Reese maintainers and pilots waste no time between sorties. This Saturday and July 1 are scheduled for flying in an effort to make up for time lost due to recent

Weather will not halt determination

By Sgt. Mike Breslin
Staff Writer, Roundup

The unusually inclement weather that Reese has recently experienced has impacted flying, but the problem has not detracted from the wing's determination to accomplish the mission, according to the 64th Flying Training Wing deputy commander for operations.

"We didn't have an unrestricted flying day (due to weather) in all of May," said Col. Jerry Deakin. "June hasn't been much better — we've only had one or two days without flying restrictions."

The colonel said that falling behind schedule has had a big impact on both operations and maintenance. "To catch up, we've got to fly a tremendous number of sorties that we normally wouldn't have to fly," the colonel said. "To do that, we must ask maintenance to generate more airplanes than normal." He added that maintenance has been extremely supportive of operations. They've worked hard to sustain the wings flying capability.

Since night flying is already a part of the undergraduate pilot training curriculum, the only way to make up for lost flying time is to fly more sorties during the day and weekends.

The wing has already flown three Saturdays, although this past Saturday wasn't very productive due to poor weather conditions earlier that day. This Saturday and July 1 are planned flying days.

The colonel said that at this point, it would take two to three weeks of uninterrupted good weather in order to enhance our flying schedule. However, he indicated other variables besides weather that impact on flying.

Despite weather issues, the wing has continued to perform its mission of producing quality pilots. "So far, we've effectively graduated people on time,"

Colonel Deakin said. "The graduation on June 30 will make us work, but that is the challenge of our profession."

Looking to the future, the colonel said he doesn't anticipate any major problems for operations with the ensuing maintenance conversion.

"Maintenance intends to get us into a favorable position before the conversion in order to enhance the transition."

Colonel Deakin concluded, "We'll watch the conversion very closely, and if need be, we'll modify our flying schedule. However, we don't anticipate any major adjustment due to the conversion."

Conversion timeline still on schedule

By Sgt. Greg Spraggins
Editor, Roundup

Air Training Command officials announced March 24 that the maintenance conversion programs here and at Williams AFB, Ariz., would be delayed 60 days.

The delay is designed to allow the command to incorporate changes to the final "statements of work" for the contracts.

The changes are a result of experience with conversion contracts at Columbus AFB, Miss., and Laughlin AFB, Texas, according to ATC officials.

According to Lt. Col. Tim House, maintenance control officer, "Dec. 4 looks solid as the beginning of the conversion."

The date for the announcement whether maintenance is to be contracted or will go civil service has been set for Aug. 9. At that time a final plan for hiring, training and many other conversion issues will be published, according to the colonel.

Reese is currently reworking the MEO (most efficient organization) making modifications on how the organization will be run if it goes civil service. "Reese wants to be prepared if we go civil service," said Colonel House. "The hiring process is critical, so job descriptions and all the other ground work must be accomplished in advance."

The contractors are also currently reworking bids. The bids are due at Headquarters ATC June 23.

According to the colonel, beginning Dec. 4, 20 percent of the existing functions and corresponding workforce will be taken over every two weeks by the civilian workforce. This workforce will need to be 100 percent manned by Jan. 29, 1990. During the Dec. 4 - Feb. 28 timeframe, these employees would work with the government until they can take over the function as determined by the government.

If the decision is made to convert to civil service the completion is anticipated in March.

Very few maintenance members will depart prior to Dec. 1. "We have to rely on the people we have in place," said Colonel House, "especially since we haven't gotten any new military people in since January."

Reese maintainer wins AFA's Texas award

By Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
Staff Writer, Roundup

SrA. Roy Paz, assigned to the 64th Organizational Maintenance Squadron, recently received the Air Force Association's Texas Airman of the Year award.

"Considering the large population of airmen in the state, it was quite an achievement to be selected as winner," said Maj. Glen Locklear, 64th OMS commander. OMS nominated Airman Paz for the competition, then in turn, forwarded a selection package to the Texas AFA for entry.

"I didn't even know I had been nominated until I was notified by my first sergeant that I had won. And all I could say was 'Holy smokes, that's all right!'" commented Airman Paz. In July he will be attending the AFA convention on South Padre Island, Texas, to receive this award. Following, his nomination will go on to be entered in the AFA National competition.

"As far as airmen go, Airman Paz is a staff sergeant in airman stripes. He sets the example for all crew chiefs, and his standard for 35-10 is an epitome within itself," the major commented.

