Wee Care Program opens here

A new program for sick children will be opened at the USAF Hospital Reese, July 5.

Maj. Ronald L. Evans, hospital administrator, said the concept of this program is to allow sick children to be admitted to the hospital when they are too ill to be cared for by baby sitters, in day care centers or when they are unable to attend school.

The underlying reason for this program is to minimize lost duty time of working parents when they have a sick child. Priorities are established for single parents, both parents who work, etc. The only eligibility requirements are that the child must be enrolled in the Defense Eligibility Enrollment Reporting System as a bona fide dependent eligible for medical care, and at present, six weeks of age or older, explained Major Evans. "There are several advantages with this WEE CARE Program", he added. "Parents can be more productive by continuing to work rather than staying home with a sick child. It gives expert care to sick children while keeping them out of environments where diseases can spread. It also makes better use of space and personnel in the hospital."

The charge for using the WEE CARE Program will be the standard inpatient rate of $8.05 per day. Meals will be served, or in the case of infants formula will be provided.

According to Lt. Col. Lynn McConnell, USAF Hospital Reese Chief Nurse, parents will need to bring medications the child may already be taking, and a change of clothes and a favorite toy or book is suggested.

Parents will need to bring their sick child to the Pediatrics Clinic for assessment between 7:30-8:30 a.m. on weekdays. Children may still be brought in at other times through the Emergency Room, the colonel added.

Parents will be encouraged to visit their child as often as possible throughout the day. "We want to alleviate as much anxiety as possible on the part of both the parents and the children," she said.

Major Evans said more details on the WEE CARE Program will be available soon and noted that there are sure to be some glitches, as with any new venture.

"We're in the process of getting the necessary supplies and equipment to start the program," he said. "We also would welcome any persons interested in helping as Red Cross Volunteers."

With the growing number of single parents and dual-employed parents, the WEE CARE Program is expected to provide a much needed service for the Reese community.

"As we gain experience with the program, we hope to fine tune it to be even more responsive to the needs of our patients," concluded Major Evans.

Commander's Perspective

By Col. Monroe S. Sams Jr.
Wing Commander
64th Flying Training Wing

Buried among the positive writeups in our UEI/ORI report was a short statement proclaiming that Reese had an organization that was the best the inspectors had seen to date. This organization is small, operates on a shoestring budget, and relies on an active group of volunteers to accomplish its mission.

Col. Monroe S. Sams Jr.

It is known as Family Services and despite these obstacles, its volunteer members provide extremely high-quality support to the entire base.

In a sense, "Best in the Command" says it all, yet it doesn't really say enough about the scope of this volunteer operation. Family Services encompasses a wide area of responsibility, from providing utensils and equipment to families in transition (for an occasional backyard cookout) to providing expectant parents with the necessities for their newborn.

One of the most unique services provided is "Project Stork." For those expectant parents living on base you can expect to be notified of your child's birth by way of a seven-foot tall stork that is placed conspicuously in your yard. If you or someone you know is about to become a parent, just call Family Services for arrangement. In addition to the "Stork," parents of newborns can receive a layette gift. Some of the beautiful gifts are hand made and crocheted by the talented volunteers. Simply go by Family Services to fill out an information card, have you or your spouse's supervisor sign it, then return the form.

Another special service is the "Hearts Apart" program for dependents of personnel who are remote or on extended TDY (temporary duty). This is a great program that can help ease the burden of being separated from your loved one.

Another service offered is called "Kids In Touch With Kids." It's for kids at Reese to write to kids waiting to PCS (Permanent Change of Station) to Reese. I think it's a wonderful way to welcome families to Reese. Those of you with children know how important it is to keep them happy during this unstable time.

Debbie Barber is the current coordinator of Family Services and her staff includes: Cindy Gumm, assistant coordinator; Susan Henny, advisor; Sharon Chaplar, Hearts Apart coordinator; Peg Ennis; Linda Finimore; Josiane Goupie, Welcome Committee coordinator; Jeannette Hilpp; Satu Holt; Dorothy Jones, social coordinator; Stacy Kampe, brochures coordinator; Liz Kostelnik, Reese's Pieces coordinator; Rita St. Onge, consumer affairs; Kelly Sharp; Cathy Straub, babysitting coordinator; Robin Thompson; Patricia Wilson; Jenny Wren, loan locker coordinator; Linda Horn, Project Stork chairman; Norma Arrant, K.I.T.W.K.; Pat Bickers; Paula Coakley, coupons; Patsy Deakin; and Joann Garoutte.

