Methodist Lose Their Pastor

Members of the Methodist church at this place have plenty of company in their sorrow concerning the loss of Rev. S. L. Culwell and his good family. When the conference lists came in it was seen that Rev. Culwell had been assigned to Haskell. He arrived Monday afternoon from attending Northwest Texas Conference at Amarillo and confirmed the report. He stated that the Conference was a successful meeting in every particular and the work had come up in good shape everywhere.

Bro. Culwell has been here only two years, and it seems like we ought not to have to give him up so soon. The only good thing about it is he has been given the Haskell charge and he and family will be close enough that they can come over and see us frequently. They have their packing practically completed and will leave tomorrow in their car for Haskell. Their household goods will go down in a truck. The best wishes of everyone will follow these people to their new field of labor, and our interests will follow them wherever they may go in the future.—Baylor County Banner.

IN THE MORNING

By EDNA MARY BOOTH.

Copyright, 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Dawn was upon Treadwell Beach. Two persons moved slowly along at the water's edge. The one going east was a young woman—a girl. The man, who had just passed her, was a stranger. In passing they had looked at each other with some interest. The girl's lips had curved to a smile and she had given a swift glance to the stranger. The man had raised his cap.

What he is doing that he stood near her and looked at her as she approached it out of sight behind the trees, before he spoke to her.

"Are you looking for something that you've lost?" he asked, with easy friendliness.

She glanced up at him with an expression of seriousness that was in contrast with the dapples in her soft, pink cheeks. "I'm just playing with the seaweed and I love to poke among the rocks, but I'm really down on the beach to look for Billy. I look every August."

"Billy? What's Billy?" the man asked, seeking a firmer footing upon the sand.

"Billy is a little boy I used to know. I mean he was a little boy when I first knew him."

"Was that long ago?" His eyes narrowed and little lines came into his forehead as he asked the question.

"Sixteen years and it's ten years since I've seen him."

"Sixteen years—ten years!" exploded the young man. "How you roll off time. One would think you were fifty."

Again she glanced up from the tangle of seaweed at her feet. "I'm twenty," she said. "I'm old enough to know better than to be talking to a stranger like this."

"Then why do you?" he asked, a teasing note coming into his voice.

But she was serious again. She swung out her stick to cover sea and shore. "I think that it is the new day that must take the blame. It's too new for forms or conventions. And we are alone—we might be on a deserted shore and the cottages, lifeless as they seem, the hills beyond."

He turned and looked where she was looking, but he spoke lightly. "I see smoke coming from a chimney on the place where I am staying."

She flung back quickly. "It's come this very minute." With a cool note coming into her voice she went on slowly: "So you are staying with the Claytons?"

"Yes. Where are you staying?"

She swung out her stick toward the west. "Over beyond the creek. I am with my aunt."

"You've forgotten about Billy," said the young man. "You've not told me why you are searching for him."

"I just want to see him again," she explained girlishly. "We used to play together on the beach from morning until night."

"Where is he now?"

"If I knew where he is, do you think I'd be here looking for him?" she queried, without turning her head. "Ouch," she muttered a moment later and gave a spring to a higher place. "The tide is coming in," she announced, looking down at her wet feet.

"You knew the tide was coming in. You were too near. The sea is something you can't—"

He gave voice to a quick "Lydia," and hastened on. "Your name is Lydia. You said so, did you not?"

"I mentioned my Aunt Lydia," she explained quietly.

"Tell me about Billy," he said.

She clasped her hand over her knees. "Billy was the nicest boy that ever lived," she began. "When his mother died he came here to live with his grandmother. He was eight years old and I was four. Father kept the drug store here then. He has a drug store where we live now. But that isn't about Billy, is it? Billy and I fell in love at first sight." She threw out a little laugh that rippled over the water. The man began to make a pyramid of sand.

"We lived only a little way from here," she said, with a wave of her hand toward the road. "Every day we possibly could we were down on this beach to play. Billy took good care of me." She paused for a moment.

"He was fourteen when his father took him to the other side of the continent. Before he went Billy and I came here that Billy might say good-by to the beach. It was an extremely sorrowful occasion, because it was my birthday, and we'd always had such lovely times on my birthdays. Billy was as solemn as solemn could be and said that some birthday we'd meet again on this beach, and then we'd be old enough to get married and I'd be his wife, and we'd never have to part again. I think it was because he was going away from a place that he loved that made Billy talk like that, for he wasn't the silly kind."

"Do you think that was silly?" asked the man.

"For children, yes," the girl returned quickly. "But something in the way Billy said it made me remember and think he'd come. My last four birthdays I've walked on Treadwell beach early in the morning. Billy loved early in the morning."

The man was still watching the gull on the rock.

"I'm not coming any more to look for Billy."

The man turned suddenly, reached out and caught her to him. "You are not coming any more to look for Billy, because you've found him, eh, Lydia?"

HELP THEM PUT IT OVER!

The ladies of the Magazine Club have through their untiring work, given Haskell a Library and Library building, that is indeed a credit to our city. They have never begged anyone for help, neither do they intend to now. We will all be given a chance to donate. When the time comes, let's go down deep enough in our pockets to put this worthy institution clear of debt.