For the third consecutive year, Airman Paz has been selected to be a T-37 crew chief for the Torchlight competition, held each October at Randolph AFB, Texas. The team has already begun preparing jets for better than inspection order and soon they will be practicing launch recovery and engine and tire changes. This year, the team plans to come away with the gold, after missing it last year by only 68.3 points.

"Airman Paz is an outstanding member of the 64th Flying Training Wing's maintainers. His reputation reflects itself through the many awards he's received since his two and one-half years at Reese," said Major Locklear.

Awards include wing maintainer of the year, squadron airman of the year, crew chief of the class - nine times, safety airman of the quarter, crew chief of the month - three times and squadron airman of the month.

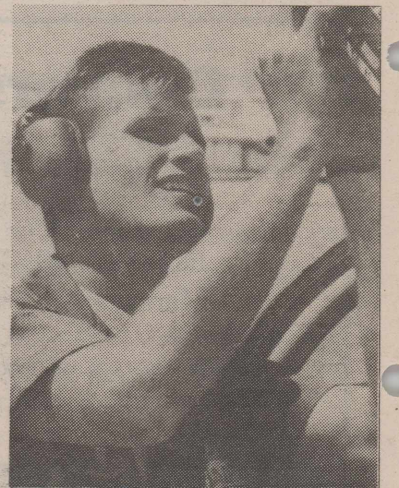

Enrolled in the Community College of the Air Force and currently attending classes through the South Plains College, Airman Paz plans to make a career out of the Air Force. "I love the Air Force; I've had a real good time," Airman Paz said. "After all, where else can you get a chance to mess with the 'real jets'?"

If he stays enlisted, Airman Paz hopes to become the chief master sergeant of the Air Force, or at least a senior enlisted adviser. He said though, that he may consider joining the Reserve Officer Training Corp and go commissioned.

A native of Tampa, Fla., Airman Paz would like to return to Florida and work on fighter jets once the maintenance conversion gets underway.

Airman Paz has become very active within the Lubbock Community. "He volunteers for whatever he can, and he does well in everything he does both on and off duty," concluded Major Locklear.

SrA. Roy Paz

15 volunteers needed for MD camp

Every year the Muscular Dystrophy Association sponsors a summer camp program for patients between the ages of 6 and 21, and for the second year, Reese members will play a vital role in making the camp a success.

MDA is in need of 15 male volunteers to assist the campers from July 30 - Aug. 5 at the Ceta Canyon Methodist Camp located in Happy, Texas (approximately 25 miles south of Amarillo). Surrounded by trees, the camp offers air-conditioned cabins with bunk beds, a swimming pool and various indoor and outdoor recreational areas. Food, bus transportation and lodging will be provided to all volunteers free of charge and attendees will be authorized a permissive temporary duty assignment.

Interested volunteers must fill out an application, to be turned in no later than June 30. Upon selection from the applications, to be made by MSgt. Jesus Ferrand, 1958 Communications Squadron's first sergeant, an interview with an MDA representative will be conducted and all selectees will be notified on or about July 15.

The week these campers and their companions spend at camp is looked forward to in very special ways. During this time, they renew old friendships, make new friends and are able to participate in a variety of activities to include swimming, fishing, sports games and competitions and arts and crafts.

"For many of the patients this is the only time they get to participate in any or all of these activities due to their physical conditions," said Glenda Ward, on-base representative for MDA.

"The truly key people in the program are the volunteer attendants who make the camp possible by being companions to the campers," she added.

Each child, whether walking or in a wheelchair, is assigned his own attendant who provides care, close attention and the supervision necessary to ensure the safety of all participants.

If interested in volunteering, contact Glenda Ward at 3885.

ADC: Keeps information confidential provides free legal counseling

Capt. Bill Kraus recently took over as the area defense counsel here, as Capt. Robert Bartelmay prepares for an assignment to Holloman AFB, N.M.

Captain Kraus is available to act and advise you on what is legally in your best interest, regardless of position or rank.

His responsibilities, according to Air Force regulations, are to provide counsel in courts-martial, administrative discharges and Article 32 investigations; in interrogations and in Article 15 actions; and all other adverse actions that counsel is required or authorized, such as reports of survey flying, evaluation boards and administrative demonstrations.

"Everything you say is confidential," said the captain. "Since I don't answer to anyone at Reese, I'm not required to reveal discussions to anyone on this base, nor can you be penalized for receiving assistance."