Thank you, ladies, for your tremendous support of the Reese community.

We really have a dedicated and talented group of volunteers here at Reese in the Family Services center who are there for you. Their job is to make things as easy as possible for you and your family. Please don't hesitate to call them at 885-3306 or stop by the Mathis Recreation Center for more information.

Remember

Crime doesn't take a vacation

It's an unfortunate fact that almost all types of personal and household crimes occur most often in the warm months when people spend more time away from home.

According to Sgt. Kevin Dye, 64th Security Police Squadron, people can avoid becoming part of this statistic by following these simple suggestions:

Before Leaving

- Leave a key with a trusted neighbor.
- Store valuables in a safety deposit box.
- Use the "Vacation Home/Vehicle Check" program to have the home or car checked by Security Police while out of the local area.
- Lock all windows and doors and check the garage door before departure.

While Traveling

• Carry a minimum amount of cash. Use travelers checks when available, but keep a record of their numbers in a separate and safe place. Keep careful tabs on all travel tickets, they're as good as cash.

- If traveling by car, use maps and travel on main roads.
- Never advertise travel plans to strangers.
- If stopping overnight, remove valuables from the car.

At Vacation Site

- Become aware of surroundings and identify local emergency numbers.

• Don't advertise being a tourist by dress.

• If children are on their own, set up times for "check ins" and ensure they have watches.

If spending the summer at Reese, there are also ways to keep it safe. When at the pools don't take valuables or leave items unsecured in the dressing rooms. Always keep a watchful eye out for children. Remember, school is out, so drive carefully in the housing area. Help neighbors by reporting suspicious activity to the Security Police. Don't drink and drive.

For information concerning the Vacation Home/Vehicle Check Program or pamphlets on safe vacationing, stop by the Security Police offices in Bldg. 500 or call 3615.

Don't deface the base

By Lt. Col. Michael J. Whitney
Wing Inspector General

Judging from the wing's recently successful ATC/IG visit, there is an obvious spirit of pride associated with being a member of a winning team. However, we can't afford to rest on our laurels. Community pride with regard to the appearance of our surroundings — where we work and live — is an ongoing task requiring a team effort.

There are some among us who are sometimes careless, leaving litter at various places on base for others to pick up. Smashed soda cans, broken beverage bottles, fast food debris and cigarette butts all detract from not only an appearance standpoint, but sometimes from a safety (FOD) standpoint as well.

Before tossing litter on the ground, consider how you may be infringing upon the rights of others who tirelessly work to maintain a clean, safe environment for their colleagues and family members.

We receive many visitors to Reese from around the nation and, indeed, the world. Their comments regarding our first-rate facilities and well-manicured grounds are continually favorable. I'm certain you'll agree that we want to sustain a high standard of excellence, not just for visitors, but for the entire wing community.

After an athletic event or recreational outing, why not just take a few minutes to scan your surroundings for litter. If you see it...can it!

Keeping Reese a great place to live, work and play takes the cooperative effort of all team members. Enjoy your West Texas summer!

Will you weather stormy season?

June storms continue to hammer the South Plains with heavy rains, hail, high winds and torna-does. TSgt. Forrest Williams, Disaster Preparedness, offers some information to help Reese people weather Lubbock's stormiest season.

According to Sergeant Williams, local radio and television stations stay on top of the weather situation with up to the minute weather advisories. Lubbock's television stations provide storm "watch" and "warning" screen symbols to alert viewers of possible storm activity in the viewing area.

"There is a distinct difference between a watch and a warning," said Sergeant Williams. "A watch is issued by the National Weather Service when conditions are favorable for thunderstorms, floods, tornadoes, etc. A warning is issued when that type of condition is actually happening in this area."

One problem, noted Sergeant Williams, is that people tend to ignore weather watch notices. People should continue normal activity in a watch, but should have a plan of action prepared.

"By the time a warning is issued it may be too late to think about what to do," he said.

Watch symbols appear as an outline on the television screen. Warning symbols are solid.

Sergeant Williams noted that people in the Lubbock area must be prepared for a variety of severe weather conditions, including flash floods, tornadoes, hail, electrical storms, dust storms and heavy thunderstorms.

Here are some safety tips for each type of storm:

Tornado

Listen carefully to the warning for the tornado's location and movement. If the tornado is moving toward you, take cover. If you own a shelter or basement, go to it immediately.