We are strong believers in good homes, and the Public Library. The Library is now at your service. With our immense stock of house furnishings and years of home furnishing experience, we are also at your service. We can furnish your entire home, lending to it the attractions of comfort, and conveniences.

Our prices are always in keeping with the quality of goods we sell.

Haskell, Texas, October 22, 1921.

B. M. Whitaker, who has charge of Haskell County's exhibit at the State Fair this year which took third place among the counties of Texas, is to be complimented on his success. Mr. Whitaker, practically secured this entire exhibit unaided in one week's time and took third prize; with the proper preparation and co-operation of everyone, there is not a doubt but what Haskell county could and would have taken first place as the leading agricultural county of the entire State of Texas. Right now, on the aftermath of Haskell county's success in taking third place with an exhibit prepared in one week's time, is the time to begin planning for next year's exhibit. With the whole-hearted co-operation of everyone interested, Haskell county will take first place next year.

The Public Library

Probably one of the most laudable undertakings that has ever been launched in the history of Haskell was when the ladies of the Magazine Club erected the library building for the benefit of the general public. This was done in order that Haskell should not lack in the facilities for the social enjoyment and advancement along all lines of civic endeavor. The women of our city undertook to do this, notwithstanding the fact that many of our citizens said that it could not be done; they undertook to do this thing—and it was accomplished, and practically donated to the citizenship of Haskell. The Public Library—the greatest institution for the upbuilding of a nation and its people, is housed in this building and is open to the public. The various clubs, students clubs, and other worthy organizations of the city have free access to the building—in fact, it serves every need of a community center.

A campaign was launched last week to pay off the remaining indebtedness against the Public Library. This movement should have the hearty co-operation and endorsement of every forward-looking man and woman in Haskell; not only that, but their assistance in a material way. When you are asked to contribute to this movement, do so willingly and liberally, and in that way show your appreciation of one of the greatest institutions possessed by any town, an institution second only to our churches and schools, and one that will be a living monument to advancement along all lines of civic endeavor.

Benefits of The Public Library

The Public Library has been the home of the Bear Cat Literary Society of the Haskell High School for the past two years and will be for the present term. On account of the lack of space in the High School building, it has been necessary to obtain some meeting place and the Magazine Club gladly consented to let the Bear Cats have the use of it. To show their appreciation last year, the Bear Cats undertook to beautify the library grounds and as a result they planted hedges, canons and grass.

On several occasions, socials and entertainments have been given at the library by different classes and organizations of the school.

The schools have access to all the library books which are of great necessity in our English and History work, because of the deficiency of the schools library.

The town as a whole has derived benefit from the library because of the fact that the numerous books which the library contains have been open to them for reading.

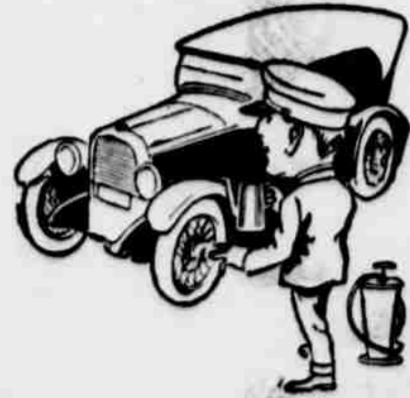

Numerous social events have occurred at different times at the library and these have been the main source of the social environment.

Much credit should be given the Magazine Club for their efforts in trying to furnish the town with a public library.

THE IDEAL REPUBLIC

The Free Press' Americanization Series

"For more than a century this nation has been a world power. For ten decades it has been the most potent influence in the world. Not only has it been a world power but it has done more to affect the politics of the human race than all the other nations of the world combined. Because our Declaration of Independence was promulgated, others have been promulgated. Because the patriots of 1776 fought for liberty, others have fought for it; because our Constitution was adopted, other constitutions have been adopted. The growth of the principal of self-government on American soil, has been the overshadowing political fact of the nineteenth century. It has made this nation conspicuous among the nations and give it a place in history such as no other nation has ever enjoyed. Nothing has been able to check the onward march of this idea. I am not willing that this nation shall cast aside the omnipotent weapon of truth to seize again the weapon of physical warfare. I would not exchange the glory of this Republic for the glory of all the empires that have risen and fallen since time began.

I can conceive of a national destiny, surpassing the glories of the present and the past—a destiny which meets the responsibilities of to-day and measures up to the responsibilities of the future. Behold a Republic resting securely upon the foundation stones quarried by revolutionary patriots from the mountain of eternal truth, a Republic applying in practice and proclaiming to the world the self-evident proposition that all men are created equal; that they are endowed with inalienable rights; that governments are instituted among men to secure these rights, and that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. Behold a Republic in which civil and religious liberty stimulates all to earnest endeavors and in which the law restrains every hand uplifted for a neighbor's injury—a Republic in which every citizen is a sovereign, but in which no citizen wears a crown. Behold a Republic standing erect while empires all around are bowing beneath the weight of their own armaments—a Republic whose flag is loved while other flags are only feared. Behold a Republic increasing in population, in wealth, in strength and in influence, solving the problems of civilization and hastening the coming of an universal brotherhood—a Republic which shakes thrones and dissolves aristocracies by its silent example and gives light and inspiration to those who sit in darkness. Behold a Republic gradually, but surely, becoming the supreme moral factor in the world's progress and the accepted arbiter of the world's disputes—a Republic whose history, like the path of the just, is as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.—W. J. Bryan.

