J. W. HARRIS ANNOUNCES FOR COMMISSIONER PRECINCT 2

We are authorized this week to place the name of J. W. Harris in our announcement column as a candidate for Commissioner Precinct No. 2, subject to the action of the Democratic primary in July.

Mr. Harris is a progressive farmer, having lived 6 miles north of Weimer for the past 21 years, coming to Haskell County in 1901, therefore he needs no introduction to the majority of the voters of this precinct. He has never asked for an office before and is making this race on the strong solicitation of his many friends who promise him their support. He is well qualified to fill the office to which he aspires.

If elected to this office we are sure it will be his pleasure to serve the people of Precinct No. 2 to the best of his ability, with honesty, faithfulness and appreciation. He asks that you give his candidacy due and careful consideration before casting your ballot in July.

Mr. and Mrs. M. N. Sively and J. Frank Sively were the week end guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Therwanger of Weimer.

FUNDS AVAILABLE FOR 46,000 MILES OF ROADS

The $250,000,000 appropriated by Congress as Federal aid in conjunction with state funds will result in the construction of about 46,000 miles of road, says the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture. This mileage would parallel the railroad from New York to San Francisco nearly 15 times, or, if divided equally among the states, would give nearly 1,000 to each state.

The status of road building on April 30 was as follows: In projects entirely complete, a total of 16,375 miles; under construction, 13,950 miles in projects, averaging 62 per cent complete. A considerable part of the latter mileage is actually complete and in service. In addition, funds have been allotted to 7,511 miles, much of which will come under construction during the present season. Besides this there is still available for new projects $60,148,000, which on the same basis as previous Federal aid construction will result in the construction of 8,200 miles of highway. In March the fund available for new projects was taken up at the rate of $12,000,000 a month and at the rate of $5,700,000 in April.

Jesse B. Smith and daughter Katherine, were in Rochester Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Vaught of Knox City, were shopping in the city Tuesday.

CLIFF SCHOOL CLOSING THIS WEEK

The Cliff school, closed Thursday night June 15th, with an interesting program rendered by the pupils and teachers. It is estimated that more than five hundred people attended the closing exercises of this school. Readings, dialogues, songs and a play, "The Cabbage Hill School," were the features of the evening, and every number was heartily enjoyed by those present.

Rev. W. F. Lynch, principal of the Cliff School, and Miss Frankie Curry, assistant, were both re-elected to their positions for the coming term. Patrons expressed themselves as highly pleased with the work of these efficient teachers, and all pupils have made good advances in their school work. The Cliff school claims the distinction of being the only rural school in the county which had a full eight months term of school.

NEW BUILDING FINISHED THIS WEEK

This week, finished the R. C. Couch building, on the old Texas Garage, destroyed by fire several years ago. The building is a substantial one and the garage building, front arranged for a drive-in. The front part of the building on the West side will be occupied by the Western Union Telegraph and the Watson's Candy Shop. The garage building has not yet been announced.

2,500 ACRES IN MEBANE COTTON

P. M. Ross, representative of the Mebane Cotton Breeders Association of Lockhart and Haskell, Texas, was in our city this week in the interest of his company. Mr. Ross is highly pleased with prospects in this section.

The Mebane Cotton Breeding Association now has growing in Haskell County, 2,500 acres of pure Mebane Cotton. This farm is in charge of Mr. J. S. Magford, who is an expert cotton breeder.

It is claimed, with favorable season, this cotton will produce from 1-16 to 1-3-16 inch staple and yield from 38 to 42 per cent lint.

J. A. OSLIN AND FAMILY MOVED TO SAN ANTONIO

J. A. Oslin and family left last Friday for San Antonio where they will make their home in the future. Mr. Oslin has been connected with the F. G. Alexander & Sons store for the past year, and he and his family will be greatly missed by their many friends.

MAN DROWNS IN BRAZOS NEAR O'BRIEN

Riley Brothers, age 21, of O'Brien, was drowned in the Brazos River north-west of O'Brien last Sunday about four o'clock. According to information reaching this place, Brothers, in company with several of his brothers, were wading in the river; he and a brother were several hundred feet from the rest of the party, when he stepped off into a hole of deep water, and being unable to swim, called for help. Others in the party were unable to reach him in time to save his life, although heroic efforts were made. The deceased was well known in the O'Brien section, and the entire community was shocked when news of the tragedy spread. Funeral services were held Monday.

