B-1B leading Air Force into future

Chief of staff says bomber viable for years to come

Shortly after landing from a recent flight in the B-1B, Air Force chief of staff Gen. Larry D. Welch applauded the aircraft's performance and predicted that its role as a viable deterrent could easily span three decades.

"The fact is that the B-1B is perfectly capable of performing its full, planned, strategic nuclear mission today as it stands on the ramp at Ellsworth [AFB, S.D.]," the general said, countering critics of the bomber.

"The newest B-52 is 28 years old," General Welch said, adding that planned upgrades to the B-1B should give it a similar lifespan and give the Air Force breathing room for an orderly development and testing of the B-2.

"So we have to look beyond just the near term when we think about what we need to do to ensure that the B-1B can fulfill its mission for the length of time that we expect to have it with us," General Welch said. That long-term look, he said, includes completing the development of the bomber's defensive avionics and electronic counter-measures.

"With the planned upgrades, the kinds of things we know we need to do to the airplane for a long-term future, we expect it to be capable of performing its mission for the next 25 to 30 years." At the same time, he said, the Air Force will continue developing the B-2 while maintaining the nation's manned bomber leg of the strategic triad with the B-1 force.

By the time the Soviet Union's air defense system advances to a point where the

B-1 no longer is able to successfully penetrate, the B-2, with its advanced technologies will be on line.

But the strategic triad, while dependent on advanced technology, is only as good as the people who man its weapon systems, General Welch said.

Following his recent visit to Ellsworth, the general again praised the people. "The Soviets may someday close the gap a bit on the quality of systems," he said, "but they'll never close the gap on the quality of people who maintain and operate those systems. That's our greatest strength and always will be." (Air Force News Service)

Maintenance assignments released

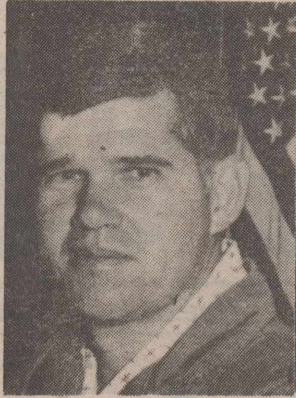

Sgt. Steven Weston (right) and Sgt. Douglas Glur, 64th Field Maintenance Squadron, congratulate each other at the maintenance assignment release Sunday in Hangar 82. The sergeants got assignments to Dover AFB, Del., and Travis AFB, Calif., respectively. For details on the assignment release, see page two.

Commander's perspective

By Col. Monroe S. Sams Jr.
64th FTW commander

As hard as it is to believe, the last long weekend of the summer is upon us. When the Air Training Command Inspector General team left just before the Memorial Day weekend, summer seemed to stretch forever before us. Time has passed quickly with our heavy flying schedule and concerns about the maintenance conversion to keep the wing busy. Now, the kids are already back in school and everyone is looking forward to one last summer fling this weekend.

As we try to squeeze all the fun possible out of the last holiday weekend of the summer season, let's all try to do it safely, okay? It's no secret that commanders like myself and your unit commanders talk a lot about safety before a holiday. We do it because the potential for mishaps increases on long weekends and we need to intensify our efforts to remind our people of the most common mishap factors.

Most of all, however, we talk safety because we care about you and your well-being. So do your loved ones and co-workers. None of us want you — or anyone in our organization — to suffer an accident instead of having fun this weekend.

Many of us will attend parties or picnics where alcoholic beverages are served. Some may become intoxicated and face the dilemma of getting home safely. If it happens to you, please make the wise choice — don't drink and then drive.

Don't forget that most squadrons have Safe Driver programs to get you home safely if you're not in a condition to drive. Or consider the Designated Driver System before you and your buddies go off drinking. The Designated Driver Program calls for one person in a group to stay absolutely sober and assume the responsibility for getting the others home safe and sound.

Beware of marathon driving trips. Be sure to allow yourself plenty of time to get to and from your destination. Remember that a three-day weekend is only 72 hours long. It may be unwise to attempt a long drive in that time period. During any trip by car, long or short, always wear your seatbelt.

Another area of concern is barbecuing. These are normally fun-filled outings. But disaster can strike here too, if some simple precautions are not followed.

Set up your grill in an uncluttered area where there is little chance of the fire spreading to unwanted areas. Once the coals are burning, never pour more lighter fluid on them; they burst into flames or the stream of fluid could provide a trail from the blaze to follow back to the can and result in an explosion.

Don't be a statistic and put your loved ones, friends and co-workers through needless grief and suffering.

Some well-deserved kudos to our Supply Squadron, which is in the thick of the competition for this year's Daedalian Trophy. Lt. Col. Mike Boyd, SUPS/CC, was selected as ATC's senior supply manager of the year. Linda J. Vest, from the Management and Systems Branch, is the command's supply supervisor award winner. In the Fuels Branch, 1st Lt. Dave Carrell was selected top fuels officer, and Ernest Lee, top fuels civilian (WG) for ATC. Congratulations to the squadron and these outstanding individuals.

And, finally, a word of thanks to Sgt. Shawn Reiler who responded to an emergency in the Field Maintenance Squadron's precision measuring equipment laboratory, where an individual had been choking on something caught in his throat and became unconscious. Sergeant Reiler immediately initiated the Heimlich maneuver and dislodged the foreign object. His fast correct action to this first-aid emergency may well have saved a life.

DCM praises efforts of all involved in assignments

By Col. Ford H. Barrett
64th FTW deputy commander for maintenance

What a week's ending! Maintainers had been anticipating assignments for a long time, but little did we realize the intensity of the assignment whirlwind — until it arrived.

From the first executive in-brief of "the team" on Aug. 24 until the hangar doors closed Sunday, the Air Force's, the Air Training Command's and the wing's finest served us well.

The enthusiasm with which the assignments were received was the proof of the pudding — lots of satisfaction. Not to say that everybody was happy — the original 129 senior airman and sergeant assignments to Cannon AFB, N.M. were tough to swallow.

