

NICHOLS' WORTH

By: Nanalee Nichols

My company has gone on to tour more of the United States now, and soon will be home in England once more.

We had a lovely time, introducing them to Texas, and learning about life in another country.

Most of us are aware that we have a much higher standard of living than the average third world nation...but perhaps are not so aware of the differences between ourselves and a civilized nation like England.

Here is a short list of some of the things that make a difference in our lives and theirs:

My guests worried constantly about the electric bill. A fan, or lights left on, bothered them. The air conditioner quite stunned them.

They refused to use the electric clothes dryer because of the waste of electricity. The average Londoner does not own a washer and dryer, and they don't run down to the nearest laundromat either. Instead, they wash in their bathtub, using a little spin dryer to wring them out, hanging the laundry out of window lines or in the kitchen during the frequent rainy spells.

Hot water heaters do not provide hot water all the time for them...but have timers that provide heated water for about two hours, during which time bathing and laundry is done. It is simply too expensive to operate one all the time.

Phones are a luxury, and so is warmth in winter! Many gas meters accept coins, and when the coins run out, so does the heat.

The average senior citizen doesn't keep overly warm in winter, and lives in one room to conserve heat.

The idea of almost everyone owning a car, or of a family of two adults owning two vehicles was startling to them. When they discovered how many high school students take cars to school, they were completely overwhelmed.

They shop with little carts and walk miles and miles. Driving a few blocks between stores seemed funny to them.

Bread and margarine seem to be about the only cheap foods, although meat is eaten, it isn't consumed in the quantities we eat it.

Salaries are low in comparison to ours. A highly trained computer operator makes about the equivalent of $175 per week before taxes. Compare that to our computer personnel!

Most refrigerators are small, many have no freezer at all. Shopping is done on a daily basis.

They find things in the U.S. rather "dear" (expensive) and wonder how people can afford so very much.

They find the standard of living amazing. The simple frame houses that we accept as a normal part of life they find luxuriously large, with lawns and gardens hundreds of times bigger than theirs.

Very little property is privately owned, most rental is through the council, a form of the government.

Buying a house is expensive and quite beyond the means of the average wage earner.

The people just like us, with the same dreams, the same hopes as we have. The big difference, it seems is in the attainability of those dreams.

For the average American, things sometimes seem a little rough. Owning a big home, a new car, requires a lot of work.

For the average English citizen, those things require more than a little work...they require years and years of waiting, hoping, filling out forms and then, more than likely, doing without.

Believe me, the American dream is still alive and well...just ask anyone who isn't privileged enough to have been born here!

The banquet hall was decorated in the Western Theme and a delicious barbeque meal was served to more than 50 guests, which included her immediate family, former administrators, co-workers and friends.

Mrs. Huddleston began her teaching career at Fulbright High School which was later consolidated with the Bogata schools and eventually became Talco-Bogata Cons. I.S.D., where she will receive her 32 year certificate at the end of this year. Her other seven years teaching were with Deport, Cunningham and East Lamar schools in Lamar County.

The program for the evening consisted of a skit prepared by Nadine Caldwell, who played the part of the counselor and members of Rivercrest faculty, who were her students with many problems. Buford Hervey, high school principal, served as Master of Ceremonies and read a history of Mrs. Huddleston's teaching career. He introduced Travis Hale and Talmadge Morgan, former superintendents of Talco-Bogata schools and Harold Cowley, present superintendent, Frank Stubblefield, speaking for the group, presented a money tree to Mrs. Huddleston from Talco-Bogata employees and friends. She also was presented an envelope from her three sons and husband to be added to the money tree.

Mrs. Huddleston has been a long time member of Texas State Teachers Association, Texas Personnel and Guidance Association, Texas Association of Counseling and Development, Northeast Texas Counselor's Association, Northeast Texas Teachers Federal Credit Union and was selected Who's Who in American Education.

End-Of-School Memories

By Mollie Williams

At this time of the year, I'm always flooded with an onslaught of memories of school days gone by. The end of school parties, proms and graduation exercises, all seem to bring alive those recollections that have been dormant in my mind for so long.

