In praise of the Mimosa Tree

The mimosa tree is considered a "trash" tree. And, I'll be the first person to say that they are messy.

But this southern tree, which doesn't like anyplace with a bitter winter, is so glorious in so many ways that it is worth the hassle.

Mimosas grow with these wonderful forks, graceful and just right for children to climb. I spent uncounted hours at my grandparent's home, snuggled down in my favorite tree fork reading.

The mimosa blooms smelled so sweet and their pink and white "powder puff" blossoms made it feel like being in fairy land.

The mimosa tree we have now came up voluntarily next to our deck. As time has proceeded, we have actually expanded the deck to surround the trunk of the tree. It isn't where we would have planted it, but rather where nature put it.

It's messy. Right now the deck has to be swept constantly to keep the blooms from littering it like thousands of dead spiders. Later this year the bean pods will rattle with the coming of autumn, making a lonely, pensive sound. And the deck will have to be swept constantly to keep the beans from littering it.

But right now I can sit down under that tree in a deck chair and look upward. The tree is working alive with butterflies, hummingbirds and chickadees, wrens and cardinals. Golden winged tiger swallow tailed butterflies and blue-black swallow tails flutter over the blooms, competing with jeweled hummingbirds who abandon the feeders for the fragrant blossoms.

The birds love the bees and other insects and spend hours feeding in the tree. The chickadees in particular make a show, hanging upside down and twittering in delighted tones.

The sunlight filters through the fronds in golden streams, and it's always cool under the dense shade.

In addition, the shade helps keep our master bedroom cool, shielding the walls and windows of the house from the blazing summer sun.

So, I feel like I can live with the mess left by this southern delight...the lowly mimosa, which still serves so many purposes, bird and butterfly feeder, shade tree and object of artistic desire!

I personally measure success in terms of the contributions an individual makes to her or his fellow human beings.

An American talks about Independence Day...and corn

By Renate McCoin

This morning as we were sitting on the front porch Johnny Van asked me if I had written up something interesting for the 4th of July Homecoming. My reply was something like all my creative juices had been used up for last week's item and I had mentioned all the things that were planned for the great event.

So he had some ideas about things I could write about. You know how some people are, they just can't help it. They have to help. Some of his headlines were along these lines: Grandson buys flags and balloons to decorate 4-wheeler...Family overeats at BBQ lunch...and...German Immigrant sweeps streets in Detroit in old world style. Since the 4-wheeler has not been decorated and we haven't eaten yet and who cares about sweeping the streets it got me to thinking.

I grew up in a communist country where holidays were very important. Particularly political or patriotic ones. There were parades with kids in matching uniforms and flags and lots of speeches and songs and all kinds of hoopla. And fireworks. Very, very impressive. No one, and I mean no one missed it.

I came to America on April 22, 1960 and I have a stamp in my German Reisepass to prove it. Landed in Fort Dix, New Jersey. We made it to Texas and particularly Detroit as fast as our little Volkswagen with the sunroof could make it. I liked America almost from the first look I had of it. Not Fort Dix, never Fort Dix. But people in Texas were nice, friendly, a little on the nose side. And my new family welcomed me with open arms. I was sooo relieved! So I was looking forward to how this great nation that I was about to become a part of would celebrate "their" Independence Day.

Was I in for a surprise! Daddy (Ebb McCoin) went somewhere and returned with a pick-up load of corn. Still in those long green leaves. And the whole family, including some of the older boys, spent the day shucking corn. I swear, I believe that is what we did all day long. And then mama did some more stuff to that stuff and then scraped it off the cobs and poured it into plastic or paper cup things and put it in the freezer. And you know what? They were going to eat that stuff later. My new family was going to eat chicken scratch and pig food!

Not exactly an auspicious beginning. America was letting me down! And also, do you remember that was in the years before air conditioning? We shucked that stuff outside and not only that there were some really intimidating green worms in some of them ears. And that long hair in there.

