchanged in passing.

No one made a big deal about it...no one spent a lot of money, no one did anything except share what they had to share and make us feel better.

And feel better we do. Not a single problem has been resolved...yet we are comforted and supported by the kindness of our friends.

I doubt if anyone thinks that they have done much...but they don't know just how much they have done.

All over the world friends and neighbors do this for people they know. In really bad times they do much more.

And it truly is the little things that mean the most. But they are not little things, they are very big, and mean a lot to those on the receiving end. And, they remind me that to have friends you must be a friend. I need to remember to do things for others more than I do. All this outpouring of kindness reminds me to work harder at being a friend. And that's a good thing to be reminded of.

Bogata council hears internet proposal

The city council of Bogata met Monday night with several items on the agenda.

The council heard from Bill Rains about getting on the internet. Each town in Red River County could have a web page to tell about upcoming events. This is sponsored by the Clarksville Chamber of Commerce Economic Development Corporation of Clarksville and Industrial Foundation of Red River Co., and will originate at Texas A&M in Commerce. The first year will be free and then cost approximately $10 per year after that. More information will be forthcoming on this.

The council decided to re-figure a citizen's sewer rate due to a large water leak.

They also heard from a citizen about the need for a four way stop at Main Street and FM 909. The man was told he will need to talk with the Texas Department of Transportation concerning this matter.

The council heard from Juan Fuentes, J&S Yard Care of Mt. Pleasant, about the possibility of bids for mowing Thomas Park, but decided not to contract for mowing.

Joe Rose spoke as a representative of economic development about the 1/2 cent sales tax. Council has decided to hear more before making a decision on this. The council voted to go ahead and order new parts to replace the damaged playground equipment at Thomas Park. Approximate costs $1,100.

Council voted to raise the price of renting trailer spaces at Community Center to $12 night. They also decided to have the restrooms at Thomas Park open from 8:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. only on weekdays due to vandalism.

Council decided not to repair damage to a 1991 Chevrolet pickup caused by accident at the Johntown well, and decided to look for a used flat bed truck for use by the street department.

The mayor announced that the city came in at fourth place in their attempt to get a $249,250 grant for sewer/street improvements. Final ranking will be done by the state in the near future.

Mayor Eudy also announced that Jim Garrett and Geri Knowles attended a workshop in Mt. Vernon on July 1 for new council members.

Minutes were approved and bills and final water bill accounts were approved.

David Wallace, Water Superintendent, was not present due to an emergency appendectomy July 9.

The meeting adjourned at 7:20 p.m.

BOGATA
To the editor:

The Thomas Park Board of Directors, Lions Club and the Bogata City Council are looking for answers to the vandalism and destruction at Thomas Park. The restrooms by the community center are a mess. The restrooms will be open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and locked at night and weekends. Perhaps this will help.

If you see anyone destroying property, call City Hall or call Red River Sheriff's Department. You find them, we will press charges.

Please help your City Council, Lions Club and Park Board keep a nice park by identifying those doing the damage and messing up the restrooms. If we cannot solve the restroom problems, we have no choice but to lock them up and we sure don't want to do this. Less than 2% of the public is making it tough on the other 98%. Let's correct the 2%.

Several of you have asked for some peach recipes and I rounded up some that I thought you could use.

Due to the late frosts that occur around here each year, there has not been an abundance of peaches for the last few years. This year does not seem to be the case. Several area orchards have fruit available at reasonable prices. Around Pittsburg, English and Avery is where the largest ones are located. If there are some others, let us know.

Horticulturists believe that the China was the native home of the peach. They believe that trees grew there over 4,000 years ago. The peach was spread throughout Europe by the Romans. Spanish explorers brought the peach to the Americas as early as the 1500's and English colonists also brought peaches in the 1600's. The United States is the world's leading producer of peaches. Many peach trees are planted in commercial orchards and some are cultivated in gardens as ornamentals. Peaches are grown southward from the Great Lakes region of the Midwest into the Deep South and along the Atlantic and Pacific Coast.

There are many cultivars (varieties produced by selective breeding) of peaches. They ripen from early summer to fall—some as late as October.

