STOLEN CAR FOUND NEAR GRAHAM LAST SATURDAY

The Ford car which was stolen from F. M. Squires, manager of the Brazelton Lumber Company on Sunday night February 5th, was found at Graham last Saturday, and was brought back to Haskell Tuesday by Sheriff Al Cousins. The car when found was concealed in an old tent near Graham. A man giving the name of J. H. Shaw was arrested and brought to Haskell and placed in jail charged with the theft. The car had been badly damaged—the shock absorbers had been removed and the cushions changed for a pair of old ones, and the number changed on the engine along with other damage. An examining trial will probably be held in the next week or ten days, as several witnesses are absent from the state and it will be several days before they return.

The John E. Robertson dry goods store, the Cockerell Drug Store and the Rich Cafe were burglarized at Weinert last Thursday night and a quantity of dry goods and about $400.00 worth of cigarettes stolen. Sheriff Al Cousins assisted by Sheriff Head of Stephens County located the property Friday at Breckenridge. The men who had the loot in a closed car, were taken into custody. They gave the names of Sullivan and Boyd and their postoffice as Greenville and Strawn respectively. We understand that both parties have signed written statements admitting to the theft.

G. H. TAYLOR ANNOUNCES FOR RE-ELECTION AS COMMISSIONER

G. H. Taylor the present County Commissioner of Precinct No. 2 authorized the Free Press this week to make his announcement as a candidate for the office of County Commissioner, to succeed himself, subject of course, to the action of the Democratic primary which will be held in July.

Mr. Taylor is now serving his first term as County Commissioner and has made a very enviable record. The people of Precinct No. 2 are familiar with the manner in which he has conducted the affairs of the office and we therefore deem it unnecessary for us to dwell on the merits of some. So far Mr. Taylor has no opponent and probably will not have in the coming election. However, he will appreciate your support just the same.

L. W. KIRKPATRICK ANNOUNCES FOR CITY MARSHAL, HASKELL

L. W. Kirkpatrick authorizes the Free Press to make his announcement this week as a candidate for City Marshal to succeed himself, subject to the action of the City Election which will be held in Haskell the first Tuesday in April.

ATTENDANCE FIGURES OF THE RECENT POULTRY SCHOOL

People along the Wichita Valley are more interested in poultry raising than are the people along the main line of the Fort Worth & Denver. The attendance records at the Poultry Schools recently conducted by the Denver Road show that the crowds down the 'Valley' both at the morning meetings and at the Poultry Special Exhibit car in the afternoon, were almost twice as large as were the crowds at places on the main line.

The attendance at the whole series of Poultry Schools was very good indeed and the officials are well pleased with the attendance and interest. The attendance at all places was as follows, with the first column representing the total attendance, the second the attendance at the morning meetings, and the last column, the number visiting the car:

He thoroughly understands the duties attached to the office and has done his very best to do that duty to the best of his ability. He will appreciate your support in the primary.

CONGRESSMAN PARRISH INJURED IN AUTO WRECK

Lucian W. Parrish, congressman from the 13th district, and candidate for the United States Senate, was severely injured in an automobile accident Wednesday afternoon between Sweetwater and Roby. Mr. Parrish sustained a broken jaw and other injuries about the face, according to information received here over long distance telephone from Stamford, where he was taken Wednesday night for treatment.

The details of the wreck have not been received here, but the report Thursday morning was to the effect that Mr. Parrish regained consciousness during the night and was resting very well at the time of the message.

In telephone advices received from Stamford Thursday afternoon, it is stated that Mr. Parrish will be taken to Wichita Falls Thursday night. In a statement Thursday afternoon Mr. Parrish said that he would soon be back in the campaign stronger than ever, and for none of his friends to be discouraged.

Mr. Parrish had an appointment to speak here Thursday afternoon at 4:30 in the interest of his candidacy. He had been making three or four appointments each day, up until the accident occurred.

RECITAL BY EDISON ARTISTS NEXT MONDAY NIGHT

Arrangements are fast being completed for the unusual musical treat which will be presented on March 20th at the Haskell First Christian Church by Harvey Hindermeyer, the popular American tenor, and the Misses Dunn.

Mr. Hindermeyer is an artist of versatility. Whatever he sings, from the most difficult operatic aria, to the simplest heart song, Mr. Hindermeyer gives it with a voice that is bright, musical, and pure. After he has been heard, it is entirely obvious why Mr. Hindermeyer is generally re-engaged wherever he appears.

The Dunn Sisters Trio have by hard work and earnest application won for themselves an enviable place in musical circles. These young girls, so modest as they are charming, have enchanted thousands of Americans not only by their exquisite playing, but by their graciousness of manner.

The recital is under the local management of McNeill & Smith Hdw. Co., from whom cards of admittance may be secured by the asking.

FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH TO DEDICATE SUNDAY

The people of Haskell and surrounding territory will have the privilege of enjoying and taking part in what we think will be one of the greatest days in the history of Haskell next Sunday when the First Christian Church will be dedicated. A program—interesting, beneficial, and inspiring—consisting of great lectures, talks and illustrations by prominent men will begin promptly at 10:30 a. m. and continue throughout the day. Beginning at 9:30 a. m. and taking up one hour, Dr. Geo. L. Sively of Chicago will give a big Chemistry lecture. All parts of the program will begin exactly on time. A big dinner will be served to everybody.

A big Young Peoples meeting will be held in the Methodist Church at the 11:00 o'clock hour. Be sure to be on time at these services.

RAID SUNDAY NIGHT NETS SEVEN BARRELS OF MASH

Sheriff Cousins has been very busy during the week endeavoring to locate the owner of seven perfectly good oak barrels for which he has no use whatever. The barrels came into the hands of Sheriff Cousins Sunday afternoon when he and Deputy Thornton raided a house six miles south of Haskell on the Stamford road, and found seven barrels of corn mash in the house, with no one present to claim them. The mash was emptied out on the ground and the barrels brought into town to await the rightful claimant. No arrests have been made in connection with the find, and Sheriff Cousins states that the barrels will remain the property of the county unless the owner desires to claim them.

HASKELL NATIONAL BANK OFFERS MEDAL TO POST

The Gold Medal offered by the Haskell National Bank to the boy or girl of Post school winning first place in the declamation contest to be held the day of our School Fair at Post April 21st, is one of the finest medals ever offered by anyone to any school boy or girl in Haskell County for declamation.