In your home, crouch in an interior hallway, closet, bathroom or under heavy wooden furniture. Do not open windows; in fact, stay away from all windows and doors. Protect yourself from flying debris with a heavy quilt or mattress.

Stay away from buildings with large open areas, such as gymnasiums or auditoriums. If caught in a shopping center, move to a lower portion of the mall and take cover in an interior rest room or small shop. In open country, lie flat in a ditch or depression away from trees and cover your head but be alert for flash flooding. Never try to outrun a tornado in your vehicle. Always evacuate vehicles and mobile homes.

Dust storm

A dust storm warning means considerable blowing dust is occurring or is likely to occur. High winds can be expected and there is a danger of damage to property. Store loose objects that could be blown through windows.

When driving, exercise extreme caution due to sudden wind gusts and reduced visibilities in blowing dirt. Peak winds have been known to exceed 100 mph on the High Plains.

Thunderstorm

A thunderstorm warning means that a severe thunderstorm is moving into your area. Watch for hail, high wind and heavy rain. Take normal precautions to protect yourself, your property and small animals.

Store loose objects that could be blown through windows, such as garbage cans or lawn furniture. Stay away from windows. Avoid using the telephone except in emergencies because of possible shock from lightning that may be associated with the storm.

Flash flood

A flash flood warning means rapidly rising water is occurring and that you should move to a place of safety immediately. Protect property if you have time, but don't allow escape routes to be closed by rising water.

A 10 to 15 foot wall of water moving down a creek bed can carry everything in its path.

Electrical storm

To protect yourself from dangerous lightning, get inside a home or large building, or inside an all-metal vehicle. (Remember that you don't want to be inside a vehicle if a tornado forms.) If you are outside, with no time to reach a safe place, do not stand under a natural lightning rod such as a tall isolated tree in an open area.

Avoid projecting above the surrounding area as you would do if you were standing on a hill top, in an open field, on a beach, or fishing from a small boat. Get out of, and away from, open water.

More information is available from the Disaster Preparedness at 3701.

Rice outlines priorities

Maintaining the leading edge in military technology, not matching weapons one for one, is the way the United States will remain strong and preserve its deterrent strength, the Secretary of the Air Force said.

Staying abreast of the latest development trends, however, will require careful financial planning in an era of austere resource constraints, Secretary Donald B. Rice said.

"We have to attack the problem of getting the maximum military capability out of every dollar that the taxpayers provide us on all fronts," Secretary Rice said in a June 2 interview with Airman Magazine.

"The main point in all of this is to get a better deal for the taxpayer and to find ways to reduce costs in areas where we can do that reducing forces, without cutting into military muscle."

Less than a month after taking office, the former president and chief executive officer of the Rand Corporation is faced with the task of convincing Congress of the need to keep on track U.S. strategic, tactical and airlift modernization efforts.

Developing and fielding major systems such as the B-2 bomber, the C-17 strategic airlifter, and mobilizing part of the Air Force's long-range missiles are some of the ways Secretary Rice sees as a way to remain superior.

"We have never tried to match our adversaries unit for unit and weapon for weapon, but we continue to rely very heavily on our technological edge to maintain the balance of forces in the world," he said, adding this ties directly into the success of America's national security strategy.

During the budget presentation, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said the Air Force could possibly have the present silo-based Peacekeeper missiles on rails by 1992.

While developing the Air Force into a modern, highly capable deterrent force remains an up-front task for the new secretary, people will be his top priority.

He continues to support the 3.6 percent military pay raise proposal for next year, as well as keeping with "adequate" levels of compensation necessary to meet recruiting and retention goals. (AFNS)

ATC adopts MSS concept

Following successful tests at Reese and three other Air Training Command bases, air base groups at nearly all command installations will adopt the mission support squadron concept July 1.

In concert with the command-wide program, the 3500th Mission Support Squadron will be renamed the 64th MSS the same day.

According to Maj. Sherill L. Donaldson, 3500th MSS commander, the mission support squadron concept improves the base commander's span of control. The program was approved for Air Force-wide implementation earlier this year. Reese was the first AF base to test the MSS program.

When asked to evaluate the success of the test program here, Major Donaldson pointed to the unit's performances in the last three IG inspections. "The IG said we were successful," she said.

The MSS composition consists of base-level operations in information management, civilian and military personnel, professional military education, social actions and education services. The MSSq will also control the air base group headquarters squadron section.