Driving by the elementary and junior high buildings, and gazing out across the playground, I pull pictures from the files of my mind of those last few days of school, just before my eighth grade graduation. We would all gather in and around that big old oak tree on the west side of the junior high building and laugh and talk and dream. If that old tree could talk, I bet it could really tell some tales. Some, perhaps, we wouldn't want to share.

That tree probably had a great influence on many a puppy-love affair. There's just something about a huge shade tree, a soft May breeze blowing, and the end of school that can cause thirteen and fourteen year olds to fall in love, for a while, anyway!

We'd manage, somehow, to discuss everything from hair-dos to summer vacations, and make eyes at two or three of the boys before we'd hear that familiar voice of Mable Hale's calling "Come in boys and girls".

I hope they never have to cut that old tree down, because some of my roots are buried with it and each time I go to the school and look across the grounds at it, I can once again, in my mind, be fourteen and relive those happy, carefree years that meant so much to me.

An Editorial

For this paper to reprint a column by another columnist at another paper is highly unusual. But the column on the Red River County Water problem written by John A. Moseley on April 23 said such a mouthful that we decided to reprint it so that our readers could consider it...with permission from John, of course. Editor.

By John A. Moseley

No, I'm not Zero Mostel, and the Clarksville Kiwanis Club isn't exactly the Forum, but a funny thing, if you can call anything this serious funny, happened during Tuesday's lunch meeting of that body.

It suddenly struck me that it was ridiculous that Red River Countians should be facing the water crisis they now face.

Crisis, you ask?

Certainly. And to be honest, I hadn't even realized how serious the crisis was until Kyle Harvey made his presentation supporting the proposed Dimple Reservoir on White Oak Bayou Project.

How many Clarksville residents are aware that the State of Texas continually labels the city's tap water as being "unfit for human consumption". You can wash clothes in it, you can take a bath in it, but you shouldn't drink it.

There's only one real problem with that, we all DO drink it, don't we? Even those of us who don't live in Clarksville have ample occasion to taste the city's strong-tasting water.

Me? I live in Detroit. But I spend more time in Clarksville, because that's where I work. As a result, I'm sure I consume more Clarksville water than that provided by the City of Detroit.

That, friends, is scary.

Looks like I just thought The Times' business manager, Delaine Williams, was a little strange when she steadfastly refused to make the office coffee without using distilled water. Pretty smart lady, if you ask me.

Wish I could say the same for the county's decisionmakers that have held sway for the last several years.

Sure, sure...I know all about those artesian wells Clarksville and some other cities hereabouts draw their water from. They used to provide pure water...more than anyone could have believed would have ever been needed.

"Last a lifetime." I believe is the way Harvey put it.

They didn't now did they?

What's that you folks over there in Detroit say? You're getting your water from the Lamar County Water Supply Corporation? So's the 410 Water Supply.

Avery, Annona and Red River County Water Supply get theirs from Texarkana?

Well, looks like everybody but the folks in Clarksville are set, right? And heck, we've never trusted those folks in Clarksville, have we? Not interested in getting involved in anything they're interested in doing, might wind up having to pay for something only they'd use.

Look again.

Correct me if I'm wrong, but every one of those entities purchasing water from other concerns is contractually required to purchase water for a certain period of time. That means that you're going to have water for 40 years if the contract says you have to buy it for that length of time, right?

Wrong, again. Take another look. I'll bet the selling agency can curtail sales at any time with only a short period of notice. I'll also bet there's nothing in this world that can stop them from doubling or tripling the price they charge for that water, too. Couldn't happen?

Check again. The City of Texarkana gets a large amount of its water from Arkansas lakes, and it just so happens that there is a current move underway in the Arkansas Legislature that would prohibit sale of that state's water to entities in other states. Imagine, if you will, what that would do to Texarkana's method of doing business.

Of course, there's no problem with the Lamar County Water Supply. They buy their water from the City of Paris, which gets its water from Pat Mayse Lake.

