

Winter Wonderland It doesn't come along too often, but when this snow storm swept in it did the job right.

With a six inch or more snowfall the world has been beautiful, without a doubt.

It has also been difficult to maneuver in . Not being prepared, not having snow tires, snow plows and sanding equipment, the task of managing to get from point a to point b has frequently resulted in people winding up at point g some distance (usually in the ditch) from their intended location.

During this I have discovered two kinds of people. Those of us who within 24 hours get "cabin fever" and must get out, and those who happily cocoon in their houses and look out the window at the snow, content that they are warm, dry and inside.

I couldn't stand it for long, I had to bundle up, get on my four wheeler and go play in the snow. Thomas, of course, had to feed the cattle, so he was already bundled up and on the tractor.

On the other side of this coin are those friends who refuse to feed the birds because they would have to step outside . I have one friend who has not been outside, literally, since last Wednesday!

But hasn't it been a joy to watch the kids playing in this?

Building snowpeople, hav-ing snowball fights, sliding and slipping, falling and laughing, the youngsters have loved their mini-vacation from school and the white stuff that has brought it about.

I have watched our dogs use their noses as snowplows, racing and running and snuffling in delight. Of course, they want to come in and curl by the heater

Wintry snow causes havoc but also postcard perfect beauty

After months of complaining that there had been "no winter" to speak of, area residents were treated to the real thing. Mixed snow and sleet began to fall last Wednesday, January 26. This swiftly turned to sow. Some areas had freezing rain Thursday morning, while others simply continued with snow. It was all topped off by what? More snow.

An accumulation of six inches or more turned the world into winter white, and caused problems.

The Armadillo Kwik Korner in Bogata suffered damage from a collapsed roofed area over the gas pumps, as did Ken's Conoco in Deport. Numerous awnings, barns and shed roofs collapsed from the extreme weight of the snow. A number of businesses in the area were seriously damaged.

Snow sliding off of roofs also caused a large amount of damage as it shattered car windshields and dented vehicles.

Of course, the worst damages probably came from road accidents. Ice and snow made many roads virtually impassable. Semi tractor trailer rigs jackknifed, frequently sliding into other vehicles. Ambulances and emergency vehicles had a hard time getting around on the icy roads, and hundreds of vehicles wound up in the ditch instead of on the road. Fortunately, injuries were not as serious as they could have been, since most motorists kept the speed to a reasonable limit.

Thawing conditions Saturday and Sunday helped, and Monday temperatures, although cold, saw sunny skies that began to take some of the white stuff down.

Area schools and many businesses were closed.

Power outages caused by limbs falling on electric lines or downed power poles hit by motorists lasted from a few minutes to half a day, while crews worked constantly to fix problems.

As of Tuesday, a lot of snow still remained throughout the area.

It was a real reminder that winter can, and does, come to this part of the world!

SNOWBALL FIGHT! these youngsters were delighted with the six inch snow that blanketed the area this last wek. They lost no time in engaging in a snowball fight on Deport's Main Street. (Staff Photo by Mike Francies)

Of course, the snow from our metal roof has destroyed my glass topped patio table and chairs. It has done serious damage to buildings, cars and barns all over the area, again because we just don't have the capacity for dealing with this much snow weight.

Still, it has been absolutely gorgeous, and since there is nothing we can do about it, we might as well enjoy that which we can. Especially since there is actually a possibility of more of

I'll bet as you were watching the snow fall last week, you sure weren't thinking ... "why, hey, let's go fire up the old grill!" Well, don't let a little snow stop you! As the temperature drops, don't be afraid of your grill....become grill friendly! That is, use grilling as a means of chasing away those winter blues. Most people crave the great taste of the grill during the winter months. Although most of the grills in this area stay covered during the winter months, did you know that according to the Grill Watch Survey (and there really is such a thing), not only do people grill in the cold, they also grill during inclement weather. Thirty percent of Americans grilled during a snowstorm last year and an amazing twenty percent put on a grilling mitt to brave sleet and People's taste changes when the weather gets cold,. The winter calls for heartier fare and richer flavors. According to Sarah Chase of the Weber-Stephen Products Co., makers of a large variety of grills and other products, everyone wants to serve their family or guests hearty, stick-to-your-ribs food that will help take the edge off of winter.

According to them, the secret to successful winter grilling is the mastery of the Indirect cooking Method. Used to cook larger cuts of meat, fish and poultry and slow-cooking vegetables like potatoes and winter squash., Indirect cooking is the perfect solution to winter's grilling requirements. It takes less time by not having to flip the food or watch the fire too closely. Indirect cooking also allows the cook to stay inside where it is nice and warm, plus it frees the oven for those favorite batches of cookies!

The key is placing the food away from direct heat so that the food is slow-roasted rather than seared. Indirect cooking can be done on a charcoal type or gas grill, just as long as it has a cover.