The medal is on exhibition at the school building and about 20 pupils have entered the contest for it, pressing the gratitude and appreciation of the Post community for the interest that the Haskell National Bank is manifesting in our boys and girls, through its president, Mr. O. E. Patterson in offering the above mentioned medal, and also the kind offer to supply our boys with some of the best registered pigs to be had in the State.

FIRST DISTRICT FEDERATION

On April 17, 18, 19 Haskell will entertain the First District of the Texas Federation Women's Clubs in their twenty-first annual convention. Over one hundred guests are expected to attend this meeting. This will be probably the largest convention Haskell has ever had the privilege of entertaining.

This convention was invited here by the citizenship of the town, and it is sincerely hoped that every citizen will do all possible to make this meeting a glowing success. This will be an opportunity for you to do a lot of free advertising for your town. It has been said, you know, "that women will talk."

Mrs. Courtney Hunt is chairman of the Homes Committee. All those who will entertain guests in their homes please notify her.

We will not all demonstrate that in this big undertaking the people of Haskell can show the real spirit of COMMUNITY CO-OPERATION? Local Chairman.

PEOPLE OF OUR TOWN

He doesn't stand for much, does the Quick-Tempered Man, and when he gets Steamed Up, all hands rush for cover. The Quick-Tempered Man is a pretty good Ole Scout at that, aside from his Hasty Temper, and nobody takes his 'I'll Brain Storms' seriously.

REMINISCENCES

By GLADIS F. PRAY

It is a common thing for middle-aged people to forget their youth and to condemn all the thoughts and acts of youth as folly.

Of course, there was a long introduction to his story. Then he rambled on to how he had the time and opportunity to observe how things were going between Anne and his grandson and namesake, William Armstrong.

Finally he reached the point where my story begins, the morning after the dance over at Rosedale, when William came down at sleepy-eyed and yawning, to find his father engaged with his favorite topic, the worthlessness of the present generation.

"I tell you, Mary, there's no use arguing," I told the boy only last week he'd have to give it up, else he could get out and shift for himself and just find out how easy it'd find it to support himself, let alone two."

"Here William spoke for himself. "And I told you, pa, what I tell you now. I'd get out and shift for myself for mother. You're no good to make such a fuss over me taking Anne to a dance now and again. I work hard for you all day, because then my first hand you ever look and—"

"No, indeed, money don't grow on the bushes in my yard, William, and no one knows that better than your father. Now, I wonder, did he ever tell you how he learned that? Maybe it'd be a bit hard for him to tell you, but there's your mother knows all about it, and could say a deal if she cast. No? I can see by their faces they never did tell. Well, old people are forgetful, so perhaps I'd best remind them."

"No-o, John, don't interrupt your father, nor you, Mary. You know, William, once on a time I thought your pa had summat better to do than to be squirin' a certain good-lookin' girl to dances, but he didn't think so. Lawdy, no! We had some words about it, and he packed his duds and started off for Boston on some money his grandma give him. He was goin' to show his dad what he could do. Yes, he showed me all righty," with an appreciative grin.

As granddad subsided John rather sheepishly glanced at his wife, who suddenly needed something in the pantry. Then he cleared his throat, made a couple of false starts, and finally jerked out:

"Well, granddnd, you would have your say, but I hope you'll forget that old yarn, if we agree to say no more about the party. If Billy promises not to be out rainin' his health more than two nights a week, I guess the old farm won't go to rack an' ruin yer awhile—that is, if he makes the best of his chance, as I did, and persuades the girl to come and live where he won't have to be chasin' out nights. What do you say to that, Mary?"

Mary only smiled, but her husband did not notice the lack of an articulate response.

Considerate.

"Would you mind driving a little slower, old man?" "Not getting scared, are you?" "Oh, no, nothing like that, but I'd hate to take an unfair advantage of my life insurance company."

Not a Hopeless Task.

He—You are Miss Coy's best friend. Tell me, do you think I will be successful in winning her love? She—Yes; why shouldn't you, when so many others have been successful?

THE WINDOW

By AGNES G. BROGAN

Jack Thorpe, hurrying along through the chill of an early spring day, glanced up at an old stone mansion and saw the window. The window seemed to typify that home he desired.

In crying contrast to its neighboring windows, the shining white curtained glass beckoned, while two potted geraniums flung a welcome.

Jack was tired of hotels, tired of disappointing bachelor apartments, and though he had not passed down Cooper road with the intention of finding a lodging place there, that is exactly what he did, and for this was the gay little window responsible.

"Will you," he briefly asked a maid who opened the door to him, "let me know if the room on the second floor is vacant, the one with red floors in the window? And may I see it?"

Jack ascended the gloomy stairway upon being told that the room was to be vacated the following morning. The maid inserted a key in a lock and left him.

The room was as inviting as its window promised. When Thorpe lighted the lamp and touched a match to the gas grate, he sank into a cretonne cushioned chair with a grateful sigh. Here was real home at last.

Mrs. Bickers came up presently for an interview. The bright place on the wall paper, she informed him, was where the former tenant's piano had stood. The piano had been moved that morning.

The room would be ready for renting tomorrow, Mrs. Bickers agreed, and he paid the advance price asked. "Just leave the key on the hall rack when you go out," Mrs. Bickers said, and left him.

He was enjoying a cigar before the glowing fire when a tap scumbled at the door and in response to his questioning "Yes?" the door opened to admit a young woman. She was a handsome young woman and her big blue eyes were brimming with tears.

"What do you want?" asked Jack impatiently.

"I am to bring in," she returned, "a new chair, the finished and upholstered, with seat and back in red."

"It," said Jack informally, "have just reached this room."

The girl turned to look at him. "Have you?" she asked. "I hope you will like it."

"I know that I shall like it," he replied. "I know from the moment I saw those red geraniums in the window."

The bright redness Jack's reminiscence. "We used to have a window like that at home when I was a boy. White curtains and all. It looked out on the side of the garden where a sun dial stood."

"Did you?" asked the girl eagerly. "We had a window like it, too, at Granddad's. Granddad raised us motherless children. But our window looked out from a sunny kitchen to where we could see birds hopping about on the trees, and in winter time, their little tracks all over the snow."

The man nodded understandingly. "I know, that all spells home."

"You won't like the meals here," the girl said. "Better go outside for them—it's too bad you have to."

"Oh, well, there must be some drawback. One does not find a home every day."

"Nor lose one, thank goodness," sighed the girl.