The constitution of the United States guarantees the right to an attorney in criminal proceedings. Military law recognizes this right, and for quite a few years the base judge advocates would act as both prosecutor and defense counsel.

In 1974, the area defense counsel was established, thus improving

"I'm not required to reveal discussions to anyone on this base, nor can you be penalized for receiving assistance."

the credibility of the military justice system. The judge advocate general determined it necessary to remove the appearance that defense counsels were limited in their actions due to their assignment to the convening authority. It was also then established that the area defense counsel have a separate office and be assigned to the judicial circuit headquarters, not the base being served.

"If you feel that you may have action taken against you, my office is open to provide you advice," said Captain Kraus.

For more information, call 3645. Walk-in assistance hours are from 8 - 11 a.m. Monday - Friday in Bldg. 75, Room 1.

Per diem change proposed

According to TSgt. Al Camara, NCOIC, travel computation, a defense department proposal that may change the way people are reimbursed for moving expenses could begin as early as fiscal year 1991.

The plan, if adopted, would replace the current permanent change of station per diem reimbursement program with a moving-in housing allowance.

If the program is approved, an additional $25 million will have to be added to the overseas housing allowance budget for first year expenses, said Army Col. Richard Lind, staff director of DOD's per diem transportation and travel allowance committee.

The new allowance would be paid up front for expenses incurred for rental agents, finder's fees and security related costs covering such things as purchasing and installing steel doors, fences, window bars and screens and other anti-theft or anti-terrorist items.

Partial reimbursement is planned for purchases made to make quarters habitable, to include transformers, wardrobes and heating equipment.

Emphasizing that the allowance is what DOD wants at staff level, and the services feel that it's more equitable for their people, Colonel Lind said it is still only a proposal.

He said the basic stumbling blocks are current laws that require per diem payments for reimbursement.

These laws will have to be changed to allow the up-front, lump-sum payment for moving in allowance, he said.

The colonel and Roy Sammarco, DOD housing division chief, visited Ramstein AB, Germany, recently to discuss overseas housing allowances with budget officials. They also visited areas in England, Belgium, Italy and Turkey.

Tobacco: unsafe in any form

Smokeless tobacco, despite a common misconception, is not a safe alternative to smoking.

Expert panels have reported adverse health effects that include an increased risk of oral cancer and gum disease.

The practice of holding tobacco in one location often produces a white leather-looking lesion called leukoplakia. Leukoplakia is considered precancerous with a 4 percent to 7 percent chance of it developing into cancer.

Studies also have shown that damage to the gums and teeth can occur from prolonged contact with irritating tobacco by-products. This irritation can cause gums to recede, exposing the tooth roots.

Smokeless tobacco users also experience greater wear on the biting surfaces of the teeth because these products contain high levels of abrasive grit. There also is a risk of tooth decay because sugar is used in some products.

All forms of cured tobacco contain nicotine. Nicotine can cause increased heart rate and irregular heartbeat because nicotine constricts blood vessels.

There is no safe alternative to smoking that involves the use of tobacco. (AFNS)

Driving in rain can be hazardous

Rain of any sort dictates special caution when driving, according to the National Safety Council. Problems associated with driving in the rain include reduced visibility, skids and hydroplaning.

The council offers the following tips for safe driving in the rain:

— Prevent visibility problems before they happen. Keep headlights and taillights clean and check wiper blades and windshield washer fluid regularly.

— Slow down and pay extra attention to other drivers. Watch for pedestrians who are more difficult to see in the rain and less likely to be watching out for you.

— Establish a safe buffer zone between your car and others by slowing down to at least 10 miles per hour below the speed limit.

— Prevent skids by driving slowly and carefully. Steer and brake with a light touch. In a skid, remain calm, ease your foot off the gas pedal, and carefully steer in the direction you want the front of the car to go. Avoid using the brakes.

— Prevent hydroplaning or water buildup in front of the tires by replacing tires when treads are worn thin. Slow down when roads are wet and avoid puddles of water. In a skid, ease your foot off the gas pedal until the car slows, and you feel the road again. If you brake, do it gently, with light pumping actions.

Collision fatal for ATC cyclist

A technical sergeant assigned to Randolph AFB, Texas, became the tenth Air Training Command fatality for fiscal year 1989 when he died May 30 from injuries received in a motorcycle accident.

