TSCRA Files Suit Against USDA

injunction to prevent the USDA from imposing its threat of embargo of Texas breeding cattle was brought into federal district court in Austin by the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association Friday. The suit, naming as defendants Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz, APHIS Administrator F. J. Mulhern, and Deputy Administrator J. M. Hejl, and Paul Becton, in charge of Brucellosis for APHIS, seeks to obtain an injunction restraining the order to cut off federal brucellosis funds as well as to implement the embargo, according to TSCRA President Hilmar G. Moore.

The suit charges that the USDA has failed to meet requirements in not filing an environmental impact statement on the proposed embargo with the Environmental Protection Agency. Such a statement, required by law, entails a lengthy review and a hearing with an eventual ruling by the courts.

TSCRA is suing for "declaritory relief and preliminary and permanent injunctive relief from the provisions and requirements of the Brucellosis Eradication Program of the United States Department of Agriculture." The suit claims that the proposed action of embargoing Texas cattle and with-holding funds for brucellosis control will significantly affect the quality of human environment within the meaning of the National Environmental Policy Act. The resulting increase of cattle numbers from such an embargo and the increase of the disease caused by withdrawal of funds and personnel would have an impact on the quality of the state's air, grasslands, soil and water resources, the suit claims.

In requesting an environmental impact statement, the TSCRA is in general repeating its request of the past two years that a high-level, impartial feasivility study of brucellosis and its combatting efforts be initiated by

The threat of an embargo of Texas cattle resulted from the Texas Animal Health Commission's refusal to adopt USDA's new restrictive measures in the brucellosis program. The TSCRA, long an opponent of the "over-kill" aspects of the federal regulations, actively supported the commission's stand taken at the September 4 TAHC meeting in Austin. Hilmar Moore gave testimony of strong opposition to the adoption of USDA's ever tightening regulations at the hearing which preceded the TAHC's decision. One of the most damaging elements of the proposed embargo is the financial effect imposed operations, states the TSCRA. Major stock shows in Texas, which annually draw thousands of head of cattle to be exhibited and sold, would be vastly curtailed under an embargo. Purebred sales of all kinds would be threatened, since outof-state buying would be significantly reduced. The timing of the proposed embargo does not allow purebred herds time enough to achieve a qualified status through continuous testing that would allow out-of-state shipment during early 1976, the TSCRA claims.

Lack of confidence in the federal brucellosis eradication program has long hurt the effectiveness of these efforts. Cattlemen claim the blood test is often inaccurate and certainly over-condemnitory so that many thousands of healthy cattle have been sent to slaughter needlessly. The traceback system which identifies the herd of origin of those cattle reacting positive on the test often takes many months, making it impossible for ranchers to identify which other cattle of his might have been exposed. Also plagued by long delays have been the indemnity payments.

The TSCRA also questioned USDA's right to restrict shipment from those Texas counties which have reached certified free status. "The law states that any state or political subdivision thereof which complies with USDA's uniform methods and rules must be recognized as such," said Moore. "A county is a political subdivision and we have many in the state which have cleaned up brucellosis according to the regulations.'

Moore also pointed to new 'breakthroughs' from the scientific community that are on the horizon, promising a much more practical amd medically sound program to deal with the disease. Swift implementation of these new processes and developments would be a much wiser plan of action for USDA, he said, than the expensive machinery to control an embargo between a chain of freshwater lakes around the state has been canceled, at least for this year, according to Parks and Wildlife Department officials.

Sufficient quantities of redfish fry failed to survive in rearing ponds and the fish simply were not available to carry out initial plans.

With a breakthrough in the artificial rearing of redfish, P&WD fishery biologists felt their longtime dream of stocking freshwater lakes with the saltwater fish would finally become a reality.

Redfish at the National Marine Fisheries Service laboratory in Port Aransas were induced to spawn under artificial conditions for the first time and six fish produced more than 70 million eggs in a few weeks this summer.