C. L. Martin of Westover, candidate for Representative of the 102nd District, was in our city Tuesday morning shaking hands with friends.

RADIO

THIRD ELEMENT IN THE VACUUM TUBE

Grid Added to Fleming Valve by Dr. Lee DeForest Was a Big Improvement.

Any device which will pass electricity in one direction and will wholly or partially obstruct the flow in the opposite direction is termed a rectifier, because when connected in the path of an alternating current it will suppress one-half of each cycle and therefore the current will be traversed by pulsating direct current. A rectifier also is said to possess unidirectional conductivity, meaning, of course, that it will conduct electricity in one direction only, its ability to rectify currents of extremely high frequency determines its application in radio.

Due to its ability to rectify high frequency alternating currents the two-element (filament and plate) vacuum tube can be used in a radio receiver as a detector.

Fig. VI is a simple radio receiving circuit employing this type of two-element vacuum tube in place of a crystal detector.

Dr. J. A. Fleming of London, England, was the first to use a two-element tube of the type just described as a medium of rectifying high frequency radio currents. Fleming called his product a valve because it would let current flow in one direction but not in the other direction. The Fleming valve as a forerunner of the vacuum tube of today marked a very important step in the progress of the radio art. The Fleming valve, however, in its original form was not much better than other forms of rectifiers then in use and, owing to the greater ruggedness and ease of manipulation of the latter, did not come into general use as a detector.

Dr. Lee DeForest, an American, greatly improved the Fleming valve by adding a third electrode called the grid, which served the function of a control element and thus made it possible to utilize the feeble incoming signal currents to control more powerful local currents. The three-electrode vacuum tube of DeForest is the tube used so extensively today.

The third element which is called a grid and from which the three-electrode vacuum tube derives its name was placed by DeForest between the filament and the plate in the path of the electrons. The grid is a perforated plate or mesh of fine wire through the openings of which the electrons must pass in their journey from the filament to the plate.

Fig. VII is a diagrammatical sketch of the circuits of a three-electrode vacuum tube and is identical to the same as the sketch in Fig. III for a two-element vacuum tube with the addition of the grid circuit I-J-K-L. The battery in the grid circuit is called the "C" battery. As a start let us suppose that "C" battery voltage is zero. The operation of the three-electrode tube would then be exactly like that of a two-electrode tube, just as though there were no grid. Like a two-electrode tube when the filament (CD) is brought to incandescence by the "A" battery a steady stream of electrons will be given off, which will be drawn over to the plate E. Plate E is maintained at a positive potential with respect to the filament by the "B" battery. Now if the grid is made positive with respect to the filament, it is possible to accelerate the flow of the electron stream from the filament to the plate; if the grid is made negative with respect to the filament, the flow of the electron stream from the filament to the plate will be retarded. Or in other words, by making the grid positive or negative with respect to the filament, it is possible to increase or counteract the space charge. The third electrode or grid thus offers a means of controlling the current in the plate circuit without changing the plate potential or the filament temperature. The characteristic curve of a three-electrode vacuum tube is shown in Fig. VIII. This diagram shows the relation of grid potential to plate current, assuming that the filament temperature and plate voltage remain constant.

It can be seen from the curve that by applying a negative potential of value E to the grid, the plate current can be reduced to zero. The negative charge on the grid will have the effect of a negative potential E with respect to the filament, making the negative charge so strong around the filament that the electrons cannot leave it. On the other hand, if a positive potential of value F be applied to the grid with respect to the filament, the maximum or saturation current will flow in the plate circuit. Applying a greater positive potential than F to the grid with respect to the filament will not cause an increase in the plate current because the electrons given off are being attracted to the plate and grid. When the grid is maintained positive with respect to the filament a small current will flow in the grid circuit. Because of its being positive it will attract the electrons and have a charge given up to it by them.

Mary's Indian Blood

By MYRA C. LANE

"Oh don't you remember sweet Ben Bolt?"

Mary Power heard the hotel strike up the old-fashioned tune, a wave of bitter-sweet remembrance came over her as she sat beside Latimer under the palms.

It was not far from here that, long to the same tune, played by orchestra of the same hotel, she and Klwisnee had plighted their Seminole fashion.

Mary was the adopted daughter of Senator Power, and she was attracted by the beauty of the child adopted her from the mission, when she was ten years old. Power had always wanted a child that desire had always been her.

At ten Mary, in the fashion of the tribe, had pledged herself to Ben Bolt, the young Indian boy whose times came into the town with the of manioc.