However, the very skilled and personalized service of the ATC Team — Lt. Col. Bob Martinelli; CMSgts. Gus Culwell, Bob Cumberland and Bert Aransaenz; MSgt. Dave Cofer; and SSgt. Val Vansickle; as well as the Air Force Military Personnel Center experts — MSgt. Dave Paris and SSgts. Tracy Suber, Rob Mararac and John Asher — allowed us to rethink our preferences against their options and come up with a good match.

The detailed interaction between that Randolph assignment team, our squadron commanders and Reese's own personnel experts — Maj. Sherill Donaldson, 1st Lt. Nancy Dye and CMSgt. Steve Greenwell — allowed them to fine tune the selections. This action was not completed until 11 p.m. Saturday.

During the intense period of decision-making from Aug. 24 through Saturday, the volunteers at the Reese Family Support Center dealt superbly with our needs. Our folks needed information about the bases to which we might be assigned. FSC's initiative — to go out early to request additional base brochures — was greatly appreciated.

The assignment release itself was a class act. Helping to make it so were a number of maintenance supervisors, and the wing's award-winning morale, welfare and recreation staff — Hugh Beam, Jack Byrd, Keith White, MSgt. Donald Carroll, AIC Michael Radke, Amn. Gary Kern and Ruby Thomas. Thanks for a tremendous afternoon.

A few interesting statistics regarding assignments:

Major command assignment breakout
	FMS	OMS
ATC	28	2
MAC	41	0
SAC	47	68
TAC, USAFE, PACAF and AAC	118	230
Previously announced overseas assignments	47	68
Retirements, separations	18	45
Others (QAE, etc.)	8	10
Total	307	423

Within this number, the team successfully worked 30 joint-spouse assignments and carried one application back to Randolph to work on — one that was for SSgt. James D. Green from hydraulics and SSgt. Teresa Scago from egress, who were married Aug. 25. Talk about service!

When I talked with Sergeant Paris Sunday morning, he mentioned that he did have nearly 200 more overseas and special-duty volunteer and humanitarian assignments yet to work. He suggested that the interested maintenance personnel should call every several weeks to check on their assignment status.

In a nutshell — our thanks go to all the fine members of the wing and Air Force team who provided us with superb personalized attention.

Burn? What has flag done to deserve this fate?

By Sgt. Bruce Forbes
Scott AFB, Ill.

Why burn me? What have I done to be put to death?

Yes, I have led people into battle. I did not order them there, but I went to guide, support and represent them. I have been held by one of my children who marched into the fire, the destruction and the very hell of war. Above the death and smoke, I have stood tall, flying as an ensign for those who fought against tyranny and hatred.

I flew when the British attacked — all night I flew, marking where those who fought for freedom stood. And when the morning came, I was still there.

I was at Gettysburg, where my sons fought each other hand-to-hand; senseless hatred fueling them on. I still fly there, marking the site as a shrine and reminding the living that their death was not in vain.

I still fly at Pearl Harbor, and not at half-mast. There, an enemy thought my children would falter. But they were wrong. Today, the children of the dead come to look and be reminded that these heroes died that freedom might live on.

My sister with the torch has held her vigil, watching over the ocean for our children to return from war. I was there, flying from the highest mast, telling her, "Here are our children, here are those who fought for the freedom of mankind."

I stood erect and proud, representing all who love freedom, as my children who were prisoners of war were returned to their loved ones.

I have covered the bodies of those who gave their lives that we might be free. As they returned to grieving families, I was a reminder of the freedom and truths which their children died to uphold.

But I have also led in peace. My stripes are a reminder to the world that they can in fact live in peace as separate, yet united states. My stars are a new constellation in the sky, guiding all who yearn for freedom and equality to these shores.

Missionaries, peace workers, and other ambassadors carry me around the world, and wherever I go, people follow; they know those who bear me also bear that which I stand for.

What do I stand for? How can you ask, you who have lived

"When tyrants see my children burning me, they smile, for they see the heart and soul of America dying."

so long under my stars?

I am a Declaration of Independence. I am independence from fear, from tyranny, from slavery. I am a visual reminder that "— all men are created equal."

I stand for the Bill of Rights that gave those people a margin of civil liberty still unknown to the rest of the world. I stand for the very liberty that allows you to burn me.

I preside at schools, where the youth are free to choose the path in life that will lead to the achievement of their goals and not the ambition of a selfish master.

I fly above the offices, factories, farms and shops of the nation, reminding the world that here mankind is free to buy or sell, to spend or save, and to become all they can achieve by the sweat of their own brow.

I fly above the theaters, assembly halls, and the halls of worship as a sacred symbol of the freedom to worship and speak as directed by one's own heart and not by the dictates of another.

I fly above the homes, where families look up to me as a sign that their home is a shrine of all I represent.

And, I fly at our ports. Those who have lived with war, with hatred, with oppression, see me as a sign of a better life and flock with their children to the light of my shadow. They join my family and the circle of freedom grows larger.

In every American heart beats the song of freedom. But sometimes the child does not understand the words. The American parent then points into the sky, where I unfold in the breeze, and tells the child that I will always lead them — that where I go they will find freedom and dignity.

I am freedom. I am the heart of every American. I am the heart and soul of America.

When tyrants see my children burning me they smile, for they see the heart and soul of America dying.

Reese Civilian
Personnel Officer

(Sgt. Kimberly Nelson)

Editor's note: "One on One" is a periodic column designed to give Roundup readers an insight on 64th Flying Training Wing/Reese AFB officials. In addition, One on One will occasionally feature interviews with visiting dignitaries and leaders in the local community. This week's One on One, conducted by Sgt. Mike Breslin - Roundup editor, features Romeo Garcia of Reese's Civilian Personnel Office.

Q: With the announcement that aircraft maintenance at Reese will be turned over to a contract operation, the civilian personnel office has had its hands full working on the concerns and questions that the base's civilian maintainers have. One assurance that these maintainers have been given is that the contractor will give them the right of first refusal on positions they're qualified for. What exactly does that mean?