At Reese the MSS also includes the Family Support Center and the Consolidated Training Office (the latter is still undergoing Air Force testing).

Support squadrons were tested at 18 other Air Force bases including Laughlin AFB, Texas, and Keesler and Columbus AFBs, Miss. The trial period, which began in 1985, identified a host of benefits which led to the recent change.

The test showed improved responsiveness, accountability, customer service and branch efficiency in the squadron agencies.

The test showed improved responsiveness, accountability, customer service and branch efficiency in the squadron agencies. Participants also reported enhanced leadership, readiness, morale, working relationships and better administrative personnel training and placement.

Additionally, base commanders commented that the support squadrons provided them with the optimum span of control. They saw duties accomplished at lower levels of the chain of command, thereby providing them with more free time for other important issues.

According to command officials, all ATC bases with the exception of Lackland AFB, Texas, will come on line with mission support squadrons this summer. Because of the unique support required by the basic military training and officer training schools, Lackland and its one-of-a-kind 3700th Personnel Resources Group are excluded from the conversion.

Senior NCO Academy opens doors to E-7s

Master sergeants will attend the Senior NCO Academy at Gunter AFB, Ala., beginning in August, an opportunity currently offered only to senior and chief master sergeants and senior master sergeant selectees.

According to SSgt. Dolores Brown, NCOIC of classification and training, the change was recently approved by Air Force chief of staff Gen. Larry D. Welch in a restructuring of senior NCO professional military education.

The Air Force will receive a greater payback from the change since master sergeants will have more time left in the Air Force after graduation to take advantage of the education.

For each class through Fiscal Year 1990, 50 master sergeants will be selected. More will attend once the academy expands in October 1990.

For classes starting in March, selections will be based on the combined total of the promotion board score and supervisory examination from the senior master sergeant selection list.

The top-scoring non-selectees with each Air Force specialty code will be scheduled to attend.

Master sergeant selections for the first three classes are being conducted by each major command, separate operating agency and direct reporting unit, based on quotas established by the Air Force Military Personnel Center.

Other changes scheduled to take place include reducing the course length from eight to seven weeks, allowing for six instead of five classes each year.

The curriculum will also be revised and the 20 promotion points for completion of the Senior NCO Academy will no longer be awarded.

For more information, contact Sergeant Brown at 3436.

Mental Health Clinic

Handling daily stress may require assistance

People needing help in dealing with an emotional problem or those who just want to find out how to get to know themselves better, can get that assistance at the Reese Mental Health Clinic.

Maj. Elizabeth Suggs, Chief of Mental Health Services here, said the clinic is staffed with a clinical psychologist and clinical social worker.

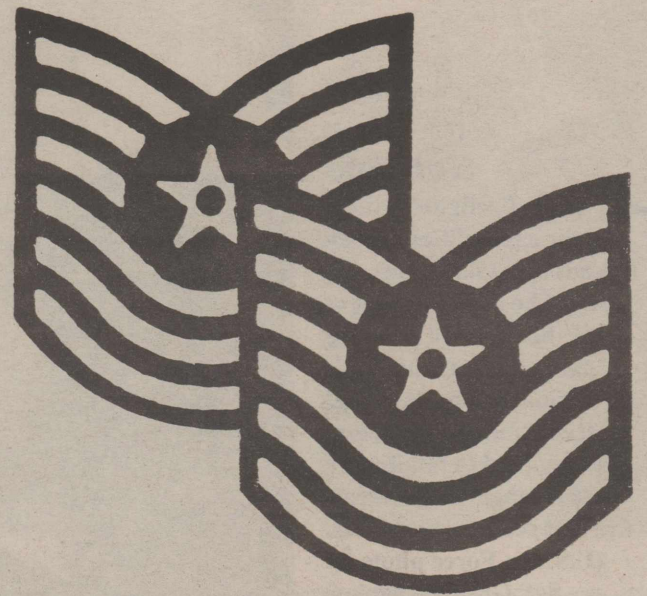

The major noted that while most people maintain healthy emotional and behavioral styles of coping with day-to-day problems, occasionally people need professional assistance. She added that the assistance isn't limited to those with problems.

"We want to help those who desire to grow personally as well as those in crisis or conflict," she said.

The clinic's programs include psychoeducational groups, Family Advocacy programs, stress management/relaxation training, individual psychotherapy and marital counseling.

For more information call 3739.

Reese gets 25 masters

Twenty-five Reese non-commissioned officers were on the fiscal year 1990 list of master sergeant selectees released earlier this month.