Peaches are called freestone or clingstone, according to how difficult it is to remove the pit from the fruit. The fruit of freestone peaches is usually softer than that of clingstones. But some cultivars of clingstones are very mellow, with fine aroma and excellent texture.

The best known peach is the Elberta, a freestone. It originated in 1870 in Marshallville, Georgia. Other well-known freestone cultivars are J.H. Hale, Redhaven, July Elberta, and Golden Jubilee. Important clingstone cultivars include Fortuna, Palora, Johnson, Guame and Sims. Nectarines are similar to peaches. The two fruits are essentially alike except for the skins and the trees are identical.

Our shortcourse on peaches is over and we hope you enjoy the following recipes. Check your local orchards or try the Market Square in Paris. This time of year seems to see several vendors with an assortment of fruits and vegetables available.

Peach Chutney can be canned and stored for use this winter and is good on ham, poultry or pork.

Peach Bread is great hot out of the oven or topped with a glaze and keeps well.

This Peach Cake is made in a Bundt pan and is quick and easy.

Surprise Peach Cobbler has the crust already in the mix and saves a lot of fuss and bother!

Peach Honey is quick and easy and great with hot bread or biscuits!

Peach Leather is the answer to Fruit Roll-ups. Can be dried in the sun or food dehydrator.

Hope you enjoy these recipes and we will see you in the kitchen!

Card of Thanks

It is with the deepest feeling of gratitude that Harold and Judy Holt, Robert and Nina Holt, Jerry and Gerlyn Gray and families thank everyone in our communities for the many prayers, phone calls, cards and expressions of concern during the last three months of our son and grandson, Hayden William Holt. Robbie Marshall, Pat Williams, Donna Jessee, and Linda Gray meant so much to us by coming to the hospital the night Hayden was born and holding our hands and praying. We appreciated the immediate response of the Church Prayer Chains, and we felt those prayers daily. Bro. Bob Bush and Tally drove to Dallas and were waiting for Hayden and prayed through the night with Harold and Robert. Also the First Baptist Church members for their many prayers. Several families were able to come to Dallas and visit us at the hospital, and it was so good to see "home folks". We sincerely appreciated the Love Offerings from the Cuthand Methodist Church, the VBS children, and the Bogata School employees. The Cuthand Youth made welcome home banners and a T-shirt for Hayden. Thanks for the food, and visits since we came home. God has answered all our prayers and Hayden is continuing to improve.

Thanks

I would like to sincerely thank whoever picked all the peaches from the tree in my back yard and got all those off the ground sometime between last Thursday night and Friday afternoon. Since they weren't ripe enough, I had planned to pick and can them Saturday afternoon. But, thanks to you, I didn't have to do that. If you had asked, I would probably have shared them with you, but since you didn't have the nerve to ask me, I hope you are enjoying them.

Housewarming held for Thompson family

A housewarming was given Sunday, July 13 to Kathy and Bobby Thompson to celebrate their custom designed home. A theme of red, white and blue was used in the decor of the party accessories with lemonade and ice tea served as beverages.

Some sixty-five guests toured the home, that is the product of years of planning and designing.

Refreshments including assorted fresh fruit in a carved watermelon basket with fresh poppy-seed dressing, spicy chicken wings and a large decorated cake that read "Welcome To Our New Home" set off the casual atmosphere and complemented the design of the house.

The Thompson family, which also includes children Jessica and Jordan, received many gifts.

Scotland and the Yorkshire dales are lovely

By Nanalee Nichols

For those interested, we will continue with our vacation up into Scotland.

We headed into Edinburgh fairly early after our short stay in the little village of Gifford. Edinburgh is about one million people and one of the few cities that I love.

The castle sprawls over its hillside, dominating the landscape, keeping its ancient and watchful eye over the city that has so much charm.

Probably, the lack of heavy industry is why it's such a charming place. Education and the arts figure heavily in Edinburgh's past and present.

High upon a hilltop, swept with a cold shower, we looked down into the town, the firth (or bay as we would call it) and out to the North Sea. The Scots have just received what they have been campaigning for years, their own parliament, which will begin meeting in Edinburgh soon. The ties with the United Kingdom are tangled and entrenched in hundreds of years of history, but many Scots would like to be a completely separate county, something unlikely to happen.