The right of first refusal is a valuable thing for employees facing displacement.

Basically, it's the protection the employee has for continued employment after being displaced from their job. When we go with a contractor, we want to ensure some form of job placement for the employees.

Through the right of first refusal, the federal contracting system is telling prospective contractors that we want them to look at our employees first when they take over a contract operation.

Because of this right, the contractor must make every reasonable effort to offer the employee in question a job comparable to what they had before considering other candidates for such positions.

(Note: In accordance with section I, clause nine, of the aircraft maintenance contract, "The contractor shall give government employees displaced as a result of the conversion to contract performance the right of first refusal for employment openings under the contract in positions for which they are qualified, if that employment is consistent with post-government employment conflict of interest standards.")

Q: By what date does the contractor have to announce what positions are going to be open, and how long will base maintainers have to make their decision regarding the contractor's offer?

The whole process is likely to be a rapid one. The contractor has to begin transitioning of the maintenance functions by Oct. 1, so he has from now until then to go through the hiring process. However, complete contract maintenance control will go into effect around February.

The Lockheed employee hiring process began last week-end.

As for the maintainers, again, it (making a decision) is going to have to be a rapid process. People are going to have to be more or less ready to make a decision when the time comes. In fact, many of them are already in the process of deciding.

There is no guaranteed time limit. There will probably be several days given to think about an offer after it's been made, but right now, we're telling the maintenance people to look at the options now and be prepared to make a decision.

Unfortunately, we don't have all the information available right now on what those options are. However, we are working to get that information to employees as quickly as possible.

Q: Once a maintainer has turned down an offer, can he or she change their mind later and get a position with the contractor?

Refusing an initial offer and then seeking a job with the contractor would be contingent upon whatever hiring practices the company employs.

However, refusal of an offer may impact on the protections and benefits afforded by the right of first refusal, depending on when it is refused. A lot of factors enter into this picture - the offer may not be the kind or level of work the maintainer wants to do, the salary may not be to the employee's satisfaction, and so on. This is one of the reasons it's so important that we get this sort of information as quickly as possible. People don't want to end up refusing and have that impact some benefit they may have gotten from the ance allowance for each year that the worker exceeds 40 years of age at the time of the displacement.

However, the payment is not made in one lump sum. The displaced individual would get a payment every two weeks (up to the amount determined by the factors above) for up to one year, depending on how much severance pay was in their fund.

Q: What options are there for maintainers who decide to retire? What are the requirements for retirement?

Retirement eligibility depends on age and length of service. In other words, a person could theoretically be eligible for retirement while an older worker might not be - again, it's a combination of both factors that determines eligibility.

Some people in maintenance are eligible to retire right now. They may choose to retire and then go to work for the contractor - some may consider this their best option.

We don't have the authority for an "early out," that is, we can't lower the retirement criteria for people who are close to meeting the requirements.

Q: What about civilians who want to remain in civil service? Are there maintenance openings at other bases?

The biggest factor for most people in this category is mobility. Many employees will have to decide whether they are willing to move from Reese in order to continue their civil service career.

For people who want to continue a civil service career at Reese, there's the limited possibility that we could place them in some of the vacancies available on base. However, the problem here is that many of these positions do not call for maintenance skills, and many require skills the maintainers may not have.

The grade level in many of these cases would be lower than what the maintainers now possess. One thing I should mention is that there are certain limits on how big a drop in grade there can be in such placements and still be called a valid job offer. Therefore, even though a position is vacant, we might not be able to offer it to an employee.

Another point to remember is that all employees who might be displaced will be placed on a Defense Department-wide list, which gives them priorities for civil service positions throughout DOD.

Q: Anything to add?

A major positive aspect that should be remembered in the midst of this hectic time is the fact that there are jobs available for people. Normally when we have a major RIF (reduction in force) like this, the jobs themselves disappear - not so here.

Although this is a trying time for our civilian maintainers, we ask that they be patient. We're trying to get answers for them as quickly as we can, and we'll do everything possible to ensure that they are all taken care of in the long run.

Air Force if not for their rejection of the offer.

Q: What provisions are being made in terms of severance pay for civilian maintainers who choose to leave civil service?

Severance pay is mainly for people we are unable to place, as opposed to people who choose to leave civil service. It's meant to assist the employee who has been displaced.

Severance pay is the sum of the basic severance allowance and the age adjustment allowance. The basic allowance is one week's base pay (at the rate at the time of involuntary separation) for each of the first 10 years of service, plus two week's base pay for each year of creditable service beyond the 10th.

The age allowance is 10 percent of the total basic sever-

101 critical days

Need for safety doesn't stop with summer's end

By Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
staff writer

Monday marks the end of the Air Force's 101 critical days of summer.

Last year's Labor Day weekend was mishap-free for Reese and the Air Training Command, according to Paul Compton, base ground safety manager. Although the overall Air Training Command's mishap rate is down 19 percent from last year's rate, the fatality reports during the 101 critical days of summer increased.

"Reese has experienced seven off-duty reportable incidents this year," said Mr. Compton. "That figure more than doubled last year's three off-duty reportable incidents." Six of these reportable incidents were caused by miscellaneous activities, including tripping, sports and recreation. The seventh was a four-wheeled vehicle mishap that resulted in the fatality of a Reese member. In the seventh incident, seatbelts were not used and fatigue was a contributing factor. Alcohol did not contribute to this mishap.

"Throughout ATC, four fatalities have been reported this year, exceeding last year's count by one," said Mr. Compton.

Of the four fatalities, two were four-wheeled vehicle mishaps. No seatbelts were used and fatigue was a contributing factor in both.

The other two mishaps involved two-wheeled vehicles. One of the incidents was a result of another car failing to yield the right of way, while the other involved passing in a no-passing zone and the absence of protective headgear.