HUSBAND AND WIFE MUST BOTH PAY POLL TAX

The following letter which has been received by County Tax Collector Chas. M. Conner concerning the Suffrage Amendment which was voted on in July and declared carried, is self-explanatory and should be of interest to our readers:

September 13th, 1921.

TO THE TAX COLLECTOR: The Suffrage Amendment submitted to the qualified electors of this State at the July election 1921, was on the 7th day of this month declared carried, and in accordance with the provisions therein, becomes self-enacting without the necessity of further Legislation.

Tax Collectors are therefore advised that either the husband or the wife can pay the poll tax of the other, without the payment of the Ad Valorem Tax assessed therewith but neither can pay the Ad Valorem Tax on community property covered by one assessment, with which the poll tax of each is assessed, without also paying both poll taxes.

If the husband and the wife, or either of them, have separate property and so render it, together with their respective Poll Taxes, then the Ad Valorem Tax of either can be paid if the Poll Tax assessed therewith is also paid.

Any voter subject to the payment of a Poll Tax shall have paid said tax before offering to vote at any election in this State, and shall hold a receipt showing that said Poll Tax was paid before the first day of February next preceding such election.

Yours Very Truly,
LON A. SMITH, Comptroller.

RECEIVES THREE CARS OF FORDS IN LAST THREE WEEKS

Lynn Pace, local Ford dealer, reports the receipt of three cars of Fords in the last three weeks. This is proof that Haskell county is in good shape, for all the cars were delivered as soon as they were assembled. Mr. Pace reports the assembling plant in Dallas 60 car loads behind with their orders, making it possible for other dealers to secure enough cars to supply demand.

TALKS OVER TELEPHONE TO BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

All records for long distance telephone conversation over the lines of the Haskell Telephone Co. lines was broken recently when a call was put through direct to Battle Creek, Mich. Mr. Don French, a salesman, whose home is in Battle Creek, put in a long distance call to his home about nine o'clock, and the call was put through and direct connection built up from the Cowart Hotel telephone booth in this city, to his home in Battle Creek. The call was put through at 11:35 p. m. and no repeaters were used. Mr. French talking direct to his home, Carl Maples, night operator at the local exchange, says that the voices were as distinct as if both parties had been talking here in the city, notwithstanding the fact that the lines over which the conversation took place traversed seven states—Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Missouri, Indiana, Illinois, and Michigan. We believe this is some record for long distance talking, but personally we could hardly enjoy spending $10.50 for a four minute conversation.

Why We Should Pay the Debt!

All should help the Magazine Club pay their indebtedness because it is incurred for all.

Men should help because women ask for help.

Business men should help because it is good business to do so.

Property owners should help because their work has added to the value of property in Haskell.

Preachers should help because the Magazine Club stands for the high ideals of their sermons.

Teachers should help because the Magazine Club stands for schools, first, last and all the time.

Pupils should help because the Magazine Club have helped them.

Mothers and fathers should help because the Magazine Club are for everything that means anything for the good of a child.

A Friend.

MAID OF THE MIST

By LUCRETIA LOWE.

©, 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Lenore was making speed. Crouching low to avoid the branches that overhung the river, she was fairly digging her paddle into the water and jerking it swiftly back for the next stroke. An alder stretched out its green fingers and snatched at the net which confined the wayward gold of Lenore's wonderful hair. The alder did more than tear the flimsy net; it loosened the pins and let the soft waves of hair fall free about the girl's shoulders. Tossing her head, Lenore sped on. The canoe leaped convulsively up the river.

Lenore was in a vicious mood. Less than an hour before she had returned to the donor a perfectly good solitaire diamond set in platinum. She had never supposed that Bob would break her engagement. But he had, and had even seemed glad to be rid of her. The quarrel had been silly enough.

It was over the matter of decorating the canoe that together they had planned to enter for the boat club regatta that night. Lenore had insisted upon pink lights in crepe paper rose-buds, and Bob had wanted a blue tartan mist effect with Lenore at the stern as Maid of the Mist. Lenore had stamped her foot in fury as Bob showed no inclination to yield to her wishes. In the next moment she had flung his ring back at him and her engagement was broken. She had flopped down to the pier, jumped into the lanthe and paddled away in a rage.

And now, several miles from the boat club, Lenore was still angry. She struck at a muskrat as he leaped from the bank. She tried to knock a turtle from a snag with her paddle. Then an island invited her to land. Always a creature of impulse, she ran the canoe ashore and jumped out. Her white kid slipper caught in the mire and stuck fast. Poising on one foot, Lenore debated whether or not to retrieve the slipper, and petulantly decided to abandon it for the present. She hopped to the top of a little knoll and, suddenly losing her balance, sat down precipitately on the grassy incline.

Turning over and lying out at full length, face down, she began to cry. Long she wept, until, wearied to exhaustion, she caught her breath in great irregular gasps, sighed many times, and fell asleep.

Little by little the river teased at the grounded canoe and finally drew it completely off from the shore.