ATC officials said TSgt. Danny L. Johnson, a 33-year-old father of four, was traveling on a two-lane highway near the base when he was struck by another vehicle which pulled onto the road after stopping at an intersection. Sergeant Johnson was thrown approximately 20 feet into a grassy area. He was not wearing a helmet.

He was airlifted from the scene by helicopter and pronounced dead at Brooke Army Medical Center. The driver of the other vehicle was not injured.

Are you free to go?

By Capt. Mark E. Garrard
Base Legal Office

A number of Reese personnel will soon be departing under the A-76 conversion.

Thoughts of packing up household goods, taking leave to visit family, and hunting for that new home probably come to mind. Put those thoughts aside for a moment and ask yourself "Am I free to go?"

If you are among the many leasing a house or apartment, pull out that agreement and read it. Do you see a military clause? If you do, what does it say? They're not all the same. What notice must you provide and when? How do you terminate the lease and what happens to that security deposit when you do?

If there is no written agreement on the property you probably have a periodic tenancy. Most run from month to month, the same as your rent-paying period. You may terminate the agreement with at least one month's notice. Do it in writing, include a forwarding address and keep a copy.

Lease for fixed-term

The vast majority of renters have written lease agreements which bind the tenant for a fixed period, usually six to 12 months.

The general rule in such cases is that the tenant, regardless of an early move out and regardless of notice given, can be held liable for the balance of the term of the lease. A military clause, if included in the agreement, will permit early termination of the lease. These clauses vary but usually will allow termination within 30 days written notice for one or more of the following reasons:

- Receipt of PCS orders
- Release from active duty
- Proper orders to move into base housing

Liability on abandonment

Let's assume the worst. You have no military clause and the landlord refuses to voluntarily release you of your liability under the lease.

Moving out early in this case is an "abandonment" and does not relieve the tenant of his obligation to pay rent. The rental payments continue to come due each month, regardless of your other financial commitments.

In Texas, the landlord generally has no duty to seek out another tenant for the abandoned property. He can lawfully let the house or apartment sit empty and collect rent from the former tenant. If, however, the landlord should choose to relet the property to another party or reuse the property himself, then the landlord's recovery from the former tenant would be reduced in proportion to the value of that use.

Example: your lease is $400 per month, the landlord immediately finds a new tenant for $300 per month following your abandonment. In this case under Texas law, you'll be expected to make up the difference of $100 monthly for the balance of your lease.

What if the landlord refuses to seek out a new tenant, as is his right, but you have someone willing to take over the lease?

It is provided by statute that during the term of the lease the tenant may not assign or sublet the property to another person without prior consent from the landlord. You can certainly ask, but you can't require the landlord to approve the potential tenant.

Security deposit

The landlord has 30 days from termination of the lease to return the security deposit along with an itemized list of any deductions.

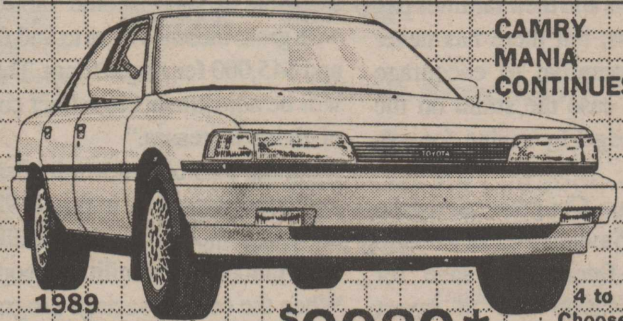

The requirement is waived if the tenant (1) owes rent when he surrenders the property or (2) has failed to provide his forwarding address in writing to the landlord. A landlord's unreasonable failure to refund the deposit within the required 30 days can result in significant penalties.

Don't rely upon verbal promises and don't fail to review that lease well before your PCS or DOS.

The best suggestion we can give is to seek advice from the base housing and legal offices if you have any questions or doubts about your lease.

ESA encourages families to save for college

By Sgt. Maj. Rudi Williams, USA
American Forces Information Service

The federal government spends about $9 billion a year to help college students and their families pay tuition costs, but there has never been an incentive to encourage families to ease the strain on the national budget by saving for college costs.

Until now, Congress passed the Education Savings Act of 1988 to encourage families to save for higher education and to invest those savings in U.S. Savings Bonds.

"Congress approved an amendment to the tax reform bill of 1986 to allow Series EE Savings Bonds interest earnings to be tax exempt if the proceeds are used to pay post secondary education tuition," said Christine R. Paulson of the Education Commission of the States.