Paris is growing. So's Lamar County. In fact, Lamar County's rural areas are growing at a much faster rate than the city can claim.

Oh, yes, have you happened to note the growth taking place in the Texarkana area lately? Nuff said.

The bottom line is: We don't have our own lake. Not one that can provide for our communities.

Of course, there are those who'll claim that disasters of the aforementioned nature could never come to pass.

Sure about that? Just ask the folks down in Cooper.

They had all the water that town would ever need. All of a sudden, though, there was a crisis. They wound up having to run 20 miles of piping over ground to buy water from Sulphur Springs. In the interim, they hauled water, went down to the square and filled plastic jugs from a tanker truck parked downtown.

"You don't know hardship until you have to haul water in five gallon buckets to flush the toilet," one woman once told me. I haven't forgotten that, and one of us should.

What's worse is the fact that Red River County is the second-poorest county in Texas. Only Rains County is worse off.

Delta County, of which Cooper is the county seat, used to be the poorest. It's residents had allowed the entire community to virtually die as they waited for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to fulfill a 30-year old promise to build Cooper Lake.

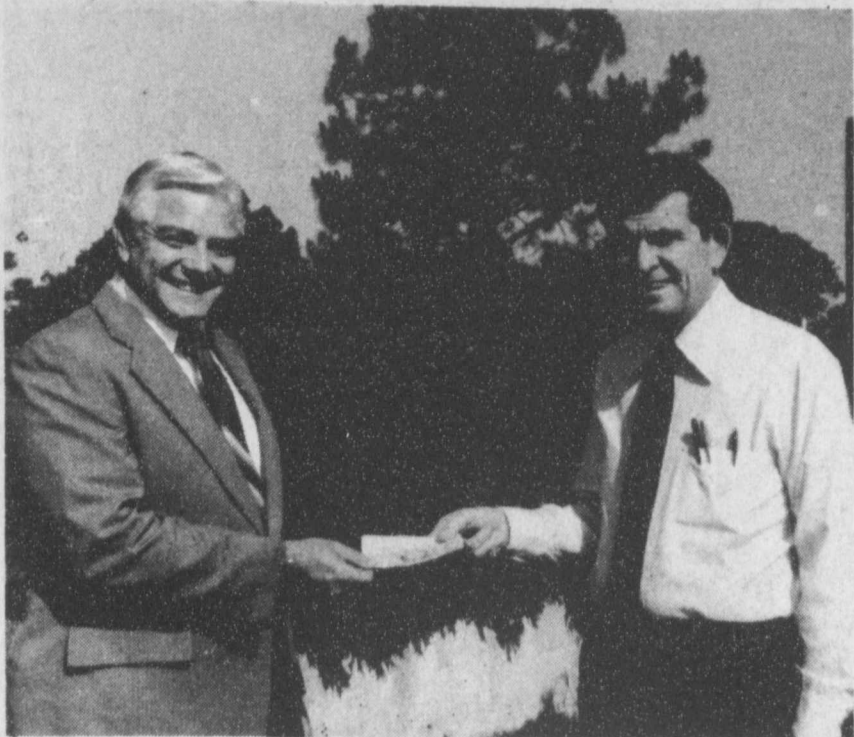

They finally got tired of waiting, formed a municipal utilities district (MUD) and began making plans to build their own lake.

They're now getting ready to break ground on that project, and already new industry is beginning to locate in Cooper, simply because it is known that water will soon be available.