With new interest he regarded the strange visitor.

"I lost mine today," she explained ruefully.

"But why?" Sympathy was in his glance.

"Couldn't pay the rent," the girl told him. "If I can't make another home for myself there will always be granddad's to go to," she added.

"Tell me," he begged impulsively. "Grandma educates her orphaned grandchildren and then turns us out of her over-full nest to make our own ways. My way was to be music—fine, success, you understand, waiting in the world outside. I have just two dollars left. I'm going to stop at a 'Y. W.' tonight, and tomorrow go out and look for an ordinary job. The trouble is, I don't know a thing in the world but music."

"Your name?" the man asked, "won't you tell me your name?"

"Burnie," answered the girl, her sweet face grew wistful. "Back in grandma's cottage they call me Margot."

With a sudden gesture she tossed her hat and cloak to a chair. "I'll get out my tea wagon and have tea. And you'll stay? It will be a sort of celebration, the old tenant departs, long live the new."

"I'm installing a new music store right here in Cooper road," he told her later, "and with your experience along that line, I'd be glad to offer you a position in it. It might do for a time, Margot, the name came naturally, and you could then continue on in this little home you have made. Your piano could be brought back tomorrow. The new tenant declines—re-instate the old."

And Margot happily agreed.

Now grandma, proud and gratified, tells the folks of Linden Village how Margot gave up her promised career for love, with the saving grace that she married "a music man."

WHAT SHE FOUND

By NETTIE B. FANNING

Two days before the midwinter banquet of the Greenville Literary society, Mrs. Fleming was finishing the decolete gown which she had planned to wear on that occasion. It was before the time of backless bodices and she was afraid she had been almost too daring in planning that kind of a gown when most of the ladies would wear a "V" neck, and their long-sleeved "undies" would probably show through their chiffon or crepe de chine sleeves.

Although not fashionable as to clothes, the club was very exclusive, and so old that its charter members had grown white-haired or bald-headed, according to their respective sex. It was composed of doctors, lawyers, ministers and their wives, school-teachers of varying ages and a few others. Mrs. Fleming was one of the others. There were two bachelors, Mr. Black and Mr. Tilden, the always immaculate principal of the grammar school, thirty-five, pink-checked and six feet two.

Young Mrs. Fleming sighed as she sewed. She wished she could do something to wake up the club. They were too snug and complacent. They had had the same president for 15 years.

A telephone call interrupted Mrs. Fleming's musings. It was the chairman of the banquet committee, who said that Mrs. Worden would be unable to be at the banquet and would Mrs. Fleming please fill in her place on the program.

Mrs. Fleming promised to see what she could do, put on her things and started for the library. On her way she met Miss Davids, a club member, and stopped to chat with her. As they parted a few torn scraps of paper slipped unnoticed from Miss Davids' sashbook and fell at Mrs. Fleming's feet. She looked down at them, then picked them up, tucked them into her purse and hastily turned toward home, where she spent some time in neatly putting the pieces together, picture puzzle fashion.

Two nights later the banquet progressed from fruit cocktails to demitasses. Then the tables were cleared and speeches were in order.

When Mrs. Fleming was called on she arose, looked steadily at Mr. Tilden until he blushed, then unfolded a disreputable looking paper, laid it on the table face down and began gravely:

"Two days ago I started for the library to search for something to read tonight, little thinking that I would soon be unraveling a baffling mystery concerning three of our prominent club members. To say that I have been alternately interested, curious, astonished and shocked at what I have learned, faintly expressed my emotions. Before reaching the library I stopped to chat a moment with Miss Davids. After we parted I noticed some bits of paper on the walk. They must have fallen from her notebook as we were talking. On one of the pieces I saw the words, 'exceedingly shocking!'"

Miss Davids' face showed blank amazement.

Mrs. Fleming continued; "Now, anything shocking is apt to be interesting, particularly if it concerns those with whom one is well acquainted."

Several people stirred uneasily in their seats.

"It chanced that other bits of paper had fallen, with the writing up. After a hasty glance I simply had to know what it all meant, and gathered up the papers. You will begin to understand why I did this when I repeat to you the words I saw in the order in which I first saw them on the ground. 'EXCEEDINGLY SHOCKING—TILDEN—ROCKING—MISS PENNY—OPENWORKED STOCKING—MISS ROSS—SAD.'"

Her audience was now listening breathlessly, and consternation showed in the faces of the two middle-aged school-teachers mentioned. Mrs. Fleming went on:

"There were other scraps with words on them. After gathering them up I at once returned home and spent the afternoon in piecing them together."

She looked soberly at the paper on the table and all eyes followed her gaze.

"I thought at first I would say nothing about it; but as the matter so intimately concerns us all, I felt that you, too, should be told." Every eye was fixed upon her as she took the paper from the table.

"Listen," she said. "Could anything be more dreadful than this?"

"Said Miss Ross to Miss Penny, while rocking, 'I'm sure it's exceedingly shocking—indeed, it is sad. But Tilden, poor lad, is wearing an openworked stocking.'"

"Pretty clever," murmured the judge in Mrs. Fleming's ear, as she sat down. "You certainly had our undivided attention all right."

"Someone else must have dropped those papers. I never wrote that," said Miss Davids, a bit snappishly. "Isn't that your writing?" Mrs. Fleming smiled innocently and handed the paper to her. Though elaborately pieced together, it was blank on both sides.

Retirement.

"Do you not sometimes dream," said the sympathetic friend, "of dismissing all official cares and leading your life your own way?"

"That isn't a dream," said Senator Sordium, a little irascibly. "That's a nightmare."

ITEMS OF INTEREST FROM THE SAGERTON SECTION

The regular Quarterly Conference met at the Methodist Church last Saturday and Sunday with Presiding Elder Hicks of this District in charge. Rev. Hicks preached Sunday morning at the usual hour and the Baptist congregation in charge of Pastor Lawrence came over in a body to meet with the Methodists. It is a fine thing for a small community when the churches can work together without strife.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Smith and son Edmund of Knox City visited Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Caudle last Sunday.

Preparations are under way to close the school Friday, March 24th. A class of five will graduate from the High School department. The names of the graduating class are: Lupa Martin, Rachel Shipman, Scott Crabtree, John Hankins and Bernard Holm. Though the school year has been cut short owing to lack of funds it has been fairly successful and we are all hoping for better times next year.