For gas grills, preheat to 550 degrees and then turn off any burners that are directly below the food. The burners on both sides of the food should be adjusted to equal amounts of heat as indicated by the recipe. Heat circulates and so turning the food is unnecessary

For charcoal grills, when coals are covered with light gray ash, use long handled tongs to carefully pile the burning charcoal into two equal piles on ether side of the grill and place a foil drip pan in the center. Charcoal should be added to the fire every hour to maintain even cook-historic Red River County courthouse, one of the 10 oldest in the state, county officials find themselves between the proverbial rock and a hard place.

Renovations to the 116 year-old limestone structure are a must if it is to be preserved. But even with a grant of possibly $4 million from the state, matching funds of 15 percent or $600,000 must come from local government, an amount which will be difficult for the county to provide, County Judge L. D. Williamson reported

A special open meeting of the Red River County commissioners was called last Thursday afternoon at the courthouse annex. They met with architects Larry Irsik and Jay Firching from ArchiTexas, a historical preservation firm, to discuss a master plan and goals for the courthouse restorations. The master plan is required by Texas Historical Commission before they will administer grants

Master plans are due by February 11 while grant application deadline is March 7

Friday afternoon the commissioners held a public hearing in hopes of receiving suggestions from local citizens on ways to raise funds for the restoration work on the courthouse. Red River County is in the best position of any county to receive state funds, Firching said, "because of the uniqueness of the courthouse and its location.

You still have over 160 years worth of county records stored away in the courthouse."

If approved for $4 million, Red River County's $600,000 portion already includes a grant of about $225,000 from Texas Department of Transportation which has not yet been used.

The county can also rely on labor, repairs, and volunteer work and equipment done at the courthouse over the last three years to count as a part of the in-kind match. "So you already have a large chunk of your matching funds," Architect Irsik told the commissioners.

"But we are going to have to have large cash flow on hand," Williamson said. "Possibly as much as the total of our share to cover expenses--because they will only let us draw four times on the grant throughout the project. Nobody will want to wait for their money when

When it comes to renovation of the they complete their part of the renovation project."

At Friday's public hearing, a citizen's committee was created to work with the Commissioners Court and ArchiTexas architects, and to find a means to come up with at least $500,000 in funding for the benefit of the county, and to work at relocating offices -- presently located in the courthouse--for the duration of the restoration project. Those offices include Sixth and 102nd district courts, district clerk's office, adult probation office, county attorney's office, Department of Public Safety and County Extension offices.

District Judge Jim D. Lovett was selected to be chairperson of the committee.

Sub-committees were also created for promotional and technical support purposes.

Lovett spoke of the heritage represented by the courthouse and its importance to Red River County and the state of Texas. "It is of vital importance that we undertake the restoration of our courthouse," he said. 'We will never find a better deal than the 85/15 matching grant from the Texas Historical Commission. Now it is up to us to raise $500,000 in support of the project. County residents Joanne Vaughan, Jim Cheyne, Shirley Anderson, Cheryl O'Brian, Paula Askew and Anne Evetts volunteered to serve as Promotion Committee members. They will coordinate efforts to educate and promote public support for the restoration project. They will also contact former residents of the county for support and donations.

The committee will also lay the foundation for future tourism with the courthouse as a focal point.

Mary Hausler will head up the Technical Support Committee. She will see to the safekeeping of historical documents, furniture and fixtures that will be removed from the courthouse while it is being renovated. Jim Power will help with relocation of courthouse offices. Since this cost cannot be counted as matching funds, Powers' expertise will be well-suited to seeing that the relocation is done as inexpensively as possible. Dianne Phelps will also help with relocation of office and courtroom space.

We are going to have to work to raise funds within our county," Lovett said. "But we are also going to have to go beyond Red River County to get help-foundations, former residents. Especially those with connections to monied organizations and wealthy people.

A FEW FACTS ABOUT FEET The foot is a 26-bone structure. Its 33 joints, 107 ligaments, 19 muscles and tendons hold it together and allow for a variety of movements. Each foot contains 125,000 sweat glands, which excrete nearly two pints of moisture weekly. About 75% of Americans suffer foot problems at some point in their lives. Women have four times as many problems as men, mainly due to the prolonged use of high-heeled shoes. The feet bear pressure that exceeds body weight during periods of walking-this pressure grows to three to four times body weight when a person runs. The feet are a mirror of an individual's general health. Arthritis, diabetes, and never and circulatory disorders often show initial symptoms in the feet.

The feet are the foundation of the body, and keeping them strong and healthy is fundamental to your entire body's well being. When foot problems occur, correcting them early on often leads to the correction of aches, pains and problems in other parts of the body. If foot problems point to trouble elsewhere in the body, or result from other conditions, we will work with the members of your health care team to ensure your good health. Keep your body's foundation in the best of health, call us at DOCTOR'S FOOT CLINIC, 784-5585.