It was the empty canoe that Bob met on his way up the river.

After beaching the empty canoe Bob's first impulse was to leave Lenore to her own devices. She had surprised him with her fit of anger and he had not reconciled this blazingly angry Amazon with the loving and lovable companion he had pictured her. But the strength of a kind habit of doing things for Lenore made him reluctantly decide to go to her rescue.

Bob did not hurry. He dawdled along, exerting himself just enough to make a slow progress against the current until he came to the island where Lenore slept. He saw traces of the keel of the lanthe and recognized, with a quick thrill, the white slipper in the mud.

Suddenly, through the opening in the bushes, he saw Lenore sleeping peacefully on the knoll, with her lovely hair spread about her. As Bob watched her he forgot the petty quarrel, the angry departure; he forgot his surprise and his own sudden anger, and he knew then, as he had never known before, how much this girl meant to him and to his whole life.

On the opposite side of the narrow island he moored his canoe and waited. When the full yellow moon loomed over the black wall of pines Lenore opened her eyes. Remembering the events of the afternoon, she sprang to her feet, and in the semi-darkness leaped over to pick her shoe out of the mud. Then she uttered a sharp cry. Her canoe was not there.

Tall and slender in the light of the moon, Lenore stood irresolutely on the edge of the island. The mist enshrouded her figure and seemed to catch and hold the moonlight in a hazy aura around the glory of her flowing hair. Her anger was gone, she was filled with a deep regret that she had quarreled so foolishly with Bob. Probably he was now at the regatta without her, some other girl playing the maid in his blue tartan mist.

"Maid of the Mist," she cried suddenly, with a sob at the end. "Oh, Bob, if you were only here to see me you would know that I am your Maid of the Mist!"

"Are you, my darling?" Bob stepped out of the bushes and clasped her in his arms. "Are you, and will you be my own dear Mist Maid?"

The Maid of the Mist did not enter the regatta, for long after the prizes were awarded a man and a girl in an undecorated canoe slipped down out of the darkness to the boat club and, although for a moment they looked down at the gay canoes on the river, they saw only the light in each other's eyes.

Must Be Proved.

"Well, Pat," said Bridget, "what kind of a bird have you brought home in that cage?"

"Well, it's a raven," replied Pat.

"A raven? And what did you bring home a bird like that for?"

"Well, I read in a paper the other night that a raven has been known to live for three hundred years. I don't believe it, so I am going to put it to the test."

INSOMNIA CURE

Victim Finally Finds Remedy.

Little Trick Brings Sleep to Man Who Counted Sheep in Vain.

Insomnia is mainly due to gas pressure on the nerve centers. You can get restful sleep until you get rid of the gas. The gas is due to fermentation of food. This fermentation is due to dietetic errors—by eating too much, or too quickly, or too often, or eating indigestible food, or food in wrong combinations.

REV. CULWELL TO ADDRESS SCHOOL LITERARY SOCIETIES

It is planned to have short joint programs for the Curtains Club and Bear Cat Literary Societies at their regular program periods—8:30 to 10:00 alternate Monday mornings. This feature of a joint program will be featured on each occasion by a brief fifteen or twenty-minute address by a well qualified speaker. These addresses will be chiefly along the lines of vocational guidance—a line of work to be stressed this year.

The first of these talks will be delivered Monday morning at the high school auditorium by Rev. Culwell, now pastor of the Methodist church of this city. His subject will be "The Ministry as a Life Work." It is fitting that the great calling on earth should occupy first place in this program of vocational guidance addresses.

A short program will accompany this principal feature. After the joint program, the two literary societies will divide for individual-program rendition. The Curtains will offer their program in the auditorium while the Bear Cats will render their at the Club Library. The school public is cordially invited to the joint program and to the individual society programs following.

Center Point School District is erecting a new school building which when completed will be one of the best rural school buildings in the country. It will be a building with three large rooms and all the modern conveniences and equipment. The trustees hope to have the building completed in time for use at the beginning of the school term and wagons are in daily for material.

MOTTLETONE EXPERT HOLDS DEMONSTRATION HERE

Miss Maude Kelley of Chicago, Ill., representing the DeVoe Paint Company held a three days demonstration of interior decoration with Mottletone this week at Spencer Lumber Co. "Mottletone" is one of the latest developments for interior decorations of walls and ceilings, and can be applied either over the paper or beaver board, etc. It makes a rather clever and striking finish, and is easily applied with a little practice. Mr. Couch, Manager of Spencer Lumber Co., predicts a growing demand for this style of finish.

As an introduction of "Mottletone" a guessing contest was held on all three days of the demonstration, the prize for each day being a supply of "Mottletone" sufficient to finish any room. A large painter's brush was displayed, and the contestant guessing nearest to the number of bristles in the brush each day was accorded the winner. George Foster won in the first days contest, Mrs. Chas Fouts the second, and Mrs. Clyde Elkins won on the third day.

JACK CLIFT TAKES ABILENE LAUNDRY AGENCY

Jack Clift of this city has taken over the agency for the Abilene Steam Laundry from James Odell, whose health necessitates a change of climate. The NEW EDISON is positively the only phonograph that can sustain the acid test of direct comparison with the living artist. It has given this amazing performance of direct comparison over 5,000 times before over four million people.

