I've never had such a response to a column in my life as I have to the one about insurance last week. By next week we will be able to furnish the names and addresses of people and commissions to write to about this situation.

Please don't wait to write thinking you don't know exactly what to say. Don't delay because to think someone else will do the writing...no, take pen and hand and let's start an insurance revolution!

Now to a new topic! Someone explain to me the logic (if, indeed there is some logic) to the road work that we see around here.

Example: up in Paris a few weeks ago, while we were having the papers printed, we noticed five men out putting reflectors at an intersection.

They were happily going about their business. One measured and marked the spot, one put down some tar, another hammered the reflector in, yet another seemed to make sure it was seated correctly. What the fifth one was doing I haven't a clue.

One is forced to wonder if it really required the services of five men, all making who-knows-what and hour, to set reflectors into the pavement.

But, that isn't the last of the matter.

Exactly two weeks later we were in Paris once more to print the papers.

And, at that same location, there were three men.

One had a sledgehammer, one had a bucket of tar and the other had a sack.

They were carefully taking the hammer and breaking up the reflectors that had only been put down two weeks before!

A few days later it became obvious why...they had removed a large portion of the reflectors and put them back down in a similar pattern not a foot away from where they were originally!

It didn't make sense to me, and I still don't know why it took so many people to do.

All of us, as we watch road work, may have stories like this to relate. It seems that our governments just don't have to manage their time, employees, or funds the way ordinary citizens have to.

I'm sorry, folks, but it doesn't make much sense to me. And I sadly fear that we see this type of waste reflected (pardon the pun) in our tax bill!

LINDA WOODS serves Country Cooking column writer, Judy Screws, some of her Banana Pudding. Linda will be sharing this recipe and others in this week's column. (Staff Photo by Judy Screws)

Country Cooking

By Judy Screws

We left Talco and went a few miles into the country to visit the home of Linda and Wayne Woods. On our way we passed a place where they raise ostriches. Those poor birds aren't very beautiful, but their eggs are supposed to be valuable. I don't guess you'd want to cook with them.

When we got out of the car at the Woods' home, we were greeted by a poodle named Rocky and an assortment of chickens, ducks and guineas. Linda said the guineas keep snakes, wolves and chicken hawks away from their yard. She has to keep adding hummingbird feeders to the ones on the porch outside her kitchen window because there are so many birds and she doesn't want to miss any.

Linda is employed as a teacher's aide at Talco Elementary Schoole and Wayne drives a truck for Hinton Drilling. They have three sons, Michael, the oldest, who works for TU Electric and is moving into his new home; Bradley who attends the University of Arkansas, majoring in Electrical Engineering; and Jessie, who is studying at ETSU to become a Physical Therapist.

It would take me a week to follow Linda around for a day. She is a busy lady. Besides working at school, maintaining a home, and attending school and church activities, she attends ETSU at night and summers. She should have a degree in Elementary Education in 1994.

All this activity is nothing new for Linda. She was on the school basketball and cheerleading teams from the time she was old enough until she graduated in 1966. Some of those basketball teams were state play-off teams. At that time, girls still played half-court, but even on half a court, she managed to keep her knees torn up most of the time. Her class was the first class to graduate from the newly consolidated Talco-Bogata School District. Before the merger, she was a Bogata girl.

We ate some wonderful banana pudding at the kitchen table and admired Linda's collection of butterflies and wind chimes.

When I asked what she preferred to cook, she said she always liked new dessert recipes, and that with four men to feed, she had to fix more casseroles than anything.

The No Bake Banana Pudding recipe cam from the Assembly of God cookbook. The recipe was printed in memory of Alice Tidwell. The Chocolate Chip Pie was given to her by Wyndel Dixon and the Cherry Dessert was out of Mailbox Magazine at school. It is for busy people.

Thanks so much for your kind comments that I have received about the column. I'm really having a good time. Please continue to call and send suggestions and recipes to Box 293, Bogata or call 632-4543.

Ranch Burglary Is Crime Of The Week

Crime Stoppers is seeking your help and will pay a cash reward of up to $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the persons responsible for committing the Paris ranch burglary on July 8 or 9. Taken in the burglary were several pieces of lawn care equipment including a lawnmower as well as six saddles. As a result of this crime, over $3,000 in property was stolen. If Crime Stoppers receives the information before August 3, and an arrest and indictment is made of those persons responsible, Crime Stoppers will pay a cash reward of up to $1,000. All calls remain anonymous and you will not have to testify in court. Call Crime Stoppers today at 785-TIPS!