Esquire Ben Hess in addition to being the local dispenser of justice and manager of the local lumber yard has now added the role of weather prophet to his list of vocations. For the past month the squire has been insisting that we would have rain by the thirteenth of March. It continued dry up until the night of the twelfth when a good shower fell. Monday morning found the squire walking the streets greeting everyone with a loud and enthusiastic "I told you so. He refused to divulge the source of his mysterious power but now that we know that he can foretell rain we are going to find ways to make work and bring it in large quantities.

Miss Ethel Russel spent the weekend in Haskell visiting home folks.

Mr. Heatherington was in Rule on business last Saturday.

Hon. Tom Davis of Haskell was in town last week stopping over on his way to attend the Stonevill County Court at Aspermont.

With the news that Arkansas now lays claim to fifty-six counties of Texas including Haskell, several of the Sagerton citizens are wondering how it will sound to date their letters from Sagerton, Arkansas; others are hoping that the hange will bring us some of the fruit and rain that the state east of Oklahoma is famous for. The school teachers are all wondering whether they must now look to Ansteth or Little Rock for instructions and money on past due vouchers.

Young Peoples' Missionary Society

The Young Peoples' Missionary Society met Tuesday March 14th with 9 present. It opened with Song No. 27.

Each girl answered roll call with appreciation of Christ dying to save us from sin—which was followed with prayer.

Mrs. Culwell also read the second chapter in the book, "Mother's Bible." Last Wednesday the Treasurer sent $8.00 to the Russian Relief.

Cards for being present every Tuesday for 13 Tuesdays were given to: Carrie Bess Culwell, Virginia Gilbert, Pauline Trice, Helen Culwell.

OF BEAD-TRIMMED CREPE

When you go in quest of a new blouse keep in mind two phrases—"crepe de chine" and "over the skirt," and in all the displays you will find the blouses repeating them. There are many simple over-the-skirt styles similar to the pretty blouse shown here, and they invite the seamstress to try her hand at blouse making. This is made of a colored crepe, with white in the collar and cuffs, ornamented with stitching of silk floss and trimmed with beads.

TYPICAL COAT STYLE

Out of Russia came the inspiration for this spirited coat, typical of the spring modes. It is made of a novelty mixture and its trimming is something quite new. Note that its lines are straight, its sleeves roomy and loose, its patch pockets large, its belt wide, with an original fastening, and be assured that it embodies the high points in the new styles.

IN QUIET TOBAGO

Species of Some of the Most Beautiful Feathered Creatures in the World Are There.

In the little island of Tobago, the ward of Trinidad in the West Indies and lying to the northwest, birds are seen at their best and are tame enough to be studied easily, writes Dudley S. Corlett in the Los Angeles Times.

At sunset one may see the regular formations of flamingoes, like a rosy cloud, heading for the mainland of Venezuela. Along the shore the pelicans are numerous—clumsy and of dull plumage, that sail all day up and down the margin of the shore watching for fish. They drop down with tremendous velocity, and opening wide their great bills sweep the fish into the pouch which acts as a sein. Then they raise their heads from the sea so that the water may drain from the pouch and leave the fish in the proper position for swallowing. The little gulls perch on their heads awaiting for any chance bits that may fall from an over-full pouch.

In the dark mangrove swamps one sees the gray heron, white egrets, bittern and coot. The gorgeous macaw in his blue and yellow or red and green livery is only a rare visitor from the mainland, but there are flocks of green parrots and noisy parakeets in every forest glade. Toucans, glossy black, with long-curved bills and yellow crests, clatter from the tree tops, and woodpeckers, red and green, wake the forest silences with their ceaseless work. In the dark bamboo glades may be seen the shy "king of the forest," with his cap of peacock sheen, russet breast and long rafter tail. With him will be the iridescent bronzed bee-eater, floating in the sun as he darts after the insect prey, and the golden orioles build their long hanging nests of woven grass from the moss-hung branches of the zannan trees.

There are not many songsters, save a mocking bird, the black and yellow "touch-yah" and some of the tiny sugar and grass birds. And lastly there is what is perhaps the most attractive of all—the bluebird—the bird of happiness. Cobalt is his head and back, soft gray-blue his breast, and he feasts on the ripest fruits or hops unafraid and into the house after stray beetles. Tobago should adopt the bluebird as its crest, for in the faces of the people shine the gift of happiness, whether it be in the bronzed features of the white planters who have elected to lead the simple life on this little island, or whether it be on the shining black faces of the negroes. As Tobago was a British possession when Trinidad was still Spanish, there are hardly any French or Spanish creoles, and most of the estates belong to the descendants of old Scotch families.

Appeals to Adventurous.

Though some of those who know the polar regions develop a kind of love for them, the experience of two British explorers who spent a year on an Antarctic island with no shelter but an overturned boat must have been a severe test of whatever affection they may have had for those latitudes. T. W. Bagshawe, geologist, and Lieutenant C. M. Lester, navigating officer, had provisions, dogs and scientific instruments to keep them company when their companions sailed north, leaving the two to make observations. The return expedition fell into financial difficulties and sent a rescue ship back only in the nick of time. Besides a scientific interest, ventures into the far north and the far south probably are actuated by what one may call a sporting impulse. With them it is a game. They return again and again, and with success comes a genuine liking for the icy seas and archipelagoes, such as led Stefansson to call the northern polar region "the friendly arctic."—New York Sun.

Irish "O" Not an Abbreviation.

That the apostrophe, like the hyphen, is a recent intrusion is the statement of Francis O'Sullivan (sic), author of the Irish romance, "The Portion of a Champion." "The 'o,'" he says, "is not a contraction of 'of' as popularly supposed. It is a contraction of the Irish 'ua' meaning 'the descendant of.' Also the 'o' should not be capitalized except when the Christian name is omitted."

The word "tigh," following the author's name, signifies "of the house," and it is the traditional designation of his family as distinguished from others of the O'Sullivan clan. In private life the author is just plain Sullivan, but he thinks that to print it so on the title page of his Fifth century romance would be anachronism.

American Methods in Holland.

Methods of the American milkman have been applied to the oil business in Belgium and Holland by an American oil company. Through its Belgian company it is marketing oil products in those countries in bottles. In the past, distribution has been in cans and drums, involving larger purchases by the consumer at one time. Recently this company introduced the quart bottle and the dog-cart delivery, a system similar to the milk bottle and milk wagon common in this country. Bottles are exchangeable, as with the milkman. It is not now unusual to see a cart loaded with bottles containing oil products going the rounds in Antwerp, Brussels, Rotterdam and Amsterdam.