The promotion rate for Reese eligibles was 19.68 percent, just below the Air Force wide selection rate of 20.31 percent.

The selectees will sew on their sixth stripe between Aug. 1, 1989 and July 1, 1990.

Selectees are: Donald M. Carroll, assigned to the 64th Air Base Group; Bruce Tharrington, assigned to USAF Hospital-Reese; Artie J. Frazier Jr., Robert J. Mennel and Johnny O. Smith Jr., assigned to the 64th Organizational Maintenance Squadron; David Cook, assigned to the 64th Student Squadron; Rafael C. Becerril, Daniel T. Donahue Jr., Howard L. Jones, Joseph A. Larose, Odis Mitchell, Jeffrey C. Musgrove, James E. Washington and Robert A. Wilson, assigned to the 64th Supply Squadron; Charles Clark, Roy D. Napper and Justin F. Phillips, assigned to the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron; Danny T. Bergen and Mark A. Stevens, assigned to the 64th Security Police Squadron; David Forszewski, assigned to the 3500th Services Squadron; Larry J. Hurd and Frank R. Lechuga assigned to the 3500th Mission Support Squadron; and Gregory D. Johnson, James B. Parsons and Albert Rucker Jr., assigned to the 1958th Communications Squadron.

FTD 429: Small unit, big mission

Flying Training Detachment 429, with its home base located at Sheppard AFB, Texas, has been keeping on its toes while training more than 920 people over the last year.

"In the last 12 months we taught 206 classes," said TSgt. Bob Anderson, FTD 429 programs and scheduling monitor. "We don't have as many classes scheduled as last year, but every week we keep on adding more."

Many of the classes FTD has been able to schedule for base members have been non-specialty related. This enables them to enhance their knowledge of the different systems and maintenance problems they may face on the job.

"Our goal is to teach the worker to be more productive and qualified when they return to their duty station," said TSgt. Joe Ward, flight chief.

The detachment provides training in 28 different courses, and is the prime unit for eight Air Training Command courses.

According to Sergeant Anderson, most of their students are from Reese, but FTD also trains students from other ATC bases as well as Air Force Systems Command, Tactical Air Command, Strategic Air Command and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"It's a never-ending job," said TSgt. Jim Bourns, FTD's curriculum monitor. "We are constantly coordinating courses with other bases' training management needs."

If interested in becoming an FTD instructor, contact MSgt. Roger Hulslander, Bldg. 955, or call 3122.

Capt. Jacquelyn S. Parker has become the first woman Air Force test pilot. She completed the 11-month Air Force Test Pilot School at Edwards AFB, Calif., June 10 and is being assigned to the Air Force's 4950th Test Group, Aeronautical Systems Division, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio. (U.S. Air Force photo)

Former Reese IP becomes test pilot

A former Reese instructor pilot has become the first woman test pilot in the Air Force.

According to an Air Force Systems Command announcement, Capt. Jacquelyn S. Parker was among 25 pilots, flight engineers and navigators to be graduated this month from the Air Force Test Pilot School.

Captain Parker earned her wings at Reese and was an instructor pilot with the 54th Flying Training Squadron from 1983 through 1985 where she received several class awards as the "Outstanding T-38 Academic Instructor."

Completion of test pilot training brings the Wilmington, Del. native another step closer to a goal she has pursued since entering pilot training here — to fly in space.

"The work and flying were as hard...and challenging...as everyone said they would be," she said.

"Now I'm looking forward to putting it to use testing airplanes...and hopefully, someday, fly the space shuttle."

Judging from the test pilot school's track record, that goal may not be far off. More than 55 of its graduates have been selected for the U.S. space program.

Capt. Parker was graduated from the University of Central Florida, where she studied math and computer science between the ages of 14 and 17. She is the youngest graduate in the school's history.

Before entering the Air Force in 1980, the captain worked at NASA's Johnson Space Center, Houston, Texas, where she analyzed the onboard flight computer systems during space flight missions.

In 1985, she transitioned into C-141 aircraft and became a C-141 aircraft commander and instructor pilot with the 76th Military Airlift Squadron.

During her assignment with the unit, she flew the big four-engine transports on many worldwide missions involving Presidential support and military operations.

In 1985, the captain was nominated to the Florida Women's Hall of Fame and in 1987 her career achievements were highlighted in the International Women's Air and Space Museum, Centerville, Ohio.

