Johnny Holt, Johnny Allen and Fred Swint, III are part of the new crop of farmers making themselves known today. All three are eighteen, one still in high school, one out of school, and the other attending college. This puts each one in a different stage of entering farming operations, but they all know exactly what they want to do.

By Nanalee Nichols

Johnny Holt is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Holt, and with his father as an example, started helping around the place when he was just a kid. When he graduates from Prairiland High School, where he is currently a senior, he will take up farming for a living. Johnny's hobbies, hunting and playing basketball, were interrupted this year due to a broken leg sustained during one of the ball games, but his duties as a farmer were not. When asked if the cast on his leg kept him from doing his work he replied "Nope, I can still drive a tractor". That about says it, right there.

Johnny Allen had two older brother who farmed, as well as his father, to teach him the business. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Allen, Johnny's parents, started him out helping in the family business early too. Now that he is out of high school he devotes full time to growing cotton, soy beans, and cattle. That's what he always wanted to do, neither college nor any other type of work ever appealed to him. He says that the school classes toured some factories once, and he just couldn't stand the idea of being kept indoors for the rest

devote to thinking about and planning for the future?" asks Wayne Hayenga, economist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service

"Managing change is as important in the business of farming and ranching as it is in any other business. Part of what is involved is learning to respect time, especially the manager's time," points out the Texas A&M University System specialist.

Hayenga points to a successful busiess consultant who said recently, "One yardstick I have found useful in assessing the real strength of a company is how much time its very best people devote to the future. Wherever I see most of the company preoccupied with today's and next month's and very frequently I find an

Service To Taxpayers

Placing a heavy emphasis on expanded taxpayer service, W. T. Coppinger, District Director of the Revenue Service Internal (IRS) for North Texas, today announced the beginning of toll-free tax assistance telephone service for all residents in the Dallas District.

Coppinger pointed out that every IRS District is now part of a nation-wide toll-free taxpayer service. "In concentrating our telephone tax assistance employees in one central location, we not only will be able to offer more prompt and accurate answers but it will also permit greater uniformity in answers given to similar questions," Coppinger said.

'One of the dividends of this new, year-round, toll-free service is that it will bring this essential service to approximately 900,000 North Texas taxpayers who do not live near our eighteen field offices outside the down-town Dallas area." The director concluded by pointing out that 74 toll lines will be manned by expertly trained taxpayer service representatives qualified to answer questions ranging from home mortgage Junior College in 1924 will be sion, extension 51. The deductions to estimated taxes and exemptions for dependents. Walk-in tax assistance and all other normal tax transactions will continue to be offered at all IRS offices throughout the 146 counties in North Texas comprising the Dallas District.

The new toll-free telephone number is 800-492-4830. Dallas residents should call 742-2440. The number for Fort Worth residents is 334-3811.

"How much time do you enterprise that was either in or headed for trouble. "On the other hand, the best managed corporations, I find, are those that invest substantial amounts of their most precious resource - the time of their top managers - in the future.

According to Hayenga, these companies protect their future by defining future problems and opportunities and, most important, deciding how to best shape the future instead of being shocked by it.

"The start of the new year is a good time to set aside a little extra time to do your planning," says the economist. "Generally, the crop is out and things are frequently slowed down a bit so there can be some effort spent on planning.'

What does farm planning entail? Hayenga suggests three questions to help in the planning effort.

First, do you plan to retire in 10 or 15 years, or do you want to buy more farm or ranch land to expand your operation? This is a long range goal.

Second, how can you best accomplish your long range goal, and what should you do this year to help you reach your goal? Your banker, attorney, family members and business associates can provide assistance.

A third question, says the economist, is "What do you do if?" This question involves operational decisions: "How will a lack of fuel or fertilizer change my operations? Can marketing plan be improved?"

"Farmers and ranchers face as big a challenge as any businessman in managing their future. But they need to keep a proper perspective You can't neglect current problems, but you must also allocate enough time to the future. Otherwise, your business can head down an endless tunnel before you realize it," cautions Hayenga.

Insulation is an important factor in keeping your home comfortable and saving energy both in the winter and summer. You can save as much as 23% on fuel consumption if your home is insulated to FHA standards. And . . . fully insulated, with 61/2 inches of insulation in the ceiling, 3% inches for the outside walls, there can be a savings of 45 to 55 percent. What does insulation do? It restricts the quantity of heat which escapes during the winter or comes in during the summer. So check into the advantages of full insulation. The more you do to conserve energy of the 18th and 19th Centuries, the period presented at the recent exhibition at Kimbell Museum in Fort Worth. Most of the series was filmed in France, with the exception of Edvard Munch which was photographed in Norway, the artist's native country. Lord Clark has not relied solely, however, on the paintings found in the artists' own country. For instance, thirteen of the works discussed in the series are hanging in the National Gallery of Art in Washington. Others are in museums and private collections all over the world.

'Pioneers of Modern Painting" was produced by Colin Clark, Lord Clark's son. Although Colin Clark has been a television producer since 1956, this is the first father-son venture. The films also will be shown to PJC 's art appreciation class. The public showings are scheduled for 2 p.m. on consecutive Tuesdays for six weeks.

One of the first things they learned to do was to pull the cotton trailers to the gins from the field so that the adults could keep on working in the fields.