Having seen Edinburgh castle once, I decided to forgo going through it again because of the great number of steep steps and walking involved. I watched Thomas and Medora vanish through the castle portal, on their way to see the plain but impressive Scottish Crown Jewels. They are the oldest in Europe, even if not the most jewel-studded and elaborate.

Phil took the van off to be washed and I ambled down the Royal Mile to poke around in shops.

I visited something new, the Scotch Whiskey Heritage Center, which features a ride through displays and animated scenes and gives the tourist a history of whiskey making in Scotland. It was, and still is a major industry. One is offered a taste of Scotch at the end of the tour but I passed that opportunity by, Scotch tastes absolutely horrible to me!

I bought a few gifts then went back up the hill, still a little early. I ended up sheltering from the rain under a huge equestrian statue, along with three Scots school children. I listened to them, grinning as they chattered about the same things American school children would.

We drove around the graceful city, seeing its collection of monuments. Only in Europe would "new town" be Georgian in era!

Holyrood house, the Medical college, Nelson's monument unrolled before our eyes.

We took Medora to the monument to Greyfriar's Bobby, the little dog who laid on his master's grave for fourteen years. It was so neat to have a gentleman about our age stop and explain that he had been an extra in the Disney movie "Greyfriar's Bobby" and could recall meeting Walt Disney.

We left then, heading down towards Moffat and the borders. After a quick bite to eat and our ubiquitous shopping stop, we headed into the Yorkshire Dales country. And what a country it was! Phil took off from the big roads and we climbed higher and higher and higher into the picture postcard scenery. Thomas spotted a very rare sight, a spike deer on the side of the road. He vanished into the blackness of the trees as if he had never been.

Brightly colored pheasants spotted the roadside and hills, paired off, male and females often together, added colorful jeweled spots to the vivid green.

For those who have read James Herriot's "All Creatures Great and Small" Series, I can vouch that his love of the Yorkshire Dales was justified, and it is easy to understand why he was willing to spend his life there.

We just couldn't exclaim over the magnificent vistas enough!

We pulled in to Haworth (which is pronounced more like Howorth) that evening. We were staying at the Old White Lion, a 300 year old inn right next to the Charlotte Bronte parsonage and church. Haworth must be seen to be believed! steep cobbled streets, slated topped roofs, chimney pots and views beyond compare.

Imagine our delight when we were shown to our rooms and found a picture window opening onto a view of the dales that went on for miles and miles! We simply sat and stared for long minutes.

We had asked Phil if we could eat Indian food that night, and although he was tired and we suspected he would rather have had us eat at the inn so he wouldn't have to cart us around, he cheerfully agreed. That's when we put our plan into action.

We had discovered it was Phil's birthday earlier that week. So, we had been collecting little gifts, and even a small birthday cake. He looked quite mystified as Thomas went to the van and unloaded a cardboard box at the Indian restaurant.

Phil turned quite red when we began handing him presents. From home we had brought him a Tour de Paris tee shirt, Thunder Prairie Publishing mugs, pens, measuring tapes and a few other little things. Medora contributed a "Don't Mess With Texas" bumper sticker, a carved iron wood marlin from Mexico, and we had all gone in together to buy him a small stuffed lamb. The lamb is a joke, and one we just aren't going to go in to here! He genuinely seemed pleased, which was good, since he had gone every extra mile a guide could to please US!

We enjoyed Tikka Mussala, lamb, colored rice and a variety of other Indian food that was very good.

Of course, Thomas had to sample the hottest dish there, and found it good, but not too hot for our Tex-Mex trained pallets.

Upon returning to our room we couldn't even bear to draw the curtains, but just sat watching the lights slowly appear across the darkening hillsides. Slowly the geometric patterning of the stone walls faded, and all that was left was a faint gleam of light. Somewhere about then we faded too, and went sound to sleep.

The next day would prove to be one of our all time favorites on this trip, as we took an early walk, visited the surgery from the James Herriot books, and enjoyed York.

