Austin. - A fight is brewing over the proposed constitutional amendment to set the maximum limits on tax assessments of farm, ranch and timber land.

An amendment (No. 3) on the November 3 ballot would authorize the Legislature to provide a uniform method of assessment for lands, based on their capability to support livestock raising or farm and forest crop produc-

A 15-member special commit-tee headed by State Sen. Wayne Connally of Floresville has completed the last of 11 hearings over the state on this measure. Its tentative report summarizing testimony favoring the amendment will be presented before November 3. Committee's recommendations to the Legislature will be delayed until next

"Agriculturists are saying they car no longer operate if taxes continue to increase as they have in recent years," Connally told newsmen. "When land on one side of a barbed wire fence is assessed at $1,000 an acre, and the same land on the other side of the fence at $150 an acre. somebody is going to cry."

An earlier amendment (1966) which had the same general pur-pose is "unworkable," say proponents of Amendment No. 3. Present provisions apply only to individual land owners, exclude timberlands and owners who earn less than half their income from their farm property.

Texas State Teachers Association is opposing the new amendment on grounds that it "could virtually destroy the tax base of many school districts" and open the door to favors for other

Connally maintains the proposal would not result in major revenue loss statewide and that the Legislature would have to appropriate supplemental funds to districts suffering income decline. REFUNDS ORDERED - Tex-

The beginning of almost any successful company usually of doing business for the 70's. shows the top men went after business and worked smarter has been the preoccupation for so long that it's time to consider the final effect. Tighten your belt enough and you'll cut off circulation. Business belt-tightening has the added fault of keeping the best men at a desk when they should be out beating the bushes to create new income needed to maintain the payroll.

To get business going again, we need to paraphrase an old song, "Brother, Can You Spare The Time?"

The executive shortage in the last decade developed new ideas and tools to amplify the time of our most capable men. Now that the economy is rugged, some of these tools and ideas are beginning to make more sense.

Since nothing much happens in business until someone sells something, within the past few weeks a number of major firms have formed teams of top management specialists and sent them out to show customers how to use their products to greater advantage.

These management teams range in size from two or three to 10 men. The boss himself, his finance, marketing, and manufacturing vice presidents are in

Most business's come to hard- the field applying the firms best times because they stop doing muscle directly on the problems the very things which made of the firm and its customers. them successful in the first When they identify a new pros-

teams, some firms have made new use of the tools at hand as a means to have their cake and eat it too. For example, they lease business jets, or other business planes, at less dollar cost than transporting the team

They have their cake because the team can fly 2000 miles, work a full day and be back in the office the next day. Leasing, an idea of the 60's means the company can have the 560 mph jets and not tie-up cash needed for day-to-day operation ex-penses. And, next to time, money seems to be the hardest item to come by.

One type of business jet, the Sabreliner, seats up to 12 men and can operate at airline standards into almost 16 times as many airports as the airlines. So the effect of such a team effort can reach any corner of the nation fast.

There are many such tools and ideas which only need to be put to work by men with the energy and imagination to help to get our economy up to speed

We all have the same question to face: "Brother, can you spare the time?" to create new success in your business when times are tough. It seems a better question to answer than, "Can you spare a dime?"