Some of the ears could have had haidos made out of that. But no! It had to be picked out and scraped out with old toothbrushes. For all I cared they could have left it in there. I was not going to eat any of it!
Since that first Independence Day I have encountered many more. Much different from that one. With Johnny Van in the army there were parades and music and balloons and food. And people in festive moods and lost kids and sunburns and singing of the National Anthem. And almost always we all stood up, put our hand over our heart and recited the Pledge of Allegiance.
To this day the words of it bring a lump into my throat and tears to my eyes. Does that happen to you, too? If not, please take a moment to reflect on the words you repeat: I, (myself, of my own free will), pledge, (give freely, promise), allegiance, (my loyalty, devotion, and fidelity), to the flag, (the outward symbol), of the United, (made one), States of America. And to the republic, (a government in which supreme power resides in the people who vote), for which it stands. One, (united, welded together), nation, (a community of people from many places), under God, (the only being perfect in power, wisdom and goodness whom we worship as our creator and ruler of the universe), indivisible, (not able to be divided), with liberty, (the power of choice), and justice, (the entitlement to fairness, equality and equity), for all, (every one).

Contrary to most of you I was not born here. I became an American on 1 September 1964 in Tyler, Texas. I chose to become an American. I swore my Oath of Allegiance and I meant it. I promised to forsake all old and former allegiances and to defend my chosen country against all enemies, foreign and domestic. Then and now. Each day. I am an American. Not a German. Not a former German. Not a German-American. Just an American.

So, this Independence Day let us all repeat the Pledge of Allegiance with full knowledge of what the words mean. Let us renew our pledge to this great country, again. No, it is not perfect. Yes, we have problems. But in spite of all that let us love it, protect it and cherish it.

P.S. I still don't like creamed corn. But I will eat it on the cob.

Walking for improved health

LaTonya Bell has recently formed a group of people who need to walk for health reasons such as heart, weight and more. The various people, men and women, young and old meet at the Rivercrest track every day at 8:00 p.m. to get in their milage, 1, 2, 3 4 and more miles. The group has turned into a fun time and the walking, which is so boring by yourself, is finished before you know it. Parents who need to walk are bringing their babies in strollers, older children who can take the walk or play with other children while mom and dad walk and making each evening a family fun time.

LaTonya and the group or (the herd) as Rick Holeman calls them invite everyone from Talco, Bogata and surrounding area to come take a walk and enjoy conversation in the process. You will improve your health both physically and mentally.

Cornerstone setting delayed

The Rosalie Masonic Lodge had planned to set the cornerstone at Rivercrest High School on July 3, 2002 with the Grand Master of Texas present for the event. However, due to a death in the family the Grand Master could not attend on July 3.

The new date for the setting of the cornerstone is July 10, 2002 at 1:00 p.m. The Grand Master plans to be on hand and all the public is invited to the ceremony.

Country Cooking
By Liz Irwin

Our cook this week is from Deport and is Gilbert Arriaga. Gilbert decided to throw his hat in the political ring this year and run for mayor of Deport. I had been after him to be a guest in the column for several years and finally told him if he was elected that it would be his civic duty! So let me introduce to you, Mayor Gilbert Arriaga, of the City of Deport. Gilbert is noted to be a great cook and I am sure that is true from these great sounding recipes. He is employed at Kimberly Clark and is married to Melissa. Thank you Gilbert for your recipes and we will see you in the kitchen! Happy Fourth of July! TUNA CASSEROLE-this can be used with turkey for chicken. COWBOY STEW-always a favorite with loads of veggies and spices! GRILLED LAMB CHOPS-lamb is fast becoming one of the favorite meats in this area! CHERRY CHOCOLATE CAKE-begin with a chocolate cake mix, add some cherry pie filling and top with luscious chocolate icing! EGGPLANT CASSEROLE-if you have a garden this year, chances are you have eggplant...great recipe!

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,
Once again the rodeo has come and gone. The Lions Club being few in number is so appreciative of the many that helped in the concession at the rodeo. I know of a few that admit to fearing the dreaded call from me each year asking for their help. Everyone's time is valuable to them and giving some of that time back to others needs a sincere thank you. The Lions Club Association with the Bogata Rodeo Association is strong and we appreciate all they do for us with their facilities and friendship.

Gary Huddleston is also instrumental in helping wa with ordering concession supplies, thanks, Gary. To the Bogata City employees, many thanks for all your work at the park and around town to be sure our visitors see our best. The Bogata Police Department was very visible at the rodeo making everyone feel more secure with ticket sales and concession monies. Thank you Bogata Police and Red River County Sheriff's Department.

Health

(NU) - Losing weight and looking good are goals many people set for themselves. To speed up their results, studies indicate that a large number of people may be turning to sports supplements and performance-enhancing drugs. Based on projections from a Blue Cross and Blue Shield Association survey, nearly 17 million adults and about 1 million young people between the ages of 12 and 17 are using them. For information about the potential dangers of sports supplements and performance-enhancing drugs, visit www.healthycompetition.org.