Bonds purchased before 1990 are not covered. "They must be purchased on or after Jan. 1, 1990, to qualify for the tax exemption," she said. "These earnings will be taxable at maturity unless the money is used for educational purposes. The full tax exemption is available to two-income families with gross incomes of up to $60,000 and $45,000 for single filers. There will be adjustments to reflect cost-of-living increases."

Some $7.3 billion worth of savings bonds were sold in fiscal 1988, of which more than $60 million were purchased by military people. When the college savings program starts next January, service members can put their savings bonds into tax-exempt bonds for their children's college education.

To be eligible for the tax exemption, purchasers of Series EE savings bonds must be a married couple filing jointly or a single parent at least 24 years of age. The bonds must be registered in the taxpayer's name or in the name of the taxpayer and spouse — not in the dependent child's name. The exclusion is not available to any other individual — including grandparents, sisters, brothers, uncles and aunts.

There is a limitation on bond purchases for use in the program — $30,000 face value or $15,000 purchase price per year. However, there is no limit to the amount of bonds that can be accumulated for educational expenses over time as long as these bonds don't exceed the annual purchase limitations.

If the bond redemption amount is more than the qualified educational expenses, the overage is taxable. For example, if proceeds from selling the bonds are $10,000 ($5,000 principal and $5,000 interest) and the educational expenses are $8,000, the taxpayer would only be able to get an exclusion for 80 percent of the interest earned, or $5,000.

Qualified educational expenses means tuition and required fees, excluding the amount received for scholarships, fellowships, employer-provided educational assistance and other tuition reduction amounts. The expenses must be incurred by the taxpayer, spouse or dependent during the year in which the bonds are cashed. Expenses involving sports, games or hobbies, other than as part of a degree or certificate granting program are not included.

Taxpayers may not claim the exemption for a student who has attained the age of 24 before the close of the calendar year, unless the student's gross income for the year is less than the exemption amount ($1,950 in 1988). If the parent can't claim an exemption under the rule, the child may claim an exemption on his or her own return.

The Air Force is conducting its annual U.S. Savings Bond campaign during June. Not only are bonds a safe and easy way to save, but they provide a good return on your investment. If you are interested in knowing more about savings bonds, contact your squadron representative.

DACOWITS tackles issues

By Master Sgt. Mary A. Peterson, USA
American Forces Information Service

Nurse shortages and the harassment of women who seek obstetrical and gynecological care were two of the 12 issues adopted for resolution by the Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services at its spring conference.

The 33-member committee, 10 of whom were appointed by Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney only days before the conference convened, discussed more than 75 issues concerning women in the military. By the end of the five-day conference, held in Washington, D.C., in mid-April, 41 issues were adopted to pursue resolution, to obtain more information or as continuing concerns.

"Pursue resolution" is the highest designation on the agenda, signaling that an outcome is expected.

The 12 issues in this category are:

- Women in Marine Corps security guard;
- Women in field artillery;
- Women in naval mobile construction battalions;
- Navy advancing to requirements/promotion;
- Army medical specialist corps;
- Nurse shortages;
- Army incentive to enlist and re-enlist;
- Legitimacy characterization of dependent children;
- Funding for military child care;
- Harassment regarding obstetrics/gynecology care;
- Nurse corps grade strength;
- Harassment.

The committee unanimously recommended the secretary of defense "take timely and positive action to resolve nurse accession, retention, compensation, promotion and motivation issues through appropriate measures, to include legislation. The impact on the military of the national nursing shortage must continue to be evaluated at DoD and at Congress."

In his address to the committee, then-Assistant Secretary of Defense for Health Affairs Dr. William Mayer said, "There is no real crisis yet (in the medical field). The manpower problem (is one) we share with the civilian community.

"The cost of delivering health care has escalated two times faster than the cost of living," said Mayer. "We train the technicians, and they leave for two to three times the salary in the civilian sector."

The committee also recommended the Defense Equal Opportunity Council accept the Proposal of the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Health Affairs to incorporate training on the female service members' unique medical needs into its equal opportunity and discrimination prevention training programs.

Some committee members said they have heard on numerous visits to bases that some women are harassed in the workplace, either because they seek gynecological care—some more often than others—or because they are pregnant and must seek frequent prenatal care. "Adequate training does not exist to preclude problems resulting from unique medical needs of women, which may lead to sexual discrimination/harassment," the committee resolution specified.