This Picture Means Something To You!

THIS picture is sketched from an actual photograph made of Bamboschek, principal conductor of the Metropolitan Opera, listening to the great Muzio sing in comparison with the New Edison's RE-CREATION of her voice. After the comparison, Bamboschek in amazement said: "I have heard a comparison between Miss Claudia Muzio's voice and its RE-CREATION by the New Edison. I consider that the quality of Miss Muzio's living voice and the quality of her RE-CREATED voice are identical."

Is Bamboschek's Judgment Good Enough For You?

BAMBOSCHEK knows every note of Muzio's voice as you know the voice of the one nearest and dearest to you—and he pronounced Muzio's voice and its RE-CREATION on the New Edison IDENTICAL. Can you ask for any more—or could there be any more, positive proof that the New Edison gives you the performance of great artists with perfect, life-like realism? And it is significant, that only the New Edison dares to make direct comparison with the living artist or artists.

BETSY By GRACE C. FREESE.

© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Betsy stood looking into a store window with the same curious intensity of desire found in a child flattening its nose against the pane at the sight of unobtainable sweets, for with her, also, desirability rested largely upon the impossibility of attainment.

Betsy did not know this. She saw only one thing—a perfect card index, such as she had always dreamed of. She stood before it with rapt gaze. First it was her cooking recipes which she saw neatly catalogued, then her dress patterns. Again it was a list of all the books she had read. Betsy breathed a rapurous sigh as she turned reluctantly to go home.

Her sister's greeting held his usual tart note: "H'm, late for dinner. And you the methodical member of the family?" But Betsy, unheeding, saw distinctly only the object of her adoration, wreathed as it were in an aura of glory. "Such a perfect card catalogue," she breathed.

Emily glanced up. "Where'd you see it?"

"Over's window. It would be perfect for my recipes, or my letters, or—"

"Gee's bills," supplied Emily. "To receive this morning." Betsy frowned. Aside from the joy of cataloging them, bills did not interest her. Nevertheless they must be attended to. She turned to the task assigned her as the methodical member of the family, and soon reduced the bills to a hopeless muddle, from which, as usual, her sister found it necessary to extract her.

Emily sorted them out. "How much was that card catalogue?" she demanded suddenly. "I didn't notice," Betsy was startled. "Guess I'll get it some Christmas," returned Emily. "It might pay."

Betsy looked at her sister queerly and left the room. Her own perturbation surprised her. To own a card catalogue had never occurred to her. Ever since she could remember she had dreamed of what could be done with this ideal possession, and it was this alone which constituted her claim as the methodical member. Her family had entirely overlooked the fact that this dreaming was the sole evidence she had ever given of orderliness of any kind.

Never for a moment had Betsy faced the possibility of actually owning one of the cherished objects. She was satisfied simply to imagine. But Emily seldom spoke lightly, and Betsy's joy at the thought of possession was a little dimmed. What would she catalogue?

Emily would expect her to do the bills, but the very thought of it tired her a little. Not her recipes, for the old book she had always used was indispensable. Her letters—where were they? They could be found in every corner of the house. Betsy shrugged her shoulders.

"Never trouble trouble till trouble troubles you," she murmured, and forgot the problem temporarily. But Emily remembered, and Emily, though sharp of tongue, was kind of heart, and was saving up to buy Betsy a card index. It would take three years' savings, but Emily did not grudge a penny. She cherished the family tradition that Betsy was methodical, and she determined that at least her sister should have the desire of her heart.

"Perhaps," thought Emily when it arrived, "Betsy won't need my advice now about the bills." Advice was an inadequate word to describe the bulk of the work, but still Emily blushed at her selfish thought.

On Christmas day Betsy took her sister and her new card catalogue to her room with unfeigned reluctance. For the first time in years she had a moment of perfect happiness. It was not, indeed, until she had glanced over her new possession for a week, that she began to have a qualm. What should she catalogue? The old question was now startlingly insolent, and she could find no satisfactory answer.

It was the middle of January before Emily spoke. "The bills and receipts ought to be filed up," she suggested. "You can catalogue them now, you know."

Betsy shrank. This was just what she had begun to fear, and desperation furnished her with a reply. "Oh," she answered hastily. "I thought our lists of vegetable and flower seeds would be about the right thing for my new card catalogue. I've begun to arrange them."

For a moment the scales seemed lifted from Emily's eyes, and she seemed to see the real confusion and lack of order in her sister's mind. But the tradition was strong in her, and the glimpse was a brief one. "I suppose a methodical person would think of details like that," she sighed, and fell to sorting the bills.

But the Home Paper Told It!

"Wasn't it fine about Priscilla getting honors in her school work last term?" said Mrs. Smith to Mrs. Brown. "What?" asked Mrs. Brown. "I didn't know about it."

"But it was in the Home Town Paper," replied Mrs. Smith. "Don't you take it?" "No," said Mrs. Brown, "but I am going to."

And she did, for this is a true story. As much a part of the community life as is the school or church is the Home Town Paper.