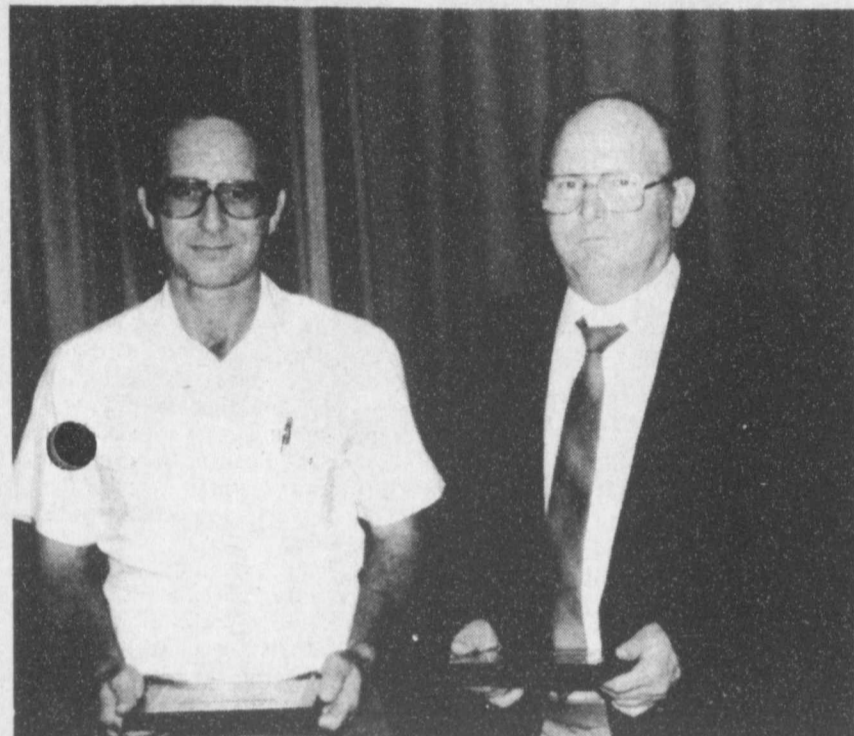

As a result, Delta County has leaptfrogged to where it is no longer close to being the state's poorest county.

Good grief, Charlie Brown, you mean we're poorer than Delta County?

Shame on us.

Open House Red River General Hospital

Red River General Hospital invites the public to attend their Open House Sunday, May 18 from 2 to 4 p.m. during National Hospital week, celebrating their 10th anniversary in the present facility. All departments will be open and refreshments will be served. The hospital's scrapbooks may be reviewed in the Board Room. Air Life helicopter, based in St. Michaels, will be on the grounds for inspection.

The hospital, originally known as Red River County Hospital, opened in July, 1937, the beginning of hospital care for residents of the county. Of interest to all were the rates set for end rooms at $6.00, a room with a clothes closet at $5.00 and all others at $4.00 per day. This was not the first hospital as two hospitals were previously operated on a private physician basis.

In 1938, the hospital became a member of the Texas Hospital Association and has remained a member for nearly 30 years. The first Hospital Auxiliary group was formed in October, 1961 and has served the hospital nearly 25 years.

Red River General Hospital, consisting of 66 beds, was completed in July, 1976. It is happy to note that this facility is free of tax support and has been serving the public for nearly 10 years under the direction of the Red River General Hospital Authority and has been accredited by Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals since 1966. It provides a wide range of health care services: including Physical Therapy, Respiratory Therapy, Nuclear Medicine and Home Health Services.

Bud Pyron of Bogata True Value Hardware and V&S Variety recently joined more than 6,000 True Value Hardware Store owners at their 77th Red Carpet Market and Convention, and more than 1,000 V&S Variety Store owners at their 25th market held in Chicago April 14-25. The Market theme was "Tradition of Excellence," reflecting the proud, impressive history of independent True Value Hardware and V&S Variety retailers as well as their own 100% retailer-owned low-cost wholesale distributing and merchandising organization, Cotter and Company.

Orders were placed for fall, winter and Christmas merchandise at special low costs from hundreds of manufacturers displaying their product lines. Manufacturers' displays covered 200,000 square feet of floor space at the Convention Center.

Pyron and fellow members also reviewed new industry trends, approved new items and attended several product knowledge seminars.

National and regional True Value advertising for the fall, winter and Christmas seasons were also previewed. Spokespersons Pat Summerrall and Paul Harvey will continue to broadcast the True Value message to millions of consumers every day of the year.

Member interest in new True Value exclusive brands continues to build. New items were added to already established exclusive lines, including Tru-Test Paints, Tru-Bond adhesives, Snow Chief snow throwers, Master Electrician electrical supplies, Master Plumber plumbing supplies, Master Mechanic hand and power tools and Harvard Cutlery. Increased buying of True Value exclusive brands indicates increased consumer acceptance of these lines.