Cunningham man recalls beloved home

The 1997 Cunningham Homecoming was held Saturday, June 28, 1997, on the grounds of the former school buildings. The community had joined together to build a nice covered pavilion. That, with the large oak trees, gave us shade from the summer sun as we gathered from 12 noon until 8 p.m. A delicious barbecue dinner was served at 6 p.m. Before dinner I was asked to pray and before I prayed I was compelled by my heart to say a few words. The following is an enlargement of what I said at the homecoming.

With over 300 people coming in from different directions and from various backgrounds, it was most unusual not to see even one cigarette smoked and no thought of having beer or strong drink on the premises. Whatever the opinions of individuals were, you had the feeling that if anyone showed up with a can of beer he would have been chased off the grounds.

Music was provided by a local group, joined by several others and though many of the songs had the country western flavor they were all gospel songs. This was not really a "religious" gathering-it was a homecoming-but I don't know of another place that can outdo Cunningham and the surrounding area as God honoring people.

I was born and raised in Cunningham and I well remember as a small boy how farmers would stop their teams and remove their hats when a funeral procession passed by. I also remember when at the open air gospel meetings, often held in our community, men who did not profess to be Christians sat on the fenders of the cars, respectfully listening and ready to serve as self appointed security for their wives and children in the services.

My wife, Ruth was with me tens years ago at another homecoming and she was touched when I stood to pray over the food-every many removed his hat and bowed his head. She was amazed at no smoking and no drinking. And she was delighted by the gospel sing which followed the meal. You see, we live in San Antonio where everything is different, even the present fad of some, wearing caps and hats in public gatherings with no thought of removing them.

My roots are in Cunningham. I was saved there in an altar with sawdust in a combined Methodist and Baptist revival. Though we were Methodist, Brother Roland, the Baptist preacher, preached me under conviction. We all went down to the channel for baptisms. The Baptist sang for us Methodists as we were baptized, then we stood on he bank and sang while the Baptists had their baptisms.

I received a good High School education at Cunningham and was sent off to Bible College by people of the community who donated all kinds of staple goods to cover my first year tuition in the Tulsa, Oklahoma Bible College. My mother and father are buried in the Cunningham cemetery, along with my brother Harold and many other family members. Cunningham holds a special place in my heart, not just the town itself, but the wonderful people who live there.

These are only a few reasons why I can truthfully say that for me, there's just no place like Cunningham, Texas. And I tell my friends that you can even find Cunningham on some maps.

The Majors 17-18 year old struggled in the first game, but gained momentum and won all three games handily.

Eighty percent of endangered wildlife habitat exists on private land. So why is it when landowners make every effort to attract these species, they're often punished with additional regulatory restrictions?

Now believe it or not, that statement comes from an Environmental Defense Fund report. The announcement goes on to say that the only way the Endangered Species Act will ever work is by rewarding landowners for good stewardship.

The fact is despite some 24 years that the Endangered Species Act has been on the books, it has failed to truly protect wildlife. And according to this EDF report, it's because the Act has declared war on landowners - the very people who can play the biggest role in protecting wildlife.

Now I'm not about to say I told you so. If anything, Texas landowners should welcome the Environmental Defense Fund's endorsement of our efforts with open arms. It's a lot better than getting poked in the nose.

Students may transfer from schools with poor performance

Several area high schools are among those from which students may transfer because the schools have failed to meet certain academic performance standards.

The 1,153 schools have either been rated low-performing in any one of the last three years or had fewer than 50 percent of students passing the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills test during any two of the last three years.

Area high schools meeting the designation include Paris, Sulphur Springs, Mount Pleasant, Rains, Pittsburg and Clarksville. An alternative school in Mount Pleasant also fell into the category.

Under state law, parents of students at the schools, which include elementary, middle/junior high and high schools, are eligible to transfer their children to schools in other districts, provided those districts accept transfer students. Districts are not required to accept transfer students under the law, called the Public Education Grant Program. Mount Vernon Schools have recently adopted a "no transfer" policy. Those who accept students transferring under the program are not required to provide transportation services to those students.

Although the law is called the Public Education Grant Program, it is not a grant for which parents apply. State and local school officials ensure that the state and local education funds that would be provided to the students home districts follow the students to their new schools.