The committee has asked the services to provide further information and address the more pertinent issues at the fall conference to be held in Norfolk, Va., Oct. 28 through Nov. 2. General briefing sessions and subcommittee meetings are open to the public.

Air Training Command . . . in the beginning

By SMSgt. Ron Scharven
ATC Public Affairs

The history of Air Training Command goes back to July 7, 1943, when Gen. Henry H. "Hap" Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, established the Army Air Forces Training Command in Ft. Worth, Texas.

It was an indisputably logical move. Mushrooming demands for pilots and technicians during the first two years of World War II made it obvious that training responsibility must be centered in a single command.

The progress of air training has been affected by huge surges in requirements for pilots and technicians followed by equally dramatic ebb-tides or reductions.

On Aug. 1, 1907, the Army's chief signal office signed a memo which read, "An aeronautical division of the office is hereby established . . . the division will have charge of all matters pertaining to military ballooning, air machines and all kindred subjects . . ."

Of course, it didn't mean much until the Army got an airplane. They did in 1909. And, ironically, today's technologically advanced aircraft could not meet some of the specifications of that first plane.

The Army specified that the first plane must be capable of being taken apart, packed in Army wagons and reassembled in less than an hour. Also, the plane should be able to land in any open field without suffering structural damage.

When World War I focused some attention on the awesome potential of aircraft, the need of pilot and maintenance training skyrocketed.

Before the formation of ATC, training responsibility was handled by two separate but equal commands. Flying Training Command was headquartered at Fort Worth, Texas, while Technical Training Command was headquartered in Knollwood, N.C.

At one time, the commands had 1,050,600 members assigned to more than 600 training installations, 375 devoted to flying training and 234 dedicated to technical training.

Pre-1939 training goals called for 300 pilots and 30,000 technicians annually. By 1942, the goals had swelled to 30,000 pilots and 600,000 technicians a year.

By 1943, highly advanced equipment was demanding newer and more exacting courses of instruction. The soon-to-come transition to jet aircraft would require both new flying training methods and specialized mechanics and maintenance courses.

The coming of V-J Day in September 1945, was the start of as rapid a decline as the buildup was. By the end of 1945, ATC's million-plus force had shrunk to less than 200,000 and the more than 600 training sites reduced to 39.

The Berlin Airlift caused the next big upheaval. Nearly all the major commands, at home and overseas, had to furnish men and airplanes for the huge operation.

