By NANALEE NICHOLS

The summer rains came...nobody was sorry to see them.

Few things in this world can compare with the pleasure of watching a thundercloud build, rumble and approach in it's slow and awesome manner.

The first fat, plunky drops splattering down create a tiny tension...will it just splatter droplet holes in the dust, or will the sun-parched earth receive the moisture it needs?

As the lightning pops and lights up the sky, and the thunder and winds rise higher, the rain falls harder and harder, until it seems that nothing else exists.

Those who are caught in a tin roofed barn or shelter are surrounded by a drumming that fills the ears most pleasantly. As the rain streams off eaves and roof it is impossible to restrain a grin of sheer pleasure.

The earth drinks down the moisture greedily, the leaves drip their welcome burden down to dry roots, flowers spread their petals and birds huddle cheerfully in the trees.

At night a storm is even more spectacular, and waking up to the first sounds of summer rain has to be one of the most pleasant sounds there are. ****

For those who are frightened of storms I'm sure all these things aren't true, those who flinch at lightning probably can't wait for a storm to be over with.

But to me, at least, it is one of the most special things about summer. Summer rain is a fine thing...renewing hope for the crop year, cleaning the air of dust, and providing a combination of much needed moisture with one of nature's very best displays of pwoer!

New students attending Prairiland High School, Blossom or Deport schools should go to the campus principal's office sometime between 9 and 3 Monday thru Thursday, Aug. 16-19 for registration.

Tips For Band

Some 92 Hopefuls To Report Today....

Ed. Note: The Prairiland School District is inaugurating a band program with the coming school year. To assist the student and parent in deciding which instrument may be best suited for the student. Band Director Dave Clark has written a series of articles for The Times to describe some of the instruments and desirable physical features of the student needed to play those instruments.

By DAVE CLARK The popular trend today in percussion is to learn all the percussion instruments as you progress, especially the snare drum and the

for completion by the fall school term,

By NANALEE NICHOLS The O-R-T railroad, whose tor-

Hall and two class rooms is proceeding, but is behind schedule due to bad weather in the spring. The turous path we have been following over the past few weeks, was apparently a fearsome sight.

P.B. Bailey, whose information was used for these articles, stated that "While standing near this railroad between Hoovertown and the Garner home place one dark night with only the stars to light the way, and holding my horse to keep him from being scared and leaving me, I had the opportunity of seeing the reeling, rocking, smoking locomotive pass by." Fire and smoke puffed from the stack, and Bailey was reminded of the tale of two Irishmen who had landed and were spending their first night in New York. They were in a hotel room when awakened by the fire siren. Pat ran to the window in time to see two horse-drawn fire engines go rushing by with gongs clanging, smoke and fire belching from their stacks. Pat ran back to the bed, shook his partner and cried "Mike, wake up, they're moving hell and two big loads just went by and more are coming!"

Apparently the wheezing, coughing fire-flinging O-R-T locomotive would have frightened old satan himself.

The fireman on this train seldom had to ring the bell, as the swaying and delapidated engine rocked and lurched so badly that the bell dingdonged incessantly as the old engine waddled across Blossom Prairie.

The locomotive incurred much wrath from farmers, whose teams had never been confronted by such a contraption, and were prone to bolt at the sight of it.

The old engine had some annoying drawbacks, particularly to the train crew. One such was caused by some of the cars leaving the track, causing considerable delays in the schedule.

Curtis Glover of Deport recalls as a child going over to the tracks, which ran not far from his home north of town, to watch them trying to lever the cars back onto the tracks.

Glover recalls that in the summer the ground would crack so that the tracks would often hang over a dip in the ground, not touching by several inches. In winter he recalls that the rails often sank down so deep in the mud that they had to be cleared or the train could not proceed. Another problem was the sparks from the old wood-burner, which settled in a farmer's meadows or pastures and obliging train crews would have to stop and put out the grassfires before they spread.

The clothes-burning, britchestearing old train is gone forever.

It is a faded dream now, with no signs left of the old roadway. Older folks remember that it passed near Hoovertown, in front of the old Hignight place, but the proof is gone.

Raymond Hignight remembers sitting on his front porch and watching the old train storming by, and he and his mother and family used to catch the train to go shopping in Blossom. Russell Grant remembers a trip at age 3, sitting on his father, Dr. Stephen Grant's lap, or on his mother's lap on the way home from Blossom.

He recalls watching the lanterns swinging back and forth on the ceiling as the train lumbered along.

Both Hignight and Grant remember that the passenger car was an old box car with benchs nailed along the walls. One couldn't see out unless the door was open, which it was in the spirng and summer, but in the winter time the door remained closed.

The train came into Deport about where the Deport Housing Authority is now, than ran across to the old Paris and Mt. Pleasant track, whose path is now slowly fading too.

Mrs. John Sasser of Blossom wants me to talk to her, as her father was the only man ever killed on the O-R-Trailroad. Next week we should have something on that story.

Write Travanti in care of his series at MTM Productions, 4024 Radford Ave., Studio City, Calif. 91604. And Katt at Paramount Studios, 5451 Marathon St., Hollywood, Calif. 90028. Do you know that Connie Sellecca, who plays the female lead in "The Greatest American Hero" opposite Katt, is Gil Gerard's wife? They are parents of a baby boy, who is named, incidentally, Gibb.

Cheryl Tiegs

TIEGS REQUEST - I would love an address for Cheryl Tiegs. I have a daughter who is almost 16, 5 feet 9 inches tall and looks very much like Cheryl. We are from a small town and she has had a small portfolio done, but there are few opportunities here. She is going to college to study to be a physical therapist, but some modeling assignments would be very helpful financially. James Taylor, Dunkirk, N.Y.

Under the new UIL playoff system in effect this year, the 1-2 teams in each district will go into the playoffs. ### A Catfish Catch

This 61/2-pound catfish was caught by Chloe Byrd during a recent fishing try at a private pool near Deport. Chloe and her son, Michael, display the big fish, which she caught on an ordinary rod and reel with a minnow for bait. A number of large catfish are being reported this year.