Strong for Home Paper

"No, I don't take the local paper any more," one farmer said to another as they were waiting at the creamery to unload their milk. They had just been looking at a poster advertising "Subscribe for Your Home Town Paper Week, November 7-12." "I take a daily paper, and that's about all I need. It has a few items every week from our community, and I feel that I save two dollars a year by not subscribing to the home paper."

"Well, that's one way to look at it," said the other farmer, "but I've always felt that a local newspaper was a pretty valuable asset to any community, and if everybody took the attitude you do, there couldn't be any local newspaper. Of course we could not get along without our daily papers, because they keep us informed about what's going on throughout the nation and throughout the world, but when you say that they take care of our local news, I don't think you are sticking close to facts. They simply can't, and the publishers haven't the way our editor has."

"I have always felt that I got value received for every dollar I've paid out in subscriptions to the local paper, and I don't have an idea that running a country newspaper is any more of a wealth-producing proposition than running a farm. So long as I've got two dollars I intend that the rural mail carrier is going to tuck a copy of the home paper in his box every week."

That farmer knows that the community newspaper is a necessity in his home; that without it his home would be incomplete and his part in the community would be unsatisfactory to himself and his family. He knows the full value of the local newspaper as an institution.

Magazine Club Notes

The Club was called to order at the usual time on Friday afternoon, Oct. 14th. The main theme of discussion during the business meeting, was the money campaign, which the ladies are putting on to lift the debt on the Club building. Through this plan every citizen will be given an opportunity to contribute and we feel reasonably sure that everyone has an interest in the building. From the first it has not only been a public library, but a meeting place for all who are interested in the social, civic and general life of the town and community.

Following the business session, Mrs. Fields was leader in a lesson on the two English poets, Blake and Burns, which proved to be an intensely interesting one. Mrs. Carline Lewis had a splendid paper on Blake and Myrtle, then Mrs. Ernest Grissom read one of her most touching poems, "The Little Black Boy."

Mrs. Murchison gave an interesting sketch on "Burns the Love Poet." The discussion on the lives and character of the two men was entered into with a zest that proved everyone was thoroughly interested and had given time to the preparation of the lesson.

The closing number of the program, was an unusual and enjoyable feature; two songs, "Comin' Through the Rye" and "Thou Gentle Sweet Afton," sung by Mesdames J. U. Fields, R. V. Robertson, R. H. English and O. E. Patterson.

Mrs. Fields assisted by Mesdames Hughes and Murchison, served delicious refreshments to those present. We were glad to have as visitors Mrs. R. V. Robertson and Mrs. Hardy Grissom.

The Bear Cat Literary Society

Program for October 24. Song—Club. Brief Sketch of America's History before 1492—Jack Sutherland. Piano Solo—Jessie Ward. History of America from 1492 to 1783—Helga Anderson. Reading—Louise Buchanan. Song—Misses Irby, Key, Pore, Hunt and Smith, Messrs. Oates, English, Weinert, Ratliff and Kuhn. America's History from 1783 through a Civil War—Vesta Baker. Declaration—Jerome Sanders. Jokes—Gib Smith. Critic Report.

It was decided by the faculty to spend fifteen minutes of our club time for a game meeting. Both clubs thought this a good idea, so we could learn something of each other's work. We wish to extend a hearty welcome to all the public to attend all of our meetings.

New Millinery

We continue to receive new and stunning hats in our millinery department almost every day and you will be surprised at the wonderful showing that we have today. We have the smartest hats of the season—each perfect in every detail, before it is offered for your approval—and they are priced so moderate that we cannot resist the temptation of calling your attention to them.

The success of our millinery business has been attained by offering the public the very best styles that can be procured at a price they can afford to pay.

If you have not purchased your new fall hat—we will be glad for you to come in and visit our millinery department.

KNOX COUNTY POULTRY SHOW

NOVEMBER 11th and 12th

The Knox County Poultry Association will hold its semi-annual show at Monday, Texas, on Friday and Saturday the 11th and 12th of November. This is the second show since the organization of the Association, and plans are being made for the largest show ever pulled off in this part of the country. We have some of the best agricultural land in West Texas, and there is no reason why we should not also excel in the raising of pure bred poultry, as our climate is well adapted for the raising of poultry.

The management of the show has made ample arrangements to take care of all visitors, and to entertain all visitors, and a special invitation is issued to the people of Knox, Baylor, Haskell and Jones counties, to attend this show, and if possible to arrange for an exhibit.

Edwin Heald is the corresponding secretary and is giving much time to the work.

Tanlac is made of roots, herbs and barks and contains no minerals or opiates. Sold in Haskell at Reid's Drug Store and at all leading druggists.

Guy Sherrill left Wednesday morning for Ft. Worth and Dallas and other points on business.

WIT AND HUMOR

Bobbie: What is a committee, pa?
Father: A committee, my son, is something that takes a week to do what one good man can do in an hour.
Things That Never Were
"What do you say if we go to the movies, Tommy?"
"No—sorry, dad—school, you know."

The Public's Humor
Max Beerholm, in an essay on "The Humor of the Public," compiles a list of the themes which amuse people:
"Mothers-in-law, henpecked husbands, twins, old maids, Jews, Frenchmen, Germans, Italians, niggers (not Russians, or other foreigners of any denomination), fatness, thinness, long hair (worn by a man), baldness, sea-sickness, stuttering, bad cheese."