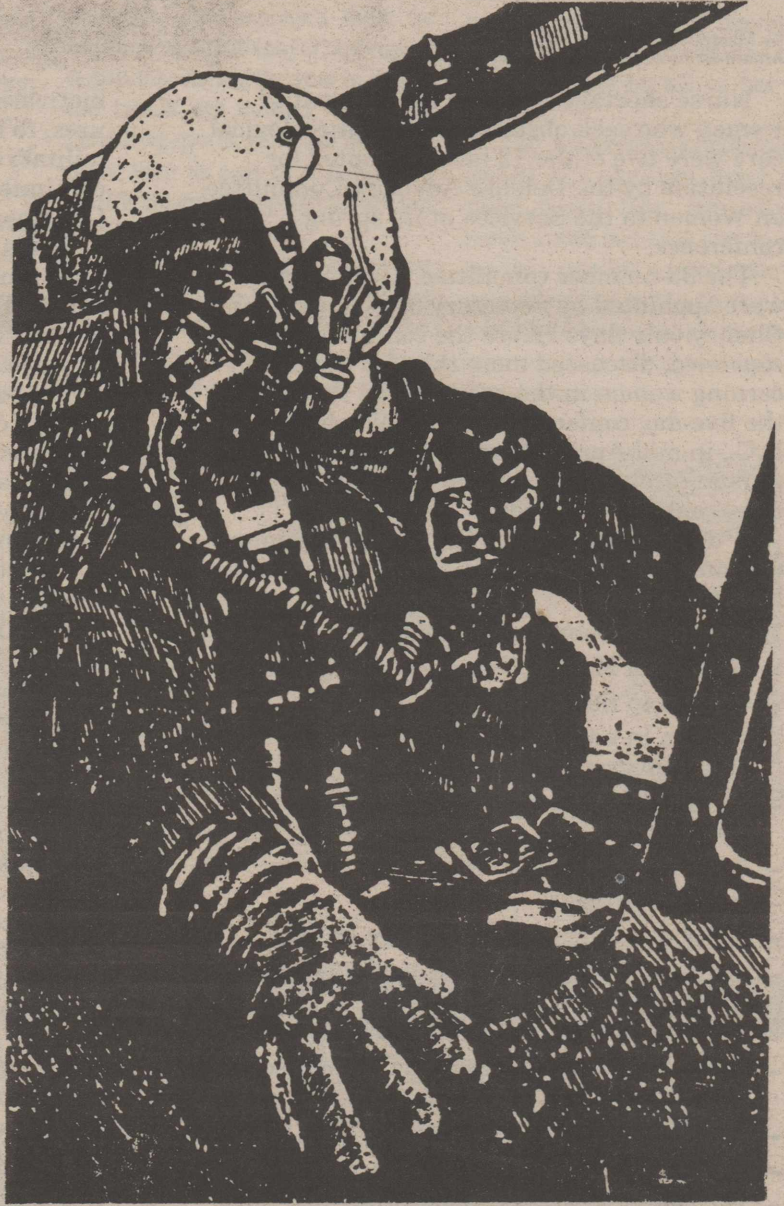

ATC's involvement was compounded by the fact it was teaching pilots to fly infinitely more complicated aircraft, planes that just a few years earlier would have gone to pilots with years of experience.

In an attempt to solve a training dilemma, ATC consolidated the functions and skills of navigator, bombardier and radar observer into one crewman.

Heavy emphasis was placed on educational background, and only expert navigators or bombardiers were trained initially. However, demands soon proved too great, and it wasn't long before men with far less experience were being trained.

But, these 1940s era pilots were light-years ahead of their early predecessors. In 1918, a combat pilot received only 10 weeks of training. Today, undergraduate pilot training is now 52 weeks.

Navigator training for the early pilots was also a bit sketchy. The pilot had to make two navigational flights, flying 80 mile triangular legs. No instructor went along. But, the pilot wasn't left entirely on his own—he was thoughtfully provided a Rand-McNally road map. If he managed to fly over two designated spots and return home safely, he was a navigator.

Hearts apart keeps families together

By Sgt. Mike Breslin
Staff Writer, Roundup

The Reese Family Support and Services Center held an open house June 8, giving people on base a chance to learn about the programs the centers have to offer.

While most people may think of the family services center as a one-stop household goods area for newly-arrive personnel, there's actually a lot more to the center than pots and pans. A good example is the Hearts Apart program.

Previously known as the Waiting Wives program, Hearts Apart is designed to assist people when a family member goes on an extended temporary duty or remote assignments. All affected family members can take part; it isn't restricted to spouses.

"We get together once a month to plan outings, get information about the bases (where the family member has been stationed), and to find out what their rights are," said Debra Barber, family services coordinator. "For example, a lot of people don't understand powers of attorney — there are several different kinds."

Ms. Barber said that guest speakers from different agencies attend the meetings to explain different topics, such as powers of attorney, which people may need to know.

One project which is in the works for Hearts Apart is the acquisition of a video camera which can be used by people to tape important family events, such as birthdays and graduations. These tapes can then be sent to the family member who is away. While the details haven't been worked out yet, Ms. Barber indicated that there is a lot of excitement over this project.

"Separation is hard on the family, and this (the video project) is one of the ways we try to help them out," she said. "I think it will be very beneficial, not only to the person who's away, but to the children as well. Let's say Dad's gone for six months and then comes back; the (younger) kids might be 'stand off-ish' because they might not really remember him."

Another aspect of the program is an AUTOVON line the center has which can be used to contact family members in the case of a legitimate emergency, such as a financial or medical emergency. Ms. Barber said people interested in using the line could stop by or call her or Judy Bellenger at the family support center.

The next Hearts Apart meeting is set for 7 p.m. July 10 in the base theater. According to Sharon Chaplar, Hearts Apart chairperson, free child care will be available in the child development center annex.

"This meeting can give people an idea of what to expect (from a separation)," Ms. Chaplar said. "In addition to what the guest speakers have to say, people can learn by hearing about other couples' experiences."

Both spouses, the one leaving and the one staying behind, are encouraged to attend the meeting, and people who plan to attend are asked to call the center beforehand so that crowd size can be anticipated.

HEARTS APART

The Hearts Apart program has fact sheets and brochures on the following:

* About deployment: provides information on preparing for the deployment, challenges and opportunities, emotional and practical concerns and preparing for the reunion.

