WABIC announces new economic development director

SPECIAL TO THE WINTERS ENTERPRISE

Laura

M. Day

The Winters Area Business and Industrial Corporation has announced the selection of Laura M. Day as the new economic development director for Winters. She began on October 17, replacing Randall Conner who has served for several years.

Laura is a graduate of Win-ters High School, and went on to receive a Bachelor of Fine Arts from Angelo State University. She married Shawn Day of Coleman who is also an ASU graduate. They both worked for a concessioner to the National Park Service, and spent several years living and working in Yellowstone, Lake Powell, Big Sky Montana, and Colorado. She has spent the last 10 years, and 19 years in total, working for a large, privately-owned family resort in Colorado.

Laura and Shawn recently returned to Winters to be near family and friends.

The Winters Area Business and Industrial Corporation (WABIC) was formed by several local business leaders in 1993 to encourage new and existing business ventures in Winters and to promote economic development in the area. Currently, Jim Lincycomb serves as president, Jerry Sims is vicepresident, and Cheryl Bryan is secretary. Other board members include Paul Airhart. Craig Gehrels, Ken Slimp,

The last drop

Runnels County remained dry last week and unseasonably warm weather has returned to the area according to the National Weather Service in San Angelo.

A mild cold front moved the area Tuesday bringing a slight chance of showers.

The temperature is expected to be in the 70s by game time Friday, but it could get cool so jackets are in order for those cold natured fans. Rain is not in the forecast for the coming week, but again warmer weather will prevail, bringing high temperatures down to the low to mid 80s and lows in to the upper 50s.

So far this year, Ballinger has received 23.93 nches of rainfall, with 29.31 inches reported in Wingate and 29.39 inches received in San Angelo.

Winters Senior Center temporarily shuts down

City mulling over policies procedures

BY CELINDA HAWKINS MANAGING EDITOR WINTERS ENTERPRISE chawkins@ballingerledger.com

The Winters Senior Citizen Activity Center is temporarily closed, while city officials mull over the policies and procedures pertaining to the city-owned building.

On Friday, the seniors who hold a variety of activities at the center, turned in the key to the city and retrieved their belongings from the center.

Last week, seniors who frequent the center for daily activities like Canasta, brownbag lunches and a Friday night pot luck, were not happy after learning that the utilities were being shut off by the county. The utilities were temporarily restored by a member of the seniors group.

On Monday, DLC Realty Corp. allowed the seniors who play Canasta to utilize a space in their building on South Main indefinitely.

"We told them that they are welcome to use this space and store their supplies here," said Jill Davis who with her husband owns nounced dead at the scene of the accident that occurred at 8:06 p.m. Friday night.

According to the report, Newton was a passenger in a 2000 Toyota 4-Runner driven by Eddie Clint Johnson, Jr. 25 of Ballinger. Johnson was reportedly traveling north on U.S. 83 when he was struck by a 2011 Chevrolet Malibu driven by Rosendo Flores Ovalles, 60, of Winters, in the northbound lane.

Johnson was transported to Shannon Medical Center in San Angelo with serious incapacitating injuries according to the report.

The report did not indicate if Ovalles was injured in the crash. However, troopers are investigating whether alcohol was involved in the crash.

Johnson's vehicle was sent into the southbound lane where it was struck by a 2011 Chevrolet Traverse driven by Kristen Marie Dennis, 28, of Mertzon. Dennis and passenger Tyson Den-nis, 3, also of Mertzon, were treated and released from Shannon Medical Center in San Angelo.

Sgt. Frederick Biddle, spokesman for the DPS, said that in a fatal crash, blood is taken from all drivers involved. So far, no results have been released.

Further charges are pending results of the blood work, Biddle said. All of the persons involved in the accident were wearing seatbelts. The accident remains under investigation.

The Market Perspective Waiting

Crude prices held firm on Friday, despite a strengthening dollar and comments from Russia's top oil producer that it could increase its production if demand requires.

Brent crude, the global oil benchmark, rose 0.2% to $51.46 a barrel on London's ICE Futures exchange. On the New York Mercantile Exchange, West Texas Intermediate futures were unchanged at $50.63 a barrel.