Between Aug. 1 - 22, the Air Force reported 12 off-duty fatalities. Nine of these were four-wheeled vehicle mishaps, five of which involved a single vehicle (such as a lone vehicle striking a tree or a roll-over). One incident was a two-wheeled mishap, while the other two mishaps included a pedestrian accident and a drowning.

Statistics show that there are four points that people need to remember:

- Use your seatbelt at all times.
- Do not drink and drive.
- Do not overextend yourself on trips.
- Keep your speed within the posted limits.

"In short, drive defensively and intelligently, and have a nice holiday," concluded Mr. Compton.

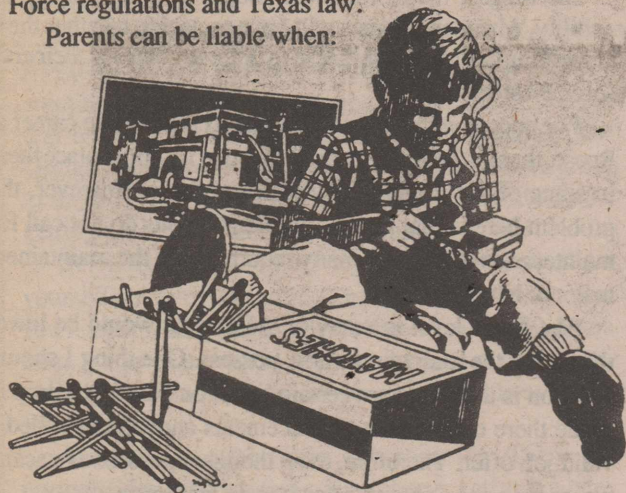

Parents may be held liable for their children's actions

By Capt. Sandra Grice
Reese Legal Office

A rash of vandalism has occurred recently in Reese Village and on the base itself. Investigations have revealed that the culprits were dependent minors.

These cases have been resolved, but every active-duty member needs to understand that they are responsible for their dependents. This responsibility stems from both Air Force regulations and Texas law.

Parents can be liable when:

They give a highly dangerous instrument (such as a firearm, air rifle or lawn mower) to a child or leave such an instrument where the child can get to it.

They allow a child to handle a normally safe item (such as a rake or garden tool) when the parent knows (or reasonably should know) the child is unable to handle it properly.

The parent(s) fail to stop the child from engaging in a dangerous activity (such as throwing rocks at a passing car).

Under Texas law, a parent (or any other person responsible for the control and discipline of a child) is liable for property damage caused by:

Negligent (accidental) conduct of the child, if the conduct is the result of the parent's failure to control the child.

Willful or malicious conduct of a child between the ages of 12 and 18. Recovery from a parent for a child's willful or malicious conduct is limited to $15,000.

The bottom line is this — misconduct by your dependents could cause you to lose your base housing privileges. Additionally, your dependent could be barred from base.

You may also be held legally responsible for their misconduct under Texas law. In other words, you'll pay for their play.

Car thieves advance with changing times

By Sgt. Kevin Dye
64th Security Police Squadron

Car theft, like most thefts, changes with the times. Technological advances in ignition systems and car security systems have become so sophisticated, vehicles have become more vulnerable to simple attacks.

Recent vehicle thefts in California and near the Mexican border have shown a trend towards beating these advanced vehicle security systems. Thieves gain entry by using a modified key. In every instance, the theft occurred to Asian-made cars. In some cases where the cars were recovered, the ignition switch was in the "on" position with no key in the vehicle. In others, the vehicle was running with no key in the vehicle (something you're not supposed to be able to do with Asian cars).

Most entries take less than 17 seconds. Once inside the car, the engine is started with the same key just as quickly — with no practice, law enforcement officers were able to enter and start test cars in 22 seconds with modified keys.

Because of the simplicity of the key, the car thefts have started moving east to include incidents in Colorado and as close as Dallas.

If you own an Asian-made import and plan to travel to the West Coast in the future, please contact the Crime Prevention Section of the 64th Security Police Squadron at 3615 for information on ways to prevent these thefts.

School daze

Parents can help children deal with back-to-school pressures

By Maj. Elizabeth Suggs
Reese Mental Health Services chief

It's that time of year again. Children are starting or returning to school. Parents will now have a few hours without the children, households will get back on schedule, and youngsters will face new challenges — socially, academically and athletically.

Beginnings are exciting, but they also can frighten both parents and children. It's important to understand these fears and learn to handle them productively.

The early years of school present new challenges to a child's self-esteem. They know "big boys and girls" go to school, and during preschool and kindergarten they're told, "If you think this year's hard, just wait until next year."

Also, the social challenges of school add to their anxiety.

Fads in clothing, hair styles, lunch boxes and book bags are noticed and can become important to many children. Fears about not measuring up or being accepted are perhaps even more important to children than adults.

How can we help our children handle these anxieties? The first step is to understand they exist. If you cannot recall your own school anxieties, consider those fears and concerns when you begin a new job, join a new church or make new friends. Despite a child's well-adjusted behavior at home, some anxiety in a new setting or circumstance is normal.

Sometimes parents add to their children's fears. Youngsters are frightened when their moms and dads feel anxious while taking them to school.

Sending children back to school with positive feelings about themselves and an attitude that they can handle their fears is indeed helpful. Sending them off with new supplies, some trendy new clothes and a positive attitude can help a child get off to a good start and help them adjust more quickly.

Keeping communications open is also important in helping your child deal with anxieties both at the beginning of and during the school year. If behavior problems occur, they might be the result of undue anxieties or a learning difficulty.

Encouraging your child, assisting them in understanding the problem without blame, and discussing concerns with the school should make solutions possible.

If undue anxieties persist or other problems emerge during the school year, psychological or other services might be needed. If your child is handicapped or has a special need, you should know whom to contact if you have questions or concerns. The base family advocacy officer might be able to help arrange medical, educational or psychological services for your child. For further information, contact me at 3739.

Excellence Journey or destination?

By Col. John E. Marr Jr.
Columbus AFB, Miss.