Captain Parker was also commended for her work at the Johnson Space Center, where she was the youngest flight controller.

In 1979 she received the Kitty Hawk Achievement Award from the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and the Northrop Corporation, and the Golden Eagle Achievement Award from the American Academy of Achievement.

Foreign gifts

All military and civilian personnel are required to report gifts received from foreign governments or their representatives if the gift has a retail value of more than $180, according to base legal officials.

When more than one tangible gift is presented, the combined value of the gifts will be used to determine value. This includes gifts that will be retained for official use or display.

Gifts must be reported within 60 days of receipt to: HQ AFMPC/DPMASA2, Randolph AFB, Texas 78150-6001. Violations of the provisions of AFR 11-27 could result in a fine not to exceed the retail value of the gift plus $5,000.

Maintenance info

Cost comparison studies are being conducted at Reese, Williams AFB, Ariz. and Mather AFB, Calif., for aircraft maintenance. The anticipated period of these studies is through December 1989. During the period or until these studies are complete, contacts regarding the projects by potential contractors are not allowed. The contracting officer at Randolph AFB, Texas is the only person authorized to contact potential contractors or release information.

For more information, call Lydia Larson, 3995.

CGOC luncheon

The Reese Company Grade Officers' Council is sponsoring monthly professional development luncheons beginning Tuesday, 11:30 a.m. The luncheon will be held in the Jack Davis Room of the Officers' Open Mess for all wing members. This month's speaker is Lt. Col. Edward "Buster" Ellis, 35th Flying Training Squadron commander. For more information or reservations, call 1st Lt. Doug White, 3655.

Warriors of the sky

'Operation Bolo' distinguished air superiority of F-4

By Marty Brazil

Company of Military Historians

During 1966, North Vietnamese Air Force MiGs were able to attack American aircraft with confidence.

Political considerations of "Rolling Thunder," the American bombing campaign, made the MiGs' home airfields off limits to American fighters and bombers.

The U.S. Seventh Air Force, annoyed by frequent attacks by the MiGs on B-52s, decided to try a Korean War-style "sweep" — a mass formation of American fighters would fly north, entice the North Vietnamese into the air and destroy them.

"Operation Bolo" was the name given this plan. It was prepared and commanded by the most popular combat leader in the U.S. Air Force, Col. Robert Olds.

Colonel Olds was a West-Pointer, former All-American football player, co-founder of the Air Force's first aerial show team and veteran of 107 World War II combat missions (he shot down 20 German aircraft). He was a proven, fearless combat commander whose concern for his men earned their respect and loyalty.

In 1966, Colonel Olds commanded the 8th Tactical Fighter Wing out of Ubon, Thailand.

The unit was known as the "Wolfpack."

Colonel Olds wanted to fool the North Vietnamese air force, which kept its MiGs on the ground whenever American fighters appeared.

He designed the attack to look — on radar — like a routine strike; that is, a standard formation of F-105s and F-4s loaded with bombs, with escorts and Iron Hand SAM suppression flights. This flight would actually be all F-4s and would only simulate a strike formation.