The recent oil price rally, triggered by the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries announcement in September of plans to implement a production cut, has stalled this week.

Oil prices have fallen for the past two days after U.S. oil prices hit a fresh one-year high Wednesday. The drop reflects the sentiment that the recent rally is unsustainable as the world remains oversupplied and the glut is shrinking at a slower pace than previously thought. Wall Street Journal Energy Report, Friday Oct 21, 2016. That pretty well sums up just where we are regarding energy prices. I would disagree with the statement that the drop reflects over supply.

As we have noted time and again, oil prices move on unconscious social mood, not supply and demand. In fact the entire rally from the Februarlow at $24 to a double at $52, happened during reports of over-supply. And now that we are at $50, the reports are the same, but the price advanced anyway. The pullback from the $50 area is rather a natural market reaction to a short term over bought condition.

We don't use it in the south but we are moving into Heating Oil season. Heating oil has moved from its February low of $.90 to new highs at $1.60. Again this is a bullish move. Natural gas futures have more than doubled from the February lows. Price moved from $1.60 to $3.40 and are now puling back there as well.

All of which raises an interesting question. What SHOULD the price of crude oil be? I got to thinking about that this week. Thanks to fluctuation social mood, the price never stays constant and is always fluctuating. Indeed prices swing from levels to low to sustain the industry such as $24 last February to the Jack Beanstalk level of $110 three years ago.

A proper price should allow:

for producers to make a profit,

consumers to be able to plan energy expenditures, and explorers to actually consider the risk reward of going into debt to potentially find more oil.

And bankers and hedge funds would do well to think the same way before extending credit.

That last requirements is particularly tomato, grapes, choice of milk.

Monday Chef salad or corndog or peanut butter & jelly sandwich, onion rings, baked beans, salad, carrot sticks, applesauce, choice of milk.

Tuesday Chef salad or frito pie or soft taco, cheesy potatoes, salad, zesty cucumbers, pears w/ cherries, cookie, choice of milk.

Thursday Salad or Chicken Fried Stek or oven fried chicken, mashed potatoes, corn, gravy, carrot sticks, dinner roll, strawberries, choice lenders gaily throw money at start-ups, certain hat triple digit prices are the new normal.

Anyone with a price history could see that this was a short two to three year event but who's given to reason in a parabolic price rise?

Make no mistake, it is the busts that cause the real damage. Firms slash employment, those pink slipped swear off the industry forever, and boom towns are left with over hanging debt and a now shrinking tax base to support it.

Humans being humans governed by unconscious social mood, I doubt this will change. But a $50-$60 level would seem to make more sense and at least that is where we are now. Investment is coming back to fields in the Permian Basin.

For now look for support for oil prices at $45-50. Natural Gas looks much better and should hold on to recent gains. And there is one more thing. An old adage states that most of the time, the stock market goes nowhere. That has not been the case most of the time since year 2000 but it has been the last few months. I have been expecting lower prices but the weekly trends have yet to break down.

The Dow needs a weekly close under 18,100 while the S & P needs to break. Otherwise we are at short term support at these levels.

VETERANS CORNER

Van Zant

Central Texas Opportunities still has lots of money left for veterans. If you missed my first article, CTO received a grant from the Texas Veterans Commission for veteran's assistance in our area. We must use this grant by the end of the year or will not be considered for one next year. They will pay lots of benefits including one-time utility assistance (that includes the water bill), rent or mortgage, dental and medical services and many more. All you have to do is get the form from city hall, fill out part of it, with a copy of your driver's license, DD214, the bill, and they will pay it. This grant does not consider your income. They paid my electric bill this month and I am very appreciative. CTO can be contacted at 325-625-4167. If you are a vet, surviving spouse, or dependent, use this money. If you need help with the form, I am there to help. For more information, contact Sandra at the Veterans Service Office at 602 Strong Ave. on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., or call 365-3612.