A Big Order
He: Have you ever kissed a man before?
She (falteringly): Y-yes.
He (excitedly): Tell me his name, so I can thank him.
She: But—but—he might be too many for you.—Michigan Gargoyles.

The Point of View—Doctor: I have just seen your husband. He is in splendid condition for his age.
Frivolous Wife: Yes, doctor, but not mine.—Le Journal Amusant (Paris).

Incandescence
Oh, papa! Last night in the parlor he called me the light of his life, the flame of his soul.
"Humph. Funny you have to burn so much gas with that illumination."

Give Hellen Time
Christian Science Infant (aged five): Mamma, when Hellen falls down and bumps her head, why doesn't she say, "The Divine Mind governs all?"

Malace Prepsne
"Cook left, eh?"
"Yes, she was too good. During the month she was with us my wife gained twenty pounds."
"Where is she now?"
"My wife managed to work her off on a woman she detests."—Boston

His Petition—"Lord," prayed the old colored brother, "don't send more blessings than I can take care of, but when they get a good start, and act like they want to keep coming, don't stop 'em!" Atlanta Constitution.

Home Brew—"I can't understand why people don't come to church now. War widows, at least ought to come!"
"No, it's through this spiritualism. They prefer to stop at home and chatter with their departed husbands!"

The Modern Spirit
Two little boys who prided themselves on their courage were sitting over the nursery fire and discussing apparitions. "But," said one very confidentially, "shouldn't you really be in a most awful funk if you did see a ghost—a most evil-looking one, I mean?"
"Good gracious, no!" was the bashful reply. "I should just say, carelessly, in a throaty voice, 'Good evening, Devil, going strong? What?'"

HASKELL HOTEL UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

Mrs. Roberts of Gorman, Texas, has taken charge of the Haskell Hotel. The rooms have been thoroughly renovated and placed in first class condition and your patronage will be appreciated. 43-4tp.

Mr. Geo. Pryor of Stamford, District Manager for Brazelton Lumber Co., transacted business in the city today.

I. A. Brooks, who is with the Haskell Ice & Light Co., has just completed a beautiful little cottage.

T. E. L. Class of the Baptist Sunday School, met in the class room Sunday morning with sixteen members present. Our teacher Mr. Daugherty, being absent, Mrs. Chas. Conner was teacher for the morning, and lead in a helpful and interesting lesson on the 13th chapter of 1st Corinthians. Three new members were enlisted in the class and we hope to add others from Sunday to Sunday.

This class includes all married women and those who come will be assured a hearty welcome.

Coles Kaigler Home on Furlough
Coles Kaigler, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Kaigler, of this city, is in the city this week on a thirty-days furlough from the navy. Coles enlisted in the navy something like two years ago, and has re-enlisted for another term. He says that the navy suits him fine, that there is plenty of room for advancement for any ambitious young man. His many friends here are glad to see him. Coles is stationed at San Diego, Calif., which is the base of operations of the Pacific Fleet.

New Methodist Pastor Arrives
Rev. S. L. Cuiwell and family arrived in the city this week from Seymour, where he has been pastor of the Methodist church of that city for the past two years. Rev. Cuiwell was assigned to the Haskell church at the Northwest Texas Conference at Amarillo. He comes to our city highly recommended, and we extend to him and his family a very hearty welcome.

HASKELL TELEPHONE CO. TO ISSUE NEW DIRECTORY

The Haskell Company will issue a new telephone directory in the near future and anyone who does not have a telephone in their residence or place of business and are planning to install one are requested to notify the company at once, in order that their name may appear in the new directory.

This request is made by the telephone people in order that the new directory may be as complete as possible. Do not neglect this, do it today, as the list of names and numbers will be made up next week.

HOW TO BE SUCCESSFUL

Have Friend Tell You What Your Most Serious Faults Are and Correct Them.

A million people may read this article. Some have been successes in the battle of life, others haven't. Some will be successes, others won't. It may be too late to save the non-successes; but there is time to rescue a hundred thousand or more of those who, ordinarily, would recruit the army of the unsuccessful.

To them I would say this: speaks a writer in the London Answers: Not one of us is perfect. You may be qualified to do the work which you have to do. You may do it efficiently, but are you even now conscious that there is a something which hinders your progress?

Assuming a reply in the negative, then the chances are a hundred to one that what you need to accelerate your progress and establish your success is a candid friend.

I could set down here the names of three men who are successes in life. It is highly probable that they would have been failures, or but part successes, had it not been for a candid friend. The latter, seeing them day by day, watched their development, and marked the beginning of each fault, each flaw, each idiosyncrasy. These handicaps. And the handicap increases as the fault, or whatever it is, develops.

One of the men is a young barrister. He had the brains, the gift of speech, knowledge, and some influence. But he developed a flaw, an idiosyncrasy. How it started he knows not; but in the courts, when pleading, he began to wear a sort of insane smile. His candid friend told him of it, and the smile came off.

A clergyman who to-day is a canon, and will go farther, has several times been rescued by a candid friend. As a curate he developed a trick of sticking his head ludicrously forward and blinking. The candid friend cured him.