Go West

A Continuation Of The True Recollections of Agnes Moore

By Agnes Provenge Moore

We had only gone a few miles, just past Maple when we saw some of our best friends "cutting persimmon sprouts" in the field. We waved goodbye to them, and more tears flowed. Incidentally, one in that field that day, many years later, became my husband.

We spent the night in Cuthand with relatives and left early the next morning. Finally on our way to West Texas. When night came close, we would look for a good place to camp, where the tent could be set up, and the team could have water and a place to graze. There was a three burner oil stove, which when the wind was not blowing, mama could cook our meals on it. That kerosene stove was quite a novelty to us as we'd never had one before. Another great attraction to we children was the loaf bread, store bought. My mother had baked bread, but this was so different, and with white karo syrup, it was really a delicacy to us, for a while. Then we didn't want that white bread and karo syrup.

After traveling the first week, camping at night, leaving fairly early to travel while it was cool, we began to feel like real pilgrims. We were east of Sherman one day and had set up camp when the man who lived nearby came out to see if the family would like to hoe cotton. Needless to say, all the family were not willing, but since our parents were, we agreed. The week of traveling and camping out in the open air had helped Papa so much, also my sister, Gracie, who had not been well, was improving. While we were working for a week, I would stay at camp with my mom and help get the dinner ready and Papa and Gracie would hoe cotton while it was cooler, and mama and I would work in the p.m. We all remember that week, I'm sure for several reasons. The best one was that our Papa was so much improved and could enjoy working, and another reason the young couple we were working for had a baby daughter about the same age of our little niece we had left behind. When we were not working, we could play with her.

We traveled the old 82 highway. Farmers along the way were friendly. Several times a man and woman would come out and stop us and offer fresh vegetables, etc. And one dear lady asked my mom if we could use some milk. We had not had very much milk on our trip so far. She gave us two large buckets of clabber milk! When we stopped for the night, my mother fried cornbread and we had a feast on bread and milk.

There were lots of excitement in our trip, one night we were all asleep when a storm came up. The tent began to shake and rain fell. Before we could all get things in the wagon, the bedclothes were all wet, for the tent had blown over. Also water had

Chapman Pushes Bill To Limit Foreign Investments

U.S. Rep. Jim Chapman (D-Texas) charged recently that new foreign investments, which are getting tax breaks and subsidies from the U.S. government, are crushing the domestic dairy industry.

"After all of the efforts we have made to address the problem of surplus dairy production, we are allowing foreign entities to invest in new milk production on our soil," said Chapman.

"Not only are we allowing this new foreign investment in an industry with a serious surplus, our government is actually providing federal financial encouragement to make those investments, thus using taxpayer funds to support the price and guarantee a market for the surplus milk."

Chapman made his remarks as he announced his cosponsorship of two important pieces of legislation designed to limit the use of federal tax dollars and tax loopholes for foreign agriculture investments.

One bill, H.R. 4519, would prohibit foreigners from receiving any benefits under U.S. Department of Agriculture crop insurance, Farmers Home Administration and other price support or programs administered by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

The second bill, H.R. 4520, would eliminate the federal tax exempt status of any Industrial Development Bond used to finance the purchase, construction or improvement of farm property by foreign persons.

Spring Is Time To Study Cow Herd

By Herb Brevard

Recent rains in East Texas brought about an abundance of lush, green grass. Most calves are on the ground and the breeding season is underway. This is the time when cattle management is relatively easy, but certain chores demand our utmost attention, says Dr. Randall Grooms, livestock specialist.

Grooms suggests studying the cow herd. Note and record the cows in estrus and check those cows three weeks later to be sure the bull is doing his job. Numerous repeat cycles are indicative of breeding problems. Observe the bull during the breeding act to be sure of libido, lack of physical restrictions and general activity.