Man arrested for attempting to sell items on social media

STAFF REPORT

SAN ANGELO - A 26-year-old San Angelo man who attempted to sell stolen merchandise on Facebook was arrested Thursday, Oct. 20 at a residence in the 100 block of West Avenue D in San Angelo.

Just before 10 p.m. on October 18, police responded to a burglary of a building report at the Freedom Mini-Storage facility located at 910 W. 29th Street. Victims advised the reporting officer that several pieces of music equipment were stolen from their unit. The property was valued at just over $4,400. Just before midnight Thursday, police were dispatched to meet the burglary victims who said they recognized their stolen property in a Facebook advertisement and made arrangements to meet the seller, listed as Cory Valadez, at the residence on W. Avenue D. Officers proceeded to W. Avenue D in an attempt to locate Valadez and observed a man who matched Valadez's description exiting a white Ford Mustang with a black hood. The man was detained and confirmed to be Cory Joe Valadez. While on scene, officers observed some of the suspected stolen music equipment through a house window. The property matched the items that Valadez posted for sale on Facebook and a search warrant for the property was obtained.

During the search, Officers located several pieces of the stolen music equipment, which was later released to the victims. Other items suspected of being stolen property were seized and tagged into evidence.

Valadez was transported to Police Headquarters for questioning and subsequently arrested for Burglary of a Building and fied as 59-yearold Sylvia Rodriguez was arrested at the scene for interfering with the investigation and refusing to cooperate with official orders. Rodriquez was charged with Interference with public duties and transported to the Tom Green County Jail.

He remained in custody Tuesday, on bonds total-

However, Yates said Tuesday that the city will take responsibility for paying the electric and gas. The city already takes care of maintenance as well as the water, sewer and trash service at the building located on Wood Street.

Last week, the utilities were temporarily restored by John Long, who heads up the Friends of the Seniors of Winters group.

the county discontinued funding for the program as of Oct. 1 and County Auditor Cindy Winchester said it was a liability for the county to continue paying utilities on a building the county did not own.

"I take full responsibility for having the utilities shut off," Winchester said.

County attorney Ken Slimp and ultimately commissioners agreed to shut the utilities off. Winchester said she notified Winters Mayor Lisa Yates that the utilities would be shut off. Maegan Schwartz, Kendra Bryant, and Jeff Tarr.

WABIC is a private corporation in that it is not a governmental entity and has no taxing authority. It is public in that it was established for the benefit of the Winters community and works closely with local governments—city, hospital, school, and county. It is a non-profit corporation and no board member can receive financial benefit from the revenues of WABIC.

The primary source of income for the operation of WABIC is derived from rental income.

The Economic Development Director is responsible for coordinating economic development activities, including working with local businesses to create new jobs, trying to attract new business, helping existing businesses to grow, working to develop community infra-structure, and promoting beautification and good public relations for Winters.

THE IDLE AMERICAN Words Can Hurt Us...

The old adage first appeared in an American publication in 1862. Generally, we have gone along with the declaration that sticks and stones can be "bone-breakers." That words are skating by without harmful effects, however, hasn't been true for decades--maybe never. When they first saw the light of day, words weren't assaulting us so often and

Yep, words--in addition to sticks and stones--pack powerful punches, too. How history, I heartily recommend looking for "humor nuggets." Nowadays, we have to dig deeper for them. We will do well to keep sharp eyes out--even for messages on old t-shirts, and on pages of books so dusty, dust covers gave up on them

Two t-shirt messages worthy of note were spotted during a pleasurable walk recently in the Caribbean. (Better stated, it was a deck walk on Carnival Cruise Line's Freedom.)One was worn by a veteran husband who might rather have chosen "sleeping in," but he walked anyway. He might even have "seconded the motion" when his wife announced how they'd start the day. The message on his shirt? "We don't need Google. My wife knows everything."

Another t-shirt was a "puzzler" for me and others. Walkers halted, noting "La--a" on her shirt. She dared anyone to pronounce her name correctly. I--and others-tried; we all failed.

"LaDASHa," she claimed....