"I am thine forever," they had said in the Indian formula, and the which the hotel band struck up at that moment had always been associated with that promise in Mary's mind.

"But you go away among the people and you will forget me, Klwisnee."

"A Seminole never forgets," had said the girl. "Some day I shall come back to thee."

But youth vows and life of fourteen years had eradicated propensities and instincts. At the age of four Senator Power, now a widower, had taken the girl to Palm Beach the winter, where her beautiful skin and dark beauty had attracted everyone. Especially it had attracted John Latimer, the young publisher of the county.

He meant to win her, Mary, that and she knew that Senator Power looked with approval upon a girl had risen from the bottom of the promise of some day occupying the highest positions in the county. Mary?

As she sat at John Latimer's side she sent forth an earnest prayer he would not speak—yet. For of the tropic girl there was upon her memory she was back again, facing Klwisnee in a mission courtyard.

"Mary!" The note in John Latimer's voice was passionate, earnest, and under that spell, and Mary saw the yearning in his eyes. She loved him; but she could not be split into a dual person. That night, one part loved John Latimer, that was the prosaic, every-day her. And the other part, all her might to the westward, was Klwisnee.

Yet it was not Klwisnee, he represented—the old, the hope that she could die, the Everglades, rich and beautiful, the crash of the blossoming, the crash of the through the saw grass.

"Wait!" she whispered. She slipped from his side down to the terrace. From the doorway she could see the country outlined against the horizon. A few steps, a mile at most, would be lost in the impetuosity.

Oh, to float in a canoe those softly gliding, stretched out her arms to the "Klwisnee! I am an Indian of your people! Come!" she called to her father's tent became a her.

No, it was that which was—that life of old. Her adopted father was her son. She wanted to dream now. She thought of John Latimer's eyes of tenderness.

Dear, staid, matter-of-fact Latimer. He would never understand who whetted her whetted yearnings?

"Come to me, Klwisnee," she whispered again. But only the palms and the wind, and with a sudden tears she realized that she was alone. Where was Klwisnee? Ah, past, that past which she could see again.

And slowly she went to Latimer. She nestled at his side. "Mary, you—you wanted to say?"

"I think I do, John," she said softly. "Will you be very kind? Will you remember me to Klwisnee? Indian girl dreams sometimes."

"Dreams, dear? Don't you ask John. 'I'm dreaming and a home together, and all our lives.'"

Mary sighed softly, understood. But then she understood. Unrestrained, take her in his arms.

Just a little. "I want a share," she murmured looking man as he moved the barber's chair. "I want hair cut nor a shampoo, want any bay rum, want tonic, hot towels or anything don't want the man's hand nor the barber's my feet. I just want to stand that?"

"Yes, sir," said the man, you have come looking for a hair cut?"

WHY?

DO WE SPEAK OF A PORTERHOUSE STEAK?

MANY authorities have attempted to trace the origin of this name for the succulent cut of beef to a man named Porter who is supposed to have maintained a restaurant in the lower part of New York city. But the real reason for the term was because, in the early part of the last century, there existed in New York a number of public houses where ale and porter were the favorite beverages ordered. These taverns or saloons came to be known as "porter-houses."
The proprietor of one of these establishments, receiving a hurry call for a particularly tender and appetizing steak, made the experiment of cutting the top off a roast which had been sent in for his personal use. The customer was so pleased that he called back a day or two later and demanded another of those steaks, adding that he had never tasted one before he came to this particular porter-house. The fame of the tavern and its steak soon spread and it was not long before epicures throughout the city were asking for a "porter-house steak" and butchers, learning the secret of the cut, adopted the term themselves.

CAN NOT ESCAPE

No Chance for Murderer Who Uses Poison.

Science Has Made That Form of Killing a Lost Art, Unlike the Days of Old.

Ever since medieval times a silent but none the less determined war has been going on between the subtle art of poisoning and the more subtle art of discovering and locating poisons in the human body.

In the old days fortunes awaited those who could prepare some concoction that would remove people from this world without leaving traces of how it was done. Poisoning, as understood by a Catherine de Medici, was a grand art. Today it is a lost art, for science has practically won the long fight and is now able to discover and classify every known poison even months after the victim has succumbed to its effects.

Within the last generation almost every kind of poison has come within the scope of the ever-increasing experience of medico-legal experts who have been called to give evidence in important cases—from the hyoscyamine of the Crippen case to the arsenical dypiper of the Seddon affair.