When the calves are two to three months old, branding, dehorning, castration, implanting and vaccination for clostridial diseases are necessary management chores. At this age, most calves are vaccinated with the three way blackleg vaccine.

Grooms points out that these management practices are proven to pay dividends without great costs over than time and labor. Many cat-

Deep In The Heart...Of Texas

By Britt T. Morgan

Texas-Deep in the Heart of... What do you think of when you hear the word "Texas"? Do you think of yourself? Do you think of J.R. Ewing? Or maybe Big Tex of State Fair fame? Well, I think of the sunset surrounding a cowboy-hatted figure on horseback riding into it...of high school football capturing the hearts and minds of communities on fall Friday nights and headlines Sunday mornings...of long, rolling hills with wild flowers, scattered trees, a few cows and an oil well breaking the silence of an otherwise quiet scene...of chili cook offs and barbecues on Saturday afternoon before the finals of local rodeos...of a deep breath of fresh air to clear the mind and strengthen a sense of pride that only a Texan can feel. And then I think of the city.

Of Yew-stun (Houston to you Yankees), Dallas (home of J.R.), Ft. Worth (cowtown of Stockyard fame), San Antonio (Remember the Alamo), El Paso (the only Texas city in another time zone), Austin (Gig'em Aggies, no, that's Hook 'em Horns). I see miles and miles of concrete lawns where the trees are planted for beautification purposes and horses and cows are only seen in pictures. The contrast in these two lifestyles is as different as night and day, yet the people that live in these lifestyles share a common bond, they are Texans. To foreigners (that is anyone who lives outside Texas or who used to) we Texans appear to be "stuck on" our state and our heritage, but that is just pride.

Pride in the largest state in the U.S. (Mainland). Pride in the only state that was once a completely independent country. Pride in the only state that can claim five distinct climates. Pride in boots 'n jeans 'n cowboy hats. Pride in being the friendliest people in the world. (Where else in the world can two perfect strangers carry on a conversation like they've known each other for years...in an elevator). Pride in being Texan.

Yes, we Texans have much to be proud about and this week we have something else to add to the list. Monday we turned 150 years old. On April 21, 1836, Sam Houston, leader of the

This accident happened here in Ponca City, OK last July. It stunned the town of 30,000 because things like this usually happen in the winter time.

It was very humid and no breeze the night when Jeff Norman, 16, and Kristen Streeter, 17, went out for an evening at the movies. Before taking her home, Jeff parked a short distance from his home. This was about 10:30 p.m. Where he parked the car, the grass was tall, therefore, air could not circulate under the car. He left the motor running with the air conditioner on. The investigators said in five minutes the brain was paralyzed and in ten minutes they were dead.

Kristen was to spend the night with a friend so her parents were not worried at the time Jeff's parents became alarmed. They called Jeff's friends to see when they had seen him last and found that he was with Kristen. They called Kristen's parents which in turned called her friend. That's when everyone became alarmed and went searching. The fathers found the car and their children sitting up with Jeff's arm around her shoulder, but it was far, far, too late.

Carbon monoxide is just as deadly in the summer as winter. You can't see it, smell it, or hear it. It is a silent killer, so keep some fresh air coming into the car all the time. The investigators said babies are so vulnerable because they are often placed in the back seat snuggled in blankets and fresh air can't get to them.

Please stress that your child always let someone know where they plan to be. If it's with friends and they are late getting to their house, call the parents and find out if they decided to go home instead.

The boy and girl I've described in this tragedy were Barry Jeffries' dearest friends. It wasn't just the young that were stunned, but so many adults that said, "I didn't know that could happen, just never gave it a thought," or "I thought that just happened in the winter with the heater."

Your paper reaches out and touches many lives, so maybe you can shorten this and put it in your paper. I enjoy the paper and always look forward to your Nichol's Worth. Keep up the good work. Sincerely, Jerri Jeffries

Rust Epidemic Didn't Hit Here

Apparently, wheat producers in Northeast Texas have been spared a major leaf rust epidemic this year, says Dr. George Philley, plant pathologist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The Gulf Coast area and central and southwest Texas had heavy leaf rust development.