PRIMITIVE LOT IN BALKANS

The tugboat which forms the only means of communication between the Albanian city of Scutari, at the southern end of Lake Scutari, and the Montenegrin town of Pavlonitza, at the northern end of the lake, is a 1-lunged unair subject to fainting spells and long trances.

It carries a varied assortment of humanity, ranging from Albanians travelling up the lake in full regalia to shoot up undesirable acquaintances or something, up to the veiled ladies with bright red finger nails and Montenegrins in scarlet bolero jackets and blue golf pants who have just been down the lake to murder someone they dislike or something.

An Albanian in native dress resembles a character from the rajah of Zamboanga of the prince of malaria, while a Montenegrin togged out in his national garb looks more like a cross between a member of the Chicago White Sox in traveling uniform and Lord Whiffletree on a Scotch whin shooting expedition.

Two Serbian soldiers came aboard the boat from one of the mountain garrisons where the Serbs were waiting impatiently to jump over into Albania and grab all the territory they could grab. Their rifles were dirty and rusted in spots; their uniforms were foul with dirt and frayed and torn in numerous places. Between their boot tops and the bottom of their slovenly wound spiral puttees was a 1-inch hiatus which showed clearly that they were wearing no stockings. A two weeks' growth of beard decorated their faces.

At lunch time they pulled loaves of sour gray bread from the pockets of their dilapidated overcoats and gnawed at them wolfishly. I offered one of them a cake of chocolate. He took it, looked it all over with the greatest care, smelled it suspiciously and then looked helplessly at his companion. His companion broke off half the cake, smelled it carefully in turn and then touched his tongue to it very gingerly. No harm resulted, so he nibbled at a corner. Then he gave his companion the high sign and they both went to eating it—a nibble of chocolate and then a bite of bread. Both men were about twenty-five years old and had never seen a piece of chocolate before.—Kenneth L. Roberts in the Saturday Evening Post.

"All Bound Round."

"Dear, funny old Mammy Lou," said the pretty girl in the squirrel furs as she seated herself in front of the Woman in the Bus. "She still clings to the remedies she used years ago down in Alabama."

"Is she ill?" inquired her companion.

"Yes, poor thing. She sent for me to go to see her. Said she had mis'ry pow'ful bad! When I got there she complained of a sore throat, and I really believe she has tonsillitis."

"She looked just too comical. She wasn't wearing a cap as she usually does, but her hair was drawn high on her head, and from the ends of it down close to her scalp it was bound round and round with string, so tightly pulled I thought the skin of her scalp would crack."

"I asked her, 'For goodness sake, mammy, whatever have you done to your head?'"

"'Ah reckon it looks queer,' she whispered huskily, 'but ah pulls mah hair often mah hand and ties it this-away so's to hold up mah sof' palate.'"

—Chicago Journal.

Important Matter Settled.

The discovery of an alligator fossil in the shale rock of Bay de Noc is considered by geologists to prove that this peninsula was not created until fish and other forms of animal life had begun to exist in the waters thereabouts. This must bring a great deal of satisfaction to the people living here. Scientists had asserted recently that the peninsula was formed previous to the fish era, and was therefore quite old. It seems probable now that the place was created, say, only 400,000,000 years ago. Instead of 500,000,000 years ago. So the people need no longer apologize for not having a place just as new and up-to-date as any of us.—Detroit News.

Women Leave Cambridge.

As a result of the action of the senate of Cambridge university denying woman students equal privileges and rights with men, some women are leaving for Oxford, where the status of the sexes is equal. According to the decision of the senate, the students of Girton and Newnham colleges may not become members of the university, although they are entitled to titular degrees conferred by diploma. A compromise measure, under which women were to be admitted to a limited membership, including eligibility to professorship with restrictions and a measure of self-government, was defeated by the vote of the university senate.

"Mechanic" Vs. "Engineer."

Defending the word "engineer" is part of the work of the American Association of Engineers, according to C. E. Drayer, secretary. A corporation used "engineer" when it meant "mechanic." The engineers' organization brought about a change in the title. In connection with protecting the competent engineer "from unjust competition of dabblers and quacks," the association aided in the passing of licensing laws in eight states during the past year.

PARRISH ANNOUNCES TEXT OF PLATFORM IN ADDRESS

Lucian W. Parrish of Henrietta, Representative in Congress and candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, Saturday announced the full text of the platform on which he will submit his cause to the voters.

Reconstruction problems incident to war, aid for agricultural and livestock interests, economy in government, expression of belief in the principle of State rights, support of the principle of a tariff for revenue only and opposition to government ownership of transportation lines are some of the high notes in the platform which follows:

In announcing for the United States Senate I fully appreciate the responsibilities that go with that great office and I honor it with the greatest of the very best service of my life in the faithful discharge of the duties of the position. I have been a Democrat all my life and believe the principles of Democracy furnish the foundation rock upon which a Government most responsive to the needs of all the people may be perpetuated.

Reconstruction Problems

I appreciate the fact that the next few years will be fraught with weighty problems of reconstruction, the successful solution of which will contribute most helpfully to the relief of the country from the financial depression now gripping it.

First:

The problems of reconstruction, both economic and political, are world wide in their character and by reason of the recent world war, the financial affairs of America have become directly interrelated with that of the other nations of Europe, and I believe that in constructive cooperation lies the solution of the fiscal and financial problems now facing the world and is most vital to the prosperity of our people.

Second:

The financial standard of living values in the exchange of goods of the world is essential to America's foreign trade and I favor such a plan on the part of the Government as will in cooperation with the other nations, steadily raise our standards of living to American levels and industry, and that will encourage all nations to our production in the same way that we produce of our own and that we may be free to sell in the open markets of the world.

Third:

I favor the passage of such legislation as will recognize to the producers of the Nation the right of collective bargaining and of co-operative marketing of the products of the farm and ranch.

Fourth:

I believe in the right of individual ownership of a business, and I favor such legislation as will encourage the production of goods and services, and I favor such legislation as will encourage the production of goods and services, and I favor such legislation as will encourage the production of goods and services.

Fifth:

I strongly urge the creation of a system of intermediate credits, running for one, two and three years, in order that the farmers and stockmen may obtain loans at a fair rate for a sufficient time to enable them to prepare the products of the farm and ranch for suitable markets, and to sell such products when ready and not before.