I always take books along to read on cruises. One included this time was I Feel Better All Over Than I Do Anywhere Else. One of four books authored by Dr. Randall O'Brien, it is a compendium of experiences and stories--mostly the former. He's a valued friend who has pretty much "done it all" and is still at it. about the current exchanges by presidential candidates? I won't go there, given that one of the purposes of this column is to elicit smiles. There's little to smile about these days when political fires are stoked by words often poorly cho-sen, but boldly expressed. He and Kay now are in their fifth decade of marriage. Randall wrote of arriving home for dinner one evening during the first month following their wedding ceremony in 1975. She met him at the door, tears flowing. "Oh, honey," she said, "The dog ate the meatloaf I cooked for supper.

"I held her tight," he said. "Oh, I'm so sorry. Don't worry, honey. I'll buy you another dog.'

A self-described "redneck country boy," Randall wrote that he "blew it--bad, bad, bad." Yep, he's a survivor, but one who always wants to help out when he can. Randall has a scripture suggestion for new hubbies whose marriages may not be quite so solid: "Those who guard their mouths preserve their lives." (Proverbs 13:3a)....

TEXAS HISTORY MINUTE Lloyd Bentsen a gentle giant in Texas politics career rebounded and he won re-election easily in 1976 and 1982. He was a moderate politically. He Lloyd supported Bentsen civil rights, environmental protection, and the Equal Rights Amendment, while promoting deregulation and business interests. His expertise in business and finance was recognized by both parties. In 1983, he became chairman of the Joint Economic Committee. By 1987, Bentsen had become chairman of the influential Senate Finance Committee, a position he would hold for six years. Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts won the Democratic nomination for president in 1988 and quickly chose Bentsen as his running mate. It would be a rematch of sorts from 1970, but on a national scale, as George H. W. Bush won the Republican nomination. The Dukakis campaign, however, quickly faltered after a series of missteps. In the vice-presidential debate, Bentsen uttered one of the memorable lines of the whole campaign. Then-Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle attempted to compare his experience to President John F. Kennedy when Bentsen replied, "I knew Jack Kennedy. Jack Kennedy was a friend of mine. Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy." As much as his performance in the debate and on the campaign trail energized Democrats nationally, the ticket was defeated that November and Bush became president. In spite of the defeat in the presidential election, Bentsen was able to win re-election to the Senate at the same time. In 1993, President Bill Clinton appointed him as Secretary of the Treasury. He resigned in 1994 as his health began to decline. He was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom for his service in 1999. He died at his home in Houston in 2006.

spotlight. Bentsen was a gentle giant in Texas politics, a gentleman in a time in which politics was becoming increasingly bitter.

Lloyd Millard Bentsen, Jr., was born in Mission in South Texas in 1921. His grandfather had been a Danish immigrant who came to the United States and started a farm in South Dakota. His father, Lloyd Bentsen, Sr., arrived in the Rio Grande Valley at age 24 in 1918 to improve his fortunes. He arrived penniless and grew to become one of the most important businessmen and ranchers in the region.

The future senator grew up on his father's ranch un-til he graduated high school. He attended the University of Texas, earning a law degree by 1942. With America fighting World War II, he enlisted in the U.S. Army Air Force and rose to command a squadron of B-24 bombers. He flew thirtyfive missions and earned the Distinguished Flying Cross. He was honorably discharged after the war as a lieutenant colonel but would serve in the reserves from 1950 to 1959. He returned to Hidalrespected figure in Congress and worked closely with Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, a fellow Texan. With a wife and growing family, Bentsen stepped down from Congress in 1955 and started a successful insurance company in Houston and also served on the board of directors of several energy companies.

In 1970, Bentsen reentered politics, challenging liberal Sen. Ralph Yarbrough in the Democratic Primary. Bentsen scored a surprise win in the hard-fought contest. In spite of the divisive primary, Yarbrough endorsed Bentsen in the fall contest, the Democrats united, and Bentsen went on to win against George H. W. Bush with a comfortable 53% of the vote.

In 1975, Bentsen announced a run for president. However, his efforts faltered and lost the Democratic nomination to former Georgia governor Jimmy Carter. Nevertheless, Bentsen's
