"The Attack Of The Killer Horseflies". Screams, blood, torture, more excitement than you can stand!

It would make as good a movie as some, wouldn't it?

At our place the horseflies are in control. The geese eat them. The dogs snap at them, the cats hide from them.

The other afternoon I attempted to drag around the water hose and water the flower beds, pots and borders.

Immediately the horseflies used their radios, telepathy or whatever it is they use to signal one another. Soon, at least fifteen of the buzzing little monsters were whirling around me, looking for the chance to light.

Horseflies are disgusting. They come armed with that funny little blade on their mouth to cut through tough skin and get to blood. Every time one bites, I'm always sure that it just came away from a dead cow or something equally nasty.

The bad part about this is that I'm allergic to them. Immediately after being bitten a huge, hand-sized welt pops up, gets sore and stays that way.

Of course they know just how to sneak in under my defenses and bite on the back of the legs or my back!

Soon after starting to water I was twisting this way and that in frustration, swatting, waving and trying to crush them.

After about fifteen minutes of this I stormed into the house and came back with a can of spray.

Ten of the nasty little insects were dead, but that just seemed to challenge them more, as they flew away, only to return with reinforcements.

In total despair, I just sat down and served as bait, killing them when they attempted to bite.

But their forces were endless and my patience wore thin.

Finally, in ignominious retreat, I returned to the house.

But, I don't take defeat easily. After a little bit of cold water and time to think about things, I got a towel, soaked it in fly spray, draped it over my shoulders and returned to the yard. Sure enough, although the horse flies came close, they wouldn't land.

Later that day I headed down the dusty dirt road to the hay meadow to take a cold drink to my husband.

With creeping horror I looked up into the rear view mirror to see what looked like hundreds of horseflies swarming in the dust trail, flying behind me!

Sure enough, when I got out and handed him a cold drink, the horse flies attacked me. Of course, they left HIM alone!

I don't know if they have a personal vendetta on me and are following me, or if the entire world is filled with them right now. I don't care, I just want them dead.

And, in spite of my constant war upon them, with spray, swatter and bare hands, they seem to be winning.

Horse Flies Creating Serious Fly Fever Outbreak In Cattle

Paul D. Payne

Over the last ten days numerous cases of Anaplasmosis (Fly Fever) have been reported. Although the severity of the disease is somewhat earlier in the season than normal, it is not unexpected since the Horse Fly population has been increasing steadily in recent days. The two go hand in hand.

Even though we have had the disease in our cattle herds for twentyfive or so years, a review of the symptoms and treatment would be in order as we have new producers move to our area who are not familiar with the disease. Perhaps, there is a point or two about the disease that you are not clear on.

The common name for the disease is Fly Fever which we will use in this discussion. It is a blood disease. An animal acquires the disease from an animal who is a carrier of the disease. Since we have had Fly Fever for all these years, most herds have animals or an animal is a carrier. We can test our animals to identify these carriers and eliminate them. However, this is not a suggested management practice since your neighbor probably has carrier animals in his herd. Animals that have recovered from Fly Fever, though fully recovered, are carriers of the disease.

It is also possible that one will have animals that have had cases of the disease in previous years (did not really get sick and required no treatment) and they could be carriers.

Just because one has carrier animals does not necessarily mean that other animals in your herd will come down with the disease. There must be mixing of blood of an infected animal to another animal. The most common way that this can take place is by the Horse Fly. The Horse Fly draws blood from the carrier animal and then flies to another animal and inserts his mouth part and the disease-causing agent is deposited in the disease free animal. It is also thought that the mosquito is capable of spreading the disease. This process of transmitting blood from one animal to another must take place in a very short time (perhaps less than a minute). If your cattle are completely isolated from other cattle, the likelihood of them getting the disease from other cattle are pretty low. However, if your cattle shares a shaded fence row with your neighbor's cattle (and he has a carrier) then your chances increase dramatically.

Humans spread the disease. This can be done while doing routine veterinary work on your cattle: de-horning and vaccination. You will want to use a new needle or a sterilized needle when vaccinating a group of animals.

Since this disease affects the red blood cells, sick animals will appear anemic. So look for yellowish appearing muzzle, teats, udder and vulva. Quite often affected animals will move at a slower pace than the rest of the herd. Milk production will drop to zero. Abortion normally occurs. They will go off feed. Affected animals are easily excited and can become violent. Of course, death can occur.

It is much cheaper to prevent the disease than treat it once the disease breaks out in your herd. Most beef producers have elected to keep aureomycin out for the herd, so that they maintain sufficient levels of the antibiotic in their system to fight the blood organism. This works fine so long as each animal is consuming adequate levels of the material daily. If you elect to go this route, make sure that you keep out the supplement at all times. Place the supplement where the animals will find it convenient to eat. You may want to add another trough so that all animals will have a chance to eat. The point to remember is that each animal must receive the proper level daily, so you may want to do a little observing of your herd.