Sixth:

The War Finance Corporation is a temporary measure only, and as soon as possible it should be replaced by permanent legislation, which will provide a system of credits necessary for the efficient development of the life of the Nation, including all business or industries vital and essential to the prosperity of our people.

Seventh:

The demands of taxation for the support of the Federal Government now lays its burden on almost every home and business in the United States, and I favor the most rigid economy in all Governmental expenditures, a sweeping reduction of the present number of Government employees, the elimination of a large number of Government bureaus now in Washington, and the strictest supervision of all public expenditures.

Eighth:

Real economy in Governmental expenditures can only be accomplished by the elimination of a large per cent of the war budgets, and I, therefore, strongly favor the League of Nations or an Association of Nations that will settle the international disputes through the channels of arbitration and that will limit the amount of money now being spent on the Army and Navy. This is most vital to the happiness and prosperity of the American people.

Ninth:

I believe that compulsory military training is contrary to the traditions and policies of the American Government, and I am, therefore, opposed to universal military training in times of peace. My record in Congress will show that I have voted against every effort that has been made in recent years to force universal military training upon this country.

Tenth:

I believe in State rights and denounce the encroachment of the Federal Government upon the powers and rights reserved unto the States as a menace to our dual form of Government. I favor reserving to the States all right and powers not specifically delegated to the National Government, and insist upon the restoration to the state railroad commissions full power and authority over intrastate commerce heretofore recently exercised by the several State commissions.

Eleventh:

I believe in the highest development of the individual initiative of our citizens and that the Government should not interfere with any business or industry that can be effectively handled by the individual with due regard to the rights of the public. I am opposed to government ownership of railroads, and favor private ownership and control of our transportation facilities under government supervision.

Railroad Rates

To save the business of the country from irreparable injuries, railroad rates must be speedily readjusted and reduced to the end that freight may be moved and commerce restored to its normal efficiency. The overshadowing domestic question that will have to be solved in the immediate future is that relating to the problem of transportation, and to the just solution of these problems I pledge my very best efforts.

Twelfth:

As an aid to transportation wherever economic and practical, I favor Federal appropriation for the purpose of opening the rivers and harbors of the Nation, and the judicious expenditure of money in such enterprises as will contribute most substantially to the Nation's progress.

Thirteenth:

Labor is entitled to a just compensation, and both capital and labor have inalienable rights of collective bargaining, and of speaking through representatives of their own selection, but neither class should at any time take any action that would put in jeopardy the welfare of the people.

Fourteenth:

Franchise and woman suffrage have become firmly established as a part of the constitutional and statutory law of the land and appear to be settled issues, but in order that my position may be clearly understood I wish to say that I have from the beginning consistently opposed both measures not only as State issues, but as National issues as well.

Fifteenth:

I believe that women should receive equal pay with men in all branches of the Federal service in which women are employed and that they should have full representation on all commissions dealing with the work and welfare of female employees.

Sixteenth:

The preservation of the health and welfare of the women and children through maternity and nursing is essential to the highest realization of our nation's aims, and I favor co-operation with our States for the protection of child life through infancy and maternity, and that the right enforcement of all Federal laws prohibiting child labor.

Seventeenth:

Good roads are most vital to the prosperity of our people, will serve to reduce transportation cost, bring about closer co-operation between the cities and agricultural sections, improve farm marketing and are invaluable as an aid to national defense in times of war, and I favor the most liberal appropriations in co-operation with the States for the construction and maintenance of good roads and national highways.

Eighteenth:

I favor the recognition of the Mexican Government just as soon as satisfactory guarantees are made that American life and property will be given full protection, and that the existing Government is able to maintain law and order and meet its national obligations.

Nineteenth:

Irrigation and drainage are essential to the full development of Texas, and I favor such liberal appropriations as will lend encouragement to this great and important work. The Rio Grande, forming the line between Texas and Mexico, must, of course, be handled from an international standpoint, but I shall insist that when a treaty of peace and amity is concluded between the United States and Mexico, that there will be contained in it a provision under which irrigation projects, international in character, may be constructed, and that the people owning land in the valley of the Rio Grande will have their rights to its waters preserved and permanently fixed.

Twentieth:

The unrestricted admission of radical aliens threatens the very foundation of the American Government, and I favor the passage of the most stringent immigration laws, and until such laws are passed by Congress I shall favor the restriction of immigrants to persons of known loyalty to our Government, and to desirable members of divided families, some of whom are already residents of this country.

Opposes Newberry

I denounce the seating Truman H. Newberry as a blow at the purity of the American ballot box, and favor the rigid enforcement of laws limiting the use of money in political campaigns.

Twenty-second:

The Nation can never repay the debt of gratitude it owes to the soldiers of the late war for the sacrifices they made in its behalf, and I favor the most liberal support of the wounded, sick and disabled soldiers and their dependents and the dependents of those who died in the service, and I also favor a liberal policy of vocational educational training which will remove as far as possible the handicaps imposed upon them by reason of their injuries, to the end that they may pursue gainful occupation and enjoy the God-given privileges of having a part at least in the development of the Nation's resources. As an act of justice, and not as a gratuity, I favor a suitable ad-

PLATFORM OF LEE HUMPHREYS CANDIDATE FOR COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION

In asking the voters of Haskell County to elect me to the important office of County Superintendent of Public Instruction, I am submitting a brief outline of my experience and qualifications as a school teacher, together with some of the principles which shall guide me, if elected, in the administration of the affairs of that office.

I have been teaching in the Public Schools of Texas for the past 11 years, 8 years of which have been in the rural schools of Haskell county, and 1 year in the Rochester High School.

So with these nine years of experience as teacher in Haskell County, I believe if anyone is in a position to know the needs of the rural schools of the county I certainly am.

It has been necessary only twice during the time of teaching in this county for me to make application for positions as teacher. Last summer I had offers from nine different schools in this county, including every school at which I had taught. Those desiring further information concerning my ability and success as a teacher, please get in communication with any reliable patron of any of the communities in which I have taught.

I have had training in John Tarleton and Simmons Colleges and graduated from the Dublin High School with 21 credits.