Arsenic, antimony, prussic acid, carbolic acid, oxalic acid, mercury, belladonna, opium, heroin, morphia, calabar bean, croton seed, nitric acid, pyridine that most deadly poison found in minute quantities in dirty tobacco pipes—all have been traced, tabulated and chained by the patient, emotionless detective, Science.

So highly has the work of scientific detection been developed that the presence of arsenic may be discovered even years after it has been taken. No more delicate tests in chemistry, and at the same time no more infallible ones, can be used than the tests for arsenic and antimony. In the former poison the tests are so severe that one part in sixty millions can be revealed.

It is to the Borgias that one must go to hear about the incredibly subtle poisons which could not be detected, but the light of modern science proves that much which is credited to that family's knowledge of the art of poisoning was really impossible of accomplishment unless we concede—which is just possible—that they know more about toxicology than do modern savants.

There was one particular poison which the Borgias are credited with using which has remained a secret. It was tasteless, could kill the victim quickly or leisurely, as the poisoner willed, and it left no trace discernible to the chemists of that time.

The lists of nobles and dignitaries of the church who died by this subtle means is believed to be formidable. It was used in two ways, powder and liquid, and its method of manufacture was related by an obscure scientist of the period.

The powder form of the poison was white like flour, with a taste like sugar. It was called Contarella. Its composition was never known, but the liquid was prepared in the following way:

A wild boar was caught, and to it was administered a strong dose of arsenic. As soon as the poison began to take effect the boar was hung up by the heels. Convulsions came on, and a froth, which ran from its jaws, was collected in a silver dish and then was transferred to a bottle which, after some Contarella was added, was hermetically sealed. This was kept for a certain time and the result was the notorious poison.

Certain it is that no poison known today is secret. Chemistry and science can provide the means of detection, and can often supply the antidote.—Overseas Daily Mail.

Important to Know.

A fire had broken out in a factory in the country, and a young village constable was sent to make inquiries.

After questioning the manager he asked to see the man who was responsible for the electric lights. The manager stated that the electric switches were under his control.

Policeman—Then you are the man who lights up the electric affair?

Manager—That is so.

Policeman (excitedly)—Now, be careful how you answer my next question, 'cos if it ain't satisfactory it will be used against you as evidence. When you lighted the electric light last night where did you throw the match?"

Priceless Painting in Old Chest.

An altar piece the center panel of which is alleged to have been painted by Leonardo da Vinci and the side panels by Michelangelo has been discovered in a chest at the Hungarian castle of Papa, belonging to the late Count Maurice Esterhazy's estate.

Experts are divided as to the authenticity of the painting. If the present owner of the castle, Count Thomas Esterhazy, has his claims sustained the altar piece will be the only known example of the combined work of these two famous painters. It will be worth a fabulous amount which experts hesitate to name.

Vitamines as a Cure-All.

Possibly the present tendency to extol vitamins as a cure-all is drawing to its close. The United States public health service reports that efforts during the year to discover the unidentified food substance whose absence from the diet causes pellagra have excluded two of the three known vitamins. The search for the missing element is being steadily narrowed.

THE SANDMAN STORY

THE LITTLE FAIRY

THERE was once upon a time a little fairy who helped all children play make-believe, and I expect that same little fairy is about today if people would only give it a chance.

This particular little Fairy Make-believe, crept through the keyhole of the door to a house where there lived two poor children, named Mary and Johnny, and they were trying hard to play at make-believe, for there was no food in the pantry or fuel for the stove.

Their mother had to work all day and Mary and Johnny wanted to make her think they were happy when she came home at night, so they talked about the nice dinner they were having and how warm it was in the room, and how beautiful were the pictures on the walls.

Of course there wasn't any of it really there, but as Mary said: "It makes it easier when mother comes home to look happy when you make-believe all day that everything is nice and comfortable."

So the little Fairy Make-believe crept right into their hearts and made them so interested in pretending that they forgot their troubles and then the fairy did more, for while they were asleep that night she ran to the home of her old friend Jack Frost and asked his help.

She did not ask him not to make it colder by coming down from his home up in Northland. She asked him to come that very night and paint on the windows of the house in which the children live all the lovely pictures he could before morning.

Then she ran to another home where the people had plenty and to spare, and this sly little fairy crept into their hearts and nestled so close that the man put on his fur coat and while the children slept he came with a basket of food and left it at their home.