The other day, I overheard a conversation between two people who were discussing their goals and objectives in their respective duty sections. It was clear from the conversation that both individuals had established the same goal — to "achieve excellence."

While I applaud both of these young professionals, I suggest their goal is unattainable. Why? Certainly not because of lack of effort or desire. It's unattainable because excellence is not something you "get," but rather something you "do."

It's a process, not a result. Think of it as a journey rather than a destination.

Achieving excellence suggests that once we've got it we no longer have to do what we've been doing to get it — like when we stop climbing once we've reached the top of the mountain.

This is one of the most common errors made in the Air Force. It has been the cause of decline in performance of many Air Force units that lay back after reaching their "destination" of excellence. It may also explain why so few Super Bowl and World Series winners are able to repeat their accomplishment a second time.

Maintaining excellence is a matter of continuous improvement. We must be on a constant vigil, finding better ways to get our jobs done. Frequently, this means making things simpler.

For example, over the years we have built some incredibly complex and detailed procedures to do our jobs. We've then codified these monstrous procedures in reams of pathetically dull and generally unreadable (and often unread) regulations, operating instructions and the like. Sadly, we've all contributed to this bureaucratic nightmare — some directly by writing these hideous regulations, and some indirectly by condoning the practice and failing to raise the alarm.

We live in a complex world already, let's not make it any worse. Simplicity is a trademark of excellence.

Another way of maintaining our journey of excellence is by remembering how our mission is accomplished. The job gets done by people, so it's people who deserve the most attention. As I sit in my office moving piles of papers from my in-basket to my out-basket, I have to constantly remind myself that people, not paper, get the job done, day in and day out.

We all must make time for people. Are we giving them all the tools and resources they need to get the job done (especially authority that matches their responsibility)? Are we providing quality working facilities, living facilities and recreational facilities?

Are we recognizing and rewarding their efforts and achievements? And are we listening to their suggestions on how to do the job better?

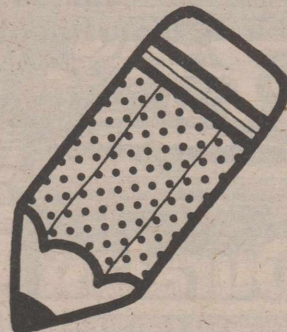

Want excellence? Pay attention to your people — know them, care about them, provide for them, teach them, recognize their achievements and, most of all, listen to them. Then stand back and watch productivity soar.

I'll conclude by reminding you of my two main points. First, excellence is a journey, not a destination. Second, two prime keys to excellence are simplicity and putting people as your No. 1 priority. Have an excellent day! (Courtesy of Silver Wings)

64th CES overcomes renovation obstacles

By 2nd Lt. Mark J. Synovitz
64th STURON

One of the more noticeable civil engineering projects during the last several months has been the renovation of Bldg. 230, the site of the new Reese Consolidated Support Facility.

TSgt. Charles Clark, noncommissioned officer-in-charge of the CES planning section that spearheaded the renovation, said this project was the largest the section had ever tackled.

"The second and third floors were completely 'guttled,'" the sergeant said.

Work began on the facility Sept. 28. The workers encountered several challenges regarding minimal planning time and manpower limitations.

However, a total of 2,073 manhours were donated by a base "Blitz" team, consisting of people from 64th Air Base Group, 64th Supply, Field Maintenance, Security Police and Services Squadrons, as well as USAF Hospital Reese, the Reese Commissary, and the Morale, Welfare and Recreation Division.

CES members who worked on the project included: SSGts. Rudy Almonte, David Manchester, Clyde McDowell and Robert Whitfield; Sgts. Terry Carpenter, Frankie Cave, Michael Determan and Ronald Tebbets; SrA. Wallace Greene and Ronald Shofran; AIC Scott Stewart and Kevin Johnson.

They were assisted by: Amn. Dan Blackwell, Scott Gerow, Richard Klinski, Douglas Molette, Russell Wells and James Workman.

Some work still remains before the project is complete. Remaining details include hall and stairwell carpeting, as well as the installation of a three-story vertical chairlift for the handicapped.

Agencies located in Bldg. 230 include: wing safety, social actions, legal, office of special investigations, manpower, area defense counsel and disaster preparedness.

A LONELY KIND OF WAR
Forward Air Controller, Vietnam
Marshall Harrison

Marshall Harrison has written a remarkable memoir of aerial warfare in Vietnam. As a FAC, "forward air-controller" he was placed in the most difficult and dangerous job in the air war: to fly "low and slow," skimming the treetops, alone in a lightly armed and vulnerable prop plane, trolling for enemy fire with himself as the "bait."

Harrison is a born storyteller, bringing excitement, suspense, and humor to this account of his life as a FAC. The flying scenes are riveting. You are with Harrison on one secret mission when he is shot down and forced to spend a harrowing night in the jungle, with enemy troops searching for him while Special Forces plot his rescue.

A Lonely Kind of War is the first book to tell the story of these brave pilots, whose ranks suffered staggering losses, and their little-known but vital role in Vietnam.

Marshall Harrison, a retired Air Force Officer, served three combat tours in Vietnam. His last active duty was as an intelligence officer. He has been a public school teacher, a crop-duster in England and Africa, and a corporate pilot. He now lives in Lubbock.

DOD policy on telephone usage changes

By Tom Joyce
American Forces Information Service

The Department of Defense has released its long-awaited policy regarding use of government telephone for personal reasons.

Under new rules effective June 21, personal calls (such as those to speak to a spouse or minor child or to arrange for emergency repairs to a residence or automobile) are now in the best interest of the government if they:

- Do not adversely affect the performance of official duties by the employee or the employee's organization.
- Are of reasonable duration and frequency.
- Could not reasonably have been made at another time.

The rules also authorize long-distance calls, but they must be charged to an employee's home telephone or other non-government number, such as a call made collect; or made to a personal telephone credit card; or made to a toll-free 800 number.