This is not the type of grant program where the parent or student applies directly for funds, said Commissioner of Education Mike Moses.

Once a parent finds a public school in another district to which they wish to transfer their child and the district agrees to accept the transfer, the money will automatically follow the student to their new school.

Parents do not need to file any paperwork with the state, but they may have to complete some paperwork locally to ensure that their child's educational records are transferred to the new school.

Students can transfer only to other public school campuses in other public school districts under the PEG program. Private schools are not eligible to receive PEG funds. The program applies only to transfers from one district to another, and does not govern transfers to different schools within the same district. Those transfers are governed by local policy.

The PEG program was established in 1995, when state lawmakers dramatically overhauled the state's education laws to provide more local control and parental choice in public education. In 1995-96, although 491,005 students at 652 campuses were eligible to transfer to another school under the program, only 31 students actually requested and got such transfers, largely because many Texas school districts do not accept outside transfers. In addition, PEG-receiving school districts are not required to provide transportation services to students transferring under the program. Although those provisions remained intact during this year's legislative session, lawmakers did add a provision requiring local school officials to notify parents of students eligible for the PEG by Feb. 1 of each year. As a transition between the old and new legislation, for this year only, schools that meet the criteria are required to notify parents of their students' PEG eligibility by Sept. 1. The notification must include a clear, concise explanation of the PEG and how parents can obtain further information on transferring their children to schools in other districts. TEA officials say 796,846 students are eligible for the PEG this year.

Lawmakers also provided for increased funding for districts that accept students transferring under the PEG Program. For every PEG student a district accepts, the per-pupil state education funding of $2,387 is increased by 10 percent, provided that a district has more students transferring in under the PEG than transferring out.

A copy of the list has been sent to every public school superintendent's office in Texas. Parents who want to know whether their children are eligible for the program should contact their local school superintendent's office.

Some smoke detectors not all they should be

COLLEGE STATION — All smoke detectors are not created equal.

The majority of smoke detectors in American homes may not detect the most common house fire in a timely manner, says electrical engineering professor Dr. B. Don Russell, an associate dean of engineering at Texas A&M University.

Russell, who has been studying detector failure for more than a decade, has testified in several court cases involving smoke detectors and has been a guest on the ABC News program "20-20" for a segment on smoke detectors.

Most smoke detectors in homes on the market — about 90 percent, by some estimates — sense fires and smoke by using an ionization chamber, Russell says.

"Ionization detectors are faster than most other techniques on flaming fires," Russell said. "However, they are not as timely in detecting flameless combustion like smoldering fires caused by something like electrical shorts or cigarettes in upholstery."

Photoelectric smoke detectors are the best for sensing smoldering fires, which often fill rooms with smoke before flames can be seen, Russell says.

School lunch rules to be observed

The Talco-Bogata cafeteria staff would like to explain the way the government lunch program works due to children and parents misunderstanding the guidelines set by the government.

Each day the government requires that one of three combinations be put on the tray of each child to meet the requirements for breakfast. Four components must be offered and claimed in order for the school to receive reimbursement. This means that these items must be put on the children's tray but it does not mean that the child must eat the items. Several students have asked the cafeteria staff not to put certain foods on their trays. But by law and in order for the school to receive reimbursement this must be done. The cafeteria staff also must put three items from each combination of a balanced diet at lunch in order for the government reimbursement. In grades Pre-K through 12 students must have been served per week or daily: 2 ozs. meat, poultry or fish, 2 ozs. cheese, 1 egg, 1/2 cup beans or peas, 4 Tablespoons peanut butter or other nut or seed butters, 3/4 cup of vegetable or fruits, 8 servings of bread or bread alternate per week, minimum of 1 serving per day and 1/2 pint milk per day.

Again the staff reminds everyone that students are not required to eat these foods but they must be served for government reimbursement.

Welfare board holding "back to school" drive

The Red River County Child Welfare Board has set up a back to school fund for the low income children in the community. Starting Monday, July 14 and ending Sunday, August 31, they will accept donations for the fund. The Child Welfare Board hopes that all private citizens, clubs, merchants, churches and employers will participate in this drive.