The next morning while Mary and Johnny were just opening their eyes there came a man with a big load of wood and coal which the same nice man had ordered who brought the food, for you see it was at his house that the mother of Mary and Johnny worked every day.

"You see, Johnny, that all we played make-believe about yesterday came true," said Mary. "I am so glad we did not let mother know we were hungry."

"We did not get any beautiful pictures," said Johnny, "and we made-believe we had those just the same as the other things."

Mary thought for a moment and then her eyes fell upon the wonderful paintings Jack Frost had made in the night. "Look," she said, pointing to the windows, "there is a beautiful castle and away up in the tower I expect there lives a beautiful princess."

"See all the mountains around the castle and the flowers like daisies growing out at the top. Below is a little lake and a swan sailing about, and beyond is the forest, and through it will come the prince who is to rescue the princess from the tower."

Johnny opened his eyes wide at first when Mary began the story, but before she had come to the prince part Johnny saw, too, what she did, and again the little Fairy Make-believe came through the keyhole of the door and crept close beside them.

And so some day when you cannot go out to play, find a window where Jack Frost has been at work and see if you cannot find wonderful things just as did Mary and Johnny.

To the Democratic Voters of the 102nd Legislative District: Ladies and Gentlemen:

On the 22nd day of July you will participate in a vote for you when the Legislature meets at Austin next January. The importance of this office should not be too lightly esteemed. Whomever you select for this task is clothed with authority to make laws that may affect your lives, your liberty, your property; he is entrusted very largely with the happiness of your homes; with the welfare of your children. As good citizens you owe it to yourselves and to your neighbors to make diligent inquiry as to which of the candidates is best equipped to serve you. Their training, their experience, their knowledge of your needs and of what is rightfully due you at the hands of your lawmakers, should all be considered. Sum it all up and vote for the best man for the office.

Friendship has no place at the ballot box, nor does the fact that I live in Baylor County either qualify or disqualify me for the position. I do not solicit your support on this basis; merit alone is the only yardstick that should be applied to all. Integrity, ability, and a willingness to demand fair play on all occasions, without thought of private gain or personal honors, should be the earmarks which characterize those for whom you vote.

Prompted by a sincere desire to be of real service to the producers of this District, thereby serving all the people, I most respectfully submit my candidacy for your consideration. It will be impossible for me to see each of you personally, as I would be pleased to do, but I invite your closest investigation of me, and of the things for which I have always stood. Then, if I command your confidence, I will appreciate your support. If elected, I pledge whatever energy, whatever ability, whatever influence I may have to your service.

Very sincerely yours,

MRS. IRWIN HOSTESS TO THURSDAY LUNCHEON CLUB

Mrs. Elmer Irwin was hostess to the Thursday Luncheon Club and a number of friends, on last Thursday afternoon, from four to six o'clock. Vases of roses, sweet peas and shasta daisies were placed about the various rooms, which added a pleasing note of color to this otherwise attractive home.

Shortly after the guests arrived, score cards were passed for the absorbing game of "42" and five tables of players became busily engaged at once. Judging by the happy notes of laughter which were heard continually, everyone had a good time, though mention was never made as to who won the most games.

A delicious plate lunch consisting of meat sandwiches, fruit salad, potato chips, olives and ice tea were served to the following members and visitors: Mesdames J. A. Couch, O. E. Patterson, Travis Arbuckle, W. M. Reid, Alfred Pierson, W. E. Kirkpatrick, H. S. Wilson, R. J. Reynolds, B. M. Whitaker, S. A. Roberts, T. C. Rodgers, Owen Fouts, Clarence Lewis, J. P. Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

DON'T MEDDLE

There may be a woman who can successfully raise her own children and keep her own house, and at the same time be profoundly interested in the way her next-door neighbor raises her children and keeps her house, but if there is such a woman she has managed to keep herself pretty well hidden.

Your neighbor's affairs are interesting, of course. Their mistakes, which are very many, are deplorable. The way they treat their children, the way they let their dog bark all night, the reckless manner in which they drive their car are all things which ought to be bettered.

You could better them, of course. But the moment you begin to better them, your affairs will be neglected. You will find, as you go through this world, many men and many women and many methods that you do not approve of.

You probably won't like the girl your neighbor's son is going to marry and will feel that you ought to talk to him about her.

Don't do it. He will misunderstand you, and may thank you for it.