The DOD policy is generally consistent with General Services Administration guidelines published in January 1988. However, those rules allow agency heads to authorize employees to make long-distance calls in some instances and charge them to the government.

"It would have cost the DOD more than $200 million a year to allow the same thing," said Ray Lecuyer, Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Command, Control, Communications and Intelligence. "We have the largest work force in government. To allow those calls would be a tremendous burden to the services and the Defense Department."

Unlike the General Services Administration's Federal Telecommunications System, which has access to the public telephone system, DOD's command and control system and principal voice network, AUTOVON, is a closed system.

"To enable this system to access or be accessible from the public network in order for an employee to make long-distance calls home would just be too costly," said Lecuyer.

The new rules are only added guidance to the department's overall policy on the use of government telephones. It is stated in DOD Directive 5500.7, "Standards of Conduct":

"All DOD personnel are responsible for using office telecommunications services for official use only. The term 'official use' means service directly in support of government business or as otherwise approved by DOD component authority, as defined by the DOD component, who is in the supervisory or managerial chain of command, as being in the best interest of the government."

A DOD committee is reviewing guidance for making personal calls home while on temporary duty. Lecuyer said any changes to the current policy — which prohibits it — will be reflected in updated Joint Travel Regulations.

Command news

Military to be paid Sept. 29

To avoid financial hardship for active-duty military members, Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney has directed that September pay be paid Sept. 29.

By law, this year's payday would be Oct. 2. Any other time of the year, the payday is the first day of the following month or the last duty day of the present month if the first falls on a weekend or holiday. The law specifies that the Oct. 1 payday not be a rollback because it is the beginning of the new fiscal year operating budget.

Nevertheless, the secretary has authority, allowed by Title 37 of the U.S. Code, to modify military pay schedules.

The next time the fiscal juggle could occur is 1994, when Oct. 1 falls on a Saturday, and by law, payday would be Oct. 3. (American Forces Information Service)

CATO offers training programs

The Air Training Command Civilian Automated Training Office has accomplished many things for an organization completing only its first full year of operation.

The most recent accomplishment was the Air Force's first Professional Management for Executives Program. Other achievements include providing no-cost civilian personnel management courses to all ATC bases; ATC's 100 percent closeout of training funds; increasing training opportunities by justifying a 10 percent increase in ATC's training budget; and reducing the command's average training costs through consolidation of training requirements.

CATO is making even bigger plans for the future with studies underway on teleconferencing, non-resident training programs and CATO-conducted Air Force Supervisors Courses.

For more information, contact CATO at AUTOVON 473-2799/2189. (CATO news release)

Relocation services available

The ReaLine Military Relocation Program is available to military families through all continental U.S. and selected overseas bases.

Air Force base housing offices have a supply of the ReaLine brochures explaining the services provided by Realty World. The service is designed to help military families with the relocation process by providing information packets and tours of destination areas and by briefing families about the availability of mortgage money.

The service also offers the RealSafe Home Protection Plan, which helps members to sell a home quickly.

For more information, contact the Reese Housing Office at 3601 or Realty World at 1-800-336-4777.

SNCOA instructors needed

Instructors are needed for the Senior Noncommissioned Officer Academy at Gunter AFB, Ala.

Interested master and senior master sergeants may submit an application by following guidelines provided in Air Force Regulation 39-11. Applicants stationed in the continental United States must have the minimum three years on station before they can make a state-to-state move.

Senior NCOs from all career fields may apply. Members in chronic shortage skills may have difficulty being released for instructor duty, but should not be discouraged from applying.

For more information, call CMSgt. Glenn White, SNCOA vice commandant, at AUTOVON 446-4134. (Air Force News Service)

Base cost branch offers money-saving ideas

By Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
staff writer

The greatest challenge facing us today is how to effectively accomplish the mission with limited resources.

Our challenge is to get the most productivity with minimum resources, explained TSgt. Charles Van Houghton, noncommissioned officer in charge of the Reese Cost Branch. The Reese Comptroller Division, with the assistance of the cost branch, can provide professional management services to help meet this challenge.

Cost branch analysts employ a variety of statistical techniques to determine methods of improving operations and resource management through cost analysis. According to the sergeant, a number of misconceptions exist concerning the purposes and goals of cost analysis.

"The cost branch does not make the final decision, we only try to provide consultation for the many different routes one can go. The final decision is up to the organization to determine," he said.

The main task of the cost branch is to discover, through review and analysis, significant information about Air Force missions and to present summary data for management use — to perform cost comparisons. In order to perform this task, the cost branch provides several services to commanders and their staff.

□ Economic analysis: doing more with less. Continuous budget cuts tend to place a great emphasis on "doing more with less." An economic analysis assists with the decision-making process of allocating funds.

□ Economic resource impact statement: providing key information annually about Reese's mission, resources and economic impact on the Lubbock community to public officials, the community and visitors.

□ Internal control review: determining if adequate controls are being properly implemented to protect Air Force resources and to prevent or detect deficiencies or irregularities in a cost-effective manner.

□ Management assistance services: providing the decision-maker with a clear, objective analysis of a problem or potential problem area. MAS are not final solutions to problems, nor do they make the final decision for the client. Instead, the MAS are used to analyze problems and list factors bearing on the problems.

□ Program/progress analysis: comparing unit goals, objectives and standards to determine consistency and identify significant voids or imperfections is a program analysis. A progress analysis evaluates where a unit is, compared to where it should be.

"Sometimes, the recommendations we provide may not always favor the cheapest option. To go with a higher price, the long term benefits may prove greater," said Sergeant Van Houghton.

Cost branches, at bases within ATC, are also required to perform a training course cost report. The amount of Reese funds used to train pilots and the percentage of pilots graduated as compared to those originally enrolled is sent to ATC. The ATC cost model then balances Reese's figures against all other ATC bases' figures to come up with an average cost for a beginning student to become a certified pilot. "The main purpose of this report is to provide a standard cost for foreign students who receive pilot training in the United States," added Sergeant Van Houghton.