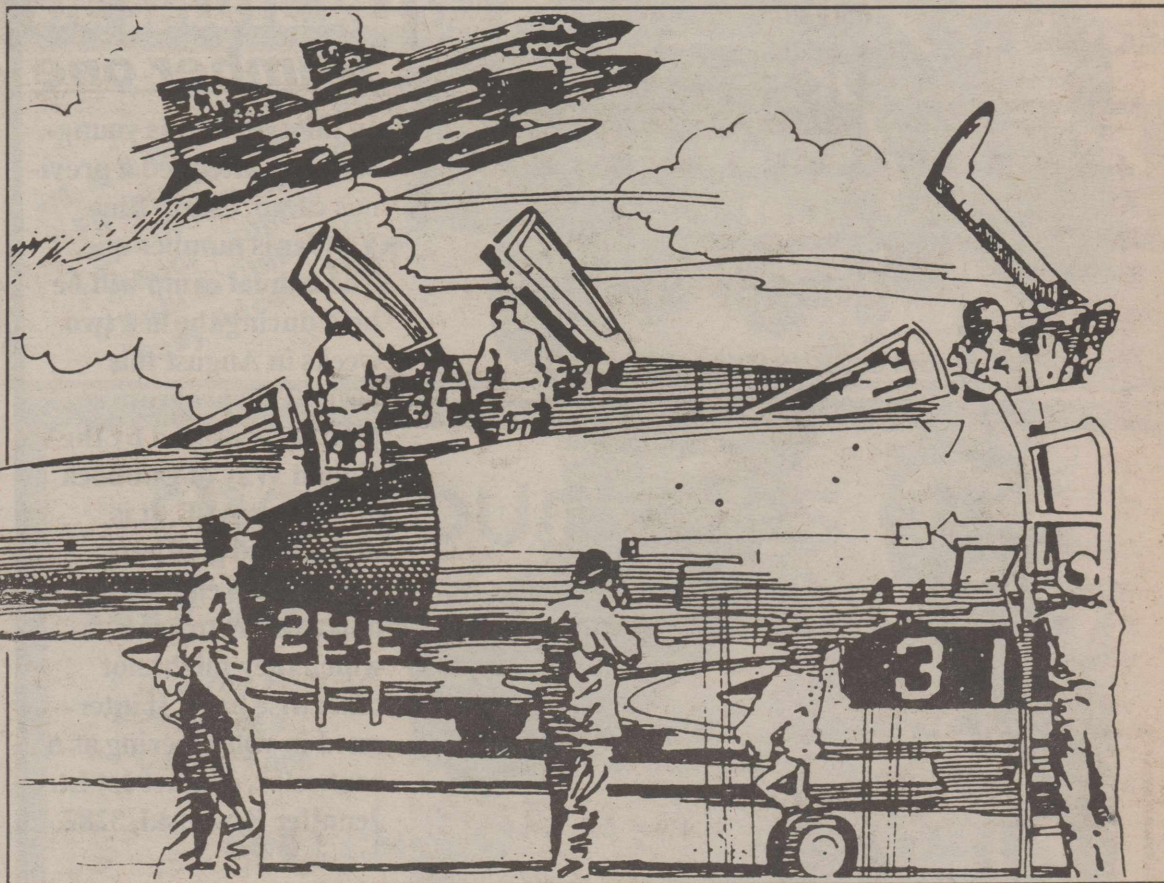

The colonel knew the MiGs would come in as the Americans began their bomb runs.

He had two other fighter groups standing by to come in at that moment. One group would come in high from Laos and the other low from the Tonkin Gulf.

Weather problems kept the Tonkin Gulf-based fighters from joining the battle.

The plan was carried out Jan. 2, 1967 — successfully.

The MiGs intercepted what they thought were bomb-laden F-105 Thunderchiefs, only to find out they were up against the lighter and faster F-4 Phantoms. In the dogfight that followed, Colonel Olds shot down two MiGs himself.

One was a MiG 21 — the colonel put a missile straight into its tail pipe.

The tally for "Operation Bolo" was seven MiGs down and no Phantom losses.

Within a week, two more MiG 21s were shot down by members of the "Wolfpack," disguised by flying the routes normally used by reconnaissance aircraft. These losses took the wind out of the sails of the North Vietnamese air force. Their MiGs were parked for the next several weeks while the pilots received additional training from the Soviets.

The success of "Operation Bolo" prompted the Seventh Air Force to assign additional F-

4 Phantoms to escort duty with attack groups headed into North Vietnam. It was the same job done by P-51 Mustangs in Europe in 1944 and by F-86 Sabres in Korea in 1951 — fending off attacks on the bombers, then chasing and fighting the enemy's fighters head-to-head.

The F-4s were as equal to the task as their predecessors.

Number one

In the eyes of this youngster who attended a previous camp, Camp Blue Yonder is number one. The annual camp will be held during the last two weeks in August this year. This program is jointly sponsored by the United Way of Lubbock and Reese AFB. It is designed to give less advantaged children an opportunity to grow which they might not otherwise have. If interested in volunteering as a counselor, contact 1st Lt. Jennifer Kowalski, 3282.

Nine seniors get EWC scholarships

Nine graduating seniors received Enlisted Wives Club scholarships totaling more than $2,500 here June 8.

The scholarships were presented during dinner ceremonies at Reese Manor.

Scholarship winners and their respective schools are:

$500 - Debbie Lynn Carriger (Coronado High School), $400 - Wesley Scott Cox (Monterey High School), $400 - Dwanya Pierce (Dunbar Struggs); $400 - Richard DeSplinter (Monterey High), $250 - Tracy Ford (Frenship High), $250 - Coy K. Martin (Frenship), $100 - Serena Hardin (Coronado), $100 - Shiela Donald (Coronado) and $100 - James Collins (New Deal).