I shall advocate:

1. Classification of rural schools:
Requiring a completion of a given amount of work in a specified time with a reasonable average, thus placing these schools on a more equal basis with town and city schools.
2. A closer relation between home and school through the organization of Girls and Boys Clubs, Parent-Teachers Association, etc.
3. The Compulsory Attendance Law to be so amended that it can be better enforced and in such a way that it will not be oppressive on the parent who really has the education of his child at heart.
4. A permanent State Aid for rural schools, with a more equitable distribution.
5. More practical rural schools—homes for teachers—small farms for the students as a help in solving the problem of rural schools, where two-thirds of the children of Texas are trained for citizenship.
6. The schools should be operated as any other business enterprise, therefore I shall advocate the strictest economy in the administration, consistent with efficient service. Economy and efficiency shall be the watchwords of the administration.
7. The teachers salaries should be such that will induce our best teachers to remain in the profession, and based on services rendered, and the prompt payment of same when due and without discount.
8. That special provisions be made to pay the tuition of those from the rural districts who attend the high schools in cities or towns.
9. The business of making good Americans is the sacred obligation of the public free schools of this Nation, therefore every teacher must be a loyal and patriotic citizen and every school, however large or small, must be a center radiating the sound and sane principles of a democratic and representative government.

It shall be my policy to be courteous, straight-forward and prompt in all my dealing with the people in connection with the affairs of that office.

—LEE HUMPHREYS.

Haskell University Club Banquet

Because of the inclemency of the weather March second, the University Club banquet was held on the evening of March tenth. At seventy-three the crowd assembled at the Library from whence they went in a body to the Midget Cafe.

The long banquet table was beautifully decorated; attractive place cards marked covers for twenty-five guests; dainty rose baskets filled with nuts were used as favors. A most delightful five-course dinner was served. Misses Mary Ella Pace, Lois Killingsworth, Lucy Cummins, and Artie Mae Weaver, four members of the Domestic Economy class, were kind enough to do the serving.

A stringed orchestra furnished music, playing familiar University airs, recalling to everyone pleasant memories of by-gone days.

After dinner the crowd repaired to the library for a business session. The president, Mr. Bailey Post, called for the election of officers. The following were elected: President, Mr. Bailey Post, Vice-President, Mrs. J. D. Westbrook of Rule, Secretary, Mrs. A. M. Hughes, Treasurer, Mr. Oscar Oates, Reporter, Mrs. J. U. Fields, Membership Committee, Messrs. John Pace, Marvin Post, Clyde Grissom.

The president announced the speech of the occasion would be delivered by one of the youngest and most promising members—Mr. Clyde Grissom. In a clear, well-cut, forceful manner Mr. Grissom spoke of the dear old University—of all its trials, tribulations, and triumphs. He urged this club to ever uphold before the people the ideals of the State University of Texas.

Mrs. Elkins spoke of the close fellowship that should exist between the University Club members and the University.

Score cards were passed and the crowd enjoyed several lively games of "42." The success of this affair was due to the enthusiasm and energy of its most capable president, Mr. Bailey Post.

The following were present: Messrs. James Clyde Elkins, John W. Pace, A. M. Hughes, Virgil Meadors, J. D. Westbrook of Rule, J. U. Fields, Misses Cleo King, Alberta Smith, Mary Long, Vivian Smith, Laura Lee Langford, Eunice Huckabee, Jeannette Graham; Messrs. Bailey and Marvin Post, John W. Pace, A. M. Hughes, Virgil Meadors, Oscar Oates, Alden Lamm, Clyde Grissom, J. U. Fields and Dr. Westbrook of Rule.

THE LEAN

By MOLLIE MATHER

We girls had been the happiest little crowd until Celia Warren came among us. She was visiting the Livingstons when we met her, and after that, she and her snobbish old aunt came and rented the Ballie's flat, the Ballies were south for the winter. As a rule, we girls welcome a stranger, and try to make her enjoy herself. But if Celia Warren needed any one's assistance in enjoying herself, I hadn't noticed it. The trouble was, she let nothing stand in the way of her enjoyment; other people's hurt feelings or things like that did not give her the slightest concern. In fact, we learned later that hurt feelings were part of Miss Celia's enjoyment, yes, really. Else why did she walk Dora Barr's beloved Billy up and down before the Barr home, after she had unfairly taken him away from Dora?

That was why we heartily disliked Celia Warren when we knew her unfairness. Perhaps she reasoned that "all is fair in love and war." But she had not been with us a month before we were quarrelling with each other—we who had been so peacefully chummy.

Dora and Billy were the first to separate. It seemed that Celia Warren told Billy things which he should have known true little Dora never said. And the last to drop each other's society were Ted and I, and I never would have believed that Ted could be such a goose.

When Ted started out in business, I wasn't a bit surprised that he asked me to marry him, while Dad agreed, cheerfully and resignedly, as a matter of course.

But like Dora and Billy, and Nell and her Jackie, Ted and I had decided not to announce our engagement until nearer the somewhat distant marriage time.

Then all at once Celia Warren blew in like a mischievous cyclone and mixed things all up.

"Sallie dear," Celia Warren said to me with her annoying, amused smile, "Why in the world do you let Ted Loring be so dead sure of your affection for him. If a man were as sure and conceited about his power over me, I'd show him, I would. Why, when he was talking to me at the party last night I said, jokingly, 'You'd better go and find Sallie or some other handsome man will take her to supper,' and Ted laughed, a queer sort of laugh it was and said, 'Oh, I will find Sallie alright, just where I left her.' That new Le Strange man has a bit of crush on you, too, Sallie," Celia added, "though it would be hard to make your Ted believe that."

So I did just what Nell and Dora had done under the same provocation—I determined to show Ted Loring that he need not be so conceitedly sure of me, after all. I talked to that Le Strange man so long at our next gathering that he insisted upon taking me into supper, while Ted walked off laughing, with Celia Warren.

So she added another conquest—and had another man, as days passed, leaning over the piano joking with her as she played, while we three deserted girls sat, like wall flowers, back on the divan.

"If Jackie only would not take in everything that girl says," lamented Nell. "He wouldn't attach himself to her train if it wasn't in plique against me."

Gentle Dora's tone was actually spiteful. "When Celia Warren talks about the wonderful places she has been and the noted people who entertained her and the great musicians whom she accompanies, well, I just wish I could face her with her lie."

Nell sat up. "That's it," she exclaimed wrathfully. "If we could show those inebriate unhappy boys that she is untruthful in one thing, they might guess that she's been untruthful too, concerning us."