Vaccination is now a viable management option. Information on the new vaccine from Schering-Plough Animal Health called AM-VAX was presented at an animal health program given in the county during the winter. We are getting late in the season to vaccinate, but it may be a viable option for you. It takes two shots given 21 days apart to receive immunity. If one elects to go the vaccination route at this time, it would probably be wise to give each animal an injection of tetracycline at the time of the first shot. This will give them a thirty day immunity. The tetracycline shot will cost about $1 a head.

Over the next few weeks check animals each day. Look for stragglers. Handle suspect animals gently. Try not to excite them. Keep sick animals away from ponds. Remember they may become violent. Stay on top of the situation and work closely with your veterinarian.

Backward Glances From 1919

I was looking through the June 20, 1919 paper and saw a few things that I thought might interest you.

This week in 1919 all the children of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Pearson and their families gathered at their parents house for a family reunion. There was 45 present at the reunion which consisted of a feast of turkey and all the fixings.

I found an ad for Dr. Thachers Liver and Blood Syrup. It was used for bags under the eyes, palpitation of the heart and other symptoms of kidney trouble. In 1919 the syrup was 67 years old.

J.R. Westbrook & Sons was having a Summer Wear Sale on Ladie's Hats, Middle Blouses, and Wash Skirts. The hats were placed on three tables and the tables were numbered from one to three. Table number 1 was going for $2.00, table 2 was on sale for $3.00, and table 3 was on sale for $5.00. The Middle Blouses were on sale for $1.50, and the wash skirts were on sale from $1.25 to $7.50.

Here is an article which I found in the paper: All discharged enlisted soldiers will be allowed 5 cents per mile to their homes from places of discharge. They were allowed 3 1/2 cents at the time of discharge, and now this difference of 1 1/2 cents will be paid in the same manner as was the $60 bonus.

For sale in the paper was a practically new Ford car in good condition, good casings, $425. Also a brand new Ford, and a 1917 model Chevrolet.

Also in 1919 you could buy a years subscription to the Deport paper for one dollar.

Maybe we should talk to our store owners about these prices. People from 1919 would pass out if they had to buy a car for $20,000 and buy a canned coke for $.65.

Country Cooking

By Gerrie Bankhead

SERVING LUNCH to Chanc Bankhead and Lori Malone is Rita Malone, who is sharing

Country Cooking is coming this week from behind the counter of Rita Malone's new cafe in Taylortown.

Rita has been married to Lawrence Malone for 22 years and they have two daughters, Misty, age 19, and Lori, age 17. They have lived in Taylortown for 21 of these 22 years. The family attends Highway Full Gospel Church in Paris.

Rita has a wide variety of hobbies; she enjoys cooking, sewing crafts, crocheting, ceramics, gardening, canning, plants, mowing the yard, T-shirt painting, piecing quilts, collecting sat and pepper shakers and playing the piano.

Rita sews for herself and her girls. She also makes curtains and sews for the public occasionally. She has made many afghans, dolls, pot holders, pillows and purses.

Rita says that just about anything one has in a garden they freeze and can. The months of June, July and August are busy months for preparing foods.

Rita enjoys cooking casseroles and finding new recipes for desserts. She has chosen several dessert recipes to share with you this week.

Playing the piano has been and is one of her favorite things. She has been the pianist at her church for 12 years and she also sings solos, sings in a trio and plays for funerals and weddings.

Up until now, Rita has worked at part time jobs but about 7 weeks ago she and Lawrence purchased a store/cafe and moved it beside her house. She now has a full time job cooking for the public. Rita said her grandparents owned and operated a store and she wanted to carry on the tradition. Since opening the store she has been very busy learning to stock, keep records, etc., but as each day goes by, things become a little easier.

Rita chose this business because she wanted to work at something close to home and be able to continue with all the hobbies and things she enjoys doing. Both the girls help in the cafe, but Lawrence hasn't picked up the cooking traits, so he's learning to shop and be the delivery boy.

The Coconut and Chess and Chocolate pies are served in her cafe. All three recipes are from her late grandmother, Lillie Mauldin of Cuthand. She figured they were even from her mother and handed down from generation to generation.

The Breakfast Taquita is sort of her original recipe. She ate a similar one at a restaurant once and changed it to suit her taste. This is a good recipe for a breakfast menu.

If you've enjoyed the article, request a recipe or have a recipe to share or suggest a feature, please call 652-6032 or write Rt. 1, Box 67A, Deport, TX 75435.
