Big Pine Lake Meeting June 27

A public meeting of parties interested in the Big Pine Lake Project will be held at 9:30 a.m. June 27, 1974 at the Clarksville Intermediate School Auditorium in Clarksville.

The Tulsa District, Corps of Engineers, has sufficiently advanced planning studies for the Big Pine Lake project, Clarksville, Texas, to identify the water resources problems and needs of the study area and to formulate a proposed plan of improvement. A map showing the proposed plan is attached.

The purpose of this meeting is to inform the public of our study findings and to receive for the record the new and additional material which should be considered before the District Engineer makes his report and prepares a final Environmental Statement. The District Engineer considers a multipurpose lake located about three miles upstream from the authorized Big Pine Lake Dam site would best satisfy the existing and future water resources development needs of the study area.

Copies of the draft report (Design Memorandum No. 3, General Design, Phase 1 - Plan Formulation) concerning the proposed project plan and the draft Environmental Statement will be made available for public review in the Tulsa District Office, Tulsa, Oklahoma, in advance of the meeting. Copies of the draft Environmental Statement will also be available for public review in advance of the meeting at the Post Office in Clarksville, Paris, Detroit, and Texarkana, Texas.

All interested parties are invited and urged to be present or represented at this meeting, including representatives of Federal and non-Federal public agencies; state and local agencies; commercial, industrial, business, transportation and utilities interests; civic, ecological and environmental, recreation, and fish and wildlife organizations; and interested or concerned citizens, property owners, the news media and other interests. All parties will be given the full opportunity to express their views and to furnish specific data on matters pertinent to the proposed material. Statements should be supported by factual information insofar as practicable.

Off Guard

Erma was all too familiar with the cracked floorboard in her apartment, and she usually stepped over it with care. But one day her attention was diverted by her pet parakeet, as it made a sudden beeline for an open window. Momentarily off guard, Erma tripped on the floorboard and sprained her ankle.

Could she collect damages from her landlord for not keeping the apartment in good repair? In a court test, the landlord argued that Erma herself was guilty of negligence for forgetting about the faulty condition of the floor.

But the jury absolved her of negligence and granted her claim. Reason: the "distraction doctrine." Under this doctrine, behavior that would ordinarily be considered negligent may be excused if the person's attention was distracted from the danger.

But not every kind of distraction is enough to constitute an excuse. It must be quite sudden, quite unusual, and quite compelling. Something less won't do. Thus:

A shopper in a supermarket noticed a loose carton on the floor ahead of her. Just before reaching that spot, she paused to commiserate with a friend about rising prices. By the time she started walking again, she had forgotten about the carton—and proceeded to fall over it.

"It was her own fault," said the market when she sued for damages. And this time, the court agreed. The court said a friendly chat was not a compelling enough distraction to justify forgetting about such an obvious danger.

What about traffic noises that distract a pedestrian? That will not ordinarily be enough to excuse negligence. A man who stumbled on a broken curbing claimed afterward, in suing the city, that the rumble of an oncoming car had diverted his attention. But a court held this to be no excuse.

"The sound of automobiles," said the judge, "is hardly an uncommon occurrence in urban America. City inhabitants should not be diverted by ordinary city traffic."

Power Failure? Potential Trouble? Phone us.

When your lights go out, check appliances and lights in other rooms of your home to see if they are also off. Look to see if your neighbors have power. If their lights are on . . . chances are you have only blown a fuse or tripped a circuit breaker. If the neighbors are also without power . . . there could be an equipment problem. Call Community Public Service Company and steps will be taken immediately to determine the source of trouble and restore service. In the meantime, turn off major electric appliances so that when the electricity does come back on, the sudden surge caused by the load demands won't blow fuses in your home or delay power restoration attempts. Here are some tips for customers that will help make things easier and safer if the lights do go out. Always keep a flashlight, portable transistor radio and extra batteries on hand. Stay tuned to a local station for information during a general power interruption. If linemen are working in your area, stay inside with family and pets until the trouble is corrected. Limit visits to the refrigerator and freezer. Frozen foods will keep up to 48 hours when they are not exposed to air. Phone calls from alert customers are often a big factor to quick restoration of service. Therefore, if you should see a spark of light on a wire or pole, hear a loud noise, see a wire down or notice an excessively noisy transformer . . . with one telephone call you may be able to help Community Public Service Company pinpoint the trouble faster.

Also, if you are driving or walking and you notice a fallen line, burned transformer, damaged pole or anything that might cause a power failure . . . report it in as much detail as possible. The sooner Community Public Service Company knows about it, the faster the problem can be corrected, perhaps avoiding completely a power interruption. Community Public Service Company . . . working hard to provide you with efficient electrical service around the clock.