The scholarship program was open to graduating area seniors who are dependents of active duty or retired military personnel.

Funding for the scholarships was raised by a variety of community supported events throughout the year.

AF restructures tuition assistance

While there have been several changes to the tuition assistance program during the past year, the benefit of having 75 percent of tuition costs paid by the Air Force is still very much intact, according to Jeffrey Wilbur, education services officer.

The following restrictions generally apply only to a few individuals. They are:

- No more than 15 in-class hours per week can be funded. (Note: This is actual class time, not total of semester hours being pursued.)

- Members eligible for Vietnam-era VA benefits may not use tuition assistance.

- Members may not use tuition assistance to earn a degree of the same or lower level to one already held; however, lower level courses can be funded if applicable to a specific four-year degree. Also, funding of prerequisite courses for graduate work is once again authorized.

- All on-base programs will begin their fall terms during August, said Mr. Wilbur.

"Now is not too soon to stop by the Education Center to check on upcoming classes, review Community College of the Air Force status, or check out study guides for completing CLEP or DANTES examinations," he added.

For more information, visit the Education Center, Bldg. 920, room 139) or call 3634. The center is open Monday through Friday from 7 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Randolph dominates ATC chess action

A pair of chess players from Randolph AFB, Texas took top honors at the Air Training Command chess tournament here June 13-15.

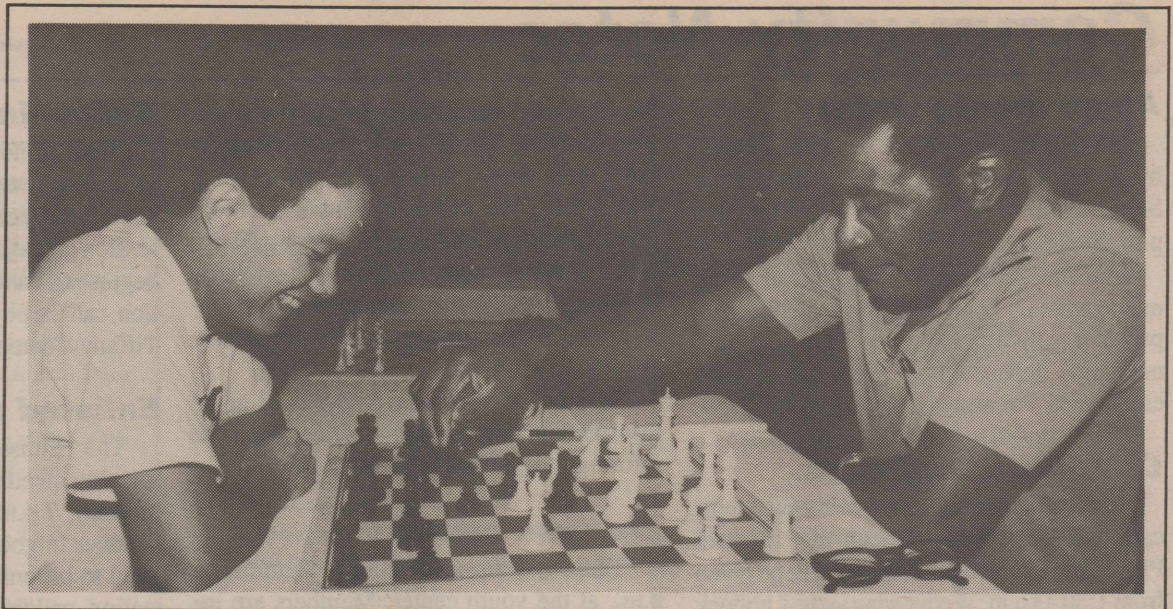

A1C Ferdinand Aguilar and SMSgt. William Booker tied for first place and will advance to Air Force level competition.

Second place went to SSgt. Julio Tanhueco, Goodfellow AFB, Texas.

Team standings are as follows: First - Randolph; second - Goodfellow; third - Lackland AFB, Texas; fourth - Mather

AFB, Calif.; fifth - Lowry AFB, Colo.; sixth - Laughlin AFB, Texas; seventh - Sheppard AFB, Texas; eighth - Columbus AFB, Miss.; ninth - Chanute AFB, Ill.; 10th - Williams AFB, Ariz.; 11th - Reese; and 12th - Keesler AFB, Miss.

It was the second ATC crown for Sergeant Booker in the past eight months. Sergeant Booker was part of the ATC doubles ping-pong championship team which won the title here last November.