The music ceased abruptly and Celia Warren swung around on the piano stool. "Fine," she praised my obtuse Ted "you sing as well as Georger." Georger was being honozed in our town just then.

"Did you every hear the Dean of Hampton sing, Miss Warren?" I suddenly asked. "Probably not. Hampton was our college. Dora, Nell and I went through together."

"The Dean is really celebrated as a singer. You took up music, I believe you said, at our Hampton one year! Of course then, you know Dean Gordon."

"Oh, yes," Celia Warren answered carelessly. She looked up at the three boys impressively. "I have often played for him," she told them. "And he was mighty good looking. Such wonderful dark eyes. He used to take me around a lot though it wasn't in accordance with college rules. You see, I had the happy excuse of playing his accompaniments."

It was then that I stood up dramatically. "Which," I remarked clearly, "is at very strange, Miss Warren, inasmuch as the Dean of Hampton college is a woman, a small blonde woman, Elizabeth Gordon."

It was mean and stooping to Celia Warren's level, too, but there are times when a lesson is necessary. And I must admit that there was no regret in our crowd when Miss Celia moved on to an adjacent town and we resumed our old happy ways.

Baptist Missionary Society The Baptist Missionary Society met Monday afternoon with only a few ladies present. On account of sickness in her family, the regular leader for the afternoon, Mrs. G. W. Waldrop, was unable to be present. Mr. Will Kirkpatrick took charge and after a short devotional we entered into our study of Missions in China.

When the recital was over, I was present at a tone-test in which Prihoda's actual playing was compared with his Re-Creation by the Edison Phonograph. Three Tariff Views
Twenty-third:
There are three, and only three, well defined views concerning the tariff, and they are:
(1) Tariff for protection; (2) tariff for revenue only; and (3) equalized free trade. It is probable that Democrat would adhere to the Republican doctrine of tariff for protection, because that iniquitous theory of the tariff would enrich a few at the expense of the great body of the American consumers, considering the great amount of revenue that will have to be raised to support the Government in the years to come the theory of free trade is wholly impracticable. I therefore, believe in the Democratic doctrine of a tariff for revenue only, but as long as there is to be a tariff even for revenue levied upon the finished products then I shall ask and insist that it be an American tariff, which lays its burdens equitably and fall upon all classes, upon all sections and upon all industries, and not a New England tariff, which seeks to protect the New England manufacturers at the expense of the great body of the American people.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER HONORING MISS RUTH PAYNE

A miscellaneous shower was given Tuesday evening in the beautiful new home of Mrs. H. S. Post, honoring Miss Ruth Payne, who is soon to become a bride. Mrs. Marvin Post greeted the guests as they entered, and ushered them into the adjoining room where the receiving line stood, composed of the hostess, Miss Payne, Mesdames H. S. Post, J. W. Roberts, Jno. A. Couch, J. L. Fields, Lynn Pace, Courtney Hunt, B. M. Whiteker, H. S. Wilson, Herman Nicholson, Clyde Elkins, Jno. R. Mauldin, and D. L. Cummins.
The bride-to-be wore a lovely custom crepe dress of canna color with corsage of sweet peas and beautiful black picture hat and gloves to match. The pretty dresses seemed to blend in nicely with the pink and white decorations of the spacious living room, which was especially attractive. Above the mantle was arranged an arch of white lattice work, interwoven with ivy, thickly studded with pink roses. A drape of the same design hung over the large front windows and the double doors leading into the dining room. The electric lights, with their soft pink shades, from which drooped trailing vines and roses, presented much the appearance of flower baskets, and these, with the bright wood fire in the grate diffused a warm glow over the rooms, as the subdued tones of the victrola lent enchantment to the whole.
Under the bower of flowers in the front window was placed the bride's chair, also a small table holding a dainty bride's book in which were written the good wishes of each friend present. After all had registered, Mrs. Marvin Post gave a beautiful piano solo, Miss Marylee Pinkerton sang "So Holy, Sweet and Fair" and Mrs. Virgil Meadors played an appropriate selection on the violin. Then followed the toasts—to the bride by Mrs. J. W. Roberts: "I am glad to say a word on this happy occasion to one who has been so sincere a friend, so faithful in her office duties and wonderful in the home she is leaving. May she be as great a blessing to the new home, making of it for her husband an Eden wherein the rosary of love is said; being to him what the diamond is to gold, the fragrance to the rose and the sunlight to the day. We have not all had the good fortune to be wise, rich nor beautiful, but when the toast works down to brides we stand on common ground for we have all been brides or want to be. So here's to the years that are stretching ahead—as you travel today by your chosen way, with your chosen mate by your side. Our wishes, our hopes and prayers are yours, Oh dear little, true little bride."
To the groom, Miss Elsie Killingsworth: "If she had a hundred hearts, she would break them all for him; And if she had but a single kiss, she would give it to him for a moment of bliss. If she had a hundred dreams—he could make them all come true; For she never knew what this world was for, till she fell in love with him."
To the girls that are left behind Miss Eunice Huckabee: "We're time to lose and the power to choose, but till we're quite sure only love is worth our thinking. We'll live alone for those we love, for those that know us true; for the heaven that smiles above us and waits our coming too; for the cause that needs assistance, for the future in the distance, and for the good that we can do. So here's to the girls that are left behind—the maids of twenty-two."

Just here Master Carl attired as a little white a tiny automobile into the front of which was perched Audra Gayle Roberts, a cupid, with bow and arrow. One feel they were in a land. The car, which was tiful with its covering, stopped just in front of chair, with its burden of These included many beautiful pairs of pillow cases, a pair of gappkins, towels, etc., also some pieces of cut glass and a number of useful aluminum. In responding Miss Payne said:
"Friends! How unbecoming of the word! And I made to realize more the friends and friendship of the five years that I have home in your midst I have personal contact with of sometimes in joy and sorrow, but today, as you strengthen the bonds of my Haskell friends and my next milestone on life's center on the new path these lovely and useful gifts my days the happier and as a constant reminder of in later years other gifts me, they can never have affluence as these, which strongest link between the happy years which are to
"To the matrons who today, may I wish you may the future bring blessings life can hold. I'm soon to leave behind be of good cheer; for what you hear, so don't get faint by the way, wait, don't sigh; the conquered, should lead to try."
Mrs. W. M. Reid, assisted Marylee Pinkerton, Helen Shook, Louise B. Whiteker and Mrs. J. W. ed pink and white bride white cake to the nuptial. The favors were dainty couples.