Social Security For Self-Employed

Social Security reminders for the Self-Employed...I know there are many men and women in our area who would like to join the ranks of the more than 10 million self-employed Americans.

If you are wondering whether now is the right time to become an entrepreneur, I can only cite Calvin Coolidge's observation that "business will be better or worse".

If you think business will be better and take the plunge, you need to be aware that self-employed individuals have special responsibilities with regard to their Social Security coverage. For example, the self-employed pay a Social Security tax equal to the combined rate paid by employees and employers.

This year the Social Security tax rate for the self-employed is 15.3 percent on earnings up to $55,500. Another 2.9 percent on earning up to $130,200 pays for Medicare coverage.

If you start a business and have net earnings of more than $400 in self-employment, you must file a federal income tax return and pay any federal taxes due--and the Social Security tax. The tax is reported on Schedule C (Profit and Loss From Business or Profession) or, where appropriate, Schedule F (Farm Income and Expenses) and Schedule SE (Computation of Social Security Self-Employment Tax).

If you have both wages and self-employment income, you should first figure the amount of wages on which you have paid Social Security taxes and then add your self-employment earnings up to the limits I mentioned earlier. If your wages alone exceed these limits, you do not pay Social Security taxes on the additional income earned in self-employment.

Anyone who wants more information about Social Security and self-employment can call their local Social Security office. A representative will be happy to answer your questions.

HELPFUL IDEAS FOR SUCCESSFUL RETIREMENT

Made In The Shade

Another summer is just about upon us, and many retirees attack the out of doors with a vengeance. After all, that's the real reason they retired, isn't it? But with all these outdoor activities come repeated exposure to the sun and it's potentially deadly ultraviolet rays. And, with the popularity of tanning beds, if you aren't in the sun all the time you look like you're wearing a bedsheet compared to everyone else.

It isn't worth it. What everyone calls "premature aging" of the skin is actually produced by years and years of exposure to the sun. The sun eventually damages the deeper layers of your skin, resulting in a loss of elasticity and the sudden appearance of heavy lines and wrinkles. Believe it or not, the sun even causes a person to be more susceptible to bruising. The sun damages the tiny blood vessels in the skin, which leads to the dilation of facial veins.

Years (sometimes many years) later the true effect of sun-damage skin shows itself. The skin becomes hard and dry to the touch. Thick and red scaly patches (actinic keratoses) begin to appear. Most important, though, is the fact that sun-damaged skin is the most common site of both benign and cancerous tumors. Certain drugs, such as tetracycline, thiazide diuretics, and some tranquilizers can sensitize your skin to the sun's rays and make bad problems even worse.

Ninety percent of skin cancers are directly attributed to earlier sun damage. Don't become a statistic. Enjoy your retirement in the shade under your old oak tree. Just lay back, relax, and think about what you'll do with all the money you'll save by not trying to find some "miracle" cream or lotion to make your skin look better.

Social Security Notes

By Ray Hudson, District Manger

People who are thinking about applying for Social Security or SSI disability benefits often ask if there is anything that they can do to speed up the processing of their application. The answer is yes, they can help move the process along more quickly. Sometimes, a substantial amount of information and medical evidence is needed to decide if a person is disabled under the Social Security law. Gathering the necessary evidence means that disability claims usually take longer to process than other Social Security claims.

That's why we urge applicants to bring any medical reports they may already have at home and related information with them when they apply for benefits. It can make a difference in how soon a decision can be made.....and in how quickly their Social Security benefits will start if their claims are approved.

What kind of information are we looking for?

If you are applying for Social Security or SSI disability benefits you must have medical proof that your impairment(s) meet our definition of disability, basically, that it is severe enough to prevent you from working for at least a year, or that it is likely to result in death.

Be prepared to discuss the nature of your impairment(s), when it started, how it keeps you from working and how it affects your daily activities.

We will also ask you to provide us with specific treatment information, the names, addresses and phone numbers of all doctors, hospitals and other medical facilities where you have been treated, examined or tested; dates of medical visits; hospital or clinic account numbers, Department of Veterans Affairs claims numbers, Medicaid number and claim numbers for any other disability benefits you receive have applied for.

Also, bring any medical reports you already have at home and tell us about restrictions a physician has placed on your activities.

This last item has special significance because medical reports from treating physicians or psychologists, hospitals, clinics, the Department of Veterans Affairs and similar sources of medical treatment are generally sufficient for a disability decision to be made. Such evidence provided by the "treating source" generally traces the beginning and course of the impairment(s). And, currently, more than half of all disability claims are decided solely on the basis of such "medical evidence of record".