Instances could be multiplied, but you see the point?

Select a friend, and invest him with the office of candid friend to yourself. Tell him that you desire him to tell you, with no apologies and no kindly dilution of his criticism, what your faults, developed and developing, are. And then take the medicine and cure yourself.—London Answers.

Japan's Original Name.

The English word "Japan" and the Japanese "Nihon" or "Nippon" are alike corruptions of Yih-pen, the Chinese pronunciation of two characters literally meaning "sun origin"; that is, "the place the sun comes from"—a name given to Japan by the Chinese on account of the position of the archipelago to the east of their own country.

From Chinese Yih-pen, says the East and West News, the Japanese derived the present name Nippon, which was officially adopted, according to the history, in A. D. 670. Before that time the usual native designation of the country was Yamato, properly the name of one of the central provinces. Yamato is the name still preferred in poetry and belles-lettres.

The English name Japan seems to have originated with the Portuguese, who spelled the Chinese Yih-pen Japon, the letter J being silent or similar to H according to their language. This is the way the Spanish and the Portuguese still pronounce Japan. From "Japon" came the English Japan.

On His Way.

A professor had promised to deliver a lecture in London, but owing to the poor train service he found he had very little time to spare if he was to get to the hall in time. On arriving in London all he could find was a "growler."

"Drive as fast as you can!" he shouted to the cabby as he jumped in. The cabby whipped up his horse and after 10 minutes' furious driving the professor put his head out of the window.

"Do you know where you're driving me?" he asked.
"No," growled the cabby, "but I'm driving as fast as I can."

May Secure Famous Building.

An American educator has been trying to buy, as a Franco-American memorial, a building that few Americans ever heard of, though it has been called the "baptismal font of America." It is the house in Saint Die, on the Meurthe river, about six miles from the old German frontier, in which in 1507 the name America was first put upon the printed page and engraved upon the map. In the same neighborhood soldiers of the first separate American unit wrote the name of their country in their blood.—Youth's Companion.

All Around.

Mary's hair was curly and her mother had allowed it to grow naturally until a few weeks ago, when she sent her to the barber shop to get it cut. She was gone quite a while, and then she came rushing breathlessly home. "Oh, family," she cried in great glee. "Now I have bangs in the back just like them in the front."

Fitting Ornament.

"Lydia has such a nice sense of the appropriate."
"What made you notice it particularly just now?"
"Didn't you see she carried a gun metal bag with her 'shot silk dress'?"—Baltimore American.

THE GIRL ON THE JOB

How to Succeed—How to Get Ahead—How to Make Good

By JESSIE ROBERTS

DO YOU WANT SUCCESS?

DO YOU want to make a success of your business life, or do you put that second to having a good time? Don't complain if you can't have both. The girl who runs around from party to party is not going to get to her work in the best state for doing it well. Her mind is not clear, her body is not alert. She is tired.

Are you willing to do the uninteresting part of your job well, or do you slur what you don't like in it? Every job has its grind side. But to succeed you must make that grind worth while by doing it well. It is part of the price you pay for success.

You must keep in good physical condition if you want success. You need proper rest, enough sleep and healthful food. You need exercise in the open air. Keeping fit is part of the price you must pay for success.

A number of girls regard an office as a sort of matrimonial bureau. Their first idea is to be fascinating to the male element. But if that is what you are after, don't say you want success in your business, and don't be surprised if you see other girls who do want success get advancement while you stay put.

Success is a big thing. The successful woman is not afraid of losing her job. She knows that her work is so good that an employer will be lucky to get her, or that, if she is in business for herself, she is sure of results. But success is not an accident.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"GUILLOTINE."

ACCORDING to history as it is popularly accepted, the instrument by which criminals are automatically beheaded was invented by Joseph Ignace Guillotine, who was also the first victim of the machine. Outside of the fact that Doctor Guillotine neither invented the apparatus nor perished by it, the general impression of the matter is fairly correct.

The original model for the guillotine was constructed by a German piano-maker named Schmitt, under the direction of Doctor Louis, a French surgeon, who in turn obtained his idea from the manaja, a somewhat similar instrument which had been used in the Latin countries for centuries. At first, the invention was known as the "Louison," but, owing to the fact that Doctor Guillotine waged ceaseless warfare upon the barbarities of the rack and the wheel and continually urged the adoption of this more humane method of inflicting death penalty, his name was indelibly associated with it. On March 25, 1792, the national assembly passed the resolution recommending the use of the machine in all French prisons and it was publicly used a month later in the beheading of a prisoner named Pelletier.

Far from perishing by the invention, which, despite his protests, was called by his name, Doctor Guillotine died in his bed in 1814—having achieved a vicarious fame which he did not desire and to which he was not entitled.

Indigestion

Many persons, otherwise vigorous and healthy, are bothered occasionally with indigestion. The effects of a disordered stomach on the system are dangerous, and prompt treatment of indigestion is important. The only medicine I have needed has been something to aid digestion and clean the liver. writes Mr. Fred Ashby, a McKinney, Texas, farmer. "My medicine is for indigestion and stomach trouble of any kind. I have never found anything that touches the spot, like Theford's Black-Draught. I take it in between meals after meals.