Fishery biologists already knew that redfish grow rapidly in freshwater but had been unable to stock them in inland lakes because of a lack of sufficient quantities of small

Large numbers of redfish fry were transferred from the lab in Port Aransas to rearing ponds at the P&WD Palacios Marine Fisheries Station where they were to be kept for 30 days before being shipped to inland

Fishery biologists made plans to experimentally stock the redfish in a chain of lakes around the state in order to determine the most suitable habitat and the news went out that redfish were on their way to inland lakes.

Jacksonville, Athens, Cypress Springs and Striker were among the lakes in Northeast Texas scheduled to receive experimental stockings of the

But when the ponds at Palacios were drained to collect the 11/4-inch fingerling redfish for shipping, instead of having hundreds-of-thousands, there were fewer than 20,000. Fishery biologists, disappointed with the production, immediately began studies to determine the cause of the poor survival rates. "This is strictly an experimental program," said Lonnie Peters, inland fisheries director, "and our marine fisheries people were really disappointed that production wasn't 'Without the fish, we couldn't carry out our plans but there's possibility that we will succeed next year."

Pasture Grasses Can Be Deadly In The Fall

pasture problems, nitrate and cyanide poisoning, may be the cause of cattle deaths, warns Dr. Jim Wilson, member of the Texas Veterinary Medical Association Public Information Committee. Prevention is the best solution, and every cattleman should know what to do in predicting and avoiding potential nitrate and cyanide

Nitrate poisoning, also known as oat pasture poisoning, is caused by toxic levels of nitrates accumulating in rapidly growing ryegrasses, pastures recently top-dressed with nitrogen fertilizers and water run-off from such pastures, oat hay and stubble, corn stalks, sweet potato vines, careless weed, lambsquarter, ragweed, and nightshades.

However, special conditions are usually necessary for these plants to become toxic - environmental condidions such as three or four cloudy days, frost, drought, 4-D spraying on pastures, and trampling.

Other factors that cause the sudden slowing or rapid increase of plant growth or sudden increase in palatability. Accumulation is usually greater in the plant stalks than the leaves, fruit or grain.

Symptoms of nitrate poisoning, which are sudden and progress rapidly, are stomach pain, diarrhea, difficult breathing, muscle tremors, wobbling, collapse, head turned back in the flank, and death without struggle.

The blood will be a chocolate brown, the gums will have a grayish-blue coloration, and in cases where the animal has eaten fertilizer, the intestines will be raw and bloody. Unless treated, animals will die in three to four hours after the first symptoms. potent, rapid-acting poison that diseases.

In the fall of the year, two can accumulate to killer levels in most sorghums, sudan grasses, corn, Johnson grass, arrowgrass, flax and some other pasture grasses. Toxic levels of cyanide accumulate in these grasses under the same conditions that cause nitrate accumulation. The key is that any condition that retards plant growth, excessively stimulates young plant growth, or increases plant palatability may result in plants containing toxic levels of cyanide or nitrate. As is characteristic with most acute poisonings, the symptoms of cyanide are violent and deadly within two hours if treatment is not initiated immediately. The symptoms are excitement. general muscle trembling, difficult, rapid breathing, slobbering, tearing, head curled back in the flank, dilated eyes, convulsions, conciousness, and death. The gums are bright red, and the blood is a bright cherry red. Good pasture management can avoid cyanide and nitrate poisonings. Know what grasses are potential cyanide and nitrate accumulators, and the environmental conditions that make them dangerous. The only sure protection under these conditions is temporary removal of cattle from those pastures, but when this is impossible, allowing for taller plant growth and grazing only in the afternoon after frost is off the grass eliminates the danger to a great extent. When a case occurs, the Texas Veterinary Medical Association recommends you call your local veterinarian immediately. Proper diagnosis, early treatment, and prevention of symptoms in the rest of your herd are extremely important. Your veterinarian is the best source of information Similarly, cyanide is a about these deadly pasture

December 1775: A Bitter Loss

In one of the first disastrous defeats suffered by the newly formed colonists' forces, the combined strategies of Gen. Montgomery and Col. Benedict Arnold failed to subdue the British at Quebec. A harsh winter and the ultimate death of Gen, Montgomery in battle, forced the retreat of the remaining American forces. Out of this defeat, Canada remained in British control for the duration of the war.