You doubtless think your neighbor is to blame because all the servants leave her as fast as they are hired. Probably she is to blame. But you won't get any gratitude for showing her why she is to blame. People are "unreasonable" about things like that.

Your neighbor may get down to work too late in the morning and get home too early at night. You may feel that he is neglecting his work, and in a fair way to get fired because of it.

But it would be a mistake to tell him so. Perhaps he can afford to keep easy hours. Perhaps he makes them up by working at night. You don't always have all the facts on which to base your opinion of him.

Your neighbors, you will find, will get along about as they have been doing whether you help them or not. And they won't be at all pleased at your assistance.

Furthermore, you will be so busy giving this assistance that your own affairs will get in a mess. And when they do, you will be insulted if your neighbors tell you you ought to have spent more time attending to them.

With our sharp weapons we shall the fray,
And take the castle that thou best in;
We shall thee flay out of thy fable skin,
And a dish, with onions and pepper,
We shall thee dress with strong vinegar.

WHAT TO EAT

A VERY nourishing dish is onion chowder. Cook two cupfuls of minced onion in three-eighths of a cup of butter for thirty minutes or until the onion is soft. Add eight potatoes, pared and sliced, one teaspoonful of pepper, one tablespoonful of mixed herbs (such as sage, marjoram, sweet basil, and one quart of water. Cook until the potatoes are tender, then add three cupfuls of milk and one cupful of cream. Let come to the boiling point and serve with pilot crackers.

Corn Flake Macarons.

Take the whites of two eggs, beat until stiff, adding a pinch of salt and one cupful of sugar very gradually, then fold in one cupful of corn flakes and one cupful of ground nuts, or a mixture of coconut and ground nuts, two tablespoonfuls of flour and a teaspoonful of vanilla.

Plain Salad Dressing.

Mix with one-half cupful of granulated sugar, three tablespoonfuls of flour, one-half teaspoonful of mustard, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-half cupful of milk and one-half cupful of vinegar. Mix the dry ingredients, then add the milk and vinegar; cook in a double boiler until thick. When ready to use thin with cream.

TRUTH ABOUT LUCK

May Be Good or Bad, but All of Us Have It.

Writer Who Made the Assertion Cites Instance Which Seems to Prove the Point.

Don't tell me there is no such thing as luck. I know better. You either have it or you don't have it. It may be bad or good. Sometimes it runs in streaks and you break about even. But we all have luck of one sort or another and we cannot get away from it and we cannot explain it.

Take the case of Jerry Morgan, for example, says a writer in the Chicago Daily News. The name is camouflaged, out of respect for his feelings, but long years ago I knew him well. His father died when he was a baby. His mother was left penniless. Eventually she married another man and Jerry was ill-treated and ran away from home just after he had worked through the old fourth reader. Because he was a lousy kid, he became a sort of pugilist. That was all bad luck, wasn't it? He wasn't much of a pugilist and he lost a fight which his backers expected him to win. So he lost his backers. Twenty years ago, in the dead of winter, he walked down an icy street in Columbus, Ohio.

He was hungry, penniless and an absolute stranger in town. He had just bummed his way in on a freight and had been hooded off with every circumstance of ignominy. He was so weak he tottered. His toe caught in something buried in the ice, and because he was in such a languid state mentally that his curiosity was aroused by so small a circumstance—and because he had nothing else to do—he went back to see what it was that had tripped him.

It was a neat roll of $5 bills. Someone had lost it and the falling sheet had pinned it to the ground so that the wind had not blown it away. And he came along just before the sheet had buried it. Up to this moment he had had nothing but bad luck. He was as complete a loss as a young man could be. But with the finding of that money his luck changed. Everything came his way. That money meant new clothes, plenty of food for the time, a warm room, rest and regained self-respect. In two days he had a job. When he walked into the office yesterday I did not recognize him. Today he is the president of a bank in a good-sized town on the western coast. Everything he has ever touched has turned into money.

He has had nothing but luck of the best sort. His speculations are always profitable. He has a lovely wife, he tells me, and a family of fine children. When he dies he will have a grand funeral and the whole town will mourn him, for he has developed into a citizen who is not only prominent but is really worth while.

But I wonder what was the luck of the man who lost that roll of bills?

Suffering Silvia. Silvia, the colored laundress, was very fond of Boston brown bread, and frequently told her mistress so, always adding that with a bottle of milk and the brown bread she could "just make a meal."

One day as she was leaving her mistress gave her a small loaf of brown bread and some leftovers, remarking as she did so: "Silvia, you won't have to do much for your supper when you get home, as these little things will probably be enough for you."