* Dealing with separations: provides guidance on coping with children and increasing the need for the four As of parenting; attention, appreciation, acceptance and affection.

* Stages of separation: how to handle the four stages; protest, despair, detachment and return adjustment.

* How to survive separations: provides tips on setting goals, becoming involved in activities outside the home and making friends within the neighborhood.

* Hints for making deployment easier: contains information for couples with young children, old children, without children and information about reactions to expect from your spouse and yourself when you return.

* Until daddy comes home again (coloring book)

* 12 ideas for being a long distance parent

* Remote tour after shock: contains information pertaining to marriage survival, handling a crisis, money managing and infidelity.

* Durable power of attorney: explains what a durable power of attorney is and various clauses that can be used when establishing one to fit your needs.

* The importance of a will: answers the following questions; How important is a will? What can you do with it? Who should have one? What types of wills are there? When can you revoke your will? Who is covered by the will? When can it be revised? How do you probate a will? and does the will need to be handled by an estate or independent administrator?

Soccer team takes 1st

The Reese Rattlers soccer team finished their spring season June 8 with a 6-4 victory and first place in the Lubbock Indoor Soccer League.

The Rattlers finished the season with a 16-3-1 record, which included an 11-game winning streak in April and May. Leading scorers for the team included Jay Burney (25 goals), Marcel Joniux-Mero (15 goals), Manuel Zulaica (13 goals), John Martelin (11 goals) and Chuck Kunde (10 goals).

The team is now practicing for the upcoming outdoor season. Anyone interested in playing for the Rattlers, call Delroy Jones at 3433/3665.

Rattlers softball

The Reese Rattlers men's softball team took third place in a tournament held at Lackland AFB over the weekend, posting a 3-2 record.

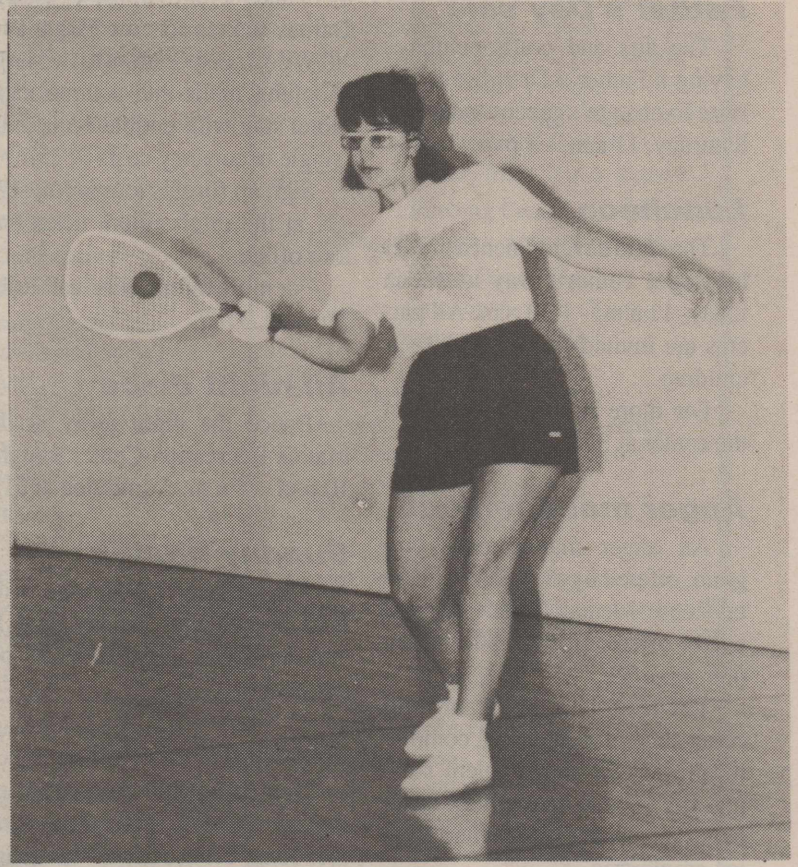

The team competed against 8 other teams in the double-elimination competition, which was won by the Randolph AFB team.

Tuesday night, the men's game against Monterey White in the downtown league was rained out. That left the team with a 5-3 record. They'll finish off the regular season against Strong Transfer and Storage at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday on Berl Huffman Field No. 4.

The Lady Rattlers are scheduled to wrap up regular season play at 7:30 p.m. Thursday against Tom's Angels. That contest will be on Huffman Field No. 1.