Surveys can also be conducted through the cost branch. They recently performed a survey for cable service on base and in Reese Village. "This survey was performed to help determine when the current contract expires this month, if the base should renew their present contract or seek another company based on the customer responses," the sergeant said.

At the present time, cost branch members are conducting a survey to determine what sort of impact the A-76 conversion will have on Reese service areas. "The survey will focus on the monetary effect the conversion will have on such areas as the Reese Main Exchange, open messes and morale, welfare and recreation facilities," he said. "This will help to prepare the base as a whole for what's to come. A follow-up survey, once the maintainers leave, may also be conducted as a support tool for the original determinations."

The services are available to all agencies on base.

For more information about the cost branch, stop by Bldg. 32 or call them at 3405.

Chaplain service announces new program year's theme

The Air Force Chaplain Service theme for the new program year beginning today will be "Live By Faith," Chaplain Service officials have announced.

The annual theme serves as a focus of attention for the mistry of chapel personnel, and helps to define the life and work of chapel communities around the world. Officials believe that the challenge to "live by faith" will appeal to the whole community of Air Force people.

"Each of us strives to live according to the highest ideals and values of our country, our religious traditions and our personal convictions," officials said. "Faith is born, nurtured and advanced as we become involved in remembering our traditions, building our communities and sharing our gifts."

Theme interpreters explained: "We live by faith, remembering our traditions. Tradition links us with the past, reminding us of our debt to brave men and women of vision and courage whose sacrifices ensured freedom's triumph.

"Holidays, observances and special customs speak to us of our responsibility to pass on the knowledge of this democratic heritage to our children, so that freedom's torch will be carried into a new century. In our religious lives, sacred scriptures, liturgies, and holy days remind us of God's faithfulness to us in good times and bad. The traditions of our faith communities deepen our knowledge of God. As we share them, we are joined in deeper spiritual community.

"We live by faith, building our communities. Faith in God, in other people and in ourselves is our impetus for service to our neighbors.

"We lend hands to the newcomer or the family in crisis. We work to make our communities places where talents are encouraged, needs are met and good will is extended. Likewise, as we experience support, concern and love within our faith communities, we realize the critical need for those communities to be places where the religious values of charity, hope, forgiveness and acceptance take human shape and are carried from person to person in a spirit of friendship.

"We live by faith, sharing our gifts. A people richly blessed are called to be a people of generous spirit.

We share personal gifts, including talents, skills or the investment of time.

"We invest such things in the people, causes and interests we believe are vital to the well-being of our family, community, and world. We share material gifts, realizing our responsibility to share our abundance with those in need." (Courtesy of the Air Force Chaplain Service Board, Maxwell AFB, Ala.)

The event is open to the general public.

After the show, the EOM will hold a 1950s/1960s dance from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. The dance is also open to the general public.

For more information on the show and meet, call John Sanchez at the auto hobby shop, 3142.

Smoking classes set

A smoking cessation program will be offered in September by the Reese Health Promotion Committee.

The program will meet twice a week beginning Sept. 8, and it will cover various ways to "kick the habit."

For details, call the USAF Hospital Reese Mental Health Clinic at 3739.

Parenting class scheduled

A six-week class on parenting will begin on Sept 21 in Bldg. 75.

The class, which is being conducted in conjunction with Stress and Parenting Month, will run from 6:30 - 8 p.m. each Thursday. Anyone who is interested should contact the Reese Mental Health Clinic at 3739.

Coupon use booming

Shoppers at Air Force commissaries are saving millions of dollars by using coupons, and Reese shoppers are getting in on the savings.

According to Reese Commissary officials, shoppers on base had saved more than $155,000 with coupon this fiscal year (as of July 31). Air Force wide, more than $52 million has been saved, thanks to more than 96 million coupons.

At the current rate of use, more than $70 million dollars will be saved by the end of the fiscal year.

Housing referral needs housing

The Reese Housing Referral Office has a constant need for non-discriminatory housing for military people and government civilian employees.

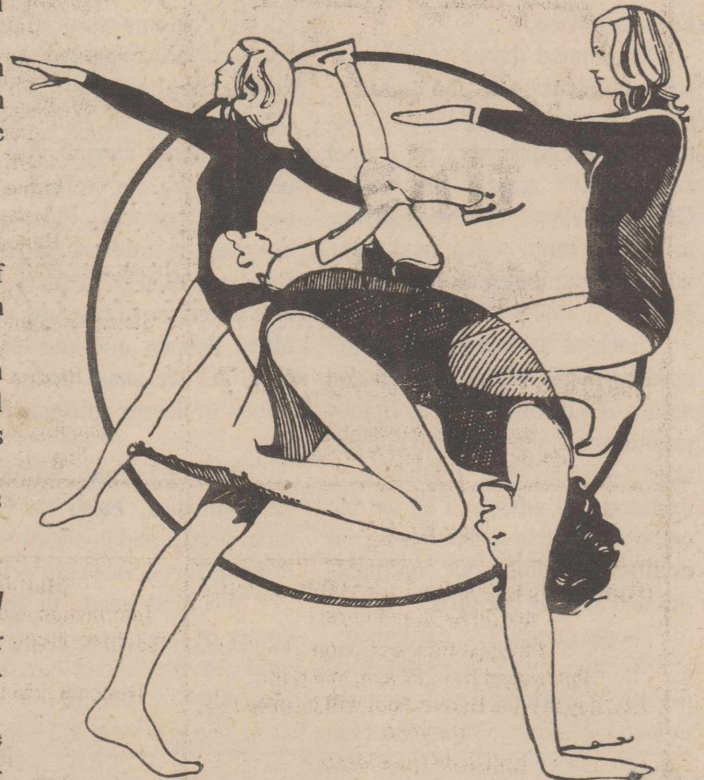

Anyone who wants to rent or lease the quarters can take advantage of the office's free listing service. To take advantage, call 3601 or stop by housing referral, Bldg. 6100.