"Law, yes, missy," responded Silvia, "and thank you, ma'am. I'll stop at the grocery and get a bottle of milk, and when I get home I'll build a little fire to sit by, and with these dainty little bits and that brown bread and milk—my, how I will suffer!"

Island Was Afloat.

The Mississippi had just reached flood stage and I was just above Vicksburg, Miss., paddling along at a good rate of speed on a canoe trip to the gulf, when I noticed ahead, about half a mile distant, a small island. I set it as my objective, figuring it a dandy spot to disembark to prepare my noon lunch. Paddling more quickly, I was surprised that it required almost an hour to reach it. When I did, I found it to be a floating island, detached in some manner from the mainland. It was about 250 square feet in area, and upon it were three trees of good stature. I rode along with it (at a safe distance), and when I made camp, six hours later, it was still on its way to the gulf.—Chicago Journal.

Census of Pigs.

A special census of the pigs of the country is about to be made through the aid of the 24,000 rural mail carriers connected with 9,500 post offices of the country. This will cover the 14 states of the country which are most concerned. The pig population of the remainder counts for little. The information will be of great value to the growers and the meat handlers and will show the extent of the consumption of this kind of meat. A very simple and easily filled questionnaire will be circulated by the carriers to be filled out by breeders and the information asked for will be regarded as confidential.

Psychological Benefit.

"You are strong for civil service regulations." "I am," replied Senator Borah. "Even if they do not succeed in holding a man in his position they have a helpful and comforting influence."

CAN YOU—?

THERE are certain things that every one who wishes to be well bred should learn how to do—certain things that one should master in order to establish smooth sailing on the sea of social intercourse.

Can you, for instance, glibly and without embarrassment introduce two strangers? Do you know how to introduce a business friend to your wife, your wife to the wife of a business friend, your son to your employer, your mother to the mother of a friend? None of these introductions should be worded the same, each calls for slight modification.

Can you, for instance, offer your seat to a woman in a crowded car in the proper way? Do you know the rules for good form when walking with a woman acquaintance in the crowded street of a city?

Can you word a letter asking a young woman to go with you to a dance, or, if you are a young woman, can you word a letter politely accepting or declining an invitation from a young man to a dance?

Now, all these seem like simple things to do, but they are things that sometimes baffle even persons who have had an opportunity to observe social usages. Stop and ask yourself if you can do them. They are the sort of thing that failure to understand sometimes causes no end of embarrassment when the time comes.

THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH TENT MEETING

As was announced last week the Charles Forbes Taylor party joined in with us for a revival campaign. It was estimated that there were 2000 people present Sunday night. The average attendance for the week has been more than 1000. The inspirational service led by Charles Taylor Sr., in the auditorium of the church each evening is growing in attendance and also in interest. There are now over 200 people on the definite prayer list. The interest in a general way is growing deeper each service. "Charley" is delivering wonderful sermons and is all that we had expected of him. The hand of the Lord is, no doubt, on him. Charley is one of God's noble men, but just a man, and all of us need to spend much time on the altar of God pleading with God to lead Charley and for the Holy Spirit to come upon the church in mighty power. The unsaved are attending the meetings in great numbers. We are praying and believing that hundreds of them will turn to the Lord and be saved. The people from the other churches than baptist are attending the meetings well and are a great help with their prayers and manifest interest in the meetings. Don't forget if you come to the inspirational services at 7:30 each evening just 30 minutes before the preaching services, for all who attend these services there will be seats reserved under the tent. ORIENT RAILROAD ONCE HAD PLENTY OF BUSINESS