The Child Welfare Board has begun the fund because it has found that children from low income families, families that routinely face financial crisis are often deprived of the basic tools necessary to actively participate in their education. Experience reveals that school supplies often take a back seat to rental and utility payments. Further observations indicate that when furnished with the proper tools necessary to actively participate in their education children are more likely to obtain knowledge and knowledge is power, power which can be used to overcome many of the obstacles they now face.

The Child Welfare Board is confident that when the children from low income families are furnished with the basic tools for learning, they will receive the self-esteem booster needed to help break the cycle of poverty, despair and crime.

For information on how you or your organization can help with the education of low income children by supplying school supplies please contact Randy Cooper at the Farm Bureau in Clarksville at 427-2145 or if you would like to make a donation directly, make your check payable to the Child Welfare Board, School Supply Fund and mail it to: Ms. Shirley Anderson, Red River County Auditor, Courthouse Annex, Clarksville, TX 75426 or call 427-2131.

Eight brother and sisters graduate from Bogata High School (Six become school teachers)

By Frances Mayes Rozell and Mrs. Maudie Buster Lee

Mr. Tient McCrury and his wife, Maud Warren McCrury, were the parents of twelve children, seven sons and five daughters, eight survived to adulthood.

The McCrury family came to Red River County in the early 1830s. Mr. John McCrury homesteaded two sections of land which came to be the area known as McCrury. This was Mr. Tient McCrury's grandfather.

Mr. Tient was born in 1886. Both of his parents died within a week of each other from influenza. He was only six years old at the time.

Mr. Tient and Maud saw the need for a school when their eldest child, Edie, reached school age. They spearheaded the task of getting a school district established, which was accomplished with the opening of a one room, one teacher school on McCrury land.

The brothers and sisters who graduated from Bogata High School were: Edie McCrury Stogner-graduated 1926. Edie was one of the class members who did the history of Bogata School in 1925. Floyd graduated in 1930. He was teaching in Bogata and was a member of the coaching team in 1939. Mr. Fly (who was Superintendent in Bogata in 1918-1921) came to Bogata and got Floyd McCrury and Roy Leftwich to go to Odessa, to teach. Warren graduated in 1933., twins, Clifford and Clifton graduated in 1938 and Juanita in 1938. Mrs. Maudie Lee said the twins and Juanita graduated the same year because Clifton had really bad case of mumps and couldn't go to school enough to finish his grade so his twin sister, Clifford, stayed back with him putting them to graduate with Juanita. Horace Albert graduated in 1940 and Ray Earl graduated in 1944.

All of the children taught school with the exception of Horace Albert and Warren.

Mrs. J.N. (Maudie Lee and I had a nice visit a few days ago. Her mother, Mrs. Edd Buster and Mrs. Tient McCrury were sisters so all these graduates were first cousins to Maudie Lee.

Maudie told me that one day she and her cousin, Warren were playing near the barn. They were about five years old. Mr. McCrury saved corn shucks in a crib for feed. Maudie and Warren found a way to "fall" into the crib. She said they were so afraid. They couldn't get out and thought they would surely starve and die. Of course some little while later parents came hunting and calling. Maudie said, "We started yelling" Her we are in the corn crib". Her mother reached in and pulled them out to safety.

The surviving children of Mr. Tient and Mrs. Maud McCrury are: Clifford who lives in Colorado, Clifton who lives in Lockhart and Horace who lives in Las Vegas.

Letters to the editor

I am writing in response to the letter written by Sybil McClanahan, regarding the condition of the cemetery. I have been very angry about the condition of the cemetery as well. My grandparents, Raymond and Marge Screws, are buried in what appears to be a jungle. I think this is very disrespectful to the memory of my grandparents. I have new flowers that I would like to put on my grandparents graves, but it won't do any good because when they do decide to mow the grass, the weeds are so high that the new flowers will be destroyed by the mowers simply because they can't be seen. Having been the caretaker of a cemetery myself, I also know how easy it is to hit a monument with a lawn mower when the grass gets that tall. Believe me the blades of a mower can chip or break those monuments. I hope the Cemetery Association will take notice of our concerns and try and remedy this problem.

Sincerely,
Darin Screws