Commissary seeks coupons

The Reese Commissary is asking people on base to turn in any coupons they don't plan to use so that they can be sent to commissary shoppers at Yokota AB, Japan. Coupons do not need to be cut out.

Outprocessing tip from NAF

Everyone departing Reese on a permanent-change-of-station move needs to clear the Reese Library and Enlisted/Officers' Open Mess before clearing the Non-Appropriated Funds Office.

Dance, gymnastic classes open

The Reese Youth Center is now registering youngsters for gymnastic and dance classes. Both classes will be taught by professional dancer and all-American gymnast Starla Pace.

Classes will be held on Fridays and Saturdays. For more information, call Laura Jacobs at 3820.

Intramural playoffs get underway after rain delays

After a week of rain delays, the base intramural softball playoffs got underway Monday.

At press time, the teams from the 35th Flying Training Squadron and 1958th Communications Squadron were heading into the championship finals.

Monday night's action saw six teams lock up with each other in double-elimination play. COMM squeaked by USAF Hospital Reese, 6-5; the 54th FTS took a close one from the 64th Organizational Maintenance Squadron 'A' team; HOSP dropped out of the tournament with a 13-1 loss to the 35th FTS; OMS 'B' blanked the 35th FTS, 9-0; Resource Management 'A' supplied the evening's second shutout against the 64th Field Maintenance Squadron 'A' team; and FMS 'A' bowed out in the next game against OMS 'A' by a score of 7-3.

The next evening saw all but three teams exit the playoffs. RM 'A' grounded 54th FTS, 2-0; OMS 'A' gave OMS 'B' the gate with an 18-9 drubbing; 35th FTS clipped their fellow aviators' wings as they defeated the 54th FTS, 13-4; and COMM rolled into the finals with a 10-5 victory.

Wednesday's final in the loser's bracket saw the 35th FTS power their way into the championships with a 15-7 defeat of RM 'A.'

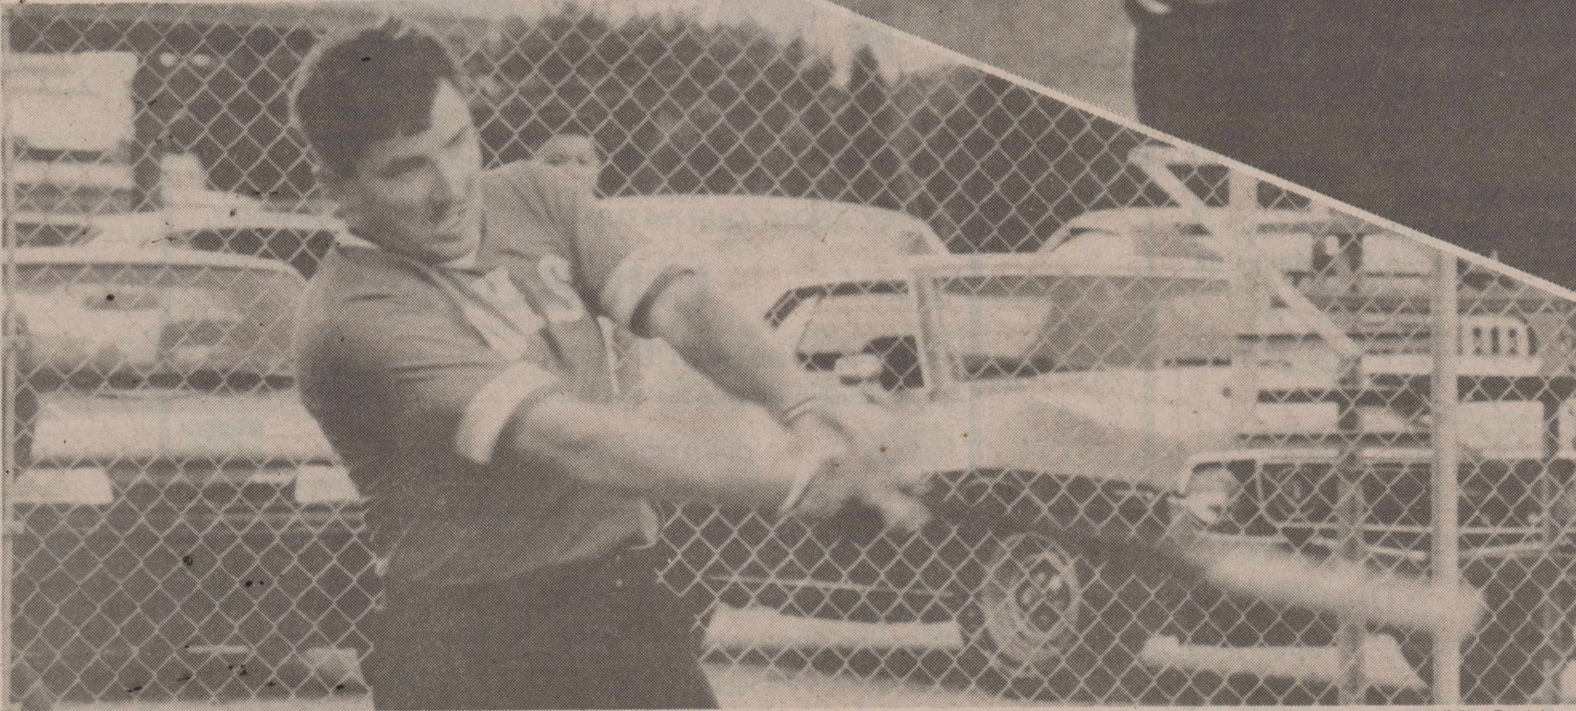

The 35th FTS faced an uphill battle going in, needing to beat an undefeated COMM team twice in order to take the title. The game lived up to its billing, as the teams battled into extra innings.

It wasn't until the 35th FTS drew a bases-loaded walk in the ninth inning that the contest was decided, 9-8. The game forced Thursday night's "all-or-nothing" contest for the base crown.