Seven years ago, according to former Orient railway employees, the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient Railroad, which is now on the verge of being junked, had more business than it could handle. At that time they say, it was a line which seemed to be very prosperous and have a future. In 1915 and 1916 the Orient railroad was the fruit route of West Texas. It was not an uncommon sight to see as many as seven or eight trainloads of California fruit handled in a day. The Southern Pacific railroad company turned over this fruit to the Orient at Alpine. The latter line got a long haul as far as Wichita, Kansas. For some reason or other that has not been explained, all this business was taken away from the Orient and turned over to the Texas & Pacific at El Paso. For a time, it was said, the Southern Pacific turned over the fruit to be carried by the Orient as far as Sweetwater, where it was given to the Texas and Pacific. Old time employees declare that the Orient has never had sufficient motive power to handle the business which was tendered it in those days. Likewise its facilities for re-loading fruit were inadequate and some losses are alleged to have occurred. At any rate, the "West Texas Railroad" as it came to be called, lost this fruit business which was given preferential movement over passenger and other freight trains. When the Orient first began operating trains from Wichita to Sweetwater several passenger trains each way a day were operated, carrying a number of Pullman cars, Washouts, wrecks, and serious and apparently unavoidable delays made the Orient route a very unpopular one. The road went into the hands of receivers a number of times. The road was dubbed facetiously the "Grip Route" because it followed a backbone from San Angelo to Wichita, which was largely a gypsum country. Scores of prosperous little towns sprang up along the road which, if the road ceases to operate, will be fearfully handicapped. Among the towns which will be entirely without railroad facilities are Longworth, Sylvester, McClintock, Rule, Rochester, and Knox City.

Smith-Sauer
A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Judge and Mrs. A. J. Smith, Wednesday afternoon at 5:45 o'clock when their daughter, Miss Vivian became the bride of Mr. H. W. Sauer. The house was attractively decorated in greens, potted plants and tasteful trimmings. Proceeding the ceremony, Miss Marylou Pickerton sang "99 Names of Jesus." Miss Lillian Neal played the wedding march from Lehmann, dressed in blue and lavender and carried down the aisle with her maid and carrying arm bouquets of lilies, formed the first of the group. Following came Mr. Gladly Roberts as best man, Miss Smith and Mr. Sauer came in together. Miss Smith wore a striking contrast of tulle in the new meadow-lark shade of brown and carried lilies. Her hat and shoes, were black as were other accessories. Rev. McHenry Senf said a simple ring ceremony and the two were one. Refreshments consisting of punch and cake, were served. Mr. and Mrs. Sauer left at once for Waco and Georgetown for a weeks visit, after which they will be at home in Austin. Best wishes of their many friends go with them.

Miss Vivian Smith Honored
On last Friday afternoon Miss Elice Killingsworth and Miss Lillian Neal delightfully entertained with a shower given in honor of Miss Vivian Smith. The guests gathered at the home of Mrs. John Pierre Payne, where they were cordially welcomed by the hostess. A tiny Cupid was given each guest upon which was announced the coming wedding. They then assembled on the lawn and very soon everybody was engaged in progressive "42." After several games, a number was given each guest. It was announced that the corresponding numbers would be found tied to the ends of the many colored strings crisscrossed about the trees and over the lawn. Much laughter ensued at the untangling of strings and at the end of each was found a gift. The gifts were placed upon a table and everybody "had a look." At this point Marguerite Green gave a very touching toast. Miss Vivian Smith then read an amusing letter from "Haskell friends" which she had found at the end of her string. She then expressed her appreciation of the many lovely gifts, declaring she would never forget her friends here, as each gift would bring them back to her day after day. Dainty refreshments of iced tea and sandwiches were served by Miss Lois Killingsworth, Pauline and Edwina Smith. The guests departed, expressing their enjoyment of the evening, and wishing Miss Smith a "long and happy wedded life."

KATY RECEIVERSHIP EXPECTED
St. Louis, Mo.—Definite steps toward dissolution of the receivership Missouri, Kansas and Texas have been taken according to a report obtained yesterday from a railroad official. The dissolution of the receivership, he added, was expected in railroad circles as a forerunner to a merger of the road with Chicago and Alton within the next few weeks. Persistent rumors regarding a merger have been denied by officials.

According to the officials, have been made for some time the road taken from the hands of the receiver, in view of the fact that financial basis of the road has strengthened, due to increased earnings. A recent report issued by the receiver showed net earnings of 1 cent in 1921, compared with 1 cent in 1920. Mrs. Wm. Wells and daughter Mae, returned Tuesday from Texas where they spent several weeks with relatives and friends.

Not even USCO ever touched this value before

30 x 3 1/2 - $10.90

WHEN you look at a 30 x 3 1/2 USCO at $10.90 think back for a minute as far as you can remember USCO. Since last fall when USCO established the $10.90 price range they have recognized it as a value beyond any possible comparison. A still greater money's worth than even USCO itself had reached before. The truth is that men have always found USCO an outstanding money's worth no matter what its price. Today at $10.90 USCO maintains its established standard of quality. And because of the new price, it sets a new index of tire value. Men who have used USCO have never been inclined to measure its value by the general run of tires. No War-Tax charged