Philley says that leaf rust was late in reaching Northeast Texas, the wheat crop was well advanced when the disease appeared. There may be further infection, but the wheat is generally at a growth stage where leaf rust will do minimal damage.

More root-rot was observed in wheat fields this year. Symptoms include areas of the fields showing white heads which indicated premature death of the plants. Most of the root-rot damage was found in fields that have been in wheat for several years without rotation and generally under minimum tillage. Rotation is a good control practice for root-rot.

Hilley says that lots of turf problems have shown up this spring. Much of the grass, particularly centipede, is yellowing and some did not put out this year. Brown patch is probably an important cause of these conditions. Infection last fall probably continued throughout the mild winter. Control of brown patch with proper fungicides will help, but some areas may need to be reseeded or sodded. Brown patch becomes less active when night temperatures rise above 70 degrees.

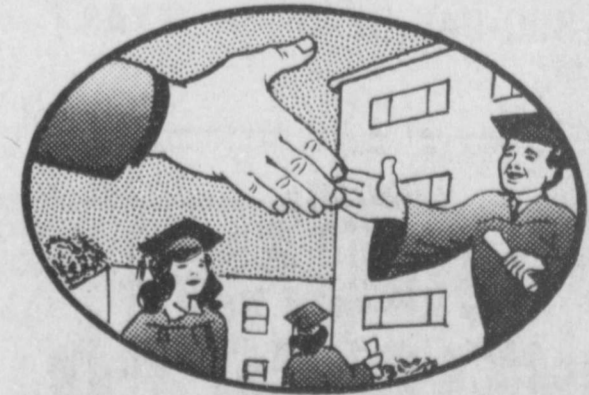

Remember? That great autumn smell of a baked apple dessert in the oven. These are just as sticky good as when you were a kid.

BAKED APPLE DELUXE

- 1 can (8-1/4 oz.) Dole Crushed Pineapple in Syrup
- 6 large baking apples
- 1/4 cup chopped nuts
- 1/2 cup dark brown sugar, packed
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon

Drain pineapple, reserving all syrup. Core apples. Combine pineapple and nuts; spoon into center of apples. Add enough hot water to reserved syrup to make 1/2 cup liquid. Stir in brown sugar and cinnamon until sugar dissolves. Pour over apples in baking dish. Bake in 350° F oven 50 to 60 minutes. Spoon sauce over apples once while baking. Serve with cream, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

The Founding of Austin

A.C. GREENE
TEXAS SKETCHES

Austin alone among Texas cities was founded on beauty, the inspiration of Mirabeau Buonaparte Lamar, an impulsive soldier-poet who became President of the Republic of Texas.

In 1837 when he was vice president under Sam Houston, Lamar decided to take a vacation from both President Houston and the new capital city named for him. There was no love lost between Old Sam and Lamar. Someone suggested Lamar hunt buffalo on the Colorado River above Bastrop, so with his private secretary, the Reverend Edward Fontaine, he set out for that Indian-haunted frontier. They got an escort of six rangers from Fort Colorado, near the river of that name, and rode beside the Colorado upstream to where Jacob Harrell had created a little stockade settlement he called Waterloo. Harrell welcomed the hunters and early on the morning following their arrival, his young son woke everybody shouting that the prairie was full of buffalo.

bull any of the hunters had seen, dropping the animal in a valley where Congress Avenue and Seventh Street would someday cross in downtown Austin. Later the hunting party was assembled by bugle to the hill where the capitol now stands, and Lamar, stirred by the magnificent scenery, exclaimed to Fontaine, "This should be the seat of Future Empire!"

Lamar was elected President in 1838 and one of his first official acts was to appoint a commission to locate a site for a new capital nearer the center of the Republic—nobody but Old Sam and the local merchants liked Houston. In April 1839, when the commission reported, Waterloo (which Lamar recommended) was the unanimous choice. The Republic paid $3 an acre for land and the erection of government buildings began in mid-May and the town lot sale was held August 1. Lamar and cabinet arrived October 17, 1839 to find an instant city waiting
